"Curley" Ereaux married his first wife while he was living on Sun River, and she was a full-blood Grosventre. By this union he had six chidlren, three of whom survive, namely: Mrs. Julia Schultz, of Phillips County; Mrs. Rosa Stevens, of Dodson, Montana; and Frank Ereaux, a ranchman of Peoples Creek, who married Mary Adams, and has the following children: Lazare, who is named after his grandfather; Frances; Veronica; Mary Cecelia and Grace.

On September 1, 1917, Mr. Ereaux was married secondly to Mrs. Mary J. Maxwell in North Dakota. She is a daughter of Benjamin and Rachel (Shannon) Johnson. Mrs. Ereaux was born at Cleveland, Cuyahoga County, Ohio, April 11, 1857, but she was reared in Harrison County, Ohio, and educated in the public schools of the latter locality. Her parents were both natives of Ohio, and were farming people. Mrs. Johnson died in Harrison County, Ohio, and Mr. Johnson, surviving her, went to Eldorado County, California, where he died. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson had the following children: Alcy, who married Beatty Caruthers of Harrison County, Ohio; Uriah John, who died in Arizona; Newton, who is a resident of Harrison County, Ohio; Abbie C. is the widow of B. K. Stevens, of Holmes County, Ohio; William L., who lives at Killbuck, Ohio; Denton, who died in Ohio; Mrs. Ereaux, who was next in order of birth; James, who died in California; and John, who lives in Cuyahoga County, Ohio. Mr. Johnson and Congressman Tom L. Johnson, the eminent attorney and efficient mayor of Cleveland, Ohio, were relatives, the former being the uncle of the latter, so that Congressman Johnson is a first cousin of Mrs. Ereaux. By her first marriage Mrs. Ereaux had the following children: Lucretia, who died at Cleveland, Ohio, was Mrs. Ernest Thompson; Milford G., who is a resident of Cleveland, Ohio; and Herbert C., who is a resident of Akron, Ohio.

Mr. and Mrs. Ereaux spent the years 1917, 1918 and 1919 in Zelzah, Los Angeles, California, having gone there for a winter. For a time they were so pleased with the climate that they preferred to remain in that locality, but finally found themselves longing for the clear skies and higher altitude of Montana, and they returned to Dodson in March, 1920. They have a pleasant home in this town, which is near the scene of the Ereaux ranch. In young manhood Mr. Ereaux began voting the democratic ticket, and has continued to give his support to it through life.

Mr. Ereaux is a man of striking personality, and is very typical of the great state he has helped to develop. He has friends everywhere he has ever traveled, and not only is held in affectionate regard by these friends, but his achievements command respect, and his knowledge of affairs and agricultural matters win approval. His recollections of the days now forever passed are intensely interesting and are related with a native humor not easily surpassed. In all of his experiences he was upheld by his cheery acceptance of what each day brought him, his willingness to work, and his really unusual ability to overcome obstacles, of which he has had his full share.

David A. Ring, a business man of Harlem, was born in London, England, at Spittlefields, March 12, 1868. His father, William Ring, spent the last years of his life at Own Sound, Ontario, and passed away there at the age of seventy-six years. He was born in London, was a laborer, was married there, and was the father of three sons, Jacob, now of Toronto, Canada, William, who was drowned in the Missouri River at Great Falls in 1911, unmarried, and David A.

When David A. Ring was but a child his parents immigrated to America and located at Owen Sound on a farm, where he was reared. At the age of fifteen he left home and began sailing the Great Lakes on a tramp steamer, but in a short time was placed on a regular Canadian Pacific liner running from Owen Sound to Port Arthur, and he filled the positions of greaser, lookout and finally third engineer of the boat. He finally abandoned the life of a sailor at Sault Sainte Marie, Michigan, with sufficient capital to bring him to Montana.

It was in the year 1888 that Mr. Ring arrived in Montana, and at the Huntley and Clark ranch at Toston he joined his brother. But after a short time he left that ranch and going on to Helena secured work with the Helena Steam Heat and Supply Company in the plumbing department, for Mr. Ring was a gas fitter by trade. Later he was in company with his brother, and after a couple of months with the supply company the two went on to Great Falls, where David Ring found employment with McClay and Company in the pipe fitting business, but a short time afterward journeyed on to Fort Benton and secured work at pipe fitting there.

About this time he learned of the Harlem region being open for homesteaders, and he and his brother came into the Milk River Valley at this point; and both secured claims. They located six miles east of Harlem, did some work on their claims during the spring of 1889, but when the Belknap agency was moved from Chinook to Harlem the brothers began work for the Government. David as time keeper for the contractor and his brother as a teamster. During the following winter the brothers lived in their cabin and trapped beaver and muskrat, making a good living at this work, and in the spring David went to the Blackfoot agency and resumed his old position with the contractor building the Government Indian schools. After spending the summer there he returned to Harlem for the winter and engaged in the retail liquor business, but sold out the business with the coming of spring and entered the service of L. Minugh as a clerk in his Indian trading store. He spent six years with Mr. Minugh, also remained with his successor, C. A. Smith, for a year, and then left that service to resume work for the Government as an engineer operating its steam pumping plant at the Belknap agency. After a time Mr. Ring assumed the office of assistant farmer for the reservation, and spent six years teaching Indians how to farm. When he left the Government service he again returned to Harlem and entered upon a clerkship with the Harlem Mercantile Company, and on leaving that firm established a plumbing business in Harlem, the first of its kind in the town, and while thus engaged he superintended the construction of the Harlem Water Works. But after a time Mr. Ring gave up the plumbing business to become an undertaker, a business in which he is still engaged. He is also the agent of the Continental Oil Company at Harlem, and has represented it six years as a distributor of its petroleum products.

Mr. Ring has served Harlem three terms as an alderman, and during his tenure of office many sidewalks have been laid and the electric light plant was installed. He is also serving his third term as a school trustee, having as a member of the school board had a voice in the erection of the new school house. He upholds the principles of the republican party, and he cast his first presidential vote for Colonel Roosevelt in 1904.

Mr. Ring was married at the Fort Belknap Indian agency October 7, 1904, to Miss Vista Boyd, who was born at Poplar, Montana, a daughter of George Boyd, an old Government scout who came from Wisconsin to Montana in an early day, and who died at Fort Assiniboine, Montana. Five children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Ring, but only three are now living. James, a graduate of the Harlem schools, entered the University of Montana, where he became a member of the Students Training Corps, and after his discharge matriculated in the Great Falls Commercial College. After leaving that institution he became connected with the First National Bank of Great Falls, but recently resigned his position there. The second son, David A., Jr., graduated from the Harlem High School, and is a student in the University of Montana at Missoula. The third son, Preston, is a pupil in the graded school of Harlem.

Mr. and Mrs. Ring took an active part in all the Red Cross drives during the World war, contributing both of their time and means in maintaining the soldiers at the front. Mr. Ring is a Master Mason and treasurer of Harlem Lodge No. 108, is a member of the Odd Fellows and a district deputy grand master, is a past worthy president of the Eagles fraternity, and a member of the Knights of Pythias Order at Havre and the Modern Woodmen at Harlem. For ten years he served as clerk of the Harlem Camp of the latter order. Mrs. Ring is a member of the Eastern Star.

Joseph Austin Hatch, the cashier of the First National Bank of Harlem, has been a prominent part of the community citizenship of Harlem since 1900 and a resident of the State of Montana since 1898.

He was born in Bremer County, Iowa, July 12, 1867, and his boyhood surroundings was a farm, and his education was completed in the Sumner High School. His father, Joseph H. Hatch, went with his parents from his native State of Vermont to Ogdensburg, New York, where he grew to mature years and spent his life as a farmer. He was trained for a soldier during the war between the North and South, but never saw active service. He came to Iowa in 1863 and located in Bremer County, where he died in 1869, when but forty-eight years of age. In New York he had married Eliza Joyce, a daughter of Jesse Joyce, who came to the United States from Ireland. Mrs. Hatch was born in St. Lawrence County, New York, and passed away in Bremer County, Iowa, in 1912, at the age of seventy-eight. Their children were: Mary, Eva, Mrs. Rathbone and Mrs. Asenith Burrow, all of whom reside in Bremer County, Iowa; Wallace J., whose home is in Sioux Falls, South Dakota; Mrs. Ada Weatherall, of Missoula, Montana; and Joseph Austin, the youngest of the children. Hiram F. Hatch, a son of Joseph H. Hatch by his first wife, died in Cleveland, Ohio, leaving a daughter.

Joseph A. Hatch continued a factor in the parental home until fifteen years of age, and at that time began assisting in the support of his widowed mother. When he finished school he was eighteen years of age, and during the following four years was variously employed at physical labor. At the age of twenty-two he took up telegraphy and began work as an operator on the Great Western or Maple Leaf Railroad, continuing as an operator, station agent or train dispatcher until 1898 for the Great Western, but in that year left the Great Western and went to the Great Northern at Chester, Montana, continuing with the latter company until 1905, when he left the service as station agent at Harlem. His connection with railroad work covered a period of fifteen years and gave him a business experience sufficient to equip him for almost any field as an accountant.

At this time Mr. Hatch purchased the Sands ranch, which had been proved up by Mrs. Sands, and also secured the Wall ranch, which had been proved up by Mrs. Jane M. Smith. It was a hay ranch, and Mr. Hatch at once began preparing it for irrigation as a farm. He erected a comfortable home and other buildings necessary for carrying on the work, and also joined a co-operative company for the construction of an irrigation project which built ditches and latterals sufficient to water his 320 acres. He engaged in the raising of hay and grain, and also entered the stock business as a cattle and horse raiser, devoting his time exclusively to his farm until he was elected the cashier of the First National Bank in 1907, afterward dividing his time between the ranch and the bank. In 1917 he disposed of his ranch, and is exclusively now a banker.

The First National was organized in 1905 by Thomas M. Everett, W. E. French, J. A. Hatch, C. H. Owens and Alonzo Ellis. Mr. Everett was chosen the president, W. E. French, vice president and C. H. Owens, the cashier, Mr. Hatch subsequently succeeding him in that office. The bank was organized with a capital of $25,000. Its surplus and profits in May, 1920, were $27,500 and the average deposits reach about $400,000. When Mr. French moved from Harlem his place on the board of directors was filled by W. S. Cowan, who is also the vice president. The bank has maintained itself as a useful institution in the development of this region, and only a single incident in its life threatened a serious mishap of its capital. This was when a raid was made on it in August, 1911, by a trio of bandits. In this holdup Mr. Hatch and the others in the building were forced to hold up their hands until the city marshal of Harlem disposed of the bandit, who had taken all the cash in the vault. But just as he emerged with the funds he was shot and killed by the marshal, and the guarding bandits fled.

In the general development of the town and the country surrounding Harlem Mr. Hatch has had a substantial part. He favored and encouraged the move for the incorporation of the town, was one of the organizers of the stock company that started the first newspaper in Harlem, and was one of the original incorporators of the Harlem Gas and Oil Company. He has always been a republican voter, casting his first presidential ballot for Benjamin Harrison, and continued on with the old-line party until he supported the progressive republican candidate in 1912.

Mr. Hatch married at Independence, Iowa, March 9, 1896, Miss Janet P. Fiester, a native of Blackhawk County, Iowa, and a daughter of Roland B. and Nettie (Lohmiller) Fiester. Mrs. Hatch was the first born of their five sons and two daughters, and those living to mature years are: Charles, of Independence, Iowa; Sidney, of Muskegon, Illinois; William A., of Brandon, Iowa; Archie, who died before marriage; and Lena and Clarence, both of whom are residents of Independence, Iowa. Five children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Hatch, namely: Asenath, who is a bookkeeper in the First National Bank of Harlem; Charles, a student in the Montana University; Ronald and Esther, both of whom are high school students in Harlem; and Joseph A., the youngest, who is still in the grades.

During the World war Mr. Hatch was vice chairman of all the loan drives of the eastern half of Blaine County, and saw his field go "over the top" at each demand for war funds. In the fourth drive of the Liberty Loan this was the first county in the Ninth Federal Reserve District to over subscribe. He had charge of the sale on July 4, 1917, for the war chest fund, when sufficient money was raised to carry on all the war charities of the district during the remainder of the war and leave a substantial fund in the treasury. Mr. Hatch was made treasurer of that entire fund, as well as of the Red Cross of the Harlem branch. A knitting campaign was carried on in the Hatch home, and Mrs. Hatch also gave her warmest sympathy to the cause of the chapter.

Frank H. Livingston. At a critical time in the educational affairs of the nation it is especially appropriate to point out and commend such work as has been done by Frank H. Livingston during the seven years he has been connected with the schools of Montana.

Mr. Livingston, who is superintendent of the Wolf Point schools, comes of a family of teachers and farmers and was born at Livingston, Wisconsin, December 12, 1889. His family were also Wisconsin pioneers. His grandfather, David Livingston, came from the Protestant section of Ireland and entered land direct from the Government near what became Livingston, Wisconsin. He spent the rest of his life as a farmer there. He married after coming to Wisconsin Miss Grace Mates, also of an Irish Protestant family. They were the parents of the following children, William, Richard, David, John, Robert, Elizabeth and Mary, twins, Grace and Jennie.

The old farm near Livingston is now occupied by John and Laura (Skaife) Livingston. The latter was a teacher for several years before her marriage. John and Laura Livingston have the following children: Edna, wife of Herbert Eggleston. of Elgin, Nebraska; Alice, Mrs. Walter Hogan, of Dougherty, Iowa; Frank H.; and Miss Mabel, of Livingston, Wisconsin.

Frank H. Livingston attended the Livingston High School, but before graduating entered the Platteville Normal School under his cousin, President John Livingston, another member of the family whose work as an educator has brought him distinction. Frank H. Livingston finished the English and scientific course at Platteville in 1910. He also represented the Platteville School in the debate against the Minnesota State Normal School of Winona on the subject "Resolved that the labor unions are detrimental to the workmen of the United States." Platteville handled the affirmative side and lost the decision.

After completing his education Mr. Livingston became principal of a ward school in Eau Claire, Wisconsin, and for two years was at Elk Mound in that state. In 1913 he came out to Montana, and took charge of the schools at Medicine Lake. The five years he spent there marked a high tide in the constructive administration of the local school system. Among other improvements a two-room graded school was improved and expanded, giving eight grades and a high school with a three year curriculum. Mr. Livingston remained there almost to witness the completion to graduation of the first high school class. Besides giving Medicine Lake a high school and securing its standing in the state educational system he also built up a commercial department and strengthened and improved the work of the grades throughout. Mr. Livingston is an educator of high ideals and versatile gifts, and his experience and abilities are just the factors needed to broaden the work of public schools in response to the modern demand. While at Medicine Lake he was influential in the holding of declamatory contests between all the schools of old Sheridan County, and also in the introduction of athletics and the participation of pupils in county field meets, these efforts receiving a great deal of co-operation among the patrons of the schools throughout that big county.

In the fall of 1918 Mr. Livingston came to Wolf Point, and has now completed two years with the local schools. When he came eight teachers were handling the work of a three year course in the high school. His predecessor was superintendent Frank Kenney. While he has had difficulties and obstacles to overcome, Mr. Livingston has much to show for the two years he has spent at Wolf Point. Departments and courses in domestic science, agriculture, a chemistry and physical laboratory, physical training and athletics of all kinds, and a high school band of twenty-five pieces and an orchestra of twenty pieces have been introduced to give local school work broader and more efficient character. In 1919 the first class graduated from high school, seven in number, their names being Isabelle Montgomery, Erma Small, Rainer Lenz, Elizabeth Randall, Eva Listerud, Frank Kirkpatrick and Elsie McNeil. Mr. Livingston has also emphasized declamation and debating, and the Wolf Point schools were represented in one state debating contest, and a local representative of the domestic science class went to Helena in 1919 to take part in the sewing contest, with competitors from many of the counties of the state, and won prizes in some of the contests. The first Northern District High School Tournament in basket ball was held in Wolf Point in 1920. The first eighth grade graduation exercises of any county of this section of the state were held at Wolf Point in May, 1920. All of these things speak highly for Mr. Livingston and also for the spirit of co-operation and interest which he has encouraged among the people. Mr. Livingston is a member of the Montana State Teachers Association, and has been a member of the County Board of Examiners since he came to the state.

At Elk Mound, Wisconsin, August 20, 1914, he married Miss Laura A. Jessel, a native of that community. She is a graduate of the Oshkosh Normal School, following which for eight years she was a successful teacher. She is the third of the five children of Henry and Ernestina (Hintzman) Jessel, retired farmers of Elk Mound. Her maternal grandfather Hintzman was a native of Germany, a Wisconsin farmer, served as a Union soldier with a Wisconsin regiment and did not long survive the war. Henry Jessel was born in Germany, and at the age of four years was brought to the United States by his parents and located near Whitewater, Wisconsin, and subsequently at Camp Douglas in that state, where Henry was reared and educated. The children of the Jessel family were: Elnora, wife of Edward Ausman, of Elk Mound; Minnie, who died at Elk Mound as the wife of Emil Gregerson; Miss Emma, of Wolf Point, Montana; Mrs. Livingston; Louis and Irvin, of Elk Mound. One son has been born to Mr. and Mrs. Livingston, John Henry, born September 21, 1917.

ARTHUR J. COWAN is one of the prominent stock men of the vicinity of Harlem, and his name has been prominently associated with the development of this region since 1893, one of four brothers who have aided materially in the advancement of Blaine County.

Mr. Cowan was born in Schoharie County, New York, near the Village of Jefferson, January 29, 1864, a son of William and Mary (Brooks) Cowan. He was reared amid the environments of a farm, received a rural school training, and began working out as a farm hand when thirteen years of age. Although he received but $7 a month, he performed a man's work and which at the present would receive $75 a month.

Mr. Cowan came from his native State of New York to Montana in 1893, and for a number of years he and his brother were sheep ranchers on Woody Island Creek, where he still maintains ranching and farming interests. After reaching Montana he entered a homestead on Woody Island Creek, and there performed his first permanent work in the state. It was in the early part of May, 1893, that he and his family moved into a little log shack on this claim, a dwelling 12 by 14 feet in dimensions, and his first farming efforts were directed toward sheep and hay raising. He at once became associated with his brothers George W. and Winfield S., and for four years they carried on their wool industry, running at the height of the industry between 4,000 and 5,000 sheep. Arthur J. Cowan continued on in the business, completing his association with his brother Winfield S. after a partnership of twenty-five years, and during that period there was a wide range in the price of both sheep and wool. Lambs during that time sold as low as $1 a head and yearlings for $2 a head, while wool sold as low as 6 cents a pound, but even at those low prices the brothers considered they made some profit. The highest price of wool during that period was perhaps 24 cents a pound, and when Arthur J. Cowan disposed of his band in 1917 the sale price of the sheep was $10 a head. With the passing years he has also developed a farm of 300 acres under the plow, and the log house which succeeded the little pioneer cabin is still sheltering the tenant on the ranch.

Mr. Cowan removed to the Town of Harlem in 1903. He has contributed to the material growth of the town with his twelve-room modern home and two small cottages. For some time he was engaged in the butchering business in association with his brother. He also became interested in the First National Bank early in its history, and is now a member of the board of directors of the institution. He was a subscriber to the stock of the first newspaper published in Harlem, and also contributed to the site for the stockyards of the town. Mr. Cowan also helped build the first church in Harlem, and Mrs. Cowan taught the first school in the Town of Malta, and also organized the first Sunday school there. The Cowan home was maintained in that town for several years.

Mr. Cowan was married in Schoharie County, New York, December 24, 1891, to Mrs. Mary Brockway, a daughter of John Payne and a sister of Mrs. Winfield S. Cowan of Harlem. Mrs. Cowan by her first marriage became the mother of three children: Mabel, the wife of Verd Johnson, a ranchman on Woody Island Creek; Sidney, engaged in the garage business in Harlem, married Bertha Gardner and has a son, Ashley; and Fred is associated with Mr. Cowan in stock raising on Woody Island Creek. He married Edna Wood, and they have two children, Eloise and Stanley.

Mr. Cowan began voting as a young man in New York, casting his first presidential ballot for Grover Cleveland in 1884. Since that time he has supported the protective policy of the country and votes for the republican presidential nominees. He is a charter member of the Harlem Lodge of Odd Fellows and is a past grand of the order. The family are identified with the Presbyterian Church, and Mrs. Cowan for several years continued her activity in the work of that organization and was the church treasurer.

Clarence E Broadbrooks

CLARENCE E. BROADBROOKS. Numbered among the old settlers of Saco who have made their names well-known and honored in this region is Clarence E. Broadbrooks, one of the extensive ranch operators of Phillips County. He was born in Decatur County, Iowa, April 24, 1867, a son of John M. Broadbrooks, and a grandson of Henry Broadbrooks, the latter a millwright and one of the men connected with the erection of early mills in both Missouri and Iowa.

John M. Broadbrooks was born in New York State, but was taken during his infancy to Ohio by his parents, and the family residence was maintained in the latter state for ten years, when once more it was changed and settlement was made in Missouri, on the line between that state and Iowa. When still a child under ten years of age John M. Broadbrooks made himself useful, being a driver of mules on the towpath of the Cuyahoga Canal in Ohio, but after he was taken to Missouri he acquired a fairly good education, and taught school in both Missouri and Iowa. He also worked with his father as a millwright, and their mill is believed to be the first put up in all of that region.

During the war between the states John M. Broadbrooks served with the Thirty-fourth Iowa Volunteer Infantry, leaving the schoolroom to enlist, and saw service along the border of Missouri, Kansas, Indian Territory, Arkansas and Texas as a member of the Western Army. He was in the service for four years, under General Grant, and took part in the campaign against Vicksburg and its surrender, as well as in the other engagements of his regiment. When he was mustered out at Jefferson Barracks, St. Louis, Missouri, it was with an excellent record, and he was fortunate enough to get through without being wounded or captured, although he had more than one very narrow escape from both. Several times bullets passed through his cap and other articles of wearing apparel.

John M. Broadbrooks was married in Decatur County, Iowa, to Margaret J. Kerr, a daughter of Edward Kerr. The Kerr family lived at different times in Ohio, Iowa and Western Kansas. Mr. and Mrs. Broadbooks spent twelve years in Kansas and then moved to Cass County, Missouri, dying at East Lynn, Missouri, he in 1908, and his widow, in January, 1919. The children born to them were as follows: Clarence E., whose name heads this review; Harriet, who is the wife of Fred Barker, of Peculiar, Missouri; Della, who is unmarried, is a resident of Kansas City, Missouri; Arthur H., who lives at Peculiar, Missouri; Lillie, who died in 1919, was unmarried; and Bertha, who married Ollie Stone at East Lynn, Missouri, is now a resident of Los Angeles, California.

Clarence E. Broadbrooks was only an infant when his parents moved to Mercer County, Missouri, and, in 1877, when he was not much over ten years old, the family moved to Ford County, Kansas, near Dodge City, and on the family farm thirty miles from that city, on Pawnee Creek, he was reared to manhood. He attended the local schools, which were rural ones. Pawnee Creek was the center of the cattle industry of that part of the state, and there he learned the business, and when he left Kansas it was to accompany a "cow outfit" bound for Texas.

For the subsequent year he was in the employ of the Home Land and Cattle Company of Panhandle City, Texas, from whence he went to the vicinity of Las Animas, Colorado, where he rode the range for the Prairie Cattle Company, making the trip of several hundred miles on horseback over the regular cattle trail from Texas to Montana, passing through Eastern Wyoming and entering Montana above the head of the Little Missouri, following Little Powder River almost to its junction with the Big Powder. He then crossed over into what is now the Powder River County on to Mizpah Creek and Stacy at the head of Pumpkin Creek. From there he followed that Creek down to Miles City, where he crossed the Yellowstone River and turned loose the herd he and the rest of the outfit were driving on Big Dry, south of the Missouri River. There were 2,600 cows in the herd, and a crew of eleven men were in the outfit, bossed by Bob Kennedy, foreman.

When Mr. Broadbrooks left the Home Land and Cattle Company he engaged with the Circle Diamond Company, and brought a bunch of cattle for them from Colorado to Montana. This outfit, owned by the Bloom Cattle Company, had headquarters near Malta on Milk River, and he remained with the company for a year, leaving it to engage in the cattle business for himself. He established his modest outfit on Milk River, just north of Saco, it then comprising 80 head of horses and 200 head of cattle. As a partner in the horse business he had Elmer Cain, now engaged in ranching just north of Tampico, Montana. In 1897 their ranch was moved to Larb Creek, and remained there three years, when Mr. Broadbrooks sold his interest to Dan C. Kyle.

Mr. Broadbrooks then crossed into Canada and bought the "Old Stonepile" place from the Dominion Government and established a cattle ranch there, starting in with 250 head. After he had been there a year his stock was bought by the Circle Diamond people. By this time he had become dissatisfied with conditions in Canada, and he came back to the United States, locating once more in the Saco neighborhood. He homesteaded his present ranch, adjacent to the townsite of the little city, and here he has continued to live. Stockraising became an important factor in his business operations, and he branched out considerably, but with the coming of settlers he was forced to change his plans, just as he had been compelled to do at the beginning of his career, when their invasion of Kansas forced him out of that state, and he turned more of his attention to hay raising, although he still raises cattle upon a much smaller scale. The Broadbrooks' lands are under the Milk River project for irrigation, and a half section of his valley lands has been brought under the ditch.

Clarence E. Broadbrooks was reared in a home dominated by democratic principles in politics, and when he cast his first presidential vote it went to Grover Cleveland. He has voted for William Jennings Bryan three times, and if that celebrated statesman is again a nominee for the presidency he will no doubt receive Mr. Broadbrooks' support, for he is a great admirer of him and his sincerity. No public office has burdened him, and he has rendered no official service save that of school trustee.

On September 27, 1894, Mr. Broadbrooks was married at Saco to Miss Dora Kennedy, a daughter of David and Isabella (Bell) Kennedy. Mrs. Broadbrooks was born in County Essex, Ontario, Canada, March 21, 1875, and two years thereafter the Kennedy family moved to the vicinity of Grand Forks, North Dakota, where for five years they were engaged in farming. Once more a change of location was made, Towner, North Dakota, being selected for the new home, and there the Ken-nedys were engaged in stock raising for seven years, and then left there for Montana, arriving in this state in 1889. All of these changes from Canada to Montana were made with a wagon and team. Mr. Kennedy took up a homestead in North Dakota, but Mrs. Kennedy entered a desert claim near Saco, Montana, proved it up and still owns it. Mr. Kennedy died in 1911, when sixty-seven years old. He was born in Lower Canada. His widow was born in County Donegal, Ireland, June 3, 1853. She is a sister of John K. Bell of Saco. Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy had the following children: Lewis, who is a ranchman of Phillips County, Montana; Mrs. Broadbrooks, who was educated in the public schools of North Dakota and Montana; and Alvina, who married Ernest Pierson, of Beaverton, Montana. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Broadbrooks are as follows: John D., who was born March 7, 1900; and Louis A., who was born April 9, 1903.

Mr. Broadbrooks has had a varied and interesting career and has participated in the many changes of this region. Coming here when the range was free to all, he developed into one of the heavy cattlemen, and then, when changing conditions necessitated a change in methods, he was farsighted enough to provide for them. A man of the highest character, his judgment is relied upon, especially in matters pertaining to the cattle industry and ranching, and his advice is sought by those who have come here at a later date and are not acquainted, as he is, with the history of the region. He has been enthusiastically active in the promotion of the Milk River irrigation project, and feels that through its proper development the lands in this section will become very productive and greatly enhanced in value.

J. Bertram Switzer. This is the name of one of the prominent bankers of Eastern Montana, officially identified with several institutions in that section of the state. His home has been at Wolf Point since 1917, and he is vice president of the Security State Bank of that town.

Mr. Switzer has spent an active career in business since early manhood and was born in Grant County, Wisconsin, December 6, 1879. His people were pioneers in Wisconsin and remotely were of German ancestry, the name being established in Pennsylvania in colonial times by Peter Switzer. The men of the succeeding generations have been in the main farmers, and representatives of the family are scattered widely over the country. The grandfather of the Montana banker was John Switzer, a native of Indiana who became identified with the pioneer life of Wisconsin, locating at Fennimore during the territorial days of the Badger State. Isaac W. Switzer, father of J. Bertram, was born at Fennimore, Wisconsin, in 1847, grew up in a country district and had a common school education. He has been a man of achievement as a farmer and stockman, and still owns extensive land holdings in the Dakotas. His home has been in the Twin Cities at Minneapolis since 1903. He moved there in order that his younger children might have superior educational advantages, and his daughters all went through the State University. Isaac Switzer married Pora Dinsdale, who was born at Fennimore, Wisconsin, while her father, John Dinsdale, came to Wisconsin from England. The children of Isaac W. Switzer and wife are: Mrs. J. H. Marks, of Regent, North Dakota, who died in August, 1920; J. Bertram; Mrs. J. A. Ferguson, of Loveland, Colorado; Harriet, principal of the schools of Harlowton, Montana; Mrs. G. A. Davis, of Jackson, Minnesota; Mrs. Fred Williams, of Chicago; and Mrs. Earl Ellsworth, of Windom, Minnesota.

J. Bertram Switzer acquired a thorough education in Wisconsin, being a graduate of the Viroqua High School and the State Normal School at Stevens Point. For two years he was a teacher in the Viola High School and then went out to the Pacific Coast, for a time being connected with a dry goods house at Spokane and later with the Spokane and Eastern Trust Company. Returning East, he located in North Dakota, and since that time has been actively identified with banking. He founded a country bank at Sherwood and later at Loraine, and was cashier of these two institutions. Mr. Switzer left Loraine to come to Montana in 1917, and located at Wolf Point for the purpose of instituting a bank. The Security State Bank is the result of his efforts at organization, and it opened its doors for business in July, 1917, with Mr. Switzer as managing head. He subsequently sold his banking interests at Loraine, North Dakota.

His leading associations in the founding of the Security State Bank were C. B. Roberts and P. L. Howe, both men with large Montana interests. They and Mr. Switzer became the chief officers of the bank, which was capitalized at $25,000. Though its career has been through three years of adverse conditions, the bank now has deposits of $200,000 and surplus and undivided profits of $3,500. Mr. Howe is president of the bank, Mr. Switzer, vice president and active manager, and W. H. Belideau, cashier. These three men are directors with L. A. Kragrud and W. L. Young, both of Wolf Point.

Other banking interests in Montana acquired by Mr. Switzer are as vice president of the Bowdoin State Bank and director in the Security State Bank at White Fish and in the Lothair State Bank.

Mr. Switzer is unmarried. He was eligible for the selective draft and his name appears on the rolls of men registered at Wolf Point, though the armistice was signed before he was classified. He cast his first presidential vote for McKinley in 1900. His only official service was in minor offices in the Dakota towns where they lived. Mr. Switzer is a member of Loyalty Lodge of Masons at Wolf Point, and is a member of the Odd Fellows and Modern Woodmen of America at Loraine, North Dakota. He has passed the chairs of the Loraine Lodge of Odd Fellows.

Jerry Flynn. While a resident of Wolf Point only a few years, Jerry Flynn is widely known over Montana as a veteran railroad man, and has made his connection with Wolf Point distinctive through contributing the first two-story brick business house to that little metropolis.

Jerry Flynn has seen a great deal of the world in a lifetime of less than sixty years. He was born August 26, 1868, in County Kerry, Ireland. He was the youngest of six children and the only son of John and Hannah (Brosnahan) Flynn and the only member of the family to come to the United States. His parents were natives of County Kerry, and their lineage goes back to the remote history of Ireland. Jerry Flynn has made several trips back to his native country, and two of his five sisters are still living there, Mrs. Julia Foley and Hannah, of Tralee.

Jerry Flynn grew up in the home of a farmer, and his people were in comfortable circumstances. He attended the common schools of Ireland and at the age of seventeen left home and going to London secured a place as a station guard for the Midland Railway Company. That was the beginning of almost a life time of service in the transportation industry. After a year he started for the United States, sailing from Liverpool on the Servia and went through Castle Garden bound for Toledo. He reached Toledo with about $45 and within a week found some employment and worked at different things until he became a freight brakeman for the New York Central Railway Company at Toledo. After a few years of service there he went out to Minnesota in 1895, and at St. Cloud joined the Great Northern Company, and he has completed almost a quarter of a century of service with that railroad. For a time he was a yard man at West Superior, and also worked for the Great Northern at Melrose and St. Cloud.

In 1898 Mr. Flynn came into Montana and on the 5th of May of that year was assigned as a freight conductor running out of Glasgow. He lived in Glasgow, in Havre and Cutbank at times until he came to Wolf Point in April, 1917. He was in the train service for sixteen years, almost the entire time as a conductor. His record is marked by the lack of either a wreck or an accident. For a time he engaged in business at Cutbank, and again he recently resumed his work for the Great Northern in the yards at Wolf Point. Mr. Flynn can count up thirty-two years of his life spent in railroading.

He showed his faith in the future of Wolf Point by the erection in 1917 of one of the best business buildings. It is a two-story brick, with the second story for his home, while the lower story is occupied by the Fad Clothing Company. For a time he operated extensively in the buying and selling of real estate. He bought the corner on which the First National Bank stands for $4,500, and though in some quarters it was regarded as a foolhardy transaction, in less than thirty days he sold the ground at a profit of more than 40 per cent. This and his other local investments demonstrated his foresight and wisdom.

Mr. Flynn is an American by naturalization and by sincerity of convictions. While living in Toledo he cast his first ballot as a democrat, supporting Mr. Cleveland for President, and did not vote again until 1908, when he supported Mr. Bryan. He has always been faithful to the Catholic Church, in which he was reared. At St. Paul he married Miss Julia G. Bailey, youngest of the seven children of Patrick and Hannah (O'Connor) Bailey. Her father was a farmer and spent his last days at St. Paul, where he is buried.

Hon. Charles C. Hurley, judge of the Seventh Judicial District of Montana, is one of the most distinguished residents of Glendive and illustrious members of the bench. He has been identified with the state since 1899, when he came to Glendive and established himself in a general practice. Judge Hurley was born in Clinton County, Indiana, February 12, 1869, a son of James W. Hurley a native of Pennsylvania.

When he was fourteen years old Judge C. C. Hurley was brought west to Cameron, Hall County, Nebraska, by his parents, and was there reared. After he had completed his studies in the public schools of Hall County he went to the Fremont Normal School, and still later was a student of the Nebraska Normal School at Wayne, Nebraska. Subsequently he entered the law department of the Nebraska State University at Lincoln, Nebraska, and was graduated therefrom in 1898. In order to secure the money to pursue his studies Judge Hurley taught school, beginning with the little country school at the cross-road, Nantascot, Buffalo County, Nebraska, from which he rose to graded school work as principal at Newman Grove and Osmand, Nebraska, and then for a year he was principal at Elko, Nevada. Following his graduation in law Judge Hurley went to Glenns Ferry, Idaho, and then, in 1899, located at Glendive and in this city began his career as a professional man.

In November, 1902, Judge Hurley first came before the people for office, being the nominee of the democratic party for attorney of Dawson County to succeed Thomas C. Holmes. He received 340 votes and his opponent received 308 votes. At that time Dawson County was about three to one republican, so it is easy to see that his election came through his personal popularity and the realization on the part of the people of his fitness for office. In 1904 he was elected to succeed himself, and served in all two terms or four years.

When Judge Hurley assumed the duties of the judgeship his jurisdiction covered old Dawson and old Custer counties, out of which eight new counties have since been carved. He was elected to succeed himself in November, 1916, and his service on the bench has extended over a period active in the litigation of the eastern part of Montana.

In his politics Judge Hurley is a democrat, and cast his first presidential ballot for Grover Cleveland while he was still a resident of Nebraska, and has not swerved from his loyalty to the party since then.

On June 13, 1906, Judge Hurley was united in marriage with Miss Fannie Skiles at Wayne, Nebraska. She was a daughter of Robert Skiles, a farmer who moved to Nebraska from Wisconsin a number of years ago. Mrs. Hurley was born in Wisconsin, but was reared and educated in Nebraska, attending the State Normal School at Wayne. Following her graduation she was engaged in teaching school at Wayne and Norfolk, Nebraska, and Brainerd, Minnesota. She died at Glendive, January 3, 1919, leaving two children, Skiles and Charles.

Arthur White, one of the county commissioners of Richland County and a merchant at Burns, has been a resident and active business man of Montana for the past decade, and has spent most of his life in the Northwest. He is an honored veteran of the Philippine war and has been as prompt in his patriotism as in his local citizenship and business enterprise.

Mr. White was born in Marshall County, Indiana, January 27, 1875. His paternal ancestry goes back to old Virginia, where the first of the name settled around Jamestown on coming from the Isle of Wight in colonial days. His grandfather, Phineas A. White, was an early settler and farmer in Jennings County, Indiana, but prior to the Civil war moved to Marshall County. He enlisted and served as a private in the Union army, most of his time being spent around Washington in Virginia. He was a stanch and stirring citizen, possessed a natural gift of speech and was a contributor to the newspapers of his home locality. In politics he was a republican and was a member of the Wesleyan Methodist Church. Phineas White married Deborah Robinson, and they reared seven sons and one daughter.

The oldest child was Edward Hicks White, who was born October 22, 1850, and was reared in Marshall County, Indiana. He acquired the education of the common schools and spent his active life as a farmer, sawmill man and operator of threshing machines. In the early nineties he moved out to South Dakota and lived there until his death in 1910. Edward H. White married Martha Jane Morris, who is still living at Huron, South Dakota. They were the parents of three children: Arthur;

Mrs. Emma Thompson, of Huron; and Chester N., who is a lieutenant junior grade in the United States Navy and now commanding officer of a sea-going tug.

Arthur White acquired his early education in the public schools of Marshall County, Indiana, and was seventeen years of age when his parents moved to Beadle County, South Dakota. He came to manhood in the vicinity of Huron, and his early experiences were those of a South Dakota farm section. At the outbreak of the Spanish-American war he was at Douglas, Wyoming, where he volunteered, enlisting in the First Battalion of Volunteer Infantry, under Captain J. D. O'Brien and Major Foote. The troop rendezvoused at Cheyenne, was sent to Camp Merrit, San Francisco, and crossed the Pacific on the transport Ohio, reaching Manila Bay by way of Honolulu July 31, 1898. Mr. White arrived about a month after the Battle of Manila Bay and aided in the capture of the City of Manila. After that he performed garrison duty until the outbreak of the Philippine insurrection on February 4, 1899. He was in two days' fighting at the beginning of the outbreak, and his troops were then transferred to that portion of the line protecting the waterworks and pipe line supply of the city. They were brigaded with General Hall's brigade during the Morong expedition. Later he was transferred to the south line on the Zapota River. Mr. White and his comrades were relieved from duty and ordered home about the middle of July, 1899, sailing from Manila on the transport Grant and returning to San Francisco by way of Japan. He landed on the United States shores about the 1st of September, was discharged the 23rd of the same month, and at once returned to his home at Huron, South Dakota. Mr. White joined the Spanish-American War Veterans Association at Fargo.

After more than eighteen months of experience as a soldier Mr. White taught a short term of school and spent a few months in a business college. With a native and acquired ability as a mechanic he was then employed as an expert by the Acme Harvesting Machine Company and after two or three years in the Northwest was sent to South America in the fall of 1903, and that winter worked as a machine expert around Buenos Aires. While in Argentina he became strongly impressed with its wonderful agricultural possibilties. Returning to this country in the spring of 1904, he was retained by the same company as a "block man" or salesman at Aberdeen, South Dakota, until 1907, when he was promoted to assistant general agent at Fargo. The following year he was made general agent of the company's business in North Dakota, and continued the supervision of the company's sales and other work over that state until he resigned to come to Montana in 1910.

The ten years of Mr. White's Montana experience has been divided between the practical work of homesteading and claim improvements and business and civic affairs. He entered his homestead west of Savage and hauled lumber from Glendive to put up a simple one-room shack. With the construction of the Northern Pacific line he improved his home to one of three rooms. He proved up in the usual time and had enough success as a farmer to give him a favorable impression of the country and is still owner of his claim.

Mr. White on leaving the farm tried to get into the service through the Students Army Training Corps, but was rejected on account of his age. However, he made himself useful in local war work, serving as a member of the County Fuel Committee and as president of the Red Cross auxiliary at Savage. During the war he located at Burns, where he manages the chief mercantile enterprise of the village, and has charge of the Burns Grain Company's business.

Mr. White was appointed county commissioner in April, 1918, as the successor of John Boardman. Though a republican he was appointed by a democratic judge. He is a member of the board with Commissioners Hardy and Miller. He has given much thought and study to the routine business of the county and actively supported the seed grain bond issue. Mr. White cast his first presidential vote for William McKinley. He is not a politician and has found other ways to make his usefulness apparent to the locality in which he has lived. He is a member of the Masonic Lodge.

At Huron, South Dakota, February 16, 1905, Mr. White married Alice C. Fuller, who was born at Morenci in southern Michigan, September 11, 1875, daughter of Morris and Mary (Page) Fuller. Her father was a native of New York and her mother of Michigan, and they spent their lives as farmers and in 1882, when Mrs. White was seven years of age, moved out to Dakota Territoy and homesteaded near Huron. Her father died there at the close of the year 1903, when seventy-one years of age, and her mother is still living at Huron. Mr. and Mrs. Fuller reared nine children, named James M., Edward H., Mrs. Fannie Koon, Mrs. Nell Dickey, Charles Clifford, Mary L., Mrs. White, Arthur D. and Ada M., wife of Rollin Holden.

MYRON MCDANIEL. Not only a successful rancher, but also extensively interested in different enterprises of this section, Myron McDaniel has earned his right to be numbered among the representative business men of Cascade County. He was born in Madison County, New York, on the farm of his father, August 28, 1851, a son of William and Mary Jane (Mead) McDaniel.

William McDaniel was born in the North of Ireland of a Scotch father, and died at the age of fifty-seven years. His wife was born in New York State of an English father, and died when eighty-three years old. They had seven children, two of whom are now living, Myron McDaniel being the fourth in order of birth. When he was sixteen years old William McDaniel came to the United States on a sailing vessel, and landed in New York City, from whence he went to Troy, New York. For the next five years he worked at gardening, and then went to Madison County, New York, and for a time conducted a farm. Later he went into the business of manufacturing soap and candles, moving his plant to Utica, New York. While living in the latter city he was employed as superintendent of the laying out the grounds of the Utica Cemetery. His last years were spent at Utica, New York. A strong republican, he rendered his party and country valuable service in putting down the "Copperheads" in his neighborhood during the war between the North and the South, doing this at great personal danger, his life oftentimes being threatened.

Myron McDaniel attended the schools of Cazenovia, New York, and resided in New York State until the spring of 1880, when he came to Montana, making the trip by rail as far as Bismarck, North Dakota, and from there up the Missouri River on the steamer Far West to Belton, Montana. He then went with a mule team to Sun River, and from there traveled in company with James Austin in a wagon driven by horses to the Chestnut Valley. Here he pre-empted 160 acres of land and engaged in raising dairy cattle, sheep and horses, and also conducted a saw-mill for about six years. During that period his cattle ranged from 100 to 400 head, and his sheep about 1,000 head, but at present he has only about 350 head of sheep and the same number of cattle. His horses now number about 100 head. For about thirty years he has been a breeder of Hambletonian horses, and is now breeding the Percheron strain as well. He prefers raising beef cattle. He owns 5,120 acres of land, 640 acres in the home place and the remainder situated on Sheep Creek. Mr. McDaniel has never cared for politics, but reserves to himself an independence in voting, believing it to be his right to do so, as he is an American citizen of more than average intelligence. In addition to his agricultural interests he is a stockholder in the Rocky Mountain Fire Insurance Company, the Cascade Co-operative Association and in an oil concern at Cooper, Wyoming.

Wyoon McDaniel

On August 3, 1873, Mr. McDaniel was married to Elizabeth J. Bond, born at Kingston, Canada, but at the time of her marriage a resident of Albany, New York. Mr. and Mrs. McDaniel became the parents of four children, as follows: Estella, who was the wife of J. H. Bradley, to whom she bore a daughter, and died July 4, 1899; Mary, who is the wife of John Lamb, has a daughter; Lillian, who married Thomas Gregory, has a son; and Rose, who married Harry Savidge.

During the many years he has resided in Chestnut Valley Mr. McDaniel has taken a deep interest in the development of this region and has more than borne his proportion of the work of bringing it into its present state of prosperity. He has not only achieved a material success, but something even more gratifying, a reputation for unflinching honesty and sterling uprightness which inspires the fullest confidence and commands universal respect.

Joseph R. Murphy. It is a recognized fact that lumbering comes next to agriculture in importance among the basic industries, and among manufactures only meat packing and metal working surpass it. Since the beginning of its industrial history Montana has been one of the great sources of supply for the lumber markets of the country, and naturally men of initiative and broad vision have been attracted to the lumber business in its various branches. One of these men is Joseph R. Murphy of Nashua, secretary and treasurer of the Farmers Lumber Company, a concern which he founded, built up and is now conducting with notable efficiency.

Joseph R. Murphy was born in Peoria County, Illinois, January 13, 1878, a son of Thomas Murphy, who was born in Ireland. The latter came to the United States when a small child and spent his boyhood and youth in and about Trenton, New Jersey. For many years he was a florist. His wife was Elizabeth Drummond, born in New York City but of Irish parentage. They were married in New York City, and then migrated to Peoria County, Illinois, where he was engaged in farming until their son Joseph R. was a few weeks old, when they moved to Creston, Iowa, and there Thomas Murphy acquired another farm and continued to till the soil until he died, August 13, 1900. The trip from Illinois to Iowa was made according to regular pioneer custom, in a covered wagon, and the life of the family in the latter state for the first few years was one of hardship, for conditions were very primitive and even the necessities hard to obtain, but through industry, perseverance and good management success finally crowned their efforts. During the war between the two sections of the country Thomas Murphy proved his loyalty to the Union by enlisting, but peace was declared before his organization reached the front. Mrs. Thomas Murphy survived her husband until June, 1907, when she was taken away, being at that time sixty-seven years old, or three years older than he when he died. Their children were as follows: Mary, who lives at Creston, Iowa; Elizabeth, who is Mrs. A. J. Miller, of Prescott, Iowa; John, who lives at Des Moines, Iowa; Katherine, who died in young womanhood; Margaret, who married S. P. Treanor, of Creston, Iowa; William, who is manager for a lumber concern in northern Iowa; Thomas, who died at Euclid, Minnesota, leaving five children; Agnes, who married James Treanor, died at Spalding, Iowa; and Joseph R., who is the youngest of the family.

Growing up at Creston, Iowa, Joseph R. Murphy received his educational training there, and was reared on his father's farm, where he was residing when war was declared with Spain in 1898. He was one of the young men of the country who responded to President McKinley's call for volunteers, and enlisted in the Fifty-fifth Iowa Infantry, Captain Ickis and Colonel Loper, of Des Moines, Iowa, commanding. The regiment was mobilized at Des Moines, Iowa, and remained there in training for six weeks, when it was sent to the Presidio, San Francisco, California, where they were retained until November 23, 1898, when they were honorably discharged, and Mr. Murphy returned to Creston. Resuming his old place on the farm, he continued there for about four years. His health failing, he went South, working as a clerk at different points from Mena, Arkansas, to New Orleans, Louisiana. Finding that the climate of New Orleans was beneficial, he remained in that city for two years, and then, feeling improved in health, he returned to Creston, and after a brief visit went to Williams County, North Dakota, and for two years was engaged in clerking at DeLac. In 1907 he came to Montana, and since that date has confined his operations within the radius of this state.

In the fall of 1907 Mr. Murphy became a student railroad man, working between Glasgow and Havre, and then after a short time spent a few weeks in the railroad shops, but found that this kind of employment was not suited to him, and he became a clerk for the Colenan Hardware Company of Glasgow. Having filed a claim when he first reached the state, he went on it in the spring of 1908, and eventually proved it up. This property he still owns, and it is a valuable one, located about seven miles west of Nashua. He has broken out about sixty-five acres, which he has sown to alfalfa, and is planning to develop it as an alfalfa farm.

With the approach of the winter season of 1908 Mr. Murphy returned to Glasgow, and for two years was in the employ of the Yotter Hardware Company, and then went with the Imperial Lumber Company of Glasgow. In this line of business he found employment to his liking and made such rapid strides that his concern transferred him to its yards at Nashua, where he has continued to reside ever since. After four and one-half years with the above company as manager of its Nashua yards Mr. Murphy left it and bought the plant and good will of the old Farmers Lumber Company, forming a corporation under the same name, and associating with him in the enterprise of Lee Brothers of the same city. Since then the business has been so expanded as to include Frazer and Oswego, Montana, the Farmers Lumber Company purchasing the Olson and Nelson yards at these towns. Arthur Lee is president, Alfred Lee is vice president, and Mr. Murphy, secretary and treasurer, of the Farmers Lumber Company, and the corporation is recognized as one of the most dependable in this section of the state.

On January 21, 1918, Joseph R. Murphy was united in marriage at Havre, Montana, to Miss Maud McGovern, a daughter of E. H. McGovern, of Newburg, North Dakota. Mrs. Murphy was born at Devil's Lake, North Dakota, May 12, 1892, and was there reared and educated. Coming to Montana as a teacher, she had three years in the educational field prior to her marriage, two years of that time being an instructor of the Nashua High School and the other year she taught the district school which was adjacent to her claim at Tobison, Valley County. She is one of the four children born to her parents, who are now living in Montana. Mr. and Mrs. Murphy have two children: Paul Joseph and Eunice Ann. The Murphy home is a modern, two-story and full basement residence, lighted with electricity, and supplied with other conveniences, and is regarded as one of the nicest ones in the city.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Murphy were very active in war work, and Mr. Murphy was food administrator of the Nashua locality, and he also was instrumental in assisting to fill the quota in the various drives inaugurated to enable the administration to carry out its policies. Mr. Murphy's success has come to him along a legitmate channel and honorable, earned through his own efforts. Burdened for some years with ill health, he did not permit that disadvantage to handicap him, but did his duty as it came to him, won appreciation and encouragement because of his faithfulness, and during that period made the most of his opportunities for improvement, and when his opening came, he was ready to take it. Ever since coming to Nashua he has had the welfare of it at heart, and has given to its civic affairs the same conscientious consideration he accords to all problems set before him, with the result that his advice has been taken, and the city been benefited.

Otto Ramstad, who came alone to the United States at the age of twelve years with the address of his destination attached to the lapel of his coat, has realized to a remarkable degree the economic and civic opportunities of the great land of America. His has been a progressive career, and for the past five years he has been one of the active members of the community at Poplar, Montana, where he is cashier and manager of the First National Bank.

He was born at Skjaak, Gudbrandalen, Norway, December 6, 1881. His father, Sylfest P. Ramstad, spent all his life in the community of Norway where his son was born, was a farmer and horse dealer, an active factor in the affairs of the community and took the lead in many things affecting it. He married Marit Hoven, of a wealthy agricultural family. Their children were Peter, Olaf, Gudbrand, Sylfest, Anna, Mathias, Hans, Leo and Otto. All these became citizens of the United States except Sylfest and Hans, who are farmers in the old country, Sylfest being owner of the Ramstad estate, which has been in the family for six hundred years. The first of the children to break home ties and come to the United States was Olaf in 1882. He became a successful merchant and a banker. Peter was a prosperous farmer and died at Ada, Minnesota, in 1918. Gudbrand was one of the early settlers of Elkhorn, Montana, for a number of years was employed in a smelter near Butte, and after his health failed returned to Norway and died at the old home in 1895. Anna is the wife of E. J. Boyer, a civil engineer at Crookston, Minnesota. Mathias is identified with farming at Ada, Minnesota, and Leo is a farmer in Beltrami County, Minnesota.

Otto was next to the last to emigrate from the parental home, and never saw his parents after he left them in 1895. When he started from Norway his destination was Ada, Minnesota, where he joined some brothers and lived with them on a farm. He also attended public schools, acquired a knowledge of English, and made such use of his opportunities that he was qualified to teach in rural schools. By teaching he largely defrayed his expenses in the Minnesota State Normal School at Moorehead, graduating in 1909 and then entering the University of Minnesota, where he took the classical course and received the Bachelor of Arts degree in 1912. The following three years he was superintendent of schools at Clinton.

Mr. Ramstad gave up school work to come to Montana and engage in banking. He reached Poplar September 4, 1915, and at once took charge of what was then known as the Fort Peck State Bank. The next year, on August 11, 1916, the First National Bank was chartered. The men chiefly interested in the bank were Olaf Ramstad, president of the Citizens State Bank at Thief River Falls, Minnesota; T. L. Malgaard, cashier of the same bank; H. L. Malgaard, president of the Merchants and Farmers Bank at Argyle, Minnesota; and Otto Ramstad. The First National began with capital and surplus of $30,000. In the fall of 1915 the Fort Peck State Bank had total resources of $89,000. Four years later, in November, 1919, the total resources of the First National Bank were $419,000, constituting it the second largest bank in Roosevelt County. This bank bought $65,000 of the bonds and certificates of indebtedness of the Government during the World war, and Mr. Ramstad was an active factor in helping float the loans in his locality, being local chairman of the various drives at Poplar.

Mr. Ramstad went through the process of naturalization as soon as he reached his majority, and was first identified with the old populist party. His first presidential vote was cast for Judge Parker in 1904, and as a democrat he also supported Bryan and Wilson. He is a member of the Poplar School Board, is president of the Commercial Club and of the Northeastern Montana Livestock Association.

At Minneapolis, April 15, 1916, he married Miss Otilia Ellertson. She was born at Mayville, North Dakota, December 25, 1889. Her father, E. E. Ellertson, a native of Minnesota and of Norwegian ancestry, is president of the Russell Grader Manufacturing Company of Minneapolis. Her mother was Julia Husebye, of Kindred, North Dakota, and Mrs. Ramstad is the second child and only daughter of five children. She graduated from the East High School of Minneapolis in 1909 and received her Bachelor of Arts degree at the University of Minnesota in 1913. For two years following her graduation and before her marriage she was in charge of the Domestic Science Department of the schools of Halstead, Minnesota. Mr. and Mrs. Ramstad have two children: Paul Ellertson, born January 30,, 1918, and Ralph Lincoln, born September 15, 1919.

Harry B. Tyson, who has been identified with the Wolf Point locality of Roosevelt County since April, 1917, is a mining engineer by profession, a banker by experience, and is one of the active business men developing the resources of northern Montana.

He was born at Emmetsburg, Palo Alto County, Iowa, September 18, 1888. His grandfather, Joseph Tyson, was for many years a farmer in Iowa, and with his wife spent his last days at San Diego, California. His children were: Milton, who died at San Diego; James, who also died there; Ella, wife of Will Roper, of San Diego; and Wilmer Joseph. Wilmer Joseph Tyson, father of Harry B., was born at York, Ontario, in June, 1851, had a grammar school education, and came to the United States with his parents in about 1871. He became a farmer in Palo Alto County, Iowa, and later a commercial salesman. He is now living retired at Pasadena. He married Harriet Elvene Roper, daughter of Frank and Mary Roper. The Roper children were: Louise, wife of W. S. Wright, of Pasadena; Delphine, who died at Emmetsburg, Iowa, the wife of John R. Robbins; William, who died in Kansas City, Missouri; Harriet E., who was born at Juneau, Wisconsin, September 16, 1857; Josephine, who died at Emmetsburg, the wife of Alexander Peddie; Jessie, widow of L. E. Jones, of Iowa Falls, Iowa. Wilmer J. Tyson and wife had four children: Alice, who died in girlhood; Delphine, who died at Pasadena, wife of Paul J. Case; Louise, wife of L. M. Hoag, of Minneapolis; and Harry Beers.

Harry Beers Tyson spent most of his early life in Iowa, though for a brief period of his childhood he also lived at Roseburg, Oregon, Alma, Nebraska, and San Diego, California. He graduated from the Emmetsburg High School and took the mining engineering course at the Iowa State College at Ames, graduating in 1912. His first technical work in his profession was in California, where for six months he was chemist with the Southern California Beet Growers Association at Chino. At Metcalf, Arizona, he became assistant mining engineer for the Arizona Copper Company, remaining in its service a year, and for six months was employed on a ranch of his brother-in-law, Paul J. Case, at Deming, New Mexico. He was married while there, and soon afterward went to North Dakota and, leaving engineering, became cashier of the State Bank at Kintyre, North Dakota. He was with that institution for several years before coming to Wolf Point in April, 1917, where he organized the Citizens National Bank, which later consolidated with the First National Bank. Mr. Tyson is vice president of the First National Bank; is president of the Eastern Unit of the Northern Montana Development Association, president of the Powder River Trail Association from Moose Jaw, Canada, to Galveston, Texas, and is also president of the Wolf Point Commercial Club and represents the First Ward in the City Council.

He grew up in a republican home, cast his first presidential vote for Colonel Roosevelt, and in 1916 supported Mr. Hughes. Since locating at Wolf Point he has become affiliated with the Masonic Order, and he is also a member of the Iowa State Chapter of the Delta Upsilon Fraternity at Ames. He was a local leader in the Liberty Loan campaigns and savings drives, and also a solicitor for funds for the Red Cross. Mrs. Tyson is identified with the Civic League of Wolf Point in its work of making this a better place in which to live and to train good earnest citizens.

Mr. Tyson married Mrs. Anna Dermont Lang October 15, 1913. She was born at Evart, Michigan, February 19, 1883, a daughter of Charles and Nancy (Mary) Dermont. She finished high school at Lansing, Michigan, took a kindergarten training course and was a teacher in the grade schools of Lansing and at Grand Rapids. She was teaching at Metcalf, Arizona, when she met Mr. Tyson. Her father was born at Detroit and her mother was also a native of Michigan. Mrs. Tyson's younger sister, Emeline, is the wife of Daniel Grant, a mining man of Metcalf, Arizona. By her first husband Mrs. Tyson has one child, Willies Anna. Mr. and Mrs. Tyson have three sons, Harry Beers, Jr., Daniel Murray and Robert Dermont.

GIDEON K. SPENCER. All of the history of progress worth recording in Meagher County has been made within half a century. For half a century and more the Spencer family has been identified with that section of the state, and particularly at White Sulphur Springs has been prominent in connection with merchandising, ranching, banking and other affairs.

The pioneer of the family was the late Almon Spencer, who was born at Prescott, Ontario, Canada, February 9, 1838, son of George and Clarissa (Wright) Spencer. George Spencer was born in 1804 and his wife in 1806, George being a son of Peleg Spencer, a native of New England.

Almon Spencer spent his early life in Canada and in 1859 became a sailor upon the Great Lakes. He was in that line of work for about three years and in 1864 started for the Pacific Coast, a sailing ship taking him to California by the Panama route. Soon afterward he was in the Nevada gold mines, and from there went on to Idaho, prospecting for a few months in the vicinity of Idaho City, and in the fall of 1865 came to Montana. He was in Last Chance Gulch, the principal settlement at what is now the City of Helena, and built one of the early log cabins there. He was a participant in the Sun River stampede the next winter, and in 1866 came to Meagher County and continued prospecting and mining for several years.

In the fall of 1872 he returned to Canada, and on February 14, 1873, married Miss Margaret A. Stitt, daughter of William and Margaret Stitt, who came from the North of Ireland. Mr. Spencer took his bride back to Montana and located near Canyon Ferry in Meagher County. Here for several years he and his brother Harvey were engaged in merchandising, handling meats and provisions, and he also extended his enterprise to ranching. From Canyon City he moved to White Sulphur Springs, then known as Brewers Springs, and re-established himself in the general merchandise business, one of his partners being Thomas C. Power. In 1881 Almon Spencer bought out his partner's interests and continued as Spencer & Company for two years and then as Spencer, Mayne & Heitman. In later years other changes occurred in the partnership, but the business expanded beyond merchandising to the ownership of extensive lands and livestock, and became one of the largest firms doing business over the country tributary to White Sulphur Springs.

Almon Spencer was a democrat, but had little interest in public office. He served for many years on the school board and the town council, and never neglected an opportunity to work for the welfare of his home community. He was affiliated with Diamond City Lodge, No. 7, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons. His wife was born in 1840 and died in 1915, and their children, three sons and one daughter, are all still living. They are: Gideon K.; Irene, who married Austin C. Gormley; Herman W.; and Almon Clark, who was the first white child born at White Sulphur Springs.

Gideon K. Spencer was born at Canyon Ferry in Montana Territory, October 21, 1873. He acquired his education in White Sulphur Springs, and practically grew up in his father's business. He was associated with the old firm of Spencer, Mayne & Heitman, which were succeeded by the Anderson-Spencer Company, E. J. Anderson becoming the active partner and associate of his father. Mr. Anderson was president of the company, Almon Spencer, vice president, and Gideon Spencer, secretary and treasurer. This business is still continued, and is one of the leading organizations of its kind in Meagher County.

In 1907 the members of this firm organized the banking house of Anderson & Spencer Company, of which Mr. Anderson was president, Almon Spencer, vice president, and Gideon Spencer, cashier. In 1911 this bank became the Central State Bank, the capital being increased at that time. C. W. Cook is president and Gideon Spencer is still active in its management as cashier.

Gideon Spencer is frequently referred to as a worthy successor of his father, and he accepts that as the highest possible compliment that could be paid to his business career. He is a democrat in politics and is one of the public spirited men of White Sulphur Springs.

October 16, 1902, he married Miss Matilda P. Hampton, who was born at Leighton, Alabama. They had two daughters, Louise, who died at the age of seven years, and Matilda.

William Henry Peays, a member of the Board of County Commissioners of Powder River County, and an early settler of the Powder River locality, came into Montana and stopped first at the old "O X" ranch, where the Spewlo Land and Cattle Company turned over a bunch of cattle to the "O X" people. Mr. Peays came to Montana from the Brazos River in the Panhandle of Texas, where he had spent seven years with the "Square Outfit," the same people with whom he drove through to Montana. He began work in the cattle business as a boy of fourteen years in the Lone Star State, ten miles west of Cleburne, January 2, 1860. His schooling was limited and he was reared twenty-eight miles south of Fort Worth, where he began to ride a pony as soon as he was large enough to crawl on one's back.

Benjamin Peays, the father of William Henry Peays, went to Texas before the war between the states and settled in Johnson County, where he passed the rest of his life. He was a Confederate soldier, and with the exception of his army experience lived quietly on his ranch, voted as a democrat, held no office, and died at the age of forty-five years, in 1881. He married Nancy Campbell, who, like himself, came from South Carolina, where, near Chester, they had been married. Mrs. Peays died during the childhood of her son William Henry, and was also the mother of another son, George, who is now in Coke County, Texas.

When he came to Montana William H. Peays was a hand following the trail and the cattle, and after leaving his outfit continued on to the Stacey community, where he secured employment with the "Cross-5" Ranch, then being operated and for many years later by L. W. Stacey. He punched cows for that ranch for four months and then went to work for the "N Bar," the Hastings ranch, and helped them to move their cattle on to Flat Willow, north of the Yellowstone, spending the next seven years in their employ. While so working he managed to get together some cattle of his own, running them under the "X-P" brand, and when he left that ranch went to the old "SL" Ranch owned by Loud & Hitchcock and later worked for the Northern Cattle Company, running their round-up wagon. He then abandoned the trail entirely and sought a new field of excitement and activity in the Northwest. He went to Alaska, and at Dawson City turned his hand toward everything that a man could do, chiefly prospecting, but after a year and one-half of disappointing experiences returned to Montana. He had gone into that frozen region over the bitter and dangerous Skagway Trail, but came out by the way of Nome and Seattle and reached Miles City in 1899.

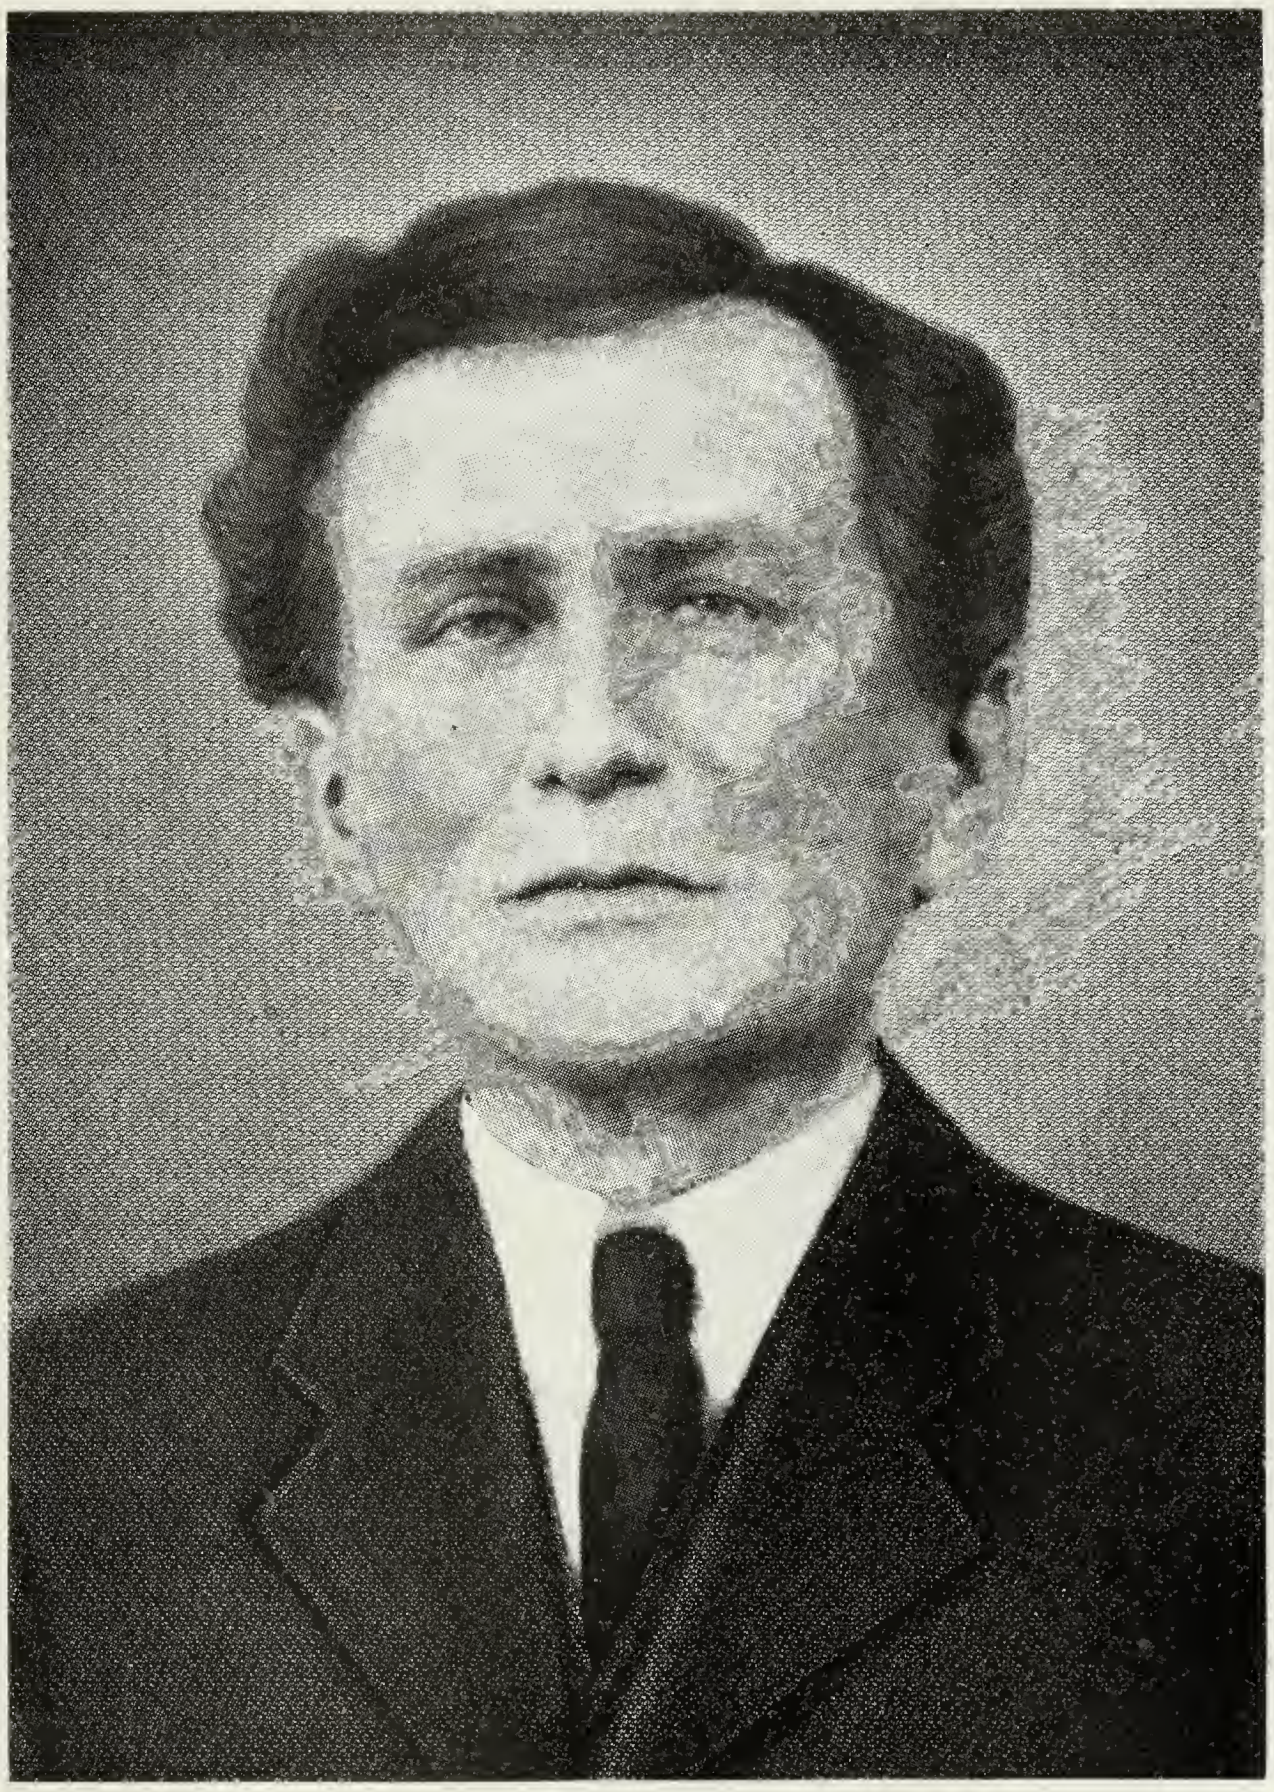
Resuming his cowboy life, Mr. Peays returned to the Northern Cattle Company until the next year, when he decided to engage in ranching on his own account, and accordingly came to the Moorhead locality and entered a half section of land on Powder River. He started his ranch and improvements from the bottom. For his first permanent home he built a small cabin, used now for his ice house, and batched in this for six years, then taking his bride to it when he married. He owned at first a small bunch of "dogies" and began breeding and building up a herd under the same brand as mentioned above. He has added to his ranch until it comprises more than 1,000 acres, and this is a hay ranch, with thirty acres devoted to alfalfa and a like tract to grain raising. With the exception of the "hard winter" he has raised enough provender to sustain his ranch. Mr. Peays' stock is shipped to Omaha, and he recently disposed of his surplus cattle, although he still holds a bunch of sheep in the hills.

Mr. Peays has seldom manifested a strong interest in politics. He has always voted, rather as an independent, and was named in the bill creating Powder River County as one of its commissioners. He is serving with Charles Decker and John Morris, and it has fallen to them to organize and to start its affairs. The board provided temporary quarters for the county officers. Mr. Peays besides his ranch interests has stock in the Miles City Milling Company, the carbon producing plant at Baker and the bank at Broadus. He is a member of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, and has passed some of the chairs in the lodge at Miles City, in which he has numerous friends.

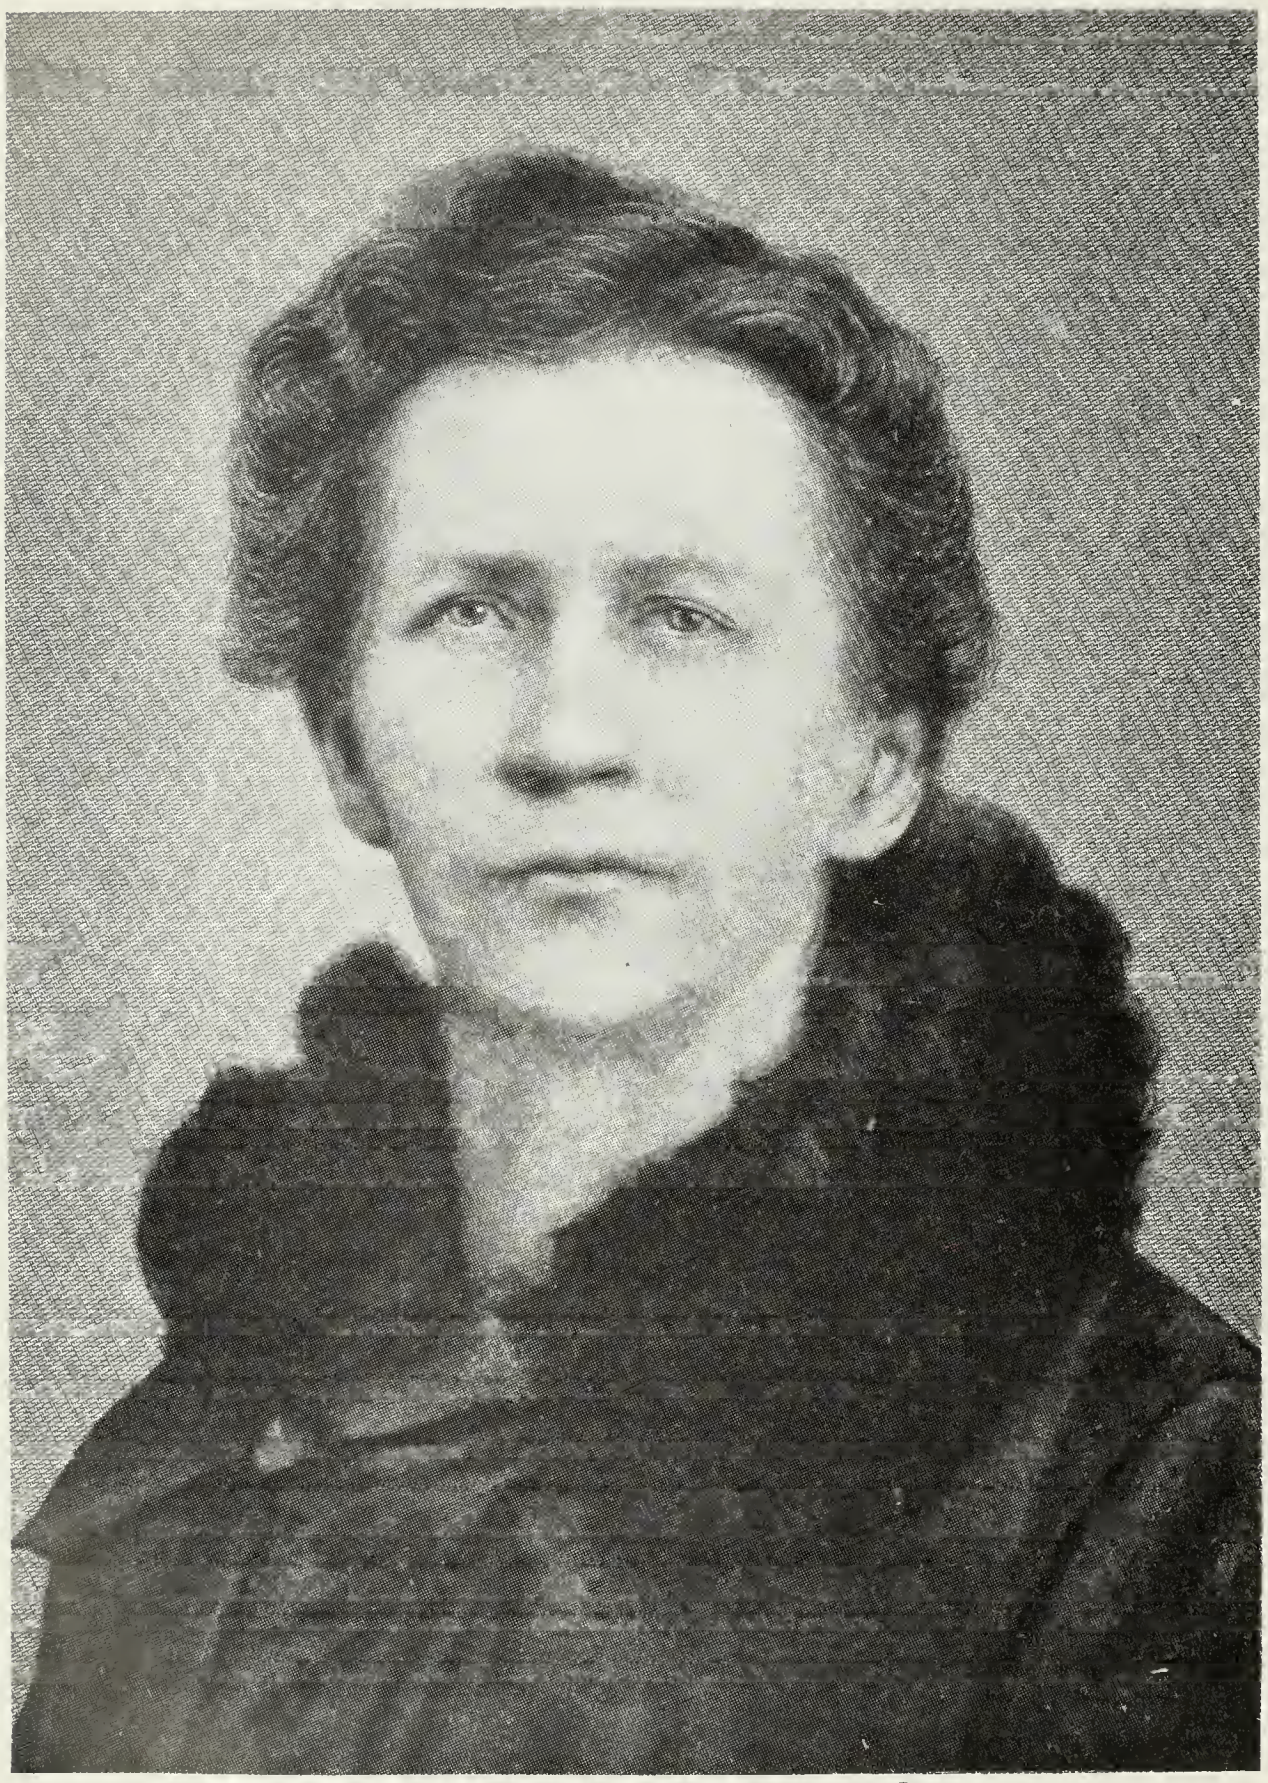
At Sheridan, Wyoming, April 18, 1903, Mr. Peays was united in marriage with Miss Clara Tredinick, who was born in Iowa County, Wisconsin, where her parents, John and Eliza Tredinick, had settled upon immigrating to the United States from their native England. Mrs. Peays came to Montana, and soon after meeting Mr. Peays became his wife. She has a brother, Will Tredinick, of Wisconsin, and a sister, Mrs. Baker, passed away near the Peays ranch and left three sons. Mr. and Mrs. Peays have no children.

Harry R. Cunningham, a prominent official of the Montana Life Insurance Company and a former state auditor, has recently rounded out thirty years of residence in Montana. He has long been prominent in business and public affairs.

Mr. Cunningham was born at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, April 28, 1868. His ancestors came to America in colonial times from Scotland. His great-grandfather spent all his life in Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania, as a farmer, and his wife was a native of the same county. The grandfather, Josiah Alexander Cunningham, was born in Huntingdon County in 1802, and died there in 1878. He owned large land interests and was also a successful merchant. He married Mary Ann Moore, a native of Huntingdon County. Oliver Cunningham, father of Harry R., was born in Huntingdon County in 1835, and died there in 1900. He spent most of his life in his native county and was a merchant at Huntingdon and also at Philadelphia. He was a republican and a member of the Methodist Church. His wife was Lalla Eustace, who was born at Fredericktown, Maryland, in 1845, and died in New York City in 1905. Harry R. is the oldest of three children: Alexander is a merchant at Altoona, Pennsylvania, and Guy, the youngest, was a traveling salesman and died at Philadelphia in 1912.



E. W. Pea-p



Mrs Clara Peaysl.

While reared and educated in the East, chiefly in the public schools of Huntingdon and Philadelphia, Harry R. Cunningham has spent all his active career with the exception of a few years in the great West. At the age of seventeen, after leaving school, he went to work in a wholesale dry goods store, but a year later went out to Western Kansas. At Garden City he was employed as a clerk in the United States Land Office one year, and was then appointed and served three years as chief clerk at Wakeeney, Kansas. From there he came to Butte in March, 1890, and his first experience in the state was in the insurance business. He represented for a brief time the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company of Milwaukee. After that until 1894 he was employed by the Daily Intermountain Publishing Company, and then became assistant cashier of the Butte Light and Power Company. He left that service January 1, 1895, when he became a member of the Fourth Legislative Assembly, giving all his time to his legislative duties during the following session. Following that he was assistant business manager for the Intermountain Publishing Company until the spring of 1896. During the next five years Mr. Cunningham had a very interesting experience at Washington, coming in close touch with many prominent men and with the work of the national capital. He was file clerk and also acted as assistant journal clerk and assistant reading clerk in the United States Senate.

Mr. Cunningham returned to Butte in 1901, and afterward was employed alternately by the Butte Electric Company and the Intermountain Publishing Company until the fall of 1904. In that year he was elected state auditor, beginning his duties in the capitol at Helena in January, 1905. He was reelected in 1908, and served until December 15, 1911, when he resigned to take the vice presidency and general management of the Montana Life Insurance Company. In that official capacity he has had much to do with developing this into one of the very successful companies in the Northwest.

Mr. Cunningham is a republican in politics, a member of the Methodist Church, and is a prominent Mason, being affiliated with Butte Lodge, No. 2, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, Deer Lodge Chapter, No. 3, Royal Arch Masons, Helena Commandery, No. 2, Knights Templar, and Algeria Temple of the Mystic Shrine, which he served as potentate in 1912. About twenty-five years ago he was a charter member and one of the organizers of Butte Lodge, No. 240, of the Elks, and is now a member of Helena Lodge, No. 193. He is also a member of the Helena Commercial Club, the Rotary Club and the Montana Club at Helena.

Mr. Cunningham's offices are in the Conrad Bank Building, and he and his family enjoy the comforts of a modern home at 663 North Warren Street. At Butte in September, 1904, he married Miss Adelaide Mason. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Mason, are both deceased. Her father for many years was a master mechanic in the Brooklyn Navy Yard. Five children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Cunningham: Adelaide, who died at the age of twelve years; Lalla, who died at the age of six years; Harriet, who died in infancy; Dorcas, who was born November 22, 1908, and Alexander, born May 13, 1910, both being educated in the Helena schools.

Napoleon B. Smith, first county attorney of Meagher County, is one of the oldest members of the bar in Southeastern Montana, and has practiced continuously at White Sulphur Springs more than thirty-five years. Mr. Smith has enjoyed prestige in his profession, success in business, and wide esteem as a citizen.

He was born in Appanoose County, Iowa, May 14, 1858, son of James P. and Abigail (Gast) Smith. His father was born in Westmoreland County, Pennsylvania, in August, 1828, and died in 1897, while his mother was born in Hollidaysburg, Pennsylvania, in August, 1835, and died in January, 1916. Napoleon was the second in a family of four children, two of whom are still living. His sister Bell is the wife of Dr. C. Sloss. James P. Smith was a physician and surgeon, educated in the Cincinnati Medical College. For many years he practiced as a pioneer physician in Iowa, his first home in that state being at Milledgeville, later at Orleans and also at Moulton. He was an active member of the County Medical Society, was a democrat in politics and was affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

Napoleon B. Smith acquired a public school education, attended the Monticello Normal School at Monticello, Iowa, and took his law course at the Iowa State University. He graduated in 1880, was admitted to the Iowa bar the same year, and soon qualified for practice in the United States District Court. Mr. Smith came to Meagher County and White Sulphur Springs in August, 1882. He was admitted to the Montana bar and was soon in the full current of a busy professional career. As the first county attorney of Meagher County he filled the office eleven years consecutively, carrying on his general practice at the same time. Politically he is a democrat.

In later years Mr. Smith has given much time to his property interests, particularly ranching and farming. He owns a hay ranch of 3,000 acres on Willow Creek, and a fine farm of 360 acres on the South Fork. His irrigated lands have shown wonderful productiveness. One year he had a crop of 1,300 bushels of oats, the crop averaging 43 pounds to the bushel. During 1919 his irrigated meadows produced 500 tons of hay.

June 21, 1890, Mr. Smith married Miss Arcelia Collins, who was born near the City of Rochester, New York, daughter of George W. and Henrietta Collins. Her parents were New York State farmers until 1882, when they came to Montana, and her father for many years was engaged in the horse, cattle and dairy industry in Meagher County and White Sulphur Springs. Since 1911 he has lived retired and makes his home in California. Mrs. Smith's mother is deceased. She was the second in a family of four children.

Charles Henry Sherman, a prominent rancher at White Sulphur Springs, was born in Montana Territory over fifty years ago, and is a son of one of the few surviving pioneers of the decade of the '60s.

His parents were Byron Roger and Adeline (Chaffin) Sherman. The former, who was born in New York State in August, 1841, early responded to the call of the West, going first to Wisconsin, then to Utah and Idaho, and in the early '60s to Montana Territory. He was a stage driver in Idaho and also in Montana, but at a very early date ran a dairy ranch in the Bitter Root Valley. For several years he was also a merchant at Diamond City, selling his business in 1872 and locating in the Smith River Valley, where he was one of the first stockmen, and ran a large number of cattle over ranch and range until 1881. He then engaged in the livery and feed business, but in 1895 retired and is now living under the genial skies of California. He has always been a democrat in his political affiliations. His wife was born in Missouri in 1837 and died in 1881. They were married near Missoula. Their two sons are Charles Henry and Frederick.

Charles Henry Sherman was born on the Bitter Root River near Missoula December 11, 1868. He acquired a good education in the public schools of White Sulphur Springs and in the Wesleyan College at Helena. As a boy he had a thorough typical ranching experience, working with his father, and was also associated with his father in a number of business affairs. Later he acquired the livery and feed business, and in 1907 bought the other interests of his father, including the ranch and livestock. For a number of years Mr. Sherman conducted one of the large ranch and cattle outfits in the vicinity of White Sulphur Springs, and runs between 300 and 500 cattle on his pastures every year. He owns about 2,100 acres of land.

Mr. Sherman takes a keen interest in local affairs, but in politics votes usually for the best man, though nominally a democrat. He is affiliated with the Modern Woodmen of America. On February 28, 1894, he married Miss Sarah Collins, who was born in Ontario County New York, daughter of George Wilson and Henrietta (Tidd) Collins, Mrs. Sherman being the third in a family of four children. Her father was born in Fall River, Massachusetts, April 10, 1840, and her mother in New York State August 16, 1841. Her mother died in 1906. Her father was a farmer in New York until 1882, when he came to Montana and engaged in the horse business at White Sulphur Springs and later established a cattle and dairy ranch. Since 1911 he has been retired and is a resident of California.

Mark E. Lewis is one of the men of Meagher County whose name is associated with the sheep industry, he now having 2,700 head of sheep on his magnificent ranch of 3,600 acres of land southwest of White Sulphur Springs. He was born in Livingston County, Illinois, January 18, 1875, a son of Jacob and Alvara (Broughton) Lewis. Jacob Lewis was born in Wisconsin on September 30, 1850, and his wife was born in Ohio on September 29, 1850. They had four sons and four daughters born to them, of whom seven survive, Mark E. Lewis being the third child. After growing up on his father's farm in Wisconsin Jacob Lewis came to Livingston County, Illinois, and was there engaged in farming and stockraising until the spring of 1919, when he came West to Custer County, Montana, and embarked in the sheep business, maintaining his home at Miles City. For twelve years he served Livingston County as collector, being elected on the democratic ticket, and has always been a man of affairs.

Mark E. Lewis was given the educational advantages offered by the public schools of Livingston County, Illinois, and the Methodist Episcopal College at Clarence, Missouri, and then was engaged in farming in Shelby County, Missouri, until 1899, when he came to Montana and located in Meagher County, which has since continued to be his place of residence. His ranch, which is one of the largest in this region, is admirably suited for sheep raising, and he is a recognized leader in this region. In politics he is a democrat.

On October 3, 1894 Mr. Lewis was married to Ethel Ashford, born in Missouri, a daughter of Noah and Rachel Jane (Ward) Ashford. Noah Ashford was born in Virginia in 1839, and died in 1914, while his wife was born in Kentucky in 1840, and died in April, 1919. Seven daughters and five sons were born to Mr. and Mrs. Ashford, of whom six are living, Mrs. Lewis being the youngest of the family. Until he was sixteen years old Mr. Ashford remained in his native state. He then came to Missouri with his parents, and after reaching maturity engaged in farming and stockraising in Marion County, Missouri. From there he went to Shelby County in the same state in 1900 and continued his agricultural operations for a year. He then came to Montana and was in the sheep business for a time, but finally retired and spent his last years at Bozeman, Montana, where he died. From the time he cast his first vote he gave his support to the democratic party. Mr. and Mrs. Lewis have two daughters, namely: Veria Mace, who married Frank S. Scofield, a cattleman of Montana; and Beulah Arrilla, who is attending school at White Sulphur Springs. Mrs. Lewis was appointed postmistress at Flint on their ranch by Postmaster General Hitchcock in 1907, and held the office until 1915, when she resigned. Both Mr. and Mrs. Lewis are very well known in Meagher County, and they hold the confidence and respect of their neighbors, by whom they are held in high regard.

Byrd H. Edwards. Among the settlers of Montana of the early eighties one of the men of the Powder River country who is still actively engaged in ranching and whose experiences have been numerous, interesting and varied is Byrd H. Edwards. He has been a resident of this locality since 1881, in which year his parents came into Montana, his father, John Edwards, stopping on Powder River. Byrd H. at this time was a lad of less than thirteen years, having been born December 5, 1868, in Christian County, Illinois.

The paternal grandfather of Mr. Edwards, Banager Edwards, was a blacksmith by trade and a native of Vermont, where he spent his entire life. He had three sons: Harvey, who died in Nebraska; Albert, who passed away in Vermont; and John. The youngest of his father's sons, John Edwards, was born at Guilford Center, Vermont, in 1837, and on reaching manhood left Vermont and went to the South, where he was engaged in stage driving and carrying the United States mail and officials of the Government from St. John to St. Augustine. During the Civil war, and possibly as a consequence of the outbreak thereof, he left the South and went to Illinois, where he was located in the locality of Assumption, Christian County, as a farmer. Leaving that region, he migrated to Washington Territory in December, 1880, and there bought his sheep and trailed them at once to Montana from Walla Walla. His route east was through Boise City, Idaho, and the family put in the summer of 1881 on the journey, reaching the locality of Powder River in the fall. Mr. Edwards had two bands of sheep, approximating 4,500 head of half-bloods. He closed out his flock in 1887 and went on east to Nebraska, where he became a farmer in Clay County, but subsequently returned to Powder River and started his sons Byrd H. and Merton M. in the sheep business and was identified with this region up to the time of his passing away in 1907. He lived a quiet life without participating in the political affairs of his locality, although he voted, and as a republican. Mr. Edwards married a Vermont lady, Harriet Franklin, a daughter of Jedediah Franklin, of one of the old families of New England. Mrs. Edwards still survives at the age of seventy-seven years. Their children were: Byrd H., of this notice; Merton, who is a sheepman of Carter County, Montana; and Al, a Powder River ranchman.

Byrd H. Edwards went to school everywhere that his parents lived as he grew to manhood, and Miles City, Montana, was the principal place, although he finished his education at Harvard, Nebraska. He stayed with his parents until attaining his majority and then removed from Nebraska to Wyoming, where he spent one year as a mill hand. From that state he came to Montana in the fall of 1893, and was a sheep shearer for a time. Mr. Edwards lived in the Pilgrim Creek locality for several years before the Government surveys were run, and filed upon his homestead at the mouth of Pilgrim Creek about 1907. Upon his claim he built a log house of two rooms and for a time "batched" and tended his flock of sheep. He began handling half-bloods, and before the range was closed to him was running three ewe bands in addition to his cattle, and his surplus stock was shipped to the popular market at Omaha, loading at times at Belle Fourche and again at Miles City. Mr. Edwards closed out his sheep eventually, but has continued his cattle, principally the Herefords, and his brand is "5W" on the right ribs.

BYRD H. EDWARDS AND WIFE

Mr. Edwards has served publicly only as judge of elections. His friendship for the cause of education was exemplified when he conducted an independent school for three years before the county established one, and the little log cabin which he built is still utilized as a schoolhouse. His interest in politics has been limited and somewhat passive, although he votes the republican ticket nationally and is an approachable man and one who enjoys the companionship of his fellows.

At Harvard, Nebraska, in July, 1897, Mr. Edwards was united in marriage with Miss Myrtle Colburn, whose father was George Colburn. She was born in Wisconsin in 1877, and died July 7, 1915. There were six children in the family of Mr. and Mrs. Edwards, namely: Clay, Nellie, Johnnie, Ogden, Dale and Wade. All the children have been given good educational opportunities and the two eldest have attended school beyond the home district, Clay attending the high school at Des Moines, Iowa, and Nellie attending the Spearfish Normal School.

Robert Roy Black, a farmer and ranchman of Valley County, whose residence is adjacent to Hinsdale, is one of the old settlers of this part of the state, and a man who is held in the highest esteem by all who have the honor of his acquaintance. He was born in Jefferson County, Iowa, October 29, 1874, a son of William G. and Rachel (Stever) Black, natives of Ohio and Pennsylvania, respectively. William G. Black was a son of Moses Black, whose remote ancestors came to the United States from Scotland many generations ago. Members of the Black family served in the American Revolution, and William G. Black served for a short period in the Union army during the war between the states, enlisting from Iowa, to which state he had migrated some time previously. During the greater part of his active life he was engaged in operating sawmills and dealing in timber land. His death occurred when he was sixty-two years old, in 1892, his widow surviving him for about a year, when she, too, passed away, aged sixty-one years. In politics he was a stanch republican, but he never cared to participate in public life. He was the father of the following children: Moses F., who lives at Creston, Iowa; Alleta, who is the wife of William Laughlin, of Blackwell, Oklahoma; Bessie, who is the wife of Dr. R. W. Sanders, of Hale Center, Texas; John F., who is of Corpus Christi, Texas; Mrs. Floyd K. Laughlin, who died at Fairfield, Iowa; Guy, who lives at Roseburg, Oregon; and Robert Roy, who is the youngest born.

Robert Roy Black, generally known as Roy Black, grew to manhood in his native county, and received his educational training in its public schools and through a business course at Washington, Iowa. He remained at home, assisting his parents, and finally he and his brother John bought the homestead, but later sold it and brought their capital to Montana. His connection with this region began in 1899, when he came here to engage in the stock business, bringing with him some Shorthorn heifers, which he located on Willow Creek, twenty miles north of Hinsdale, and this bunch was the nucleus of his cattle business, in which he has since continued, changing to the White Face strain, which has proven to be the hardiest stock for this region. Mr. Black has confined himself to producing for the market, and his shipments cover many years to the Chicago market. He adopted the brand "J lazy R," which he places on the left ribs.

In addition to his cattle another feature of his stock business is his horse industry, many high-grade Percherons having been produced on his ranch, some of them reaching from 1,200 to 1,600 pounds. During the late war he furnished the French government with a number of these horses. Recently, the demand decreasing, he has not been so active in this industry. Since Mr. Black came into this region the range conditions have changed to a remarkable degree. Then there was hardly a fence to be seen or encountered in crossing the prairies, while now practically all of the country has been fenced off.

Mr. Black took his homestead where he "squatted" with his first bunch of cattle, and during the more than a score of years he has been in this region he has developed a ranch on Willow Creek of more than 10,000 acres. Eagle Creek and Rock Creek also pass through his ranch, and, although at one time there were 1,000 acres broken, it proved so unprofitable a farm that it has been permitted to revert to the range. The call for more wheat during the war caused Mr. Black to exert himself in order to raise more of this staple, and in order to do so he plowed up sod and contributed in this way to the cultivation of his ranch lands.

Mr. Black's first home in Montana was the proverbial log cabin of one room, with dirt roof and floor, and he occupied it with his brother John, who was associated with him as a partner in the stock business. This brother was accidentally disabled permanently, but continued a factor in the business for some years. In time Mr. Black erected a frame house, added a substantial barn, later destroyed by fire, and made the ranch his home until 1918, when he moved to Hinsdale for a year. He then moved to his present farm, which is three miles northeast of the town.

The Black farm is partly an irrigation proposition. It is under a corporation ditch, the Rock Canal Company, and some 800 of the 1,440 acres are under cultivation. This property is handsomely improved, the bungalow residence, splendid barn, machine shed and other buildings being of modern design and construction. These improvements make the Black ranch one of the best along the Milk River.

On November 9, 1912, Mr. Black was married at Woodburn, Iowa, to Miss Mary B. Wing, who was born at Morris, Illinois, August 3, 1880, but was reared in Iowa. She is a daughter of Rev. F. A. Wing, who belongs to the Wing Clan of Sandwich, Massachusetts, where the original four Wing brothers settled as English emigrants during the Colonial epoch of the country. Mr. Wing was married to Elizabeth Thompson, and their children were as follows: Mrs. Black, who is the eldest; Mrs. Pearl Barger, of Woodburn, Iowa; Clara, who homesteaded in Valley County, Montana, and died here; and Forrest, who lives at Woodburn, Iowa. Mrs. Black was graduated from the normal school of Cedar Falls, Iowa, and for fifteen years was one of the popular educators of Iowa and Montana, her last work being done in the schools of Hinsdale, where she spent three years. Mr. and Mrs. Black have two children, namely: Robert Wing and John Wing. Mr. Black cast his first presidential vote for William McKinley in 1896, and has remained in the ranks of the republican party ever since. A Mason, he has taken the thirty-second degree, and is also a member of the Mystic Shrine at Helena, Montana.

A man of unusual force of character, he has steadily forged ahead, gradually adapting his business to meet the changing conditions as the open range was given over to the settlers. That he has succeeded as he has is due to his grit, determination and broad vision, and he is proud of the fact that while he has progressed he has been of use in his community, and that his improvements are an asset to his neighborhood as well as to his own estate.

James A. Dennison, the leading contractor in painting and decorating at Great Falls, has been a resident of Montana for over thirty years. He started life a poor man, and by persistent industry has achieved the best rewards of success and an honored position in his community.

He was born at Salem in Washington County, New York, March 30, 1855, son of Andrew and Jane (Clark) Dennison. His father was born in Ireland and came to this country when a young man, the voyage on the sailing ship requiring seven weeks and three days. For a time he remained in New York City and then went to Washington County, New York, where he lived out his life as an industrious farmer. He died at the age of sixty-five. His wife was a native of Scotland and died at the age of sixty-eight years and thirteen days. Of their 13 children James A. was the seventh son. His father cast a vote for Abraham Lincoln for president.

James A. Dennison received his early education in New York and Ohio. At the age of fourteen he left home and began working as a farm hand in New York. At eighteen he moved to Ohio, worked on a farm and in a nursery for about a year, and then invested his modest capital in a stock of notions and for the next three years traveled over the states of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Missouri, selling his stock to the retail trade. Returning to Ravenna, Ohio, he married and for about a year worked on a farm. He and his wife then went to Michigan, where he used his team to haul cordwood, and Mrs. Dennison also contributed to the support of their household by husking corn. With her wages she bought a young calf, and that proved an important part of their capital in farming. In 1888 Mr. and Mrs. Dennison came to Billings, Montana, where he was engaged in the saloon business until 1894. Since the latter year his home has been in Great Falls. He was employed in the smelters until 1899, and since then for twenty years has been a contracting painter and decorator. He now has a well equipped store on Fifth Street, stocked with a complete supply of paints, wall paper and other commodities used in his trade. Mr. Dennison is a republican in politics.

February 16, 1877, he married Alice Calvin. She was born in Berrien County, Michigan, a daughter of Orin B. and Maria (Allen) Calvin, both natives of Pennsylvania. Her father went to Michigan when a young man and as a carpenter built many houses and barns in the southern part of the state. Mrs. Dennison was the second in a family of three sons and one daughter, two of whom are still living.

John T. Loucks. The mercantile interests of Froid are in the hands of capable men who take a pride in supplying the needs of their customers and keeping their stocks abreast of the times, and among them one worthy of special mention is John T. Loucks, who has been numbered among the business men of this place since 1911, expending his establishment during this period as the town has grown.

John T. Loucks was born at Avoca, New York, on April 4, 1869, a son of William and Mary (Shults) Loucks, both born near Albany, New York, in the Mohawk Valley. They were farming people during the active period of their lives, and the mother survives and makes her home at Avoca, but the father died in 1904, aged seventy-eight years. William Loucks was a son of Henry A. Loucks, also a native of New York State, and a life-long farmer. He was descended from one of the first families to settle in New York from Holland. Henry A. Loucks married a Miss Cook, and their children were as follows: Margaret, who married Mathew Fox; Kate, who married Henry Gray; John, who spent his life in Steuben County, New York; William, who was the father of John T.; Nancy, who married Thomas Zilly; Maria, who married Wesley Calkins; Amanda, who married John H. Shaver; and Lucinda, who married Reuben Parkhill.

Mary Shults, mother of John T. Loucks, was a daughter of Josiah and Katie (Nellis) Shults, both families being of Holland descent and long establishment in the Empire State. All were engaged in agricultural occupations and were most worthy people who bore their full share of the civil and military burden of their times. William Loucks and his wife became the parents of the following children: Wesley C. and Clark D., both of whom are residents of Avoca, New York; Belle, who is Mrs. W. H. Dygart, of Wheeler, New York; Kate, who is the widow of Charles E. Peck, of Elkton, South Dakota; Maggie, who is a resident of Avoca, New York; John T., whose name heads this review; and Walter P., who is a resident of Buffalo, New York.

John T. Loucks was reared on the home farm of which he continued to be a factor until past his majority, and received a schooling of the common sort. Leaving the parental roof for the first time he came West and spent six years as an employe in a flouring mill in Elkton, South Dakota, and then returned home, carrying with him the savings from these years of labor. Mr. Loucks joined a brother in conducting a small clothing and men's furnishings store at Avoca, but having become accustomed to the broader life of the West he found he could not be content in the East, and so once more left New York, this time selecting Bowbells, North Dakota, when in 1906 he again came West. For some 4½ years he was engaged in business at that point as a general merchant and made good there, but his ambition was not satisfied and he began looking about him for a new location. In 1911 he found what he wanted in the promising little Village of Froid, Montana, and came to it, and for the past nine years has been devoting himself to the building up of the business house he established, which ranks among the leading mercantile establishments of this region, and commands an excellent trade.

Coming to manhood's estate under the political influence of his father, John T. Loucks is a democrat, his father always having adhered to that party, and by it was elected to some local offices. John T. Loucks, following in his father's footsteps, cast his first presidential ballot for Grover Cleveland in 1892, and has not missed a presidential election since with the exception of 1904, when he did not feel he could conscientiously support either candidate of the two old-line parties. He is a member of the City Council of Froid, contributing his influence toward the incorporation of the town, and was active in the controversy which resulted in the creation of Roosevelt County, he being in favor of that action.

Mr. Loucks was married in Steuben County, New York, in February, 1899, to Miss May Wagner, born at Avoca, New York, a daughter of Lewis C. and Eliza (Shults) Wagner. Mrs. Loucks also comes from an old-established New York family and her people have been associated with the agricultural development of the Empire State. She is the only daughter in the family of her parents, her brothers being as follows: Homer, Orrin, Guy, Walter and Clarence. Mr. and Mrs. Loucks have had the following children born to them: Laura and Kathleen, both of whom are attending the State Normal School of Valley City, North Dakota; Ruth, who died when five years of age; and John T., Jr., who was born May 19, 1918. Mr. Loucks belongs to Minot Lodge, Benevolent Protective Order of Elks, which he joined in 1908. His commodious residence at Froid is one of ten rooms with basement, and is supplied with a furnace and other modern improvements. It would be difficult to find a family which stands higher in general estimation than that one bearing the name of Loucks. Mr. and Mrs. Loucks are generous to a fault, and there are few movements for the betterment of the community or the assisting of the unfortunate which do not have their hearty and substantial support. Their comfortable home is open to their friends and is oftentimes the scene of pleasant social gatherings. Mr. Loucks has made his own way in the world and has every reason to be content with what he has accomplished, for he has not only succeeded in a material way somewhat beyond the ordinary, but he has also gained and held the confidence of his fellow citizens and the warm regard of a number of personal friends not only at Froid but in every community in which he has made his home.

Sarah E. Roebuck, of Whitefish, is one of the most interesting women in that section of Montana, and despite her advanced years keeps closer in touch with world affairs than many younger people.

Mrs. Roebuck before her marriage was Sarah E. Williams and was born in Licking County, Ohio, a daughter of Zophar and Eliza (Pumphrey) Williams. Her great-grandmother was a niece of Oliver Cromwell. Miss Williams was married in Mercer County, Ohio. She had three sons: Charles McKendree, James Watson and William Albert. Her son Charles was educated in the high school at Van Wert, Ohio, and is married. James married Elsie G. Cox, of Canton, Ohio, and has a son, Frederick, now a wireless operator on a steamship plying between San Francisco and Manila. William Albert, a resident of Hinsdale, Illinois, married Louise Huss and has a daughter, Rozella.

Mrs. Roebuck came West in 1903, locating at Kalispell, and kept house for her son Charles at Kalispell. Later she moved to Whitefish, when that was still a very small and isolated village. She has known Montana through an interesting period of its development, and is familiar with the history of Whitefish from its very beginning. She is a devoted member of the Methodist Church. Mrs. Roebuck's grandmother rode horseback over the Alleghany Mountains from Newark, New Jersey, carrying a babe in her arms, to her new home in Ohio. Mrs. Roebuck is a member of the Easter Star and in politics is a republican. While in Ohio she taught school eighteen years, having charge of the primary department at Van Wert, Ohio, at one time. After coming to Montana she opened a kindergarten school.

Three members of the Roebuck family came to this country from England. One branch of the family settled in Chicago, and representing this branch was a member of the great mail order house, Sears, Roebuck & Company.

When eighty-four years of age Mrs. Roebuck walked to Whitefish to attend the Chautauqua of 1919. She is a constant reader, especially of politics, and is an enthusiastic advocate of the League of Nations. She has kept a running commentary of her own life and events connected therewith, and has it arranged in chapters or sections, each section covering a period of ten years.

Archibald W. Mahon. In March, 1911, Mr. Mahon became state engineer of Montana, but resigned from that office April 1, 1920, to enter as a partner in the Western Construction Company of Helena, Montana, general contractors in this state. He is a man of seasoned experience and tested abilities as a civil engineer, and was trained for his profession while living in the East. He was born near Rochester, Monroe County, New York, April 3, 1869. His father, Alderman D. Mahon, was born in Indiana in 1844, was reared in that state, and in 1861 enlisted in the 47th Indiana Infantry. He was all through the war, in all the battles in which his regiment took part, including the Siege of Vicksburg and Fort Donelson. Soon after the war he went to Monroe County, New York, was married there and settled on a farm. Later he established the Brockport Democrat, a newspaper at Brockport, New York, and from there moved his home to New York City. For several years he was a traveling salesman out of New York and later engaged in the brokerage business. He died in New York City in 1906. He was a democrat and a member of the Masonic Fraternity. Alderman D. Mahon married Miss Janette Janes, who was born in Michigan in 1846 and is now living with her only surviving child at Helena.

Archibald W. Mahon acquired his early education in the public schools of Rochester. He served a long apprenticeship at surveying and engineering with a firm at Rochester, and did a great deal of municipal work. For two years he was with the Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburg Railway as transit man and draftsman. For the thirty years past his experience has been in the Northwest, most of the time in Montana. In 1891 he went to Sioux Falls, South Dakota, where he served as deputy county surveyor. He then became resident engineer for the Great Northern Railway in extension work with headquarters at Sioux Falls. In September, 1893, Mr. Mahon came to Montana, first locating in Harlem, thence moving to Glasgow, and subsequently to Helena, where the general offices of his company are located. He was appointed county surveyor of Valley County, and in the fall of 1894 was elected to that office and re-elected in 1896. He held office until 1898. In the meantime, in 1895, he was appointed engineer and superintendent of irrigation of the Fort Belknap Reservation in Choteau County, now Blaine County. That work required much of his time until 1897. In 1898 Mr. Mahon was chosen to represent Valley County in the State Senate, was re-elected in 1902, and in 1906 received another nomination but declined to make the campaign. He was an able and vigilant representative of his county in the Senate during the sixth, seventh, eighth and ninth sessions.

In 1906 Mr. Mahon resumed his private practice and gave all his time to engineering and irrigation work, with home in Glasgow until 1911. He received his first appointment to the office of state engineer by Governor Morris, and entered upon his official duties at Helena in March, 1911. Governor Stewart reappointed him in 1915, and for a third term in 1919. Each term is for four years. Mr. Mahon is secretary and treasurer of the Glasgow Land and Water Company at Glasgow, and owns a modern home in that city.

Immediately after America entered the war with Germany in 1917 Montana was called upon by the Western Department of the United States Army for a military reconnaissance of the state. As the man best qualified by technical experience and also by office for that task, Mr. Mahon was appointed and performed the service in addition to his duties as state engineer. In recognition of the work the title of Military Intelligence Officer with the rank of major in the National Guards of Montana was bestowed upon him.

The new Highway Commission Law of Montana went into effect in 1917, and Governor Stewart chose Mr. Mahon as a member of the commission. He was elected a member of its executive committee. He served as secretary of the commission, but resigned those duties on January 15, 1920.

In Mr. Mahon, Montana Masonry has one of its distinguished members and officials. He has held many of the highest offices in the different branches of Masonry. His lodge affiliation is with North Star Lodge, No. 46, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, at Glasgow. He is a past high priest of Glasgow Chapter, No. 17, Royal Arch Masons, is deputy thrice illustrious master of Helena Council, No. 1, Royal and Select Masons, is a past commander of Glasgow Commandery, No. 13, Knights Templar, is a past potentate of Algeria Temple of the Mystic Shrine at Helena, and is a member of Helena Consistory, No. 3, and is an honorary member of the Supreme Council of the Thirty-third Degree. He has served as venerable master of the Lodge of Perfection, as commander of the Council of Kadosh, is now preceptor of the Consistory, is past grand high priest of the Grand Chapter of Royal Arch Masons of the state, and is a past grand commander of the Grand Commandery, Knights Templar, of the state.

Mr. Mahon is a member of the Sons of the American Revolution and also of the Sons of Veterans. Politically he is a democrat.

In 1904, at Glasgow, Montana, he married Frances G. Hoyt, who was born at St. Paul, Minnesota, and died at Glasgow in 1907, leaving two children, Hobart H., born August 8, 1907, and Archibald Warham, Jr., born January 10, 1906, but the younger died February 26, 1913. In 1909, at St. Paul, Mr. Mahon married for his present wife Miss Ocie M. Hazzard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Hazzard. Her father is a distinguished resident of St. Paul and is secretary of the Historical Society of Minnesota. Mrs. Mahon is a graduate in domestic science from the Lewis Institute of Chicago.

Peter Arena, proprietor of the Union Hotel of Whitefish, is an excellent example of what can be accomplished by one of foreign birth under the beneficent influences afforded by the United States, the most generous of countries to its adopted sons. Mr. Arena was born on the Island of Sicily, Italy, a son of Frank and Gratia Arena. In 1886, when he was twenty-three years old, Peter Arena came to the United States, and in 1888 located in the State of Washington, where he was engaged in a hotel business. Coming to Flathead County in 1890, he opened a bakery, continuing in that line of business for sixteen years, but in 1904 came to Whitefish and established his present hotel, which has become a popular one.

Before leaving his native land Mr. Arena was married, but his wife died after bearing him two sons and one daughter, namely: Frank, Orazio and Concetta. His sons were killed in an earthquake, but his daughter survived and was married and is now living on the Island of Sicily. During the great earthquake in Sicily, when so many of the inhabitants were killed or injured and property was destroyed, Frank was killed outright and Orazio was so injured that he died afterward from the effects, leaving two children, Peter and Mary.

Having achieved a fair measure of prosperity, Mr. Arena now desires to bring his orphaned grandchildren to live with him and grow up amid American surroundings and be educated in the excellent schools here. If he is granted the passport for which he has applied he proposes returning to Sicily and after a visit among his old friends to come back here and bring little Peter and Mary with him.

Mr. Arena's prosperity has not come to him without hard, unremitting work and strict economy. For years he labored, scarcely taking time for needful rest, but now that he has some leisure he feels that he wants to share his good fortune with those of his own flesh and blood. The people of Whitefish appreciate his good points and his entire reliability, and have patronized his hotel in the past and will continue to do so in the future, for it renders excellent service at a fair price. Men like Mr. Arena are desirable additions to any community, for they set an example of industry and close application to business that is well worth following.

David G. Browne, a resident of Fort Benton for forty years, gained his first prominence in the Territory of Montana as a factor in the old time transportation industry, as manager and owner of the enterprises that performed the great bulk of transporting goods in and out of the territory prior to the coming of railways. Mr. Browne, who had many other distinctions to his credit, as a merchant, banker, and public official, passed away on the 10th of December, 1919.

For his early equipment he had only the assets of a strong mind and earnest resolution, largely an inheritance from his Scotch ancestors. He did the duty that lay nearest, was willing to accept responsibilities, and in the Old West proved not only a man among men, but a leader.

He was born in a modest home near Belfast, Ireland, January 16, 1859, and his school education was concluded in his fourteenth year. For two or three years after that his work brought him knowledge as an accountant and bookkeeper. At the age of seventeen he came to the United States, joining an uncle in the Territory of Utah. He was soon made agent for the Wells Fargo and Company Express at Kelton, Utah, and during the following year made use of his position to acquire a practical knowledge of the transportation industry of the Far West.

In 1878, resigning his position in the express office, he became conductor of a mule train, and in charge of one of these freighting units made his first trips into Montana from Corinne, Utah. Soon afterward he bought the necessary equipment and became proprietor of a mule team outfit, bought a second outfit within a year, and when he established his home at Fort Benton in 1880 he was owner of four 12-mule teams and their necessary equipment. Mr. Browne was one of the leading operators of transportation in that region of Montana from 1879 to 1885.

David G. Browne

In the meantime many other responsibilities rapidly accumulated, and only a man of real executive genius could have handled them so successfully. In the spring of 1881 he took charge of the local office of W. S. Wetzel and Company, merchants at Fort Benton. In 1882 he acquired a monopoly of the ferry business at Fort Benton. In 1883 he was appointed assignee of Wetzel and Company, and handled the affairs of that house so that the business was wound up to the complete satisfaction of all the creditors.

For a number of years Mr. Browne handled many important Government contracts, one of the first being a hay contract at Fort Assiniboine in 1883. He also handled Government transportation contracts in Montana, Wyoming and Nebraska, and was highly commended by Government authorities for the prompt and efficient manner with which he supplied such military posts as Assiniboine, Maginnis, Shaw and Custer.

Like nearly all the pioneer business men of Montana, Mr. Browne engaged in ranching. He was manager and one of the principal owners of the Bar Eleven Cattle Company. At an early date in his Montana career he also became interested in banking, helping establish the Bank of Northern Montana at Fort Benton in 1886. He was also one of the founders of the Stockmen's National Bank at Fort Betnon, which afterward became one of the largest banking organizations in the Northwest. Mr. Browne acquired a large amount of stock, was prominent as a director from the beginning, and for a number of years served as active president.

David G. Browne had the unique distinction of serving more than a quarter of a century as a member of the State Democratic Central Committee of Montana. He was a delegate to the National Convention at Chicago in 1892 when Cleveland was nominated. In 1893 President Cleveland made him collector of customs for Montana and Idaho at Fort Benton, and he followed that office upon its removal to Great Falls in 1896, and made his home in that city until 1901. The ability with which he served in this position is sufficiently proved by the fact that he was retained during the first term of President McKinley. Mr. Browne in 1891 was appointed as one of the Montana Board of Managers for the World's Columbian Exposition at Chicago. Many times he was honored by the people of his home locality, serving as alderman of Fort Benton, as commissioner of Choteau County, and in return for these honors he steadily directed his personal influence and large resources to movements and enterprises promoting the welfare and progress of his home city and state.

Mr. Browne's first wife was Emma Wright, who died in 1891. In 1895 he married Miss Antoinette Van Hook, of Washington, Dictrict of Clumbia. Mr. Browne had two sons by his first wife, David G., of Los Angeles and R. Fred, of Fort Benton.

Rae J. Lemert. A man of versatile talent, energetic and progressive, Rae J. Lemert, of Helena, holds a place of prominence in the business and political affairs of city, county and state. A native of Ohio, he was born December 12, 1866, in Napoleon, Henry County, a son of Beverly W. Lemert and grandson of Leroy Lemert. Genealogical records extant show that his ancestry is one which has long been prominently identified with American history, he being a lineal descendant on his father's side of Jean Paul Lemert, a Huguenot pastor of Paris, France, in 1572, and of Sir Thomas Lyttleton, Baron Lyttleton, of Worcestershire, England, a descendant of Edward III, the lineage being traced through the Baron's daughter, Catherine Lyttleton, who married John Adams, and subsequently settled in Charles County, Maryland, in colonial days, where their son John, one of the ancestors of Mr. Lemert, was born.

Lewis Lemert, great-grandfather of the subject of this sketch, spent his entire life in Paris, Virginia, where he owned a large plantation and a grist mill, both of which he operated successfully. He married Elizabeth Glascock, a daughter of Peter Glascock, a Welsh sea captain, who immigrated to America about 1760, settling in Virginia, where he founded the towns of Paris, Upperville and Circleville. Lewis Lemert was a man of prominence, and for many years was steward of the estates of President George Washington. He was a son of Laban Lemert, a native of Alsace-Lorraine, and a descendant of Jean Paul Lemert, the Huguenot pastor to whom reference was made above. He came with his wife to Virginia about 1762, and spent his remaining years in Paris, that state.

Leroy Lemert was born and reared in Paris, Virginia, and was engaged in agricultural pursuits during his lifetime, owning and managing a large plantation in that vicinity. His wife, whose maiden name was Lucy Ellen Green, was a daughter of George Green, of Fauquier County, Virginia, and granddaughter of Moses Green, who served in the Revolutionary war as lieutenant of a company of Virginia troops. George Green married Ann Adams, a daughter of Josias Adams, owner of upwards of 10,000 acres of land in Virginia, and granddaughter of one John Adams, a native of Charles County, Maryland. She was a great-granddaughter of John Adams, Sr., who was born at Hagley Hall, Worcestershire, England, and was a grandson of Thomas, Baron Lyttleton, whose daughter Catherine was his mother.

Beverly W. Lemert was born in September, 1836, in Elizabethtown, Licking County, Ohio, in the village that was named in honor of his grandmother, Elizabeth (Glascock) Lemert. Beginning life for himself as a merchant in Napoleon, Ohio, he remained there a few years, removing in 1870 to Erie, Neosho County, Kansas, in pioneer days. At the end of eighteen months he located at Osage Mission, now Saint Paul, Kansas, and was there engaged in the practice of law until 1887, when he removed to Garden City, Kansas, where he continued as a lawyer until 1900. Coming in that year to Helena, Montana, he has since lived retired from active business.

At the outbreak of the Civil war Beverly W. Lemert enlisted as a private for a period of three months, and subsequently became captain of Company A, Seventy-sixth Ohio Volunteer Infantry, in which he served under Colonel Wood until the close of the conflict, when he was mustered out with the rank of major. He took part in many of the more important engagements of the war, including among others the battles at Lookout Mountain, Missionary Ridge, Shiloh, Fredericksburg and the battle of Arkansas Post, where he was seriously wounded and where a majority of the members of his company gave up their lives. A stanch republican in politics, he served as county attorney of Neosho County, Kansas, in the '70s. He belongs to the Christian Church, and is a member of the Ancient Free and Accepted Masons. He married Sobie S. Powell, who was born in Napoleon, Ohio, in 1843. Rae J. Lemert, the subject of this sketch, is their only child.

Leaving the public schools of Osage Mission, Kansas, before attaining the age of sixteen years, Rae J. Lemert taught in the rural schools of Neosho County, Kansas, two years. During that time he learned the printer's trade, and was subsequently manager and editor of the Neosho County Journal until 1886, and the following year was city editor of the Fort Scott Daily Monitor at Fort Scott, Kansas. Going to Garden City, Kansas, in 1887, he read law in his father's office, and having been admitted to the bar in 1888 continued there in partnership with his father for a year. Locating at Pueblo, Colorado, in the spring of 1889, Mr. Lemert there founded the Security Abstract Company, and in its management built up the largest abstract and farm loan business in that section of the state.

Disposing of his interest in the company in 1896, Mr. Lemert resumed his profession as a journalist, remaining in Pueblo until 1899, when he entered the United States Land Office at Salt Lake City, becoming supervisor of the mineral claims division and examiner of mineral land titles. Transferred to Helena, Montana, in the autumn of 1900, he served in the surveyor general's office a few months, resigning the position to become telegraph editor and proofreader on the Montana Daily Record, a newly established paper. In 1904 Mr. Lemert established a chemical manufacturing plant, known as the Montana Chemical Company, with which he was officially associated for two years. Selling his interest in the business in 1906, he bought the Union Steam Laundry plant of Helena, reincorporated it as the Domestic Laundry, and was its president and principal stockholder until 1916, when he took charge of the publicity of the anti-saloon campaign for the State of Montana. On March 17, 1917, Mr. Lemert was appointed state accountant of Montana, and has since filled the position ably and most satisfactorily. In this capacity he is in charge of the compilation and conduct of the state budget, and also has supervision of the accounting systems and of the finances of the fourteen state institutions. He is a certified public accountant, noted for his accuracy and prompt attention to all matters brought to his notice.

While Mr. Lemert had but limited early educational advantages, he has been a constant student all his life, and is a splendid representative of the self-educated men of our times. He has one of the finest libraries in Montana, the Masonic portion of it being one of the five largest, and the most complete private collection, in the United States. He has about 8,000 volumes in his library, the publications being in ten languages.

Politically Mr. Lemert is affiliated with the republican party. Fraternally he is a member, and a past master, of King Solomon's Lodge, No. 9, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons; of Helena Chapter, No. 2, Royal Arch Masons; of Helena Council, No. 1, Royal and Select Masters, of which he is past thrice illustrious master; a charter member and a past master of Helena Consistory, No. 3, Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite; a member of Algeria Temple, Ancient Arabic Order Nobles of the Mystic Shrine; and has the distinction of being a thirty-third degree Mason. He is also a member, and past grand, of Montana Lodge, No. 1, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and a member, and past president, of Helena Aerie, No. 16, Fraternal Order of Eagles. Religiously he is a member of the First Baptist Church of Helena, and a liberal contributor towards its support.

In May, 1901, at Helena, Mr. Lemert was united in marriage with Florence M. Smith, a woman of culture and refinement, who was graduated from the University of Utah with the degree of Bachelor of Science. She is an accomplished musician, and an artist, skillful with pen and brush, and for many years taught painting in its various branches. Her father, a pioneer merchant of Salt Lake City, lived there retired from business cares several years prior to his death. He married Katherine Smith, who, although of the same name, was not a relative. She has also passed to the life beyond. Mr. and Mrs. Lemert have a beautiful residence at 1042 Breckinridge Street, where the latchstring is ever out. They have no children.

WILBUR FISK SANDERS. The best index to the career of Wilbur Fisk Sanders is the history of Montana Territory. The story of the founding of the state and the influence of the late Colonel Sanders converge at so many points that it is almost as difficult to write a biography without trespassing upon the field of history as it would be to tell the history of Montana without repeated reference to one of its most striking and stalwart figures.

Wilbur Fisk Sanders was born at Leon, Cattaraugus County, New York, May 2, 1834, son of Ira and Freedom (Edgerton) Sanders, the former a native of Rhode Island and the latter of Connecticut. His father was a devout Methodist and named his son for a renowned champion of the faith in New England, and the son was thoroughly schooled in theology and the Bible. His knowledge and apt quotation of Biblical literature was surpassed by few learned clergymen. He acquired a public school education, had taught before he was twenty, and at that time, in 1854, moved to Akron Ohio, where he continued teaching and studied law under his uncle, Hon. Sidney Edgerton. He was admitted to the bar in 1856 and for several years practiced with Mr. Edgerton. When Mr. Edgerton was elected to Congress in 1858 Mr. Sanders was left to look after the business of the firm.

He closed his law office in April, 1861, recruited and organized a battery of artillery and a company of infantry, and was commissioned lieutenant in the battery. In October, 1861, he was transferred to the Sixty-Fourth Ohio Infantry, and appointed adjutant. He was in the battle of Pittsburg Landing and other engagements of his command. On account of physical disability he was compelled to resign his commission August 10, 1862, and then returned to Akron.

About that time President Lincoln appointed Sidney Edgerton chief justice of the Supreme Court of Idaho, and it was at the urgent invitation of Mr. Edgerton that Mr. Sanders left Akron June 1, 1863, bound for that remote district of the Northwest vaguely described as the Territory of Idaho. The party consisted of Judge Edgerton and family, Mr. Sanders with wife and two children, and several others. At Omaha, Nebraska, the terminus of the railroad, they transferred to a wagon train drawn by oxen, and after a journey of more than three months beset with hardships and imminent danger from Indians, they reached the mining camp of Bannack, September 18th. The season then being well advanced, they delayed their further progress to Lewiston, the capital of Idaho, and as a result the travelers remained in that part of Idaho Territory that eight months later was set off as Montana Territory. At Bannack Mr. Sanders had a residence and primitive office, and tried his first law case before one of the voluntary organizations known as Miner's Court. In that trial he gained a reputation for eloquence and ability and won a respectable clientage. February 6, 1864, he removed to Virginia City.

In the meantime, in December, 1863, Colonel Sanders had appeared as the prosecuting attorney at the trial of George Ives, one of the chief leaders of the bands of desperadoes and outlaws whose crimes fill the early annals of Montana and brought about the organization of the Montana Vigilantes. It was an act of courage never perhaps surpassed in the history of the West when Colonel Sanders stood up in the presence of scores and hundreds of old and reckless men ready to commit any act for the rescue of the defendant, and eloquently urged the extreme penalty for the assassin and murderer. The story of this trial is one of the most thrilling chapters in the history of the Vigilantes of Montana.

Mr. Sanders served as a member of a committee to urge the establishment of a separate territory comprising the country of Eastern Idaho, and in May, 1864, the Territory of Montana was organized, and Sidney Edgerton was returned as governor. The following October Mr. Sanders was nominated by the union or republican party for territorial delegate, and that was the beginning of his partisan political activities, which eventually earned him the reputation of "the republican war horse" of Montana. He was an exemplar of the old political doctrine, "Do right and take the consequences," and he spoke his thoughts and convictions and earned the respect of friends and enemies, though he was not elected then nor in several subsequent campaigns for territorial delegate. He was a member of the National Republican Convention in 1868, 1872, 1876 and 1884.

As a result of a resolution by the First Legislative Assembly Mr. Sanders was appointed a member of the Commissioners to Codify the Laws of the Territory. In February, 1865, he was elected president pro tem at the first meeting of the corporators to organize the Historical Society of Montana, and a few weeks later was elected president of the permanent organization. This institution was one of the deepest interests of Colonel Sanders the rest of his life. He continued as president until February 1, 1891. His popular title of colonel was due to the commission awarded him by Governor Edgerton in 1865.

Colonel Sanders in September, 1868, removed his residence to Helena. He was elected to represent Lewis and Clark County in the House of Representatives of the Legislative Assembly in 1872, 1874, 1876 and 1878. He was a member of the minority in the Legislature, but his influence in shaping legislation was second to none. The crowning and well deserved honor to his political career came after Montana was admitted to the Union. He was elected by the republicans of the Legislature to the office of United States senator and took his seat in 1890. His term expired March 4, 1893.

Colonel Sanders exercised an important influence upon educational affairs in Montana. At one time he served as school trustee of Helena, and from 1889 until his death was president of the Board of Trustees of the Montana Wesleyan University. At the time of his death he was trustee of the Helena Public Library, and he served as the first president of the Montana Bar Association in 1885. He was a charter member of William English Post, Department of Montana, G. A. R., and was unanimously elected department commander on March 28, 1905. The last public act of his life was drafting the order for the observance of Memorial Day that year. During his early life in Ohio he was affiliated with the Masonic Order and joined the first lodge at Virginia City. He served as grand secretary of the Grand Lodge from 1866 to 1868, and was then elected grand master.

The state and the Legislature performed a singularly appropriate honor when in February, 1905, they gave the name Sanders to a county just created. That honor came only a few weeks before the death of Colonel Sanders, who died at his home in Helena July 7, 1905. He had distinguished himself as the champion of law and order at the very beginning of Montana history, had proved a master workman in building the strong foundations of the commonwealth, and through sixteen years of statehood there had been no abatement of his earnest efforts, his stalwart patriotism, and his devotion to the highest and best interests of his chosen state.

However, it is not the purpose of this brief sketch to analyze his historic services to Montana, nor yet his character as a public leader and lawyer. It will suffice to quote a brief paragraph written by Judge Blake: "Senator Sanders was a leader of the bar and upwards of forty years his resonant voice, with a melodious cadence, was heard by delighted audiences in every hamlet of Montana. It might be Memorial Day or the Fourth of July, a gathering of army comrades or pioneers, the exhibition of a school or the commencement of a university, a meeting for the location or the construction of a railway, the laying of a cornerstone of a church or Masonic Temple, the commemorative rites of an old-timer or the executive of the United States, an assemblage of the bar or a banquet, the Miners' Court, the Justice Court or the Supreme Court. He was ever aggressive and independent, and his battle cry in the heat of the strife was 'No quarter.' In his mind all things were upon the same plane, and he showed the same intense spirit in a ward primary to nominate an alderman, or a national convention to choose a candidate for president of the republic."

In the proceedings of the American Bar Association is also found the following written by Hon. William Scallon: "He was noted for his mastery of the English language and for his eloquence, his power of invective, wit and sarcasm. His keenness of intellect and his powers of speech called forth from Robert G. Ingersoll, to whom he was opposed on the trial of a noted case, the remark that 'Sanders was the keenest blade he had ever crossed.'"

Colonel Sanders married October 27, 1858, Miss Harriet P. Fenn, of Tallmadge, Ohio, daughter of Joseph Fenn and Nancy (Caruthers) Fenn. As noted above, she and two of their children accompanied him to Montana, and she survived his death. The three sons are James U., Wilbur E. and Lewis P. Sanders.

WILLIAM J. SWAN, treasurer of Musselshell County, and one of the men who has made a record for himself in the stock industry, is handling the finances of his office in an efficient and capable manner and winning approval from all with whom he is carrying on transactions. He was born in Goodhue County, Minnesota, November 24, 1890, on the farm of his parents, August and Anna (Olson) Swan. August Swan was born in Sweden, and died in 1896, when only thirty-five years of age. His wife was born in Goodhue County, and died when William J. Swan was an infant. They were married in Minnesota and had two children, Arthur E. and William J. August Swan came to the United States in young manhood, and locating in Goodhue County, Minnesota, was engaged in farming until his death. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. After he obtained his papers of naturalization he espoused the principles of the republican party and continued to vote its ticket as long as he lived.

William J. Swan attended the public schools of Goodhue County and the Minneapolis High School, from which he was graduated in 1908, following which he came to Montana. After spending a year in this state he returned to Minneapolis and entered the law department of the University of Minnesota. However he did not complete his course, only studying for a year, when he came back to Montana and homesteaded in 1911 on Musselshell County land, and began farming and raising horses on his land. In 1917 he branched out in the cattle industry, and made a success of his undertaking. Mr. Swan became a member of Company B, Second Montana Infantry, being mustered into the United States service in June, 1916, and was stationed at Douglas, Arizona, until in November, 1916, when he was mustered out. Almost immediately thereafter he was appointed deputy treasurer of Musselshell County, and in November, 1918, was elected treasurer, taking charge of the office in March, 1919. He was elected on the republican ticket, and is one of the leaders of his party in this section.

On May 25, 1915, Mr. Swan was married to Miss Mino Raridan, who was born in Illinois. Mr. and Mrs. Swan have two children, Mary Eileen and Donald Arthur. One of the live young men of the county, Mr. Swan has already proved his worth to his community, and his future is bright, both in a business and political way. He is popular with his fellow citizens, and as they admit his efficiency there is no doubt but that other offices will be offered for his acceptance if he cares to devote himself to the public service.

George Richards Blackwell, of Libby, has been a resident of Montana for more than thirty years and enjoys all the honors of a real pioneer, a man who prospected and explored many sections of the old territory, has helped develop mines, open up new regions to civilization, and has borne a part characteristic of the brave, industrious and hardy pioneers.

Mr. Blackwell was born at Hoboken, New Jersey, May 24, 1852, a son of George R. and Catherine (Walker) Blackwell. His father, a native of London, was a seafaring man for many years, and frequently sailed to the port of San Francisco. After leaving the sea he settled in Yamhill County, Oregon, and homesteaded in Washington County, fourteen miles from Portland. He was killed at Oswego, Oregon, by the falling of a derrick.

George Richards Blackwell at the death of his father was a youth and was appointed to complete his father's homestead entry. At Cottage Grove, in Lane County, Oregon, November 15, 1874, he married Miss Eliza Fields, a native of Missouri and daughter of Martin and Paulina E. (Norris) Fields.

After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Blackwell located at Gardner, in Douglas County, Oregon, where he was an engineer of the George S. Hensdale Lumber Company. In 1880 he moved his family to Aynesworth, Washington Territory, where he continued in the lumber business; in 1881 went to Columbia County, Washington, and in 1882 to Sprague, Washington, where for four years he was employed by the Northern Pacific Railroad Company. In 1886 he went to the Coeur d'Alene district of Idaho and was an erector of mining machinery for a number of years.

In the meantime Mr. Blackwell made an exploring and prospecting tour to Libby Creek, northern Montana, in 1887. While here he discovered the Silver Crown Mine on Granite Creek. He named Granite Creek because of its granite boulders and he named Flower Creek because of the wonderful mass of purple flowers along its banks. During that tour he discovered what is now known as the Blackwell Glacier, one of the wonders of northwestern Montana. Mr. Blackwell sold the Silver Crown Mine in 1889 to the Spokane Milling Company. During the summer of 1887 he was engaged in placer mining on Libby Creek. For many years his interests have been identified with this section of Montana, not only as a miner but as a real pioneer in its substantial development. When he came here there were no railroads, and he blazed a trail from Libby to Granite Creek. Those who pass over that road today can see marks of the trail blazer. During 1887 he and two companions, Ben Tompkins and Mr. Seeley, started out prospecting, and while in camp two other men, John Lee and Isaac Ovens, asked him to pilot them some distance on the road they were following. Telling his companions to await his return, Mr. Blackwell performed the requested service. While he was gone his companions broke camp, but had gone only a little way when they were slain by Indians at the mouth of Wolf Creek.

Mr. Blackwell votes the democratic ticket, and both he and his son are active Masons. For the past ten years he has been deputy sheriff of Lincoln County, and he also served on the City Council two years at Libby. Besides his comfortable home in Libby he owns a valuable ranch of 161 acres on the Kootenai River opposite Jennings.

Mr. and Mrs. Blackwell had three children: George M., Carry Elebith and Vera Lorena, but the daughters died in childhood.

George M. Blackwell, the only son, was well reared and liberally educated, and while a student in the State University of Moscow, Idaho, entered the army, being mustered in September 24, 1918. He was assigned to duty in the Tank Corps Training Camp at Gettysburg, Pennsylvania, and received an honorable discharge November 13, 1918. For the past nine years he has been in the Government service as a forest ranger at Libby and is also an expert timber cruiser.

John K. Bramble. In the history of Montana as applying to the professional interests the name of John K. Bramble of Havre occupies a conspicuous place, for through a number of years he has been one of the representative men of affairs—progressive, enterprising and persevering. Such qualities always win success, sooner or later, and to Mr. Bramble they have brought a satisfactory reward for his well directed efforts, and while he has benefited himself and the community in a material way he has also been an influential factor in the educational, political and moral uplift of the community. Mr. Bramble exhibits an unusul versatility in his abilities and accomplishments, for not only has he earned a well-established reputation as a successful lawyer, but he has also proved his ability as a newspaper man, thus exerting a double influence in the community.

John K. Bramble is a native son of the old Buckeye State, having been born at Oak Hill, Meigs County, Ohio, on February 3, 1867. He is the son of Lafayette and Angeline (Blaine) Bramble, both of whom are deceased, the father, who was a native of Virginia, dying in 1912, at the age of eighty-three years, and the mother, who was a native of Ohio, dying at the age of fifty-two years. The subject of this sketch is the sixth in order of birth of the ten children born to these parents and of whom seven are living. Lafayette Bramble was engaged in the general mercantile business at Portland, Ohio, for many years, but for some time prior to his death was retired from active business affairs. In politics he gave his support to the democratic party and for fifty-five years he was a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

John K. Bramble was reared under the paternal rooftree and received his educational training in the public schools of Ohio, completing his studies in the Southern Ohio Normal School at Hockingsport, where at the age of sixteen years he had prepared himself for the pedagogical profession. His studies did not cease at that time, however, for he has ever been a wide reader and a close student and has always kept well informed not only on the leading questions of the day, but possesses a technical knowledge of a wide range of subjects, such as the sciences and the classics. At sixteen years of age Mr. Bramble began teaching school, following that vocation for fifteen years. In the meantime he had given serious study to law, and at the age of twenty-five years he was admitted to the bar of Ohio. He engaged in the active practice of that profession at Pomeroy, Ohio, but about a year later, in 1892, came to Montana, locating at Marysville, Lewis and Clarke County, where he remained until 1904, in which year he removed to Havre, where he has since practiced his profession. He enjoys the esteem of his professional brethren to a notable degree and is considered a lawyer of sound judgment and well-rounded knowledge. In 1912 Mr. Bramble acquired the ownership of the Hill County Democrat, one of the strong and influential papers of northern Montana, and of which he has occupied the editorial chair with pronounced success. Mr. Bramble has spoken in no uncertain wisdom on the leading questions of the day, and in local affairs he has ever given his support to every measure which has promised to advance the best interests of the community. He has been prosperous financially in his business affairs and is the owner of the Bramble Block, which he erected in 1915 and which is one of the popular office buildings of the city. He is also the owner of other valuable real estate here.

On July 13, 1918, Mr. Bramble was married to Vallery Rainault, a native of the Dominion of Canada. Politically Mr. Bramble is a strong supporter of the democratic party and takes an active part in public affairs, though not in any sense a seeker after the honors or emoluments of public office. Fraternally he is a member of Havre Lodge No. 1201, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. Ever since coming to Havre Mr. Bramble has played a leading part in affairs, and through his persistent efforts he has made for himself a place in connection with the professional energies and activities of life, so that his career offers both lesson and incentive. Because of his success and his high personal character he enjoys to a notable degree the confidence and good will of the entire community.

Albert S. Newcomb. While he was reared in the atmosphere of a Red River Valley farm, Albert S. Newcomb has spent his adult life in commercial and banking affairs, and for eleven years has been a citizen of Montana and a resident of Mondak. He is vice president of the Mondak State Bank.

Mr. Newcomb was born at Hallock in the Red River Valley of Minnesota January 8, 1882. His parents were Thomas B. and Margaret (Thompson) Newcomb. His father, a native of Ontario, Canada, came to the United States about 1877, was married in Minnesota, and for several years was a merchant at Hallock. His only son and child, Albert S., was eleven years of age when the father died, in November, 1882, a young man. His death occurred at Las Cruces, New Mexico. The widowed mother is still living at Hallock, and is one of the oldest residents of that town.

Albert S. Newcomb lives with his mother on a farm, attended country schools, and a short time before reaching his majority left the farm and after two years as a law student at the University of Minnesota he became a clerk in the Kittson County State Bank at Hallock. He was fortunate in finding thus early the business for which his talents seems to have adapted him. From the Hallock Bank he went to the Farmers and Merchants State Bank at St. Vincent as assistant cashier, remaining a year and a half, and for another year was in the collection department of the International Harvester Company, traveling out of Grand Forks as headquarters. This experience he has always considered invaluable to him as a banker.

In January, 1909, Mr. Newcomb came to Mondak and became associated with the organization which at that time took over the old private bank of Delaney Brothers, known as the Yellowstone River Bank, and reorganized as the Mondak State Bank. Mr. Newcomb became assistant cashier. The bank was capitalized at $20,000, and its first officers were David H. Beecher, president; George E. Towle, vice president; R. S. Nutt, cashier; and Albert S. Newcomb, assistant cashier. A change in the official personnel occurred in 1910, when Mr. Towle and Mr. Newcomb bought the interests of Mr. Beecher and Mr. Nutt, Mr. Towle becoming president and Mr. Newcomb cashier. Since 1918 Mr. Newcomb has been vice president, with L. W. Thompson, cashier. The bank at the close of business in 1919 had surplus and undivided profits of $5,000 and average deposits of $150,000.

Mr. Newcomb has other financial and business connections in Montana, being vice president of the First National Bank at Savage and of the Sidney National Bank. While a land owner and to some extent engaged in stock raising, he does not regard himself as a practical farmer. He has used his position as a banker and business man to promote the civic welfare of his community.

Mr. Newcomb married at Minneapolis, Minnesota, August 12, 1909, Miss Florence Kelso. She was born at Grand Rapids, Michigan, though her parents at that time lived in Minnesota. She is one of the four children of William F. and Emma (Kusterer) Kelso. Mrs. Newcomb was educated in the public schools of Hallock, Minnesota. Mr. Newcomb was chairman of the Roosevelt County campaign for the Victory Loan and was also chairman of the home branch of the Red Cross, Mrs. Newcomb being its secretary. He became affiliated with the Masonic Order at Hallock, and is now a past master of Kotana Lodge No. 79 at Mondak, and is affiliated with the Scottish Rite Consistory and Algeria Temple of the Shrine at Helena and has sat in the Grand Lodge of Montana Masons. He is a member of Williston Lodge of Elks in North Dakota and belongs to the University of Minnesota Chapter of the Theta Delta Chi. Mr. Newcomb was reared in a republican home and cast his first presidential vote for Colonel Roosevelt at Hallock. He attended the state conventions of the party in 1912 and 1916, and is the present state committeeman for Roosevelt County.

Robert E. Rice is one of the modest ranchmen of the Kingsley locality of Powder River County and the first public administrator of the county. He came into Montana as a settler in September, 1888, at which time he was entering upon his career as a man, and, as he says, "was almost naked." His cash capital at the time of his arrival consisted of $1.50, but since that time his finances have greatly improved, as he has also in position, and today he is accounted one of the substantial men of his community.

By birth Mr. Rice is a native of Cincinnati, Appanoose County, Iowa, born December 27, 1868, and as a child lived in that town, where his father, David Rice, was a carpenter. David Rice was a sergeant and Union volunteer in the Civil war, and for a time was stationed at Rock Island, Illinois. He was one of three brothers in the service, one of whom, James J. Rice, is a resident of the Soldiers' Home at Sawtelle, Los Angeles, California. The father of these soldiers crossed the Atlantic from his native Ireland, it is believed, and settled in Pennsylvania. In the family beside the soldier sons there were three daughters, two of whom died in Appanoose County, Iowa, and the third, Mrs. John Biddison, passed away near McPherson, Kansas. David Rice passed his later life at Cincinnati, Iowa, where his death occurred in 1871, it having probably been hastened by his army service. He married Sarah McDonald, of a Scotch Presbyterian family of farmers and bankers in Iowa, who died about the same time as her husband, leaving: John M., of Los Angeles, California; Mrs. A. J. Ralston, who died recently near Kingsley, Montana; Lincoln, who died in Iowa as a child; Robert E., of this notice; and Flora, who passed away in girlhood.

Robert E. Rice was but a child when his parents died and his educational advantages were of a limited character. When still a mere school boy, in 1878, he went from Iowa to Kansas to live with his sister, Mrs. Ralston, and at the age of seventeen took the responsibility for his own maintenance. For a time he was engaged in freighting out of Arkansas City, Kansas, into the Indian Territory, as far south as Fort Reno, and then went into the Black Hills country, where for two years he occupied himself in mining between Hill City and Rapid City. It was from that locality that he came to Montana in 1888. Here he sought employment as a cow puncher and found it with Carpenter & Robinson, the old Diamond Cow Outfit, on the Rosebud, and after spending a year with them changed to the "J. O." Ranch on Tongue River. A year later he went to Johnny Burgess for the Northern Cattle Company, and spent six years with them on Powder River, and then laid out on the grass with his saddle for a pillow with the rest of the boys while riding the range.

About this period Mr. Rice took up a claim on Powder River and out of the savings of his wages accumulated a bunch of cattle. He took possession of his claim as a ranchman in a log cabin, one of the first good ones built on the river, and ranched and batched there for nine years, selling out his cattle before he acquired title to his land and came up to his present location and entered the sheep and horse business. Here he has proved up on a half section of land and is situated in one of the best grass regions of Montana. The cutting off of the range made the cattle industry crowded, and he closed out his interests in this direction and is handling only horses as his industry, in addition to which he does some dry land farming. His best wheat yield has been twenty-five bushels an acre, and his corn has matured well, the Lakin White Dent corn having demonstrated its adaptability to this region and yielded abundantly. Irish potatoes have also yielded well, and measure extra size and are solid through and through.

Mr. Rice's first official service was as chairman of the School Board, District No. 28, and was secretary of the Council of Defense of his district and active in all the drives for war work and funds. His politics is normally democratic, but he cast his first vote for Benjamin Harrison and supported Colonel Roosevelt in 1908, but was a Wilson voter in 1912 and 1916. He was appointed public administrator and qualified for office in May, 1919. Mr. Rice has passed his life unmarried. His home has always been open to his neighbors as well as to strangers, and accommodations have always been dealt out to them with the best in his possession. His only fraternal connection is with the Odd Fellows, Mr. Rice having his membership at Ekalaka, Montana.

William Parent. One of the prosperous business men of Whitefish is William Parent, now conducting a successful real estate business, but at one time very active in Flathead County as one of its deputy sheriffs. He was born at Pierre, South Dakota, a son of L. N. and Josephine (Leanis) Parent, and was reared and educated in his native state. In 1900 he came to the City of Seattle, Washington, with his father, and still later to Flathead County, his father establishing himself as a blacksmith and wheelwright at Kalispell.

After coming to Kalispell William Parent was married to May Gregg, a daughter of William Gregg, a pioneer of the county and an Indian fighter during the early days in this region. He located in this county long before Kalispell or Whitefish were thought of, or settlers to any number had come here. Mr. Gregg and his wife had six children, of whom Mrs. Parent was the youngest. After completing the high school course at Kalispell Mrs. Parent specialized in music and became a teacher of that art. She is a woman of lovely character, cultured and refined, who has developed a beautiful and elevating atmosphere in her home that is felt throughout her circle of acquaintances. Mr. Parent adopted his father's calling and conducted a blacksmith shop at Kalispell for some years, and then about 1906 came to Whitefish and carried on the same business for seven years, when he was appointed chief of police of Whitefish, serving creditably under its first mayor, A. E. Long, who for a time was superintendent of the Great Northern Railroad, but resigned and went into a general merchandise business at Whitefish. His successor, H. E. Snyder, reappointed Mr. Parent, and he also served as constable. Sheriff W. H. O'Connell then appointed Mr. Parent one of his deputies, and during his administration Frederick LaBore was hung for the murder of a Mr. Yocum and his son, which was one of the most cold-blooded crimes in the annals of the state. The partner of Frederick LaBore, George Hobbinger, was sent to the penitentiary for life.

One of the most stirring experiences of Mr. Parent's official life occurred in connection with the robbery of the Great Northern Railroad at Rondo, Montana, by two notorious desperadoes, Frank Howser and a McDonald, who had terrorized all of the western country by their boldness and utter contempt of official interference. William

Robert E. Rice

Parent, with his associates, set out, determined to capture these men, and it was Mr. Parent who succeeded, arresting the men in a dining car after they had boarded the train at Bonner's Ferry for Spokane, Washington. At the time of the arrest the train was just pulling into Spokane. Excitement ran high, and it was found necessary to take them quietly out of Spokane rather than wait for extradition papers, and deliver them to Flathead County, from whence they were taken to Helena, Montana, by United States Marshal Merifield. The men managed to escape from the jail, but Howser was recaptured. The other man is still at large. When Mr. Parent captured these men $14,700 of the $40,000 they had stolen was found on their persons, in the original packages. It took courage of the highest order to arrest these men, but Mr. Parent was never lacking in this characteristic, and took the event as part of his day's work.

He served Whitefish as marshal for twenty-eight years in addition to his work as chief of police and deputy sheriff, and is one of its most enthusiastic boosters. As an operator in real estate he is now rendering an equally valuable service along other lines to his beloved city, and many who have homes of their own owe them to Mr. Parent's activities, which made it possible for them to acquire them upon easy terms. It is such men as Mr. Parent who develop a community and place it among the worth-while regions.

MAX SKLOWER. Nearly all those experiences which bind a man's memory and affection to one locality connect Max Sklower with Montana, where he was a pioneer and where he has lived for more than half a century. He knows many localities of the state, and many communities know and esteem him for his honest and upright career and the enterprise that has brought him success in business and citizenship. Mr. Sklower is now a retired business man, and since 1903 he and his family have been prominent in the Town of Malta, where his sons are among the most prominent citizens and business leaders.

Max Sklower was born in Prussia, Germany, March 30, 1842, and grew to young manhood in his native country. He had a common school education and served an apprenticeship at the baker's trade. Following an older brother, he came to the United States, and passing through Castle Garden in New York soon reached St. Louis. Not long after the close of the Civil war he embarked as a passenger aboard a Missouri River steamboat bound for Fort Benton. He had no capital, but his knowledge of a trade enabled him to find work. During his ramblings he drifted into Utah, but soon returned to Montana and for a time was a pastry cook, under Chef Charles Rinda, in the old St. Louis Hotel. He and Mr. Rinda later bought the Imperial Restaurant, and later purchased the International Hotel in Helena, when he sold out to his partner Mr. Sklower, engaged in the billiard hall business. It was out of those early experiences that he acquired the modest capital that enabled him to undertake his first individual enterprise as proprietor of a billiard hall at Helena. Leaving Helena Mr. Sklower leased the Springs Hotel at White Sulphur Springs, and was proprietor of that popular hostelry for fifteen years. His management gave him more capital than any other experience, and when he left White Sulphur Springs he supplied the money for a hide buying concern in Helena. At the same time he was looking about for a proper place to resume the hotel business, and his investigations led him to Malta, where he erected the Great Northern Hotel, which was completed and opened for business January 15, 1904. He continued as its active proprietor until he was succeeded by his sons in January, 1919, and then having spent fifty active years in Montana he was satisfied to retire and enjoy a well earned prosperity.

Besides giving Malta a hotel that is a credit to the town, Mr. Sklower has exercised a public spirited influence in other directions. He took stock in the flour mills and in the Malta-Zortman telephone line. He was a member of the first board of aldermen of the town and was active in the administration which installed the sewer and water systems and otherwise has co-operated with his fellow citizens in all movements for the advancement and best interests of the locality. He was identified with the movement to divide Valley County and create Phillips. Mr. Sklower completed his naturalization at Helena in 1889, and has always been a republican in politics. He holds a twenty-five year medal for continuous membership in the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, is a past master of Diamond City Lodge of Masons at White Sulphur Springs, is a member of the Scottish Rite Consistory at Helena and also the Temple of the Shrine. He was one of the early members of the Ancient Order of United Workmen in Montana.

At Helena May 15, 1880, Max Sklower married Miss Bettie R. Silverman. Her father, Morris Silverman, was born in Kalvria, Polish Russia, and came to the United States about the close of our Civil war. He was also a Montana pioneer, reaching the territory in 1866 and settled at Helena, where he has resided since. He became a prominent citizen of the state. In his early career he was a ranchman, later a merchant, then in the coal and fuel business, and is still living at Helena, one of the venerable pioneers of the city. He served on the City Council, is a republican in politics, and possesses a fifty year medal of membership in the Odd Fellows.

The two sons of Mr. and Mrs. Max Sklower are Joseph and Emanuel, the former born May 28, 1881, and the latter November 24, 1884. They are associated in the firm of Sklower Brothers, proprietors of the Great Northern Hotel at Malta, and are also interested in ranching and other business enterprises. They acquired their early education at White Sulphur Springs. Joseph attended the Helena High School, spent one year in the School of Mines at Golden, Colorado, and two years in the University of California at Berkeley. Following that he was in the reclamation work of the Government as a topographical engineer until he entered the hotel business with his father at Malta. Emanuel is a graduate of the White Sulphur Springs High School and was a druggist's apprentice at Helena with Emil Starz until he came to Malta as an associate with his father in the Great Northern Hotel.

Joseph Sklower during the war was county director of war savings. He is treasurer of Malta Lodge No. 57 of the Masons. Emanuel Sklower, whom everybody knows as "Mannie," was elected mayor of Malta in 1918 as successor of Harry Cosner. His administration has been signalized by the installation of street lighting, building of concrete sidewalks and crossings, and a thoroughly economic and efficient administration of city affairs under war and post-war conditions. He is a director of the Malta National Bank and one of its original stockholders, served as local chairman of the Four-Minute men during the war, is a Scottish Rite Mason with membership in the Consistory at Helena, is a past master of Malta Lodge No. 57, a member of Algeria Temple of the Mystic Shrine and belongs to the Elks at Havre.

At New York City, October 20, 1917, Emanuel Sklower married Miss Rose Sternglanz, who was born in Greater New York. Her father, Joseph Sternglanz, a native of Vienna, Austria, is a New York manufacturer. Mrs. Emanuel Sklower graduated from Hunter College at New York City, and for several years was a teacher in the city public schools. Mr. and Mrs. Sklower have one daughter, Ruth Ida.

E. C. Prestbye. One of the best known of the younger attorneys of Flathead County is E. C. Prestbye, of Whitefish, an honored native son who has always tried to measure up to the standard of correct manhood, and this locality is proud to number him among its progressive and representative men. Having always maintained his home here, he has the interests of the community at heart and has sought to promote the same in every way possible. In all the relations of life he has proven true to every trust reposed in him and no one is worthier of the high esteem in which he is held.

E. C. Prestbye was born in Kalispell, Montana, and is the son of Christ and Methilda Prestbye. He secured his elemental education in the public schools of his home city, and then became a student in Spokane College at Spokane, Washington, where he took a course in engineering. Later however, he determined to make the practice of law his life work, and to this end he took the law course in the Montana State University at Missoula, where he was graduated. He immediately upon being admitted to practice located at Whitefish, where he has ever since remained and where he is now enjoying a large and representative clientele. In 1918 Mr. Prestbye was appointed to fill a vacancy in the office of city clerk of Whitefish, the duties of which office he is discharging to the entire satisfaction of the voters of the town.

Politically Mr. Prestbye is nominally a democrat, though he is broad minded and liberal, especially in local public affairs, in which he takes an intelligent interest. While a student in the university Mr. Prestbye was selected by the student body as manager of the Associated Students, which meant that to him was entrusted the management of practically all of their affairs in almost every department of the school activities, including athletics, literary and social interests. He performed the duties of that responsible position to the entire satisfaction of the students, and in later years will be kindly remembered by them, for to many of them he was more like a brother and friend than a mere official. He has carried into his business life the same splendid qualities which characterized him at school, and is therefore deservedly popular among those who know him, his friends being in number as his acquaintances.

As a lawyer Mr. Prestbye evinces a familiarity with legal principles and a ready perception of facts, together with the ability to apply the one to the other, which has won him the reputation of a sound and safe practitioner. In discussions of the principles of law he is noted for clearness of statement and candor; he seeks faithfully for firm ground, but his zeal for a client never leads him to urge an argument which in his judgment is not in harmony with the law, so that he has won the mutual respect of his brethren of the bar and the confidence of the public.

Mrs. Lydia Emerson, who is the beloved matron of the Montana Soldiers Home at Columbia Falls, is a pioneer Montana woman and has lived in this territory and state since she was nine years of age. At that time her parents, Solomon and Elizabeth Wiles moved from Afton, Iowa, where she was born, to Virginia City, Montana, and Mrs. Emerson has always counted Virginia City as her permanent home. She was educated there in the high school. She became the wife of Frank Emerson at Virginia City. He was also a native of Iowa. To their marriage were born two children, Charles and Rena, the latter now deceased. Charles was educated in Virginia City and Twin Bridges, and is a prosperous rancher of Madison County, Montana.

Mr. and Mrs. Emerson were married ten years when death overtook him in his labors. He was a good man, mourned by a large circle of friends, and was a kind husband and father. Mrs. Emerson is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Helena and fraternally is affiliated with the Degree of Honor. She is independent in her political affiliations.

After the death of her husband she lived five years in Virginia City and then removed to Twin Bridges, where for nine years she was cottage matron at the State Orphans Home. She resigned that office to accept the position at Helena as matron of the Montana Wesleyan College. She was there five years, resigning to become matron of the Montana Soldiers Home in 1919. She therefore entered upon her present duties with abundance of experience and the qualifications of tact, good administrative ability, and the courtesy, refinement and attractive hospitality which make her the source of the spirit of sociability and good cheer which radiates through that institution.

Oscar O. Barnes, whose address is the Montana Soldiers Home at Columbia Falls, was a Union soldier for four years and is also a Montana homesteader.

He was born in Wilmot Township, Bradford County, Pennsylvania, November 21, 1840, a son of Reuben and Anna Aurora (Spring) Barnes. He was not yet twenty-one years of age when he was mustered into the service of the Union army September 5, 1861, at Roxborough, Pennsylvania, as a member of Company A. He and four companions were the first men mustered into the Fifty-eighth Pennsylvania Infantry. Later he was transferred to Company B, and after drilling at Roxborough was sent to Fortress Monroe under command of General Wool. He was at Newport News and Hampton Roads, participating in the capture of Norfolk, and helped garrison that city. He was also engaged in skirmishes on the Blackwater River and built the defenses for Suffolk which enabled General Peck to hold that town against the enemy during the following winter. On December 30, 1862, he was discharged for re-enlistment at Washington, North Carolina, and at once re-enlisted in the same company and regiment, dating from January 1, 1863, for a period of three years or during the war. He was to have received $400 in bounty and thirty-five days' furlough. In the meantime he was sent to New Bern, North Carolina, and helped hold various sections of that state. May 1, 1864, he joined Butler's command at Bermuda Hundred, Virginia, and was in the battle of Drury's Bluff and then joined Grant at Cold Harbor and participated in the great battle of that place on June 3rd. He was soon afterward transferred to City Point, Virginia, and was in the siege of Petersburg. On account of doctor's orders he was out of active service until November 8, 1864, and when he returned he was employed in making out payrolls, assisting as hospital steward, and helped carry away the dead and wounded from the field of Cold Harbar. He was always a vigilant and useful soldier. In one battle a sharpshooter had been making havoc of Union officers. Mr. Barnes put his hat on a stick, and after drawing the sharpshooter's fire located the enemy and shot him out of a tree. He was in the first brigade that entered the City of Richmond. In the meantime he had been advanced from private to second sergeant. His last battle was at Petersburg, and on January 26, 1866, he was mustered out and honorably discharged at Philadelphia. In the latter month of his service he was detailed to take a colored census in Virginia, and also worked for the Freedmen's Bureau at Charlottsville, serving as justice of the peace and being detailed to collect property for the Government.

Richard Greig & Family

March 15, 1870, he married Frances Wright, a native of Pennsylvania and daughter of Thomas J. Wright. Mr. and Mrs. Barnes had ten children, one of whom died in infancy and one at the age of fifteen. The children in order of birth were: Archie W., Maud, deceased, Maud E., Carson H., Anna H., George O., Doyle, deceased, Glen A., Donald R. and Tracy B. Archie was a pay clerk and first lieutenant in the Spanish-American war, and has been in the United States Navy since 1898, being on board the supply ship Rainbow during the World war, and was on the first vessel that passed through the Panama Canal after the big slide. He is now stationed at Newport, Rhode Island.

The mother of these children died in Pennsylvania, and later Mr. Barnes married Mrs. Anna (Hawkes) Mosher, a native of Cold Spring, New York, and daughter of Caleb and Anna(Denning) Hawkes. Her first husband was W. H. Mosher, by whom she had two children, B. W. and A. L. Mosher. Mrs. Barnes is a member of the Episcopal Church. Mr. Barnes has been affiliated with the Masonic Order since 1868, and in politics is a republican.

His son Archie Barnes married Miss Lida Williams and has a daughter, Frances. His daughter Maud is the wife of Weller S. Fox and has a son, Ralph. Anna H. is the wife of Frank Hughes, and her two daughters are Hazel and Genevieve. George O. married Josie Kane, of Washington, D. C., where he is employed in the Redemption Bureau in the Treasury Department, and their four children are George A., Mary E., Edward O. and Eugene Kane. Donald married Esther Peterson, of North Dakota.

B. W. Mosher, Mrs. Barnes' son by her first marriage, married Mary Clift, and has two children, Benjamin, Jr., and Mary. A. L. Mosher married Elizabeth Voigt and has a daughter, Ruth.

Toward the end of the Civil war Mr. Barnes was offered a commission in the regular army if he would accept a commission as lieutenant colonel of a regiment of colored troops. He declined, preferring to stay with his old company and comrades, with whom he had experienced and shared so much fighting and hardship. Altogether he was in the army four years, four months and nineteen days. Although he never sought office, after his marriage in 1870 he served as a school director seventeen years, as road supervisor eleven years, as road commissioner eight years and as justice of the peace two years.

Mr. and Mrs. Barnes came to Montana in 1910, at the opening of the Flathead Reservation, and proved up a homestead on the Kootenai River.

Richard Greig. Another of the sterling sons of bonnie Scotland who left his native brakes and braes for our land of greater opportunity, and, on investigation, decided that Montana appealed to him in a way that no other section did, is Richard Greig, of Flathead County, a man who, owing to his habits of industry, frugality, fortitude and unbending integrity, would have succeeded in any portion of the great western republic. He has never sought to be a leader in the affairs of this locality, merely striving to live up to the standard of good citizenship and make a comfortable living; and, while revering the memory of his native land, as is quite natural and right, he has, nevertheless, been most loyal to our flag and institutions, and he is rightly given a place among our representative citizens.

Richard Greig was born in Scotland, the son of Michael and Isabel (Marr) Greig. He was reared and educated in his native country, but at the age of twenty-three years, desiring greater opportunities for advancement, he came to the United States. After briefly canvassing the situation he decided that the great Northwest offered the greatest attraction to him and he at once came to Montana, locating in the Flathead Valley. He filed on a preemption claim of 160 acres lying south of Kalispell, and there at once engaged in farming and in the improvement of the property. He was successful from the beginning of his efforts, so that in 1885 he was enabled to buy a fine ranch about 2½ miles west of Kalispell, which he has made his permanent home and where he is still residing. He built a fine residence, very picturesquely located on a commanding elevation, from which an unexcelled view can be had of the surrounding country. One of the pleasing features of the home property, and a source of supply as well, is the fine large fish pond, covering about two acres, which Mr. Greig created several years ago. He stocked the pond with eastern brook trout, of the speckled variety, which have thrived and multiplied, so that any time fresh fish is desired for the table it can be had with little trouble. Mr. Greig also erected a water wheel and dynamo, and equipped his home and barns with electric wires. For about ten years he enjoyed electric light of his own creation, but later the City of Kalispell carried electric current to the country homes and he is using the municipal current.

Mr. Greig is engaged in general farming and stock raising, in which he has been remarkably successful. At present he is giving special attention to the raising of purebred Shropshire sheep, he having recognized the fact that high-grade sheep of the more desirable breeds are commanding top prices in the stock markets of the country. The most successful farmers of Montana are waking up to this important fact and are the gainers thereby. Mr. Greig also specializes in the raising of alfalfa hay, of which he has cut 250 tons in one year from eighty-five acres of land. This land is irrigated by an electric centrifugal pump, which raises 1,500 gallons of water per minute, and in addition he irrigates 150 acres of land which he and his brothers, Michael and David, own near Kalispell. These few details of the methods followed by Mr. Greig will indicate to some degree the progressive character of his work and will explain the secret of the splendid success which has rewarded him for the indefatigable efforts he has expended here.

On March 22, 1910, Richard Greig was married to Mary Saunders, a native of the State of Missouri, and a daughter of Stratford and Minta (Lawson) Saunders. To this union have been born two children, Richard and Minta, who are attending the public schools of Kalispell.

Politically Mr. Greig is nominally a democrat, but he is independent insofar that he reserves the right to vote and support the men and measures which most nearly meet his approval, regardless of party lines. Religiously Mr. and Mrs. Greig are active members of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Kalispell, and their support is always given to every movement for the advancement of the highest and best interests of the community. They are especially interested in the great cause of prohibition, and are gratified to know that the doom of the liquor traffic has been sounded. Mr. Greig is an ardent supporter of advanced educational ideas and has served efficiently as a member of the Kalispell School Board. He firmly believes that it is a false economy to employ cheap teachers, for our boys and girls are entitled to the very best educational facilities that can be afforded. Mrs. Greig is a well educated, broad minded American woman of progressive type, who also believes in the best things for the rising generation. She took a prominent and effective part in the work of the Red Cross during the recent World war. She and her husband have been witnesses of and to a large extent participants in the wonderful transformation that has taken place in the Flathead Valley, one of the choicest spots in Montana—a transformation that would have been thought impossible only a few years ago, for it does not seem so many years ago that this particular section of country was characterized by sparse settlements, log cabins, Indians and wild game. They look back with justifiable pride to the rather strenuous part they played in the events of those early years and feel that they have honestly earned the prosperity which is now theirs to enjoy.

Lew Switzer is one of the veteran merchants of Montana, and for a quarter of a century or more has been identified with the business and civic affairs of Kalispell. He is proprietor of the leading furniture business in the Flathead country, and has a store building 50 by 140 feet, basement and mezzanine floor, completely filled with a well selected stock of furniture and all goods for household furnishing.

Mr. Switzer was born in Grant County, Indiana, a son of David and Esther (Parrill) Switzer. He was educated in his native state, lived there to the age of twenty-four, and coming west was employed in a hardware business at Helena and later at Missoula. In March, 1891, the company sent him to establish a branch store at Demersville, and in November, 1892, he came to Kalispell. He continued with his former employers at Kalispell until March 1, 1907, when he engaged in the furniture business for himself. By strict application, economy and ability he has developed the largest trade in his line in this section of the state.

Mr. Switzer married Miss Blanche Ames, a daughter of I. J. Ames, who was a veteran of the Civil war. They have one daughter, Kate, now the wife of H. V. Alward. Mr. and Mrs. Alward's three children are Kate, Lewis and Herbert V. Mr. Switzer is affiliated with the Modern Woodmen of America and the Elks, and his wife is a member of Christ's Church at Kalispell.

William F. Winkelmann, known to the community of Savage and throughout Richland County as a merchant, banker and representative business man and public citizen, was born at Holloway, Swift County, Minnesota, August 12, 1880. Although the family home was on a farm and he was reared among its environments, his father, Fred C. Winkelmann, was a business man in Holloway, and the son received his educational training in that town. From high school he entered the Eclectic Business College at Minneapolis, and completed his educational training in the Martin Luther College of New Ulm, Minnesota.

Fred C. Winkelmann, his father, and now a retired business man of Holloway, Minnesota, was born in Mecklenburg, Germany, in 1855, and was a lad of eleven years when with the family he immigrated to the United States. Their first home in this country was at Golden Gate, between Sleepy-eye and New Ulm, Minnesota, but with the building of the railroad to St. Paul they removed to that place, and it was there that Fred C. Winkelmann reached manhood's estate and completed his limited educational training. He early became familiar with the language of his adopted country by his own unaided efforts, and he began life's activities as a laborer, but in a short time he took a homestead in Swift County, from the proceeds of which he gained the capital to engage in his mercantile business at Holloway. He became a republican voter, and the only political office in which he ever served was a township position.

Fred C. Winkelmann married Louisa Lenz, who was born in Germany in 1857, and was twelve years of age when she crossed the ocean to the United States. The children born of their marriage are: William F., the well known business man of Savage; Fred C., whose home is still in Holloway, Minnesota; Otto, of Hingham, Montana; Annie, wife of Carl A. Suckow, also of Holloway; Ida, who became the wife of August Kohlmann at Anamoose, North Dakota; Earl, who resides in Holloway; Minnie, the wife of Fred Stotts, of Gildford, Montana; Bertha, who married Harry Fischer, of Holloway; Amelia, the wife of Fred Schlieman, of Fairfield, Minnesota; and Augusta, who is married and lives in Holloway.

After leaving the school room William F. Winkelmann was his father's bookkeeper for several years at Holloway, Minnesota. From there he went as a homesteader to North Dakota, settling and proving up a claim near Sherwood, and on leaving the claim he went to Garrison, North Dakota, and entered the banking business. During six years he served the First State Bank as its cashier, and while at Garrison he served in the office of Mayor for one term.

On the 4th day of March, 1912, Mr. Winkelmann arrived in Savage, Montana, at once resuming the banking business and organizing the Farmers and Merchants State Bank, which opened its doors to the public on the 10th of June of that year. The bank was capitalized at $20,000, and officered with J. W. Boock as president, W. K. Adams, vice president, and W. F. Winkelmann, cashier. In July, 1918, Mr. Winkelmann sold his interest in this banking institution, at which time he was serving it as vice president, and at the same time he also disposed of his interest in the First State Bank of Lambert, Montana, which had been organized in 1913 and of which he was also the vice president.

While still engaged with his banking interests Mr. Winkelmann organized the Savage Lumber Company, being still its secretary-treasurer and a member of its directing board, but the corporation is now known as the Standard Mercantile Company of Lambert, Montana. On the 14th of June, 1916, Mr. Winkelmann was instrumental in the organization of the Standard Mercantile Company of Richey, Montana, and is the present secretary and a director of the company. The Savage Hardware Company, which was organized on the 1st of March, 1916, is one of the leading business houses of Savage and Richland County, capitalized at $30,000, and William F. Winkelmann is serving the company as its president, with Stanley Christilaw as the secretary. The company also handles implements and furniture.

When Mr. Winkelmann arrived at the age of maturity he gave his allegiance to the republican party, casting his first vote for Johnson as governor of the state, and his first presidential vote was given to Colonel Roosevelt. His first public service as an official began as a school officer at Garrison, North Dakota, and he afterward served as a member of the Town Council and finally as mayor of Garrison, holding the last named office one term. He has the distinction of being the first chairman of the Richland County Republican Central Committee, finally resigning that office, and he was a delegate to the county convention at Sidney and was the party nominee for state senator in 1918, but lost to his League opponent.

Mr. Winkelmann has built two of the homes of Savage. His own residence, built in 1913, is modern throughout and is a convenient, well arranged house of nine rooms. He was married at Kandiyohi, Minnesota, November 29, 1906, to Miss Lydia Norman, a daughter of N. and Caroline Norman, now of Yakima, Washington. The father was a native of Sweden, and after coming to this country was engaged first as a farmer and afterward as a merchant and grain dealer at Kandiyohi, Minnesota. The children in the Norman family numbered the following: Annie, who became the wife of Albert Isaacson; George, of Ethridge, Montana; Louis, of Selah, Washington; Mrs. Winkelmann; Cora, who died in young womanhood; Esphure, of Berthold, North Dakota; Charles J., of Ritzville, Washington; and Daisy, of Yakima, Washington.

Two children, Allen and Lyalus C., have blessed the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Winkelmann. The Masonic Order received Mr. Winkelmann into its membership at Appleton, Minnesota, where he received the Master's degree. He is a member of the Blue Lodge in Sidney, the Chapter and Commandery at Glendive, and of the Shrine and Algeria Temple at Helena. During the recent World war he served as a member of the Council of National Defense for Richland County, and also assisted in the collection of funds for Young Men's Christian Association work and was active in other war relief organizations.

Ernest Lindsey Walton of Bainville, Montana, came out to the northwestern country before reaching his majority and the chief points of his experience in somewhat successive order might briefly be described as hasher, cowpuncher, homesteader, railroad worker, farmer, merchant, leader in "county splitting" campaigns, and for the past four years as a successful lawyer.

He was born at Rippey, Iowa, March 11, 1888, a son of Frank Lindsey and Mattie Gertrude Walton. At seventeen, in 1905, he completed the work of the Eagle Grove public school, and during the following year attended the State University of Iowa, while in 1906-07 he was a student in Upper Iowa University. Soon afterward he came to the Northwest. Mr. Walton is regarded as one of the very first "tractor farmers" in Montana, having used three tractors to farm his land in 1911. For several years he was engaged in the mercantile business, and while so employed he secured 43 per cent of the signers on the petitions for the creation of Sheridan County in 1913, and earned his first reputation as a public speaker campaigning for that division. The following fall he took up the study of law at Missoula, attending the State University for five months, until he was compelled to leave on account of financial reverses arising from his absence at home. However, in the five months he won the honors of the law department, and he completed the course by home study and passed the Montana state bar examination in the spring of 1916 and was admitted prior to his class mates who remained in school. In the meantime he had performed professional campaign work for county division. After his admission to the bar he began regular practice and assisted in the creation of Roosevelt County and was its first county attorney, serving in 1919-20. In 1915 he filled the office of deputy sheriff of Sheridan County. Besides his law practice and official duties Mr. Walton is engaged in farming, and also has built up a profitable real estate business handling business property.

At Minot, North Dakota, in 1907, he received an injury, the result of which was the loss of the shoulder ball from the left arm, and he was accordingly rejected when he appeared before the examining board for military service. He is a stanch republican, and acted as chairman of the Republican County Central Committee of Sheridan County in 1914. Mr. Walton, who is unmarried, is one of the most popular and widely known citizens of Eastern Montana. Fraternally he is affiliated with Kotana Lodge No. 79, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, at Mondak, and served as master of the lodge in 1919.

John W. Acher. Identified for many years with the business life of Blaine County, John W. Acher is now serving it as a member of its Board of Commissioners. He arrived in Montana in 1893, coming from Ripley County, Indiana, where he was born August 31, 1868. He spent the early years of his life in the vicinity of the Town of Napoleon in that county, was a farmer's son, and received a country school education. He continued as a factor at the parental home while he remained in Indiana, and from there he came into the Northwest and joined a sister here. His first location was in the Milk River Valley at Chinook.

Mr. Acher earned his first money in Montana as a ranch hand for T. C. Burns, and after working for wages two or three years he took up a homestead on the river near Zurich, his claim shanty having been a log building of a single room. For a time he lived a bachelor's life, and then brought a bride to the little cabin home. After breaking ground Mr. Acher raised grain as well as hay, and there also he embarked in the cattle business. Later he purchased an adjoining tract, joining the Village of Zurich, but later changed his residence to the site across from the depot at Zurich, and is farming under the Matheson Ditch Company, a private enterprise which depends upon the north fork of Milk River for its water supply and which has not proven efficient as an irrigation proposition. However, an irrigation ditch is now being projected which will include the entire valley region and utilize the water from the St. Mary's River. Mr. Acher has developed a ranch of 1,100 acres, about 400 acres of which is under cultivation and the remainder is meadow and pasture land.

The little log cabin home marking the pioneer efforts of its owner still stands, but its usefulness as a home was replaced by the present eight-room dwelling. The barn on the farm is 30 by 50 feet, with mow room for forty tons of hay. His cattle are of the Hereford strain, and are being produced for beef purposes, and for twenty years shipments of his own raising have gone to market in Chicago, a five days' journey by freight from where the stock was produced.

Mr. Acher assisted in the organization of the Farmers National Bank in Chinook, and is a member of its board of directors. He was also one of the organizers and is the president and a director of the First State Bank of Zurich. During former years he served his school district as a trustee, was elected a county commissioner in 1914 as the successor of M. E. Kennedy, and his colleagues on the board have been Tom Dowen, Charley Ross, John Skiffington, James Clarridge, Fred Prosser and F. B. Polley. During the past five years Mr. Acher has served as chairman of the board. Among the important matters which have come before the board have been the furnishing of seed grain to farmers during two seasons, the bonding of the county for $100,000 for the Roosevelt Highway, and the erection of the Carnegie Library Building under the direction of the Carnegie corporation and setting aside the maintenance fund for the institution.

Mr. Acher cast his first ballot as a democrat, supporting Grover Cleveland in 1892, and he has ever since supported the principles of that political party, and in the days before the primary attended its county conventions. He served on committees on bond drives in his locality during the World war, and Mrs. Acher performed her part in the Red Cross work of Zurich. The Union Church of the locality was encouraged by the Acher family, who have always lent their assistance to movements for a community benefit.

John W. Acher is a son of John Acher, who was born in Germany and came during young manhood to the United States. While in Minnesota he enlisted with the Union army and served four years in the Civil war, a private in Capt. Joseph M. Barr's Company C, Second Minnesota Volunteers, and he passed through the war without wounds. Immediately after the close of that struggle he settled in Ripley County, Indiana, and continued as a farmer near Napoleon until his death in 1881, when fifty-seven years of age.

John Acher married Magdalena Flick, a daughter of a Swiss settler of Ripley County. Mrs. Acher still survives and has reached the age of eighty-seven years. The following children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Acher: Mary, the wife of Rudolph Hertenstein, of Napoleon, Indiana; Louise, wife of William Hulbush, of Chinook, Montana; Annie, wife of William Wiebkin, of Ripley County, Indiana; John W., of Zurich, Montana; Charles, whose home is in Chinook; Rudolph, of Terre Haute, Indiana; Lena, the wife of James Hazelrig, of Napoleon, Indiana; and Albert, of Fort Dodge, Iowa.

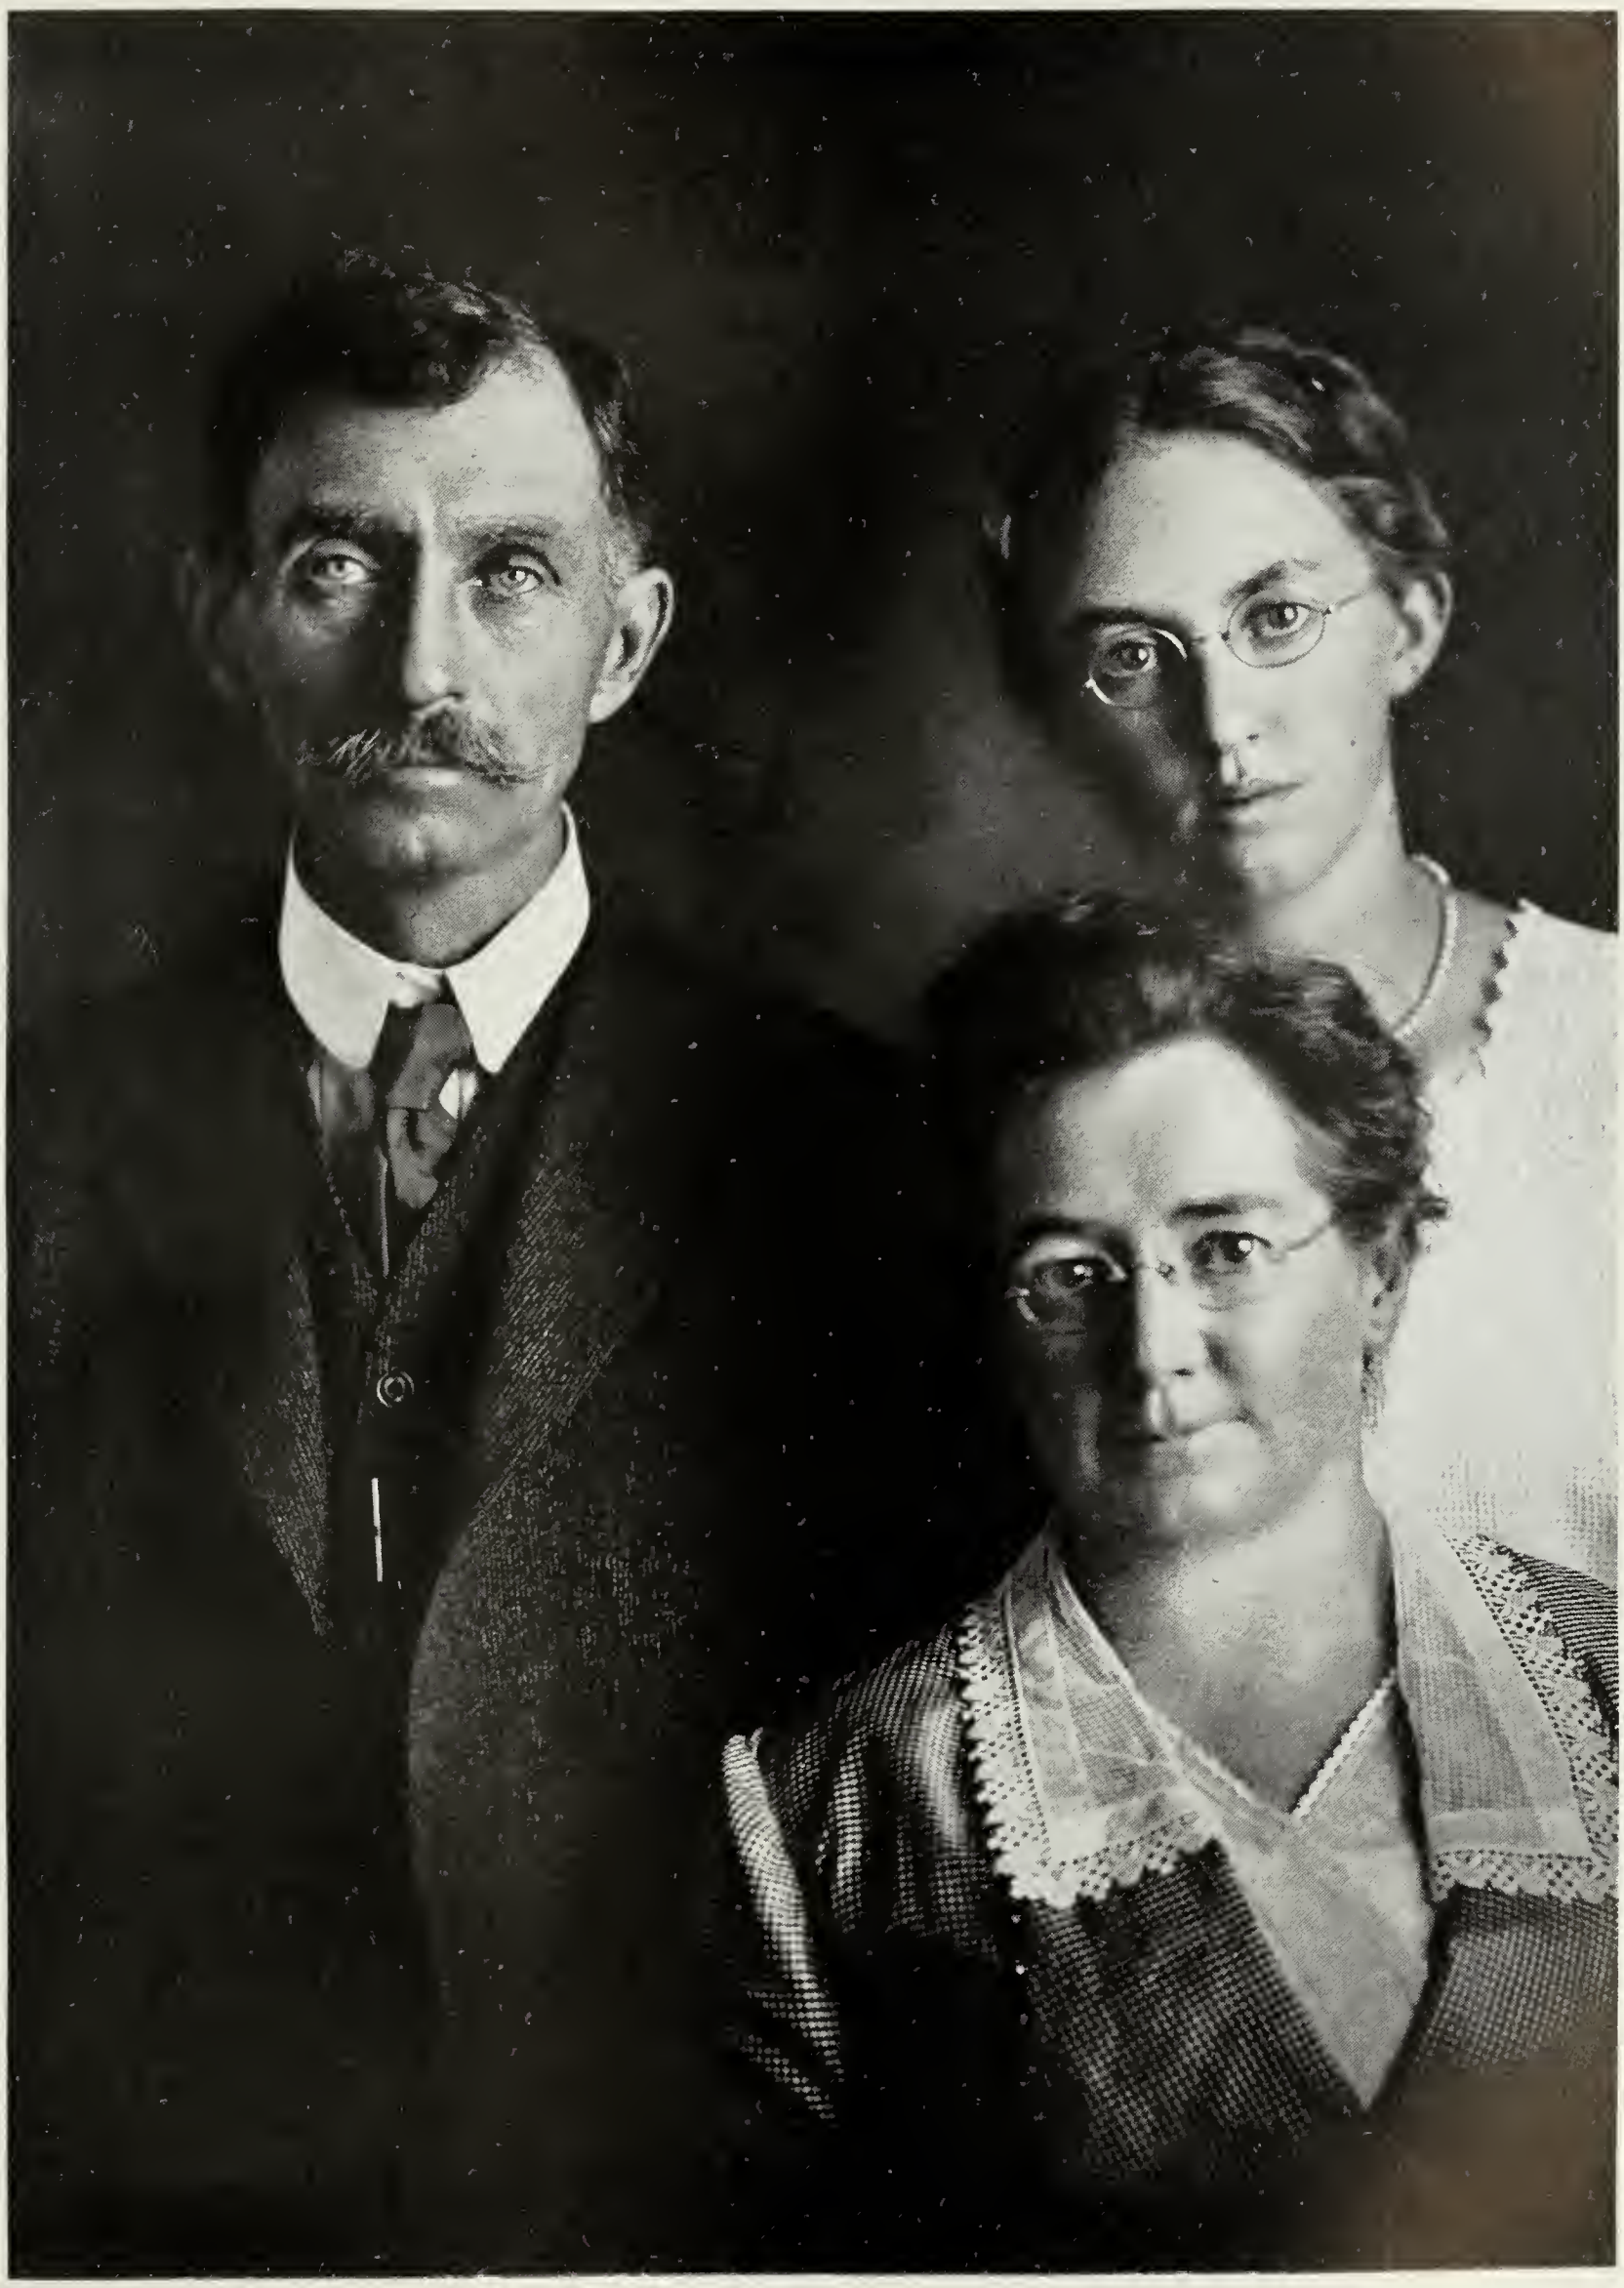
John W. Acher was married at Chinook September 2, 1901, to Miss Marie Barnes, who came into Montana in 1900 from Chicago. She was born in Pennsylvania May 4, 1866, a daughter of Merrit P. and Harriet (Long) Barnes, who moved to Scott County, Iowa, from Pennsylvania when their daughter Marie was but six months old, and she grew to mature years and received her education in that state. She was the first born of her parents' four children: May, the wife of Joseph Hause, of New Foundland, Pennsylvania; Anna, who married Harry Stewart, of Princeton, Iowa; and Blanche, the wife of Robert Crawford, of LeClaire, Iowa.

One child, a son, Arthur, has been born to Mr. and Mrs. John W. Acher.

E. L. KELLEY. To write the personal record of men who have raised themselves from humble circumstances to a position of respectability and affluence in a community is no ordinary pleasure. Self-made men, men who have achieved success by reason of their personal qualities and left the impress of their individuality upon the business and growth of their place of residence and affect for good such institutions as are embraced within the sphere of their usefulness, unwittingly perhaps, build monuments more enduring than marble, obelisk or granite shaft. Of such we have the unquestioned right to say belongs the gentleman whose name appears above, for among the farmers or ranchmen of the Flathead country none has excelled Mr. Kelley in progressive spirit or in a disposition to follow the most advanced methods in his operations. Consequently he is generally recognized as one of the foremost agriculturists of Western Montana and enjoys the respect and esteem of all who know him.

E. L. Kelley was born in Wyoming County, Pennsylvania, and is a son of Levi and Rhoda J. (Vose) Kelley. He was reared and educated in his native county and lived there until coming to Montana in 1885, locating in Butte, and in 1887 he came to the Flathead Valley and engaged in farming. That he has been successful through the subsequent years is but to reiterate a fact generally recognized by all who know him, and the "Hill View Stock Ranch," as his farm home is known, is today one of the show places of the Flathead country. The ranch comprises 160 acres of as fine land as can be found in the valley and is devoted principally to the breeding and raising of thoroughbred Jersey cattle, of which he has at the present time about fifty head. In order to properly care for his stock Mr. Kelley has erected what is undoubtedly the finest and best equipped barn in the Flathead country. It is a round barn, sixty-two feet in diameter, containing plenty of space for forty cows. It has concrete floors and mangers, with steel stanchions. The silo, which is fourteen feet in diameter, is fifty-two feet high to the center of the dome. There is also an annex, 36 by 40 feet in size, which will accommodate ten head of horses and twenty head of young stock. The water supply for the stock is drawn from a deep bed-rock well near the barn, which is piped to a cistern or tank, thirty feet above the barn, giving a splendid fall and good force for cleaning purposes. The sewer from the milk room extends clear through the barn, so that every foot of the barn floor can be flushed out when desired. The King ventilating system is used, which insures a plentiful supply of fresh, pure air at all times. Practically everything that can possibly be done with electricity is so handled, even to the milking of the cows and the separating of the milk. Everything is absolutely sanitary in and about the barn, and in the milk room there is an abundance of hot water, also heated by electricity. In the hay loft of the round barn there is storage room for 160 tons of hay, and a circular track is attached to the roof, which enables the workmen to deliver the hay to any part of the loft with a minimum of effort and time.

Mr. Kelley has also erected a fine modern residence, in which also electricity plays a prominent part in reducing the household work to the minimum. The entire house is electrically lighted, has hot and cold water, bath rooms, electric washer and ironer, and in other ways everything is provided to make the home as comfortable and convenient as it is possible to make it.



E. L. Kelley and Family

Politically Mr. Kelley assumes a broad-minded attitude and reserves the right to vote for the men and measures which meet with his approval, regardless of party lines. Fraternally he is a member of the Knights of Pythias. Mrs. Kelley and her daughter are active members of the Presbyterian Church. Mrs. Kelley is also a member of the Daughters of the Revolution, to which she is eligible through the fact that her great-great-great-grandfather, Mathias Koenig, was an officer in the patriot army during the War of the Revolution.

Mr. Kelley was married to Mary King, who was born in Armstrong County, Pennsylvania, the daughter of Luther and Mollie (Irwin) King. Mr. and Mrs. Kelley have one daughter, Doris, who is a student of the Kalispell High School. Mrs. Kelley has been an able helpmate to her husband and she has contributed in a very material way to the splendid success which has crowned his efforts. Mr. Kelley has ever been loyal to his convictions of right and has discharged his duties as a neighbor and a citizen with the object in view of making his friends happier and the community better. Blessed with a sufficiency of material goods, all of which has been acquired by his own efforts, he has not been selfish; on the contrary, his benefactions have been many, for it is not his custom to withhold his support from worthy movements or causes, consequently he is eminently deserving of the esteem in which he is held.

Clarence J. Brockway, United States commissioner and a real estate dealer at Malta, has been a resident of Montana for twenty years. In that time he has experienced many of the phases of pioneering, including the entry and development of a homestead, and his energies have brought him a deserved prosperity and a position of much influence in his section.

Mr. Brockway was born at Sullivan, Illinois, November 25, 1874. His grandfather, Daniel Brockway, was a native of New York State and an early settler in Southern Michigan, in Branch County, between Coldwater and Quincy. He spent the rest of his life in that region as a farmer. One of his eleven children was Benjamin W. Brockway, who was born in Coldwater, Michigan, in 1849. He acquired a fair education, was a teacher for several terms in young manhood, and was the only son of his parents. From Michigan he moved to Illinois, later to Iowa, and in 1899 came out to Montana and for three years was manager of the business of R. M. Trafton. He then entered the real estate business and in 1903 was appointed United States commissioner. He performed the duties of that office and was associated with his son in cattle and horse ranching and also acquired and developed some of the public domain, including 160 acres at Dodson and another 160 acres at Bowdoin. He also bought farm lands near Malta, and a part of his land is now in the townsite of Malta. He was a man of great energy and public enterprise, filled out the unexpired term of Mayor Casselberg of Malta, and was also prominent in the encouragement of the Milk River irrigation project and for a number of years served as secretary of the Lower Milk River Water Users Association. A stanch democrat, he was a personal friend and earnest supporter of Tom Stout in the latter's aspirations. B. W. Brockway died in the spring of 1916. He married Lellian Nichols, who is still living at Malta. Her mother was Esther Jane Conklin. B. W. Brockway and wife had three children: Maud, wife of Hugo Stolley, of Milwaukee, Wisconsin; Clarence J.; and Ethel, who married Elijah Smith and died at Malta.

Clarence J. Brockway was seven years of age when his parents moved from Illinois to Winterset, Iowa, where he grew up and acquired a public school education through the eighth grade. For a time he worked as a farm hand, spent one year with the commission firm of Groves and Company in the Chicago stockyards, and for one year also lived in Indian Territory, for a time having a contract for loading lumber at Butler and later working in a planing mill at Stanley in the Choctaw Nation. Returning to Iowa, he resumed farming with his father, and that was his business until he came out to Montana in 1900; the year following his father's advent to the state. In what is now Phillips County, but then Chouteau County he had his first experience as a Montanan, and worked at monthly wages around Dodson until the fall of that year, when he entered his claim nearby. He had only what capital he could earn and depended upon his exertions on the outside to support him while securing title. His chief improvement on the claim was a frame house 14 by 22 feet, and he called this home for thirteen years, living in it alone for several years and taking his bride there. As a homesteader his chief occupation was running cattle and raising hay. On leaving the farm Mr. Brockway moved to Malta and engaged in the land business with his father. Upon the death of his father he succeeded him as United States commissioner, and has always continued the real estate and insurance business on an increased scale.

The only office which he has held is the present one of United States commissioner. He cast his first vote for Mr. Bryan in 1896, and supported the Nebraskan in all his presidential aspirations, and has been identified with the democratic party through all these years.

At Chinook, Montana, September 12, 1906, Mr. Brockway married Miss Dora Stith, who was born in Minnesota June 13, 1888, second of the nine children of John and Cynthia Stith. She came to Montana with her parents in 1905, when the family settled at Dodson, but her father and mother are now living at Spirit Lake, Idaho. Mr. and Mrs. Brockway have two children, Edna May and Benjamin W.

J. Andrew Tweedie. While he is postmaster of Malta, the community in which he has spent nearly all his life, J. Andrew Tweedie comes of a distinguished family of Scotch horse breeders, and the breeding of fine livestock is a family tradition from which he has not altogether departed.

The Tweedies were a prominent family of Tweedmont-Dunbar, Scotland. In that locality James Tweedie was proprietor of a farm that became famous as one of the chief centers for breeding and raising the noted Clydesdale stock in Scotland. Among his numerous children was James Tweedie, Jr., who was born at Tweedmont-Dunbar in 1850. He was given a liberal education, learned the horse business under his father, and when he came to the United States brought with him his share of the family estate in a string of Clydesdale horses. Seeking a location for the establishment of a horse ranch, he was first located in Butler County, Kansas, and in a few years the Clydesdales from the Tweedie farm became widely sought and were an important element in the raising of standards of good horses in Kansas. He continued the business actively until the adverse years following the panic of 1893, and then abandoned Kansas and after prospecting over Montana chose the state as his permanent home. He moved his family to Montana in 1896, and engaged in the sheep business at Malta for a number of years. He was also proprietor of the Cowan Hotel, and his last work was in the public office of assessor of Valley County. He then retired, and his death occurred suddenly while visiting in Saco, Montana, May 18, 1908. James Tweedie married Elizabeth Davidson, a native of Scotland. She died in Malta in 1906, at the age of fifty-six. They were the parents of three children: Annie, wife of C. B. Conant, of Montana; Ellen, Mrs. B. E. Schuster, of Malta; and J. Andrew.

J. Andrew Tweedie was born near Douglas, Kansas, January 8, 1893, and was three years of age when brought to Montana. He attended the Malta schools, finished his high school work at Helena, and spent two years in the Montana Wesleyan University at the capital city. Aside from the work he did at home his first important experience was with an engineering party in the reclamation service, and he began as chain man and later was promoted to transit man. He then engaged in ranching near Malta, and combined farming with the handling and breeding of Percheron-Shire horses. Mr. Tweedie left his ranch to enter the army, enlisting September 16, 1918. For one month he was in the Mechanical Training School at Boulder, Colorado, and then entered the officers training school at Camp McArthur, Waco, Texas. He was discharged there and his training terminated on account of the signing of the armistice. On leaving the army he sought a new location, spent the winter in Helena while the Legislature was in service, and while there was appointed acting postmaster of Malta and began his duties April 29, 1919, as the successor of Natallie Patton. Since that he has been commissioned permanent postmaster.

While his daily routine is in the post office at Malta, Mr. Tweedie is still interested as a practical farmer, and has entered a rather new field in this section of Montana, raising and breeding mules instead of horses. He is unmarried, is a member of Post No. 57 of the American Legion, and is affiliated both with the Odd Fellows and the Rebekahs.

GEORGE W. CLAY, M. D. All the honors due a veteran physician and a pioneer member of the medical profession in Phillips County belong to Dr. George W. Clay of Malta. He has been there twenty-one years, and while it was not easy for a young man just out of college from the East to adjust himself to the rough environment of a ranching district, he entered heartily into the affairs of the community, made himself useful not only as a professional man but as a citizen, and no small degree of the esteem in which he is held is due to this readiness and active participation in every phase of community life.

Doctor Clay was born at Wallacetown, Ontario, Canada, February 18, 1872. His grandfather, Henry Clay, was a United Empire Loyalist and was a pioneer at Wallacetown, where he spent his active life as a farmer. He had four sons and two daughters: Elijah, Henry, David, John, Mrs. Jane Wallace and Mary Ann Clay. Of these John Clay, a native of Ontario, spent all his life as a farmer in his native province and died in July, 1912, at the age of sixty-eight. He married Martha Henderson, a native of Wallacetown, who is still living in that community. They had three children: Bert, owner of a fleet of fishing boats in Canada; Dr. George W., of Malta; and Nellie, wife of Russell Thompson, of Wallacetown.

George W. Clay grew up in the town of his birth, finished high school there, graduated from St. Thomas Collegiate Institute, and, without resources to continue his higher education, he turned to teaching and, for six years was connected with the country school system of his native locality. Largely with the means thus earned he entered Western University, London, Ontario, and completed his medical studies in 1899.

Looking for a field in which to apply the knowledge represented in his diploma of graduation, he turned to the United States, and among his early acquaintances came to know Dan McKenzie, one of the early commercial men traveling out of St. Paul over Montana for the firm of Foot, Schultze and Company. Through Mr. McKenzie he entered correspondence with R. W. Garland of Malta, who encouraged him to come "at once, for we need a doctor here the worst way." At Glasgow, Montana, he received a letter of introduction from Doctor Hoyt to Harry Cosner of Malta, and after talking with the latter gentleman he decided to locate, and spent the night at the Malta Hotel, owned and run by Dan Kenyon, now mayor of Chinook.

At that date Harry Cosner's house and another log shack were the only buildings marking the townsite of Malta south of the railway. The hotel in which he spent the first night was a frame building, whose other guests were sheep herders and "rough-necks," and the young doctor from the East was by no means comfortable and at social ease in such a company then. He opened his office in the first drug store of the new town, becoming a partner in that enterprise with R. W. Garland and half owner of the stock. He had been in the town hardly more than an hour when his first patient came to him, and his practice for several years originated among the ranchmen, and some of them lived as for as 130 miles away. At that time this entire region was in Valley County, and for many years he was the only doctor at Malta. In 1915 his first colleague came to town, Doctor Blankenhom, and Doctor Clay took him into partnership. Doctor Blankenhom entered the World war, was gassed, and being unable to contend with the rigorous climate of Northern Montana moved to Butte. Since then Dr. J. H. Seiffert has been associated in practice with Doctor Clay.

He has had a varied routine of professional duty, the climax of all being the influenza epidemic of 1918. More than 60 per cent of the population of the county was attacked by that dread malady, and it resulted in the largest death rate ever known in this part of the country.

Doctor Clay has deservedly prospered, has become an extensive land owner, and has also interested himself in business affairs at Malta, chiefly banking. He is vice president of the First State Bank of Malta, is vice president of the Bowdoin State Bank and of the Dodson State Bank. During the World war he was a member of the local exemption board, and holds a medal for work with the Volunteer Medical Reserve Corps of the Government. He offered his personal services to the army, but they were declined and he performed his war work at home. He is examiner for Phillips County for the United States Public Health Service, and has examined ex-service men for the regulation of the payments or compensation due them.

As soon as possible Doctor Clay acquired American citizenship, and cast his first presidential vote for Colonel Roosevelt. The first official responsibility he held was as treasurer of Malta, and for a number of years he was health officer and county physician. In 1912 he was elected to represent Valley County in the Legislature, serving in the House of the Thirteenth General Assembly under Speaker McDonald, a House which contained only eighteen republicans. In 1914 he was nominated for the Senate and elected. He had been in the Senate two years when Phillips County was created, and in 1916 he was elected as the first senator from the new county. Previously, while a member of the House, he voted for T. J. Walsh for United States senator, Mr. Walsh having carried the popular vote of the state and being therefore entitled to the support of the Legislature by agreement of the parties before the primaries. He therefore participated officially in the last election of a United States senator in Montana by the old legislative method. As a member of the republican Senate of 1917 Mr. Clay was chairman of the committee of elections and privileges, chairman of the committee on public health, and member of the insurance, education and ways and means committees. Among the bills in which he was interested and which became laws by his introduction and support was the Child Welfare Bill, providing for the appointment of public health nurses and the inspection of school children. As a result of this advanced piece of legislation a nurse is now appointed in every county in the state. Doctor Clay was a member of the joint investigating committee for the investigation of the conduct of the Industrial School at Niles City, which reported the charges against the superintendent as unfounded and unwarranted and exonerating the head of the school. He was also a member of the two special sessions of the Legislature, one to meet emergencies created by the war and the other providing relief for farmers and taking action looking to the reduction of the high cost of living and against profiteering.

Doctor Clay has long been active in Masonry, having taken his first degrees at Malta. He is a past master of Malta Lodge No. 57, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, a member of Valley Chapter No. 13, Royal Arch Masons, at Glasgow, Glasgow Commandery of the Knights Templar and is a member of the Scottish Rite Consistory and the Shrine at Helena. He is also a member of the Eastern Star, is a past noble grand of Malta Lodge No. 72 of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and a member of the Woodmen of the World and the Royal Neighbors.

At Fulda, Minnesota, January 22, 1902, Doctor Clay married Miss Mae Price, who was born in Fulda May 5, 1882, daughter of John R. Price. She completed her education at Mankato, Minnesota, and as a teacher came to Malta in August, 1899, and carried some of the chief burdens of educating the children of the community until her marriage. Mrs. Clay died in 1908, leaving no children.

THOMAS S. JOHNSON. While one of the very prominent men of the county, invested with the duties and responsibilities of sheriff, Thomas S. Johnson made his mark in the county not through politics, but as a pioneer settler and widely known as a successful rancher and farmer, and was never a candidate for any office until he was called to the shrievalty.

Mr. Johnson, who has made his career in Northern Montana and has been a resident about Malta for over twenty-one years, was born in Blanco County, Texas, September 16, 1872. His grandfather was a physician in Mississippi and Texas, spending his last years in Eastern Texas. His older sons, John, Jesse and Nathan, all wore the uniforms of Confederate soldiers, and Nathan was killed while in the war. The youngest son was James Johnson, who was born in Mississippi while his parents were migrating to Texas. He acquired a very limited education, since he grew up in a pioneer district, and during a portion of the Civil war was engaged in supplying beef cattle to the Confederate army. He became a stock farmer and rancher in Blanco County, and the county seat, Johnson City, was named in his honor as one of the first settlers after the Civil war. In DeWitt County, Texas, James Johnson married Julia Moore, a native of that county. They reared the following children: Thomas S., the subject of this article; Julia, wife of N. T. Stubbs, of Johnson City, Texas; Pearl, wife of Harvey Roper, of Robbstown, Texas; Nathaniel, a ranchman, in Mason County, Texas; Myrtle, wife of Ralph Chumm, of Austin, Texas; Melissa, wife of Oscar Fossett, of Johnson City, Texas; and Olla, Mrs. Jay Chapman, of Johnson City.

Thomas S. Johnson spent his boyhood and youth in a section of Texas where stock raising was almost the only occupation. He attended a district school near Johnson City, but was only thirteen years of age when his father died. His mother died ten years later. Thomas being the oldest of seven children had the responsibility of looking after the younger people of the household, and at the age of fifteen he began earning money away from home as a range hand, and he continued working until he saw his brothers and sisters in places of safety and favorably situated, and was then free to look after his own welfare. Some of his acquaintances in Texas had already gone to Montana, and he determined that he could best work out his destiny in this section of the far Northwest. Practically without capital, unmarried, and with his chief experience as a cow man and farmer, he started for Montana, traveling over the Missouri, Kansas and Texas Railway from Texas to Kansas City, thence by the Burlington route to Edgemont, South Dakota, and then proceeding along the partially completed tracks toward Deadwood and Bellefourche. Reaching the end of the railway he crossed 200 miles of country to Glendive by stage, whence the trains of the Northern Pacific carried him through Billings to Helena, Great Falls and finally to Malta, where he arrived in 1899.

Immediately he went on the range working for the "Circle C" outfit, and soon left that to become an employe of Ben D. Phillips, one of the best known of the pioneers of the region. With him he spent several months and then engaged in ranching on his own account. Conditions were adverse, and his capital was soon dissipated. For almost two years he was then in the employ of the Bloom Cattle Company's "Circle Diamond" outfit, after which he established himself at ranching again on his own account just below Malta on Milk River. In that locality he is ranching today. His pioneer brand was WY, but the more popular one was BH, under which his cattle still run, though his horses bear the old WY mark. In the production of beef he has emphasized so far as possible the Shorthorn and Hereford strains, and has been a dealer as well as a raiser of cattle. Almost from the beginning he has been a shipper to the St. Paul and Chicago markets. Through years of earnest effort Mr. Johnson has made a notable success. He took his homestead in the Milk River Valley, and it is now part of his Valley ranch of 622 acres. He also owns a section on the south bench near Malta, this being grazing land.

While busy with his ranching Mr. Johnson has not neglected an active interest in community affairs, though he steered clear of politics except as a voter until 1918, when he was elected sheriff as successor to Sheriff Crabb. During his term there has been only the routine of administrative burdens, though he was called upon to arrest one of the citizens of the county for murder. He grew up in the home of democratic parents and acquired his political attitude in a state intensely democratic. His father was a Mason, and Sheriff Johnson joined that order at Malta, and is a past master of the Lodge and a member of the Scottish Rite Consistory and also Algeria Temple of the Mystic Shrine at Helena.

At Malta July 3, 1906, Mr. Johnson married Mrs. Josephine C. (Barge) Joiner, a native of Pennsylvania. She was visiting a sister in Montana when she met Mr. Johnson. She also took up a homestead near her husband, proved it up and still owns it, it being included in their Valley ranch. While Mr. and Mrs. Johnson have no children of their own a young man, Charles Williams, is growing up in their home and is being educated.

AUGUST AND SAMUEL FULLER. The gentlemen whose names appear at the head of this paragraph are the owners of extensive farming interests in Flathead County. Their valuable property has been acquired through their own efforts, their persistency of purpose and their determination, and the prosperity which is the legitimate reward of all earnest efforts is today theirs. They are what they are from natural endowment and self-culture, having attained their present position through the impelling force of their own genius. They possess not only those powers which render men efficient in the material affairs of life, but also the gentler traits that mark genial and refined social intercourse. In their daily affairs they manifest a generous regard for their fellows, and as large-hearted, whole-souled gentlemen, actuated by principles of honesty, no men in the county merit and command more fully the good will of the people.

August and Samuel Fuller are natives of the State of Indiana and the sons of Thomas and Eliza (Wolf) Fuller. By the death of their parents they were left orphans at an early age, so that their youthful years were not characterized by the loving home care and comforts which should be the heritage of every child. However, they were made of sterling stuff and determined to "make good" in some way, somewhere. Hearing of the wonderful openings in Montana for settlers they determined to cast their lot with the new country and in 1889 they came to Missoula, Montana, and from there a little later they came to Flathead County, locating a good tract of land on the border of Foy's Lake, on which they filed a homestead claim. The country about them was then practically unoccupied, except by Indians, miners and hunters, so it took some nerve and courage for the two boys to enter alone on the task of creating a farm out of the raw land as they found it. Their first task was, as it was with every pioneer, the erection of a log cabin, and then followed the breaking of the soil and the other labor incident to the establishment of a new home. They were filled with all the enthusiasm of youth, and they allowed nothing to detract their attention, so that it was not long until they found themselves on the road to success. During the subsequent years they have maintained the even tenor of their way, and because of their strict attention to their interests and their exercise of good common sense they have not only had success, but have also gained the respect and confidence of all who have known of their struggles and their triumphs. Their first cabin home was long ago replaced by a comfortable and attractive residence, which, with its attractive natural surroundings, makes as cozy a home as can be found in the vicinity.

August Fuller was married to Mrs. Mary A. Barry, the widow of Samuel M. Barry. She was born in Michigan, the daughter of Francis and Matilda (Cooper) Burnham. Francis Burnham was a veteran of the Civil war, having served three years and nine months, and a son, William Burnham, served in the Spanish-American war.

Politically the Fuller brothers give their support to the republican party. August Fuller took an active part in the organization of the first school of Foy's Lake, and he gave efficient service as a member of the school board for two years. In every phase of life's activities the brothers have been true to every trust and are eminently entitled to representation among the leading men of their section of the state.

JOHN DAHLGREN had a long and thorough training in commercial affairs in Minnesota before he came to Montana, and in this state has been chiefly prominent as a banker. He was organizer and from the beginning has been manager of what is now the American Bank and Trust Company of Missoula, and is president of three other banks in the state. The American Bank and Trust Company of Missoula is one of the best fortified financial institutions in the state. In the fall of 1919 its resources aggregated approximately $1,857,000. It has capital stock of $100,000, surplus and profits of nearly $22,000, and deposits aggregating over $1,600,000. The officers are A. D. Stephens, president; John Dahlgren, vice president and manager; G. F. Peterson, vice president; and F. J. White, cashier.

John Dahlgren was born at Vermland, Sweden, February 9, 1875. His father, O. H. Dahlgren, was born in the same locality in 1841, and for many years lived in Sweden as a land owner and timber merchant. In 1889 he came to the United States, was a farmer at Warren, Minnesota, and since 1909 has been retired at Turlock, California. He is a republican and a member of the Congregational Church, and as a young man in Sweden served in the regular national army. His wife, Martha Johnson, died in Sweden in 1883, the mother of the following children: Halver, who is assistant cashier of the Farmers and Merchants State Bank at Dixon, Montana; Lena, wife of John Rosenberg, a farmer at Vincent Creek, Washington, Minnesota; Olaf, a farmer at Turlock, California; John; and Walfred, a farmer at Turlock, California.

John Dahlgren acquired his early education in the public schools of his native country. He was fourteen years of age when he came to this country with his father in 1889, and later attended the business college in Minneapolis. For a year he worked on his father's farm, and then went into the service of the leading store at Argyle, Minnesota, and learned every detail of the business through an experience of fifteen years as salesman and collector. He not only proved his diligence and efficiency but also achieved the respect and gained the confidence of his business associates, and he came to Montana well fortified with commercial credit.

In the fall of 1909 Mr. Dahlgren organized the Scandinavian-American State Bank of Missoula, and when the bank was opened for business in January, 1910, he was cashier, and has been the active executive in control of the bank's affairs from the beginning. In 1917 the bank was reorganized as the American Bank and Trust Company, since which date Mr. Dahlgren has been vice president and manager. At that time the capital was increased from $50,000 to $100,000. The modern bank home is located at the corner of North Higgins Avenue and Cedar Street.

Mr. Dahlgren is also president of the First

Mary A Fuller

Samuel Fuller August Fuller

National Bank of Shilo, the First National Bank of Ronan, and the Farmers and Merchants State Bank of Dixon, Montana. He is vice Swedish Consul for the State of Montana and had many responsibilities and duties in that position during the World war. He was also a member of the Missoula County Committee for the sale of Liberty Bonds, and had the satisfaction of seeing the county surpass its quota at every campaign.

Mr. Dahlgren is a republican and is affiliated with Covenant Lodge No. 6, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, Hell Gate Lodge No. 383, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, and Laurel Lodge No. 11, Knights of Pythias. He is owner of a modern home at 528 Daily Avenue. In June, 1912, at Spring Grove, Minnesota, Mr. Dahlgren married Miss Geneva Newhouse, daughter of Peter and Carrie Newhouse, residents of Spring Grove, where her father is a wholesale lumber dealer. Mrs. Dahlgren is a graduate of Stout's Institute. To their marriage were born two children: John O., September 7, 1913; and Robert, October 25, 1914.

Halver Dahlgren, assistant cashier of the Farmers and Merchants State Bank of Dixon, is a brother of John Dahlgren of Missoula, who is a prominent banker of the state and is president of the bank at Dixon. The facts in the career of John Dahlgren are noted on the preceding page of this publication.

Halver Dahlgren was born at Vermland, Sweden, in May, 1866, and grew up in his native country, acquiring a common school education. For two years he served in the regular Swedish army. He worked on his father's farm, and left home at the age of seventeen. He came to the United States in 1892, first locating in Warren, Minnesota, where he spent two summers on a farm and in winters he served an apprenticeship and worked at the photography trade. For about a year he was in a hardware store at Warren and spent nine years with a general mercantile firm at Oregon, Minnesota. He next bought out a general store at Northland in Polk County, Minnesota, and during the next two years was also postmaster of the town. After selling out and visiting in California and Washington, Mr. Dahlgren came to Montana in 1916, and has since been assistant cashier of the Farmers and Merchants State Bank of Dixon.

This bank was established in 1911, and has capital of $20,000, surplus and profits of $3,500, and deposits of approximately $110,000. Mr. Dahlgren took up a homestead of 160 acres near Dixon, proved up and resides on his ranch, located 1½ miles west of Dixon. He has a modern residence and all the equipment of farm outbuildings. Mr. Dahlgren is a member of the Lutheran Church. He is unmarried.

John K. Bell. The name of John K. Bell has been associated with the history of Saco since 1891, and for some years he has been one of the merchants of the place. He is a native of the Emerald Isle, having been born in County Donegal, near Pettigo, Ireland, June 6, 1867, a son of John and Mary (Kennedy) Bell. They became the parents of thirteen children, of whom ten grew to reach mature years, and those who came to the United States in addition to John K., who was the youngest of the whole family, were as follows: Bella, who is the wife of David Kennedy, of Saco; Annie E., who died at Bellingham, Washington, as Mrs. David Kennedy; David who is now a resident of Windsor, Ontario, Canada; Thomas, who is also a resident of Windsor; James, who died at Tilbury, Ontario, Canada; and Jane, who married John Moore, died at Detroit, Michigan. William and Mary are still living in County Donegal, the latter being the wife of John Irwine.

John K. Bell was a farmer's son. He left school at an early age, and for five years was employed as a merchant's clerk in his native land. He came to the United States when he was eighteen years old, sailing from Londonderry aboard the Peruvian of the Allen line, bound for Quebec. The steamer was nine days crossing the Atlantic, and reached the harbor without unusual incident. Mr. Bell took the train at Quebec and landed at Tilbury, Ontario, without delay, and while visiting relatives gained his first impressions of America. After seven months he crossed over into the United States, and came by train from Detroit, Michigan, to Devil's Lake, North Dakota, and then by stage to Bottineau, North Dakota, as this was prior to the building of the Great Northern Railroad.

Starting out as a hand on a cattle ranch near Bottineau at $16 per month, he worked for wages for two years, saved his money, investing it in cattle and ran them for a year. He then placed them out on shares and came to Great Falls, Montana, and worked as cook in the B. and W. boarding house connected with the B. and W. smelter. At the close of the two years he spent there he was receiving $125 per month.

His cattle had been brought from North Dakota to the Saco country, and he ranched here for three years, and then, closing out his cattle, bought sheep and ran them until 1916, a period of twenty-three years, during which time he found the industry a profitable one, although of course there were years of depression which threatened disaster. When he disposed of his sheep Mr. Bell began merchandising, and handles hardware, implements and lumber, and is still interested in cattle and horses as a stockman. His homestead adjoining Saco has twenty of the original 160 acres platted and included in the Saco townsite as the Bell Addition to Saco. Mr. Bell has other interests, and was one of the organizers and first stockholders of the First National Bank of Saco, which he served as its first president, and he is now one of its directors.

John K. Bell was made a citizen in Montana, his final papers being given him at Glasgow, and he cast his first vote as a republican and has never changed his party. In 1896 he voted for William McKinley for the presidency, and that was his first presidential vote. Reared a Methodist, he connected himself with the church of that denomination at Saco, and is now one of its trustees.

On November 22, 1899, Mr. Bell was married at Saint Thomas, Ontario, Canada, to Miss Margaret Courtenay, a daughter of Samuel and Mary (Walker) Courtenay. Mrs. Bell was born at Belfast, Ireland, in 1877. She has two half-brothers, Thomas G., of Windsor, Ontario, Canada; and John Courtenay, of Bender, Saskatchewan, Canada. No children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Bell. When they located permanently at Saco Mr. Bell erected one of the best residences in the county, it being an eight-room bungalow with full basement, furnace and all modern conveniences, including hot and cold water, sewer and electric lights.

Since coming to this country Mr. Bell has made four trips to Ireland, one of them being taken as a passenger on the ill-fated Lusitania, that a few years later was sunk by a German submarine, an atrocity which formed the fundamental cause for this country entering the World war as active and victorious participants.

William G. Schneider was the first and is the present county clerk and recorder of Phillips County, and for twenty years his residence and activities have made him a widely known and popular citizen of this section of Montana.

Mr. Schneider was born at Theresa, Wisconsin, October 16, 1875, but from the age of four years lived in the State of Minnesota. His father, Fred Schneider, was born in the same Wisconsin town, learned the harness and saddlery trade, and spent all his active life in that occupation. He moved out to New Richland. Minnesota, in 1879, and for forty years was a factor in the business of that locality. In 1919 he returned to Wisconsin and is now a retired resident of Milwaukee. Fred Schneider married Kate Vogelsang, who was born at Brush Creek, now Arlington, Iowa. Of their two sons and six daughters William G. is the third in age.

William G. Schneider acquired a common school education in Minnesota and was a factor in the life of the home until he reached the age of twenty-five. On May 5, 1900, he arrived in what was then Valley County, and his first home was at Saco. His first Montana dollar was earned as a sheep herder on the ranch of W. H. Taylor. A few weeks later he joined F. W. Korman, purchased land near the village and engaged in cattle ranching. The partners ran stock under the brand YS for five years. Their stock was chiefly Minnesota "dogees," and that fact and the hard winters defeated their efforts as ranchmen and they finally had to give up the enterprise after losing all their capital and practically all their time. After the dissolution of the partnership Mr. Schneider entered the service of the C. W. Nelson Company, general merchants at Saco, and when that firm was incorporated as the Saco Mercantile Company Mr. Schneider became a stockholder and secretary and treasurer. He was an active factor in the business until 1909, when he became cashier of the bank of C. W. Nelson at Saco.

A popular banker, well known for his business abilities, Mr. Schneider was a logical candidate before the people for the office of clerk and recorder of Phillips County, and was elected in February, 1915, being re-elected in 1916 and again in 1918, and for the past five years has given his chief time and attention to the duties of this office. He grew up in a home divided as to its political convictions on the money question, his father being a gold democrat while the son favored free silver. The son was able to cast his first presidential vote in 1896, when the democrats split into two wings, his father supporting the gold standard ticket of Palmer and Buckner, while William G. Schneider voted for Mr. Bryan. He has been an active worker in the democratic party ever since. During the World war he was secretary of the Selective Service Board, and gave a great deal of his time to the arduous and complex duties of that work. He is a past grand of New Richland Lodge of Odd Fellows in Minnesota and is also a Master Mason.

At Saco, June 29, 1908, Mr. Schneider married Miss Margaret Shanks. She was born in Comber, Ontario, Canada, August 23, 1889, daughter of R. J. and Mary (Sellers) Shanks, now residents of Detroit, Michigan. Mrs. Schneider is the older of two children, her sister being Miss Frances Shanks. To Mr. and Mrs. Schneider was born one son, Richard George.

Albert J. Ingraham was one of the most widely known and honored pioneers of the Flathead country. His residence began there before there was a Town of Kalispell, and in thirty-five years he participated in many of the developments which have made that community famous among Montana districts.

He was born at Joliet, Illinois, April 10, 1860, a son of Nathan D. and Ruth (Gooding) Ingraham. Mr. Ingraham came to the Flathead country in 1884 and filed on a homestead nine miles northwest of the present site of Kalispell. He went to work and did his work well in proving up his claim and homestead. After coming to Montana he married Miss Sarah Catherine Ditty, a native of Missouri and a daughter of William H. and Nancy J. (Ridgway) Ditty. She had come to Flathead County with her father, her mother having died in Missouri. After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Ingraham located on the ranch and he became one of the successful stock raisers of that vicinity.

Their son Philip Albert was educated in the high school at Kalispell and married Florence V. Odjard, of Mankato, Minnesota, a daughter of Ole Odjard. Mrs. P. A. Ingraham was educated in the high school at Mankato, and she and her husband now reside at Minneapolis, where he is a salesman for the New Idea Spreader Company of Coldwater, Ohio.

At the time of the Spanish-American war Albert J. Ingraham was one of the first men from the Flathead country to volunteer his services to the Government. He joined Company H of the First Montana Regiment and was sent to the Philippines. He saw some of the bitter hardships of the service in those islands during the insurrection. One of the circumstances that helped make his army life in the Philippines more pleasant was the presence of his old neighbor and friend, Andrew W. Swaney. They were battle mates together in all their experiences on the island.

After his return from the Philippines, Mr. Ingraham was appointed by the governor of Montana a member of the State Board of Managers of the Soldiers Home at Columbia Falls. While in that capacity he made friends of all his associates and members of the Home. He rendered service in that capacity for nineteen years, until his death. He was also first deputy sheriff of Flathead County, under Billy O'Connell, and later was elected sheriff, filling the office four years. He was also a member of the Board of County Commissioners. It has been frequently remarked that no man in the Flathead Valley was more widely or favorably known than Al Ingraham, as he was familiarly called. He and his wife were active members of the Presbyterian Church at Kalispell, and fraternally he was affiliated with the Elks, with all four branches of Odd Fellowship and with the Modern Woodmen of America. His son is a member of the same fraternities. Father and son have given active support to the principles of the democratic party.

Mr. Ingraham died May 26, 1919, after a brief illness. Since his death Mrs. Ingraham has relieved herself of the responsibilities of the farm and ranch, and is now living in a pleasant home at 735 Second Avenue, West, in Kalispell.

Robert P. Minnick, M. D. Numbered among the sagacious and carefully trained members of the medical profession of Phillips County, Dr. Robert P. Minnick has played a constructive part in the history of this region since 1904, when he came to it direct from Virginia. He was born in Washington County, that state, April 11, 1879, a son of Andrew J. Minnick, and grandson of Leander Minnick, also a native of Washington County, Virginia, the birthplace of all three, Doctor Minnick, his father and grandfather, having been established near Abingdon by the great-grandfather, John Minnick. The Minnick family is Scotch and Irish, and at Abingdon, near to the Minnick plantation, located the Scotch-Irish settlers of the Colonial period.

Al Ingraham

Sarah E Ingraham

The educational training of Dr. Robert P. Minnick, commenced in the rural schools, was continued at King's College, Bristol, Tennessee, the Tennessee Medical College at Knoxville, Tennessee, and the Virginia Medical College at Richmond, Virginia, and he was graduated from the latter institution in April, 1904, with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. During the summer and early autumn of that year Doctor Minnick was engaged in practice at Stonega, Virginia, a mining community, and then, in November, 1904, he crossed the continent and settled permanently at Saco. At that time Saco was but a hamlet of a few buildings along the main street, and he was its first physician. During the period he has lived here he has not only seen great progress, but has assisted very materially to bring it about, both professionally and as a private citizen. Doctor Minnick has been county physician ever since the creation of Phillips County, and in conjunction with Doctor Clay conducted the examination of men for the draft during the late war until he entered the service himself.

In June, 1918, Doctor Minnick enlisted at Butte, Montana, for the medical service, was commissioned as a first lieutenant the following August, but was not sent to France on account of the signing of the Armistice. In 1914 Doctor Minnick was elected as the representative of old Valley County to the State Assembly on the democratic ticket, serving in the Fourteenth Session, a democratic house.

On June 16, 1910, Doctor Minnick was united in marriage at Dodson, Montana, to Miss Evelyn Perkins, born at Winterset, Iowa, in October, 1885. Mrs. Minnick completed her educational training in the schools of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and became a teacher, coming as such to Montana in 1906 and being connected first with the schools of Malta and later with those of Glasgow. Doctor and Mrs. Minnick have a son, Daniel C., who was born April 20, 1912.

Cecil E. Taylor is one of the most representative men of Phillips County and has been identified with the realty and oil and gas development of Saco and its vicinity to such an extent that his name is a well-known one all over this part of the state. He has lived in Montana since 1890, in which year he was brought to the state by his father, William H. Taylor, from Waseca, Minnesota.

Cecil E. Taylor was born at Fargo, North Dakota, on August 31, 1883, but he was reared to the age of seven years in Waseca, Minnesota. After arrival in Montana settlement was made at Hinsdale, where William H. Taylor operated extensively as a stock dealer. Cecil E. Taylor had to go ten miles each way in order to attend school during the early years of his residence in the state, but later, when the family moved to Saco, he was given the advantages of the school at this point. In order to give the children better educational advantages, in 1900 the family went to Missoula, Montana, and there Cecil E. Taylor took a commercial course in a business college, and then for two years was a student of the Montana State University.

Following his completion of the course at the university Mr. Taylor returned to Saco and went into the mercantile business, succeeding the C. W. Nelson Company and operating a general merchandise store for two years before he organized the Saco Mercantile Company, a corporation of which he was active manager until 1913. In that year he retired from that concern and took over the organization of the Saco Co-operative Association, and that same year he branched out into the realty business. He has specialized in promoting an interest in this locality and inducing immigration, being responsible for much of the settlement of the vicinity during the past few years. He was one of the organizers of the First National Bank of Saco, and was a director of it, and he also bought stock in the old creamery at Saco.

Mr. Taylor was reared under strictly republican principles, and so naturally cast his first presidential vote for Theodore Roosevelt, and when there was a split in the party he followed his leader into the progressive party, voting for him in 1912. When Phillips County was created in January, 1915, he was elected as a member of the General Assembly of Montana, and served as the first representative in the Lower House from Phillips. This was a democratic session, presided over by Speaker Ramsey, and as he entered late in the session his committee assignments were not important, and he was more of a spectator and fathered no bills.

Mr. Taylor was made an Odd Fellow at Saco, and belongs to the subordinate lodge of that fraternity. He belongs to the Methodist Episcopal Church at Saco, and is one of its trustees. When the present house of worship was erected he served on the building committee, and is partially responsible for the provision of one of the good church homes in this locality.

On February 26, 1908, Mr. Taylor was united in marriage with Miss Ethel Marshall at Saco, Montana. She is a daughter of Judge Albert Marshall, who married a Miss Odlin. Mrs. Taylor was born at Willow City, North Dakota, August 22, 1885, and is the youngest of her father's five children, the others being as follows: Inez, who is the wife of W. H. Thomas of Pennewawa, Washington; Gladys, who is Mrs. L. F. Franklin, of Almota, Washington; Albert, who is a resident of Portland, Oregon; and Alma, who died unmarried. Mrs. Taylor was educated in a normal school of North Dakota, was engaged in teaching school in North Dakota, but later joined her sister at Saco, Montana, and there met and was later married to Mr. Taylor. Judge Marshall was identified with the lumber business in Michigan, but was a native of Maine, and enlisted from that state during the war between the states and served in the Union army. His death occurred at Saco, Montana. For more than fifty years he was a Mason, and he was first a republican and later a progressive. His title of "Judge" was given him because of a twenty-year service as a justice of the peace at Willow City, North Dakota. Mr. and Mrs. Taylor have three children, namely: Carol, Joyce and William.

During the late war Mr. Taylor lent a helping hand in the various drives, and Mrs. Taylor was active in the work of Saco Branch of Malta Chapter of the Red Cross.

William H. Taylor, father of Cecil E. Taylor, is one of the men who early located in the Milk River Valley, and is now one of the honored residents and retired stockmen of Saco. He was born in Northampton, England, February 12, 1845, a son of William and Ann J. (Penn) Taylor, and they became immigrants to the United States when William H. Taylor was fifteen months old. The trip was made by an ocean sail boat to New Orleans, Louisiana, from whence the little party traveled up the Mississippi River to Saint Louis, Missouri.

In 1850 William Taylor moved into Illinois, and spent seven years in Madison County, and from there went to Waseca County, Minnesota. Until he went to Illinois he worked as a carpenter, but from then on was a farmer. During the war between the states he furnished two sons for the Union army, and, having been naturalized, he voted the republican ticket. He and his wife were Methodists, and very devout. Their children were as follows: William H., who was the eldest; John A., who is a resident of Saco; George W., who is a resident of Omaha, Nebraska; Charles R., who died in Minnesota; Austin J., who died in Valley County, Montana; Andrew M., who lives in Charlotte, Mecklenburg County, North Carolina; and Frank P., who is engaged in farming in the vicinity of Saco.

When contrasted with the advantages given the children of today, William H. Taylor's educational opportunities were very meagre, for the schools were few and the terms short, but he made the best of what he had, and has always kept himself well informed on current questions. He enlisted for service in the Union army during the winter of 1864-5 as a member of Company H, Minnesota Heavy Artillery, and was sent with his company to Nashville, Tennessee, and it was there and at Chattanooga that he was drilled, his command thus preparing for defense both as artillerymen and infantrymen. While doing this they guarded provisions and other supplies, and were still there when the news came of General Lee's surrender, and the regiment was ordered to Fort Snelling for final discharge. Mr. Taylor returned home in excellent health, after an absence of eight months.

Following his return he worked for a few months for wages, and then, buying a team, engaged in teaming on his own account, hauling freight from Waseca to Saint Paul, Minnesota. Later he was engaged in farming on his own land, and was so engaged until 1890, when he came to Montana. During the summer of that year he brought some stock into the state and was so pleased with conditions that he decided to make it his permanent home, and brought his family here in the fall. The first location was in the vicinity of Hinsdale, where he held his cattle for a year and then sold them and bought sheep and was engaged in the wool industry for a quarter of a century. He saw sheep sell as low as $1.25 a head, and lambs for 75 cents a head, and the best price he received for sheep was in 1916, when he sold for $5 a head. Mr. Taylor sold wool as low as 8 cents per pound, and his best price was 30 cents a pound in 1916. Because of the curtailments of the range he left the sheep business, disposed of his stock and a livery business he had long conducted, and since then has been retired.

When it was possible for him to do so Mr. Taylor availed himself of the opportunity offered by the Government for obtaining a farm, and homesteaded near Saco, built ditches and prepared for the irrigation of his desert land, and made it possible for him to raise feed crops, but sold this farm in 1919.

When he located at Saco the only building was the section house, and since then he has contributed in a substantial manner to its growth and development, erecting a residence, livery stable and business house, and investing in other business property. Mr. Taylor cast his first presidential vote for General Grant in 1868 and again in 1872, and he has voted the republican ticket ever since. For twenty years he has been an Odd Fellow, and maintains membership with Glasgow Lodge.

On March 4, 1874, Mr. Taylor was united in marriage at Waseca, Minnesota, to Emma E. Barnes, who was born in McHenry County, Illinois, on November 8, 1849, a daughter of Julius Barnes, and the youngest of three children, her brothers being: Granville, who served in the Union army, died at Waseca, Minnesota; and Charles, who died in Ransom County, North Dakota, both of them leaving families.

Mr. and Mrs. William H. Taylor became the parents of the following children: Edith, who was Mrs. H. W. Davis, died in Florida and is buried at Charlotte, North Carolina; Floyd, who was accidentally killed at Saco in 1906, married Clara Tinney and left her and three children; Cecil E., whose name heads this review; Maysie L., who is the wife of Clarence W. Nelson, of Saco, has three children; and Edna M., who is the wife of William D. Miller, editor of the Saco Independent.

Mr. Taylor is a stockholder of the First National Bank of Glasgow, and was one of the original stockholders of the First National Bank of Saco, and on its board of directors for some years. Both he and his son Cecil E. Taylor are men of the highest probity, and whenever either of them has been associated with any business enterprise the people of Saco and Phillips County have felt that their connection therewith was a sufficient guarantee of good faith, and responded accordingly.

WILLIAM H. FRAZIER. The name of Frazier has been associated with the banking history of Phillips County for some years, and one of the soundest financial institutions of this part of the state, the Farmers and Merchants State Bank of Saco, has William H. Frazier as its vice president, and he is otherwise interested in the commercial affairs of his locality. He was born at Crawfordsville, Indiana, March 6, 1883, a son of Austin H. Frazier, and grandson of William Frazier.

William Frazier was one of the early settlers of Montgomery County, Indiana, going there from Chillicothe, Ohio, when all of that part of the state was in the woods, and he bore well his part of its development and improvement. He married Mary Ann Van Gundy, and they had nine children, of whom one son, David, served in the Union army during the war between the North and the South.

Austin H. Frazier was born in Montgomery County, Indiana, in August, 1850, and was reared on his father's farm. He supplemented the educational training he received in the rural schools with a course in the Northern Indiana Normal School at Valparaiso, Indiana, and spent some years as a public school teacher. Later he moved to Worcester, Massachusetts, where he is now living. He married Mary Adkins, a daughter of Doctor Adkins, who located in Indiana prior to the war between the states, and Mrs. Frazier was born in that state. She died in 1887, having been the mother of the following children: William H., who was the eldest born; and Miss Nancy Frazier, who died in young womanhood at Covington, Indiana.

William H. Frazier learned to be a farmer under his father's instruction, but, perhaps inspired by the fact that Gen. Lew Wallace, author of "Ben Hur," was a near neighbor of the family, and he as a child played in his dooryard, he felt urged to develop his faculties and attended Wabash College, and after two years in that institution entered the University of Minnesota, from which he was graduated in 1907 with the degree of Bachelor of Science. He then became assistant professor of soils and chemistry, and he still maintains connection with educational matters as a member of the Saco School Board, although he left the schoolroom in the fall of 1913, when he came to Montana.

On November 1, 1913, he assumed the duties pertaining to the position of assistant cashier of the First National Bank of Saco, holding it for three years, when he became one of the organizers of the Farmers & Merchants State Bank of Saco. This bank was chartered in May, 1916, with a capital of $20,000, and opened its doors for business in the following August, with the following officials: Harry A. Vagg, president; William H. Frazier, vice president; and Gus Dalquist, cashier, and these gentlemen are still in office. The bank has a surplus of $5,000, and its deposits average $250,000 annually.

On August 11, 1915, Mr. Frazier was united in marriage at Saco, Montana, to Alene McGregor, a daughter of Henry and Nellie (Harris) McGregor. Mrs. Frazier was born at St. Cloud, Minnesota, but she was brought to Montana in childhood, and completed her educational training in the University of Montana, from which she was graduated with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. Not only was she a public school teacher, but was elected county superintendent of schools for Valley County, and was holding that office at the time of her marriage. Mr. and Mrs. Frazier have a daughter, Mary Ann, who was born October 28, 1918.

Like his father, Mr. Frazier is a strong republican and a great admirer of Colonel Roosevelt, to whom he gave his first presidential vote. He is a Mason, belonging to Saco Lodge No. 94, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, of which he is a past master, and he belongs to the local chapter of the Eastern Star, of which he was the first patron. He is also a member of the Minneapolis Consistory and the Mystic Shrine of Minneapolis.

During the late war Mr. Frazier was very active in committee work on the various drives, as well as a generous personal contributor, and through his aid all of the allotments were filled for Saco.

A man of education, carefully trained and experienced, he is well fitted for the dignified position he occupies, and his advice is sought and followed in many matters of public welfare as well as private enterprise, and it would be difficult to find one who is held in higher respect by his fellow citizens than he.

FRED W. KROEGER. Among the men who have attained to a well merited prosperity in the mercantile field of Phillips County is Fred W. Kroeger of Saco, who has lived in this locality since 1903, and has conducted his present business since 1913. He was born in Waseca County, Minnesota, September 23, 1883, a son of Hans and Mary (Bartles) Kroeger, both of German birth, who came to the United States when young. They were married in Waseca County, Minnesota, and engaged in farming, continuing to be thus actively occupied until they reached such substantial independence as would justify their retirement, when they moved to Waseca, where they are now living. Hans Kroeger received a fairly good educational training in his native land. Having but very little money when he arrived in this country, he seems to have been a wage earner until his marriage, but at that time bought a small farm, and his success as a dairy farmer enabled him to add two quarter sections of land to his farm, so that in all he owned 480 acres of land. This he improved most substantially with a residence, silos, barns for dairying and other purposes, and put in modern milking machines and other appliances to aid him in carrying on his business. While voting the republican ticket, he has taken but little part in politics. He and his wife are consistent members of the Lutheran Church of Waseca. The children born to them have been as follows: John, who is a farmer residing near Otisco, Minnesota; Henry, who is a resident of Waseca, Minnesota; Edward, who is engaged in farming near Lavina, Montana; Fred W., whose name heads this review; Elsie, who is the wife of John Lewer, of Waseca, Minnesota; Arnold, who is a resident of Lavina, Montana; Paulina, who is Mrs. Fred Proehl, of New Richland, Minnesota; Katie, who lives at Waseca; and Esther, who is the youngest.

Fred W. Kroeger was reared in his native county, and lived on his father's farm, assisting him in its operation. His educational training ceased when he had completed the work of the eighth grade, but he has learned much from experience and contact with men of affairs. At the age of twenty years he left the farm, and with some money he had saved he took the trip to Montana alone, arriving at Saco entirely dependent upon his own exertions for a livelihood. Upon his arrival here he secured employment as a clerk with C. W. Nelson & Company, one of the early mercantile houses of the place. Later he went with J. M. Nelson, a merchant of Hinsdale, and, leaving him, worked for the Havre Commercial Company at Havre. During this time he proved up the homestead he had entered from the Government, it having been with this intention that he had come to the state. In order to provide for his living expenses while proving up his claim he worked as a clerk, and this experience showed him that he was better fitted for a mercantile life than for agricultural pursuits, and so determined his life calling.

Mr. Kroeger's experience as a homesteader was not as encouraging as he had hoped, although he made an effort to make a success of the farming required by the Government in order to secure possession, and achieved a rather unusual success as a potato grower when he dug $600 worth of the tubers from two acres of ground. He subsequently experimented with alfalfa, and demonstrated its adaptability in this region, and when he sold his farm he had some seventy acres seeded to that crop.

After proving up his claim Mr. Kroeger engaged with the Wisconsin Lumber Company, and was manager of their commissary department at Littel, Washington, for eight months, but then returned to Saco, and became assistant manager of the Saco Mercantile Company.

On May 17, 1913, Mr. Kroeger embarked in business for himself, purchasing the business owned by J. H. Jordan. In order to do this he borrowed $1,000 from the bank to make an initial payment and gave his note for the balance of $1,800. During the following spring and summer he increased his debt to the bank to $1,200, and he bought $1,800 worth of stock. In spite of the heavy obligations resting on him, Mr. Kroeger did so good a business that within a year he had paid off his loans, owned his stock of farm machinery, and had established a good credit, a growing business, and a reputation for fair and honorable dealing. From then on his rise has been steady and reputable, and today he stands among the really worth while men of the county. When he began his business was at the present location, but in the old Jordan Building, which he replaced by the present one in 1917. In the meanwhile the character of his stock has changed, as in 1916 he secured the agency for the Ford cars for Phillips County and a part of Valley County, and he handles the Ford cars, trucks and Fordson tractors. His sales have gradually increased and in 1917 reached the maximum, $105,000. In that year he sold sixty-two cars. The subsequent years being ones of drouth, the sales in cars naturally dropped, and in his line, as in many others, war conditions influenced it very materially, but he has every reason to believe that with the resumption of normal business conditions his sales will reach much higher figures than ever before. Like a number of the business men of this region Mr. Kroeger has carried on some farming, but, like them, has been affected by the drouths.

With the incorporation of Saco as a city Mr. Kroeger was elected a member of its first Board of Aldermen, and in 1919 was appointed one of the trustees of the Saco School Board. He was one of the organizers of the Saco Commercial Club, of which he is treasurer and one of the members of its Board of Directors. Politically Mr. Kroeger is a republican, casting his first presidential vote for Theodore Roosevelt, and aside from his connection with the progressive party in 1912 has supported the candidates of the G. O. P. ever since. The Methodist Church holds his membership, and he is rendering the Saco denomination valuable assistance as one of its trustees.

On January 12, 1910, Mr. Kroeger was married at Saco, Montana, to Miss Nettie M. Stiles, who came to Montana from Cook's Corners, New York, with her parents, Fred and Hattie (Avery) Stiles, who located at Saco. Mrs. Kroeger has a younger sister, Mrs. Jessie Iverson, of Saco. Mr. and Mrs. Kroeger have two children, namely: Lynn and Lester. It would be hard to find better people in every respect than Mr. and Mrs. Kroeger. They came to this region early enough to develop with it and to feel that their interests are one with their community. Liberal contributors to healthy civic movements, and earnest and sincere in their support of church activities, they are exerting a really constructive influence here, and have fairly earned the confidence and esteem they inspire.

JAMES O'BOYLE. One of the most highly respected citizens of Western Montana is James O'Boyle, of Flathead County, whom to know is to respect and admire, for he has led an exemplary life and aided in all movements looking to the material, civic and moral welfare of his community. He came to us from the Emerald Isle, which fair country has sent so many enterprising citizens to our shores, and they have aided us in pushing forward the wheels of civilization. Thirty-five years have been numbered with the past since Mr. O'Boyle came to the Flathead country. Upon his arrival this section of the state was largely an undeveloped region, awaiting the awakening touch of the sturdy pioneers to transform its wild lands into rich farms and beautiful homes, to found cities and towns, to establish churches and schools, and in many other ways reclaim the country for the use of man. As one of the early settlers that led the van of civilization into this favored section Mr. O'Boyle well deserves conspicuous mention with the substantial men of the county.

James O'Boyle was born in Ireland and is a son of Charles and Margaret (McNeil) O'Boyle. He was reared under the paternal roof and secured what education was possible in the schools of his home community. However, he had a longing for larger opportunities than were afforded by his native land and so he followed the example of thousands of his countrymen and set his face toward the western republic across the sea. At the age of twenty-one years he set sail from Liverpool and in due time arrived at New York City, whence he proceeded at once to St. Joseph, Missouri, where he was employed for two years. He then came to Montana, making the trip by boat up the Missouri River to Fort Benton, thence to Helena, where he obtained employment in the mines. That was in the true pioneer period, before the advent of railroads and other modern conveniences. He then went to Butte, where he worked in the mines of the Anaconda Company until 1884, when he came to the Flathead Valley and pre-empted 160 acres of land located three miles northwest of where Kalispell now stands. The nearest town then was Missoula, which also was the nearest postoffice and county seat. He took part in the first activities incidental to the organization of a new community, and in this connection it is worthy of note that he assisted in cutting the logs for the first schoolhouse erected in Flathead Valley, the county then being called Missoula, and this school was on the farm of Robert Ball, while its first teacher was Hank Robinson. Mr. O'Boyle entered actively and energetically on the task of improving and cultivating his new home, and at length had the satisfaction of knowing that he had one of the best ranches in the Flathead country. He has since made many substantial and artistic improvements on the place and today it is still considered one of the best ranches in the community. Here he has engaged in general farming and stock raising, in which he has uniformly met with a satisfactory degree of success, so that today he is considered to be in very comfortable circumstances.

Mr. O'Boyle was married to Mary LaVelle, who also was born in Ireland, a daughter of Edward and Ellen (Curran) LaVelle, and they have six children living, Alice, Charles, John, Henry, Francis and Walter.

Politically Mr. O'Boyle is a strong supporter of the democratic party and an ardent admirer of President Woodrow Wilson. His fraternal relations are with the Knights of Columbus, while he and his wife are faithful members of the Roman Catholic Church. That Mr. O'Boyle possesses the confidence of his fellow citizens is evidenced in the fact that he was elected school director of the Springcreek district. To the discharge of the duties of that responsible office he gave his best efforts, for he is a firm believer in the best education possible for the young, as the best basis for good citizenship.

Of the early days in this section of the state Mr. O'Boyle tells many interesting things, some of which throw additional light on recorded history. Thus he speaks of the great Indian uprising and the subsequent campaign in which General Custer was killed, and tells of the universal fear which filled the hearts of the settlers, who were scattered at wide intervals over the country. Many of the women and children in the Flathead country were hastily put in wagons and driven to Helena, forty miles away, for safety. Mr. O'Boyle remembers one incident of three white men being caught by the red men and burned to death. Later several $20 gold pieces were raked out of the ashes. General Howard, with a body of troops, came over from Oregon, ostensibly to punish the Indians, but as a matter of fact he was afraid to attack the redskins, keeping about two days behind them, in consequence of which the Indians, who knew he was afraid of them, called him "General Behind Hand."

Through subsequent years Mr. O'Boyle has consistently given his support and influence to every movement for the advancement and improvement of his community, and he has lived to see it develop into one of the choicest and most picturesque sections of the great Treasure State. He has never regretted leaving his native land, for he has found opportunities here not possible in his native land, and he has proved an honor to his adopted country, enjoying to a marked degree the confidence and good will of all who know him.

MR. AND MRS. JAMES O'BOYLE

Kosciusko Hamilton, M. D., the pioneer physician of Dodson, identified himself with Montana in June, 1908, and established himself at Dodson two years later. He came to the state as physician and surgeon in the United States Reclamation Service, beginning his work at Fort Shaw. He was next at Babb, and then Malta, where he completed his services to the Government, following which he came to Dodson, and is not only engaged in a medical practice but is also conducting a drug store.

Doctor Hamilton was born in Union County, Tennessee, near Maynardsville, January 11, 1873, a son of Ezra A. Hamilton and grandson of William Hamilton, a member of an old established American family of English origin. The Hamiltons were originally farmers, and were always loyal in their support of the Government, participating in all of the country's wars, and during that between the North and the South espoused the Union cause, and some of them served in the Federal Army, although in order to do so were forced to leave their native state.

William Hamilton was born in Union County, Tennessee, and was there reared. He married Miss Pauline Buckner, also a native of the Volunteer State, and a member of a family of English ancestry and agricultural proclivities. Their children were ten in number, six sons and four daughters, of whom Ezra A. Hamilton was the first born. William Hamilton was an active man in the Baptist Church, and in his political opinions was a republican. His death occurred when he was about seventy years old, and his widow survived him until she also reached the age of seventy.

Ezra A. Hamilton was born, reared and educated in Union County, Tennessee, and when he was a young man he embarked in a mercantile business at Esco, Tennessee, and conducted it for fifteen years, and remained actively engaged in business as long as he lived, dying in 1906. Like his father, he was a republican, and he was one of the leaders of the Missionary Baptist Church. Well known in Masonry, he rose high in that fraternity. He married Pernina C. Smith, a daughter of John A. Smith, who married a Miss Buckner. He was a native son of Tennessee, and one of the most influential church workers of the country outside of the ministry. He went into the newly developed portion of Eastern Tennessee and did pioneer work there. Mrs. Ezra A. Hamilton survives her husband and lives at Pratt, Kansas. Their children were as follows: Artemas, who is a farmer of Pratt, Kansas; Doctor Hamilton, who was the second born; Charles E., who is an attorney connected with the Panama Canal Commission at Washington, District of Columbia; Lillian, who is Mrs. Frank Miller, of Pratt, Kansas; Doctor Lee and Dr. Swan Hamilton, both of whom are dental surgeons and served during the late war in a professional capacity at Chickamauga Camp.

Dr. Kosciusko Hamilton spent four years in literary work at Carson and Newman College, Jefferson City, Tennessee, leaving it in his junior year, and spent six months in Eastman's Business College, Poughkeepsie, New York. Following this he entered the Bureau of Construction and Repair in the Navy Department at Washington, District of Columbia, and was made head of the Division of Records, remaining in that branch of the service until he had completed his medical studies, which he pursued in night sessions. During the latter part of his course he attended the George Washington University, and while there did hospital work as well as the regular course, and was graduated therefrom in June, 1906.

Upon coming to Dodson, Doctor Hamilton built his own store, stocked it with drugs and sundries and opened the first pharmacy in the town. His permanency as a settler was demonstrated when he proved up a half section of land near Dodson and developed quite a valuable stock farm out of it. Doctor Hamilton is one of the charter members of Liberty Lodge No. 99, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, of Dodson. When the First National Bank of Dodson was organized Doctor Hamilton was active in the work, was elected its president and held that position until 1919, when the First State Bank of Dodson was purchased and consolidated with the First National, the same name being continued, and Doctor Hamilton was placed at the head of the expanded institution. The original capital of the bank was $25,000, but when it was reorganized the capital stock was doubled.

Doctor Hamilton was medical examiner of the Dodson locality for the Selective Service Board during the late war, served on the several committees connected with the various drives, and contributed most generously to all of the war activities.

On September 18, 1901, Doctor Hamilton was married at Fredericksburg, Virginia, to Miss Wilhelmtina Williams, a daughter of William A. Williams, an ex-Confederate soldier who had served under Gen. Robert E. Lee. He took part in General Pickett's famous charge at the battle of Gettysburg, was taken prisoner during the war, but later exchanged, and resumed his duties as a soldier in time to participate in the strenuous closing conflicts of that war. The Williams family located in what is known as the old "Northern Neck" in Virginia, one of the shires granted by the British Government, out of which Essex County was created, and it was in this county that William A. Williams was born February 27, 1840. All of his active life, save that portion of it spent in the army, was passed on the old Williams plantation in Virginia, and there he died in 1918. He married Miss Sarah Frances Watts, a daughter of Henry P. Watts and his wife, Mrs. Frances (Brown) Watts. Henry Watts' sister married William A. Clark, who was a brother to Roger Clark, a lieutenant in General Washington's army during the American Revolution, and through him Mrs. Hamilton has gained her membership of Livingston Manor Lodge, Washington, District of Columbia, Daughters of the American Revolution, and she is also a member of the Robert E. Lee Chapter, Daughters of the Southern Confederacy, of the same city. Mrs. Williams, mother of Mrs. Hamilton, died just prior to the passing away of her husband, having been the mother of the following children: Dr. C. G. Williams, who is practicing at Oak Grove, Virginia; Henry, who is a resident of Iraville, Virginia; S. J., who is a teacher of modern and mediaeval English in The Citadel University of Charleston, South Carolina; William A., who is a resident of Baltimore, Maryland; Mrs. Hamilton, who is the wife of Doctor Hamilton of this review; Sarah, who is the wife of David Vosburgh, of Oak Grove, Virginia; Mary Pryor, who is Mrs. Dr. N. P. Rucker, of Bedford, Virginia; and two daughters who are deceased.

Mrs. Hamilton was born on her father's plantation near Fredericksburg, Virginia, March 4, 1882, and was educated in the Woman's College of Lynchburg, Virginia. For the subsequent two years she taught school, and then took the training course for nurses at the Columbia, George Washington and Children's Hospitals at Washington, District of Columbia, and was graduated in nursing in 1901. She met Doctor Hamilton while she was in training in Washington, and came to Dodson after Doctor Hamilton had established himself at this point. Both Doctor and Mrs. Hamilton are very popular, and they have gathered about them a delightful social circle of congenial friends.

David V. Dutro. The possibilities of Montana are such as to awaken a strong interest in the heart of everyone who comes into the state, and if they become enthusiastic over these opportunities it is easy to see that a native son of the commonwealth cannot be convinced that another section of the country can offer him anything to induce him to leave. At any rate this is the attitude of David V. Dutro, United States land commissioner and a prominent citizen of Dodson, who was born at Helena, Montana, December 10, 1878, a son of Daniel Dutro.

Daniel Dutro was born on the Miami River in Ohio, and accompanied his parents to Bloomington, Illinois, when a child, living there until he was fifteen years old. His father died about the time of the outbreak of the war between the states, and he offered his services to the Union, but his widowed mother would not give her consent to his entering the army. At the time the family was living at Pleasant Hill, Missouri, and Daniel Dutro, animated with a flame of patriotism, decided to become a soldier in spite of opposition and so went into Illinois and enlisted at Springfield in Company B, 150th Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and was made drummer boy of his company. After a service of a year he was stricken with pneumonia, fatally, as it seemed, and was sent home in a box car to die, but recovered so thoroughly that he was able to join the Vigilantes in Missouri and assist in waging war against the depredations of the bandits of the state, comprising the outfits of the James boys, Bill Anderson and the Quantrell gang. In company with his fellow members of the local Vigilante Committee Daniel Dutro captured one of this coterie of outlaws, and in that connection rendered a more effective service than he had as a soldier.

In 1867 Daniel Dutro came to Montana, and from then on identified himself with this part of the country and because of his long residence here was made a member of the Montana Pioneers Association. He made the trip by steamboat from St. Louis, Missouri, to Fort Benton, Montana, and from there made his way to Helena. His first employment at Helena was as a hod carrier. At that time he was so slender that it seemed impossible that he could carry the heavy hod, and his fellow workmen watched him to see that harm did not attend his praiseworthy efforts to "make good." As they expected, his strength proved unequal to the effort and he was caught as he fell from the ladder. The contractor, appreciating the grit of the lad, changed his job to that of stone cutting.

By the time he had learned the trade of stone cutting he was an expert and he added a knowledge of mechanics and decorating to his other trade. Probably he worked too hard, for he was attacked by a trouble which was the result of his army service, and this confined him to his bed for two years. When he was able to leave his bed he realized that he must keep out of doors, so began prospecting and went to the Neihart district of the state and found the Benton group of mines and a number of others, which were developed into the best silver producers of the region, and his family still retain an interest in these properties.

Subsequently, on account of his health, he was forced to seek a lower altitude, and in 1881 moved to Fort Benton, where he took up photography and developed into an artist and practical photographer, and was also an expert mineralogist. Had he not been hampered by his lack of early educational training he would have made his mark in the latter science. After twenty years' experience as a photographer his uncle, George McBurney, builder of the McBurney House, the first hotel in Deerlodge County, lost his eyesight, and Mr. Dutro devoted himself to the care of his afflicted relative until the death of the latter. He then resumed his mining operations, and operated a mine at the mouth of Nelson Gulch, where he built a small stamp mill and foundry. Later he discovered the "Arrow Head" Mine of rich ore at the grass roots. Until his death, on May 8, 1918, when he was sixty-eight years old, he continued to operate his mill and take an active interest in affairs. Considering the state of his health Mr. Dutro was a remarkable man and his achievements stand out as a practical demonstration of what a man can accomplish if he only possesses sufficient ambition, no matter what his physical disabilities may be.

Daniel Dutro married Caroline McBurney, a daughter of George McBurney, who came West from Farmington, New York, where Mrs. Dutro was born on October 17, 1849. She survives her husband and lives at Central Park, Gallatin County, Montana. The children born to Daniel Dutro and his wife were as follows: Alice, who is the wife of Rev. H. E. Clowes, of San Diego, California; Flora, who is the wife of Arthur P. Knadler, of Central Park, Montana; George, who is mentioned below; and David V., whose name heads this biography.

Taken in early childhood to Fort Benton, Montana, by his parents, George Dutro was reared in that place and attended its schools until he was nineteen years old. At that time he came to Dodson and became a clerk, and in 1908 established himself in business as proprietor of the Dodson Mercantile Company. In addition to his mercantile interests Mr. Dutro was one of the promotors of the First National Bank of Dodson, and was placed on its board of directors. After taking an active part in securing the incorporation of Dodson as a city he was elected its first mayor, but refused to qualify. Like the majority of the residents of the county, and in fact of this part of the state, Mr. Dutro availed himself of the opportunity offered by the Government of acquiring a homestead, and proved up his claim two miles east of Dodson, and while he was doing so lived in a little house on his property, and at the same time conducted his store. It was not an easy matter for him to do the necessary amount of farming, owing to the drouth and his inexperience, but he succeeded, for he inherits much of his father's praiseworthy persistence, and now has a farm that will, in time, be very valuable.

On February 22, 1900, Mr. Dutro was married to Miss Helen Culbertson, at Fort Benton, Montana. She was a daughter of Robert and Lydia (Smith) Culbertson, and was born at Fort Benton, the eldest of the nine children of her parents. Her death occurred at Dodson on November 5, 1917, and she left a daughter, Mabel.

Mr. Dutro took an active part in the bond and other drives during the late war, and was very generous in his contributions. Well known in Masonry, he belongs to Dodson Lodge, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, and to the Consistory and Mystic Shrine of Helena, Montana. A strong republican, he began his connection with that party by casting his first presidential vote for William McKinley in 1900, and has continued to support its candidates ever since.

David V. Dutro was only three years old when his parents moved to Fort Benton, and so he was practically reared in that city. His educational training was acquired there, and he learned in a practical manner the printing business, so that he was able to engage profitably in newspaper work for ten years. In 1906 he went to Chester, Montana, and for three years was occupied as a postoffice employe and clerk in a mercantile establishment, but at the expiration of that period came to Dodson, and, like his brother George, homesteaded in the vicinity. This action led him to turn his attention to real estate, and he became very active as one of the realty operators of this region and has continued in this line ever since. In 1912 he was appointed United States land commissioner, and since that date practically all of the land in this region has been filed and proved up through his court. Although a strong republican, his services have been so valuable that he has been continued in office through two democratic administrations.

David V. Dutro was married at Dodson, Montana, to Anna Vaughn on February 18, 1914. She was born at Belfast, Ireland, September 11, 1892, a daughter of Hugh and Margaret (Cotter) Vaughn. Mr. and Mrs. Dutro have two sons, Vaughn Daniel and George Ferdinand.

The Dutros, father and sons, have always been constructive citizens, and the services they have and are rendering to the state cannot be easily overestimated, and their names will be associated with some of the most important history of the commonwealth.

GEORGE T. CHAMBERS. For a number of years George T. Chambers has been one of the active business men and public spirited citizens of Malta, and prior to that for many years was identified with the history of Montana, into which state he came in 1883. He has always been associated with constructive citizenship and has earned the right of being numbered among the most representative men of Phillips County.

The birth of George T. Chambers occurred at Lancaster, Pennsylvania, October 8, 1846. He is a son of Abraham Chambers and grandson of David Chambers. One of the Chambers ancestors moved from Maryland into Pennsylvania, and the family traces back to the Chambers who laid out the Town of Chambersburg, Pennsylvania, and still further back to Maj. James Chambers, the emigrant from Ireland, who received a land grant from the king of England and established himself and his four sons and four daughters along the Susquehanna River in Pennsylvania, and from that location the Chambers descendants have scattered to the four winds.

It is believed that David Chambers was also born in the Keystone State, and he certainly spent the major portion of his life in it. His son Abraham Chambers was born at Lancaster, Pennsylvania, December 12, 1819, and was sent to Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, to learn the process of extracting gas from coal, and when he had done so, was placed in charge of the Lancaster gas works at Lancaster, Pennsylvania. In 1853 he moved to Indianapolis, Indiana, and was there connected with the iron moulding industry. Still later he went to Poweshiek County, Iowa, where he began farming, and continued that calling in Greene County, Iowa. After some years spent in Iowa he moved to South Dakota, proved up a homestead in Faulk County, and there his wife passed away. Following that sad event he broke up his home and lived among his children who had settled in that state, and died at Faulkton, South Dakota, in June, 1905, aged eighty-five years.

Abraham Chambers married Ann Mary Atkinson, a daughter of John Atkinson, born in England, who became a contractor on the Pennsylvania Railroad while it was in process of construction, and while thus occupied he contracted cholera and died of the epidemic. Mrs. Chambers died in December, 1889, and she and her husband had the following children: George T., who was the eldest born; Charles B., who is a resident of Faulkton, South Dakota; Mary E., who is deceased, was Mrs. Jacob Vader, of Formosa, Kansas; James A., who is a resident of Carroll County, Iowa; and Louisa B., who married John Harrington and lives in Faulk County, South Dakota.

George T. Chambers was only six years old when his parents moved to Indianapolis, and he was educated in that city and at Lafayette, Indiana. On March 31, 1864, he enlisted at Indianapolis, Indiana, as a member of Company B, Eleventh Indiana Volunteer Infantry, under Col. Lew Wallace, which regiment was known as Wallace's Zouaves. He joined the regiment at Indianapolis when it was home on veteran furlough, and with it went down the Mississippi River to Memphis, Tennessee, and from there on down to New Orleans, Louisiana. The next point to be occupied was Thibbedeau, Louisiana, from whence after a brief stay the command was ordered to Washington, District of Columbia, and made the trip in the steamer "Cassandra." From Washington it marched into Maryland and thence into the Shenandoah Valley, Virginia. Mr. Chambers participated in the battles of Fisher's Hill, Cedar Creek and Winchester. When the Shenandoah Valley campaign was completed the Eleventh was ordered to Baltimore, Maryland, by its old commander, Major General Wallace, and did guard duty there until the close of the war, and he received his final discharge at Indianapolis, Indiana, on August 8, 1865. During all of his service he was not wounded nor taken prisoner, although he was made color corporal, and thus occupied a somewhat dangerous position.

When he was still a schoolboy Mr. Chambers had the honor of seeing Abraham Lincoln as he passed through Lafayette, Indiana, on his way to Washington to be inaugurated as president. In the years that followed he held him close in his heart as his hero, and then, at the close of the war, he was one of the broken-hearted throng to view the body of the martyred president lying in state at Washington, and formed one of the guards to escort the body in the funeral procession.

When the railroad entered Livingston, Montana, Mr. Chambers came to the new community, and for the subsequent twenty-one years was identified with its business history, first as senior member of the hardware firm of George T. Chambers & Company, and later as a member of the Livingston Hardware Company. During this period he saw Livingston grow from a hamlet to a community rivaling Clark City, which was the metropolis of that region when he entered it. Mr. Chambers was very active in public affairs, serving as county commissioner for six years, and as county treasurer for two years. When he was on the County Boad the courthouse was erected and extensive bridge building plans were started and the problems relative to the voting and funding of bonds were handled. Mr. Chambers was chairman of the board when a test suit was brought against it to test the question of the amount of money the board could spend on any one bridge, and the court rendered a decision to limit the amount to $10,000, and this established the law for future boards. While he was county treasurer his office handled a part of the "slush" fund which was circulated in the interest of the campaign fund of a United States senator. This part was the amount that was thrown over the transom into the bedroom of State Senator Whiteside, who brought the matter up in the Upper House of the State Assembly, turning the money over to that body. It was decided to turn the amount into the school fund of the state, and thus a portion of it went through the office of County Treasurer Chambers of Park County. Mr. Chambers served as vice president of the National Park Bank at Livingston; was president of the electric light plant, the first one the city had, and was one of the incorporators of the company owning it; and was vice president of the Park Coal and Coke Company. He was active in Grand Army work there, and held all of the offices in Farragut Post; and he is a past grand master of Livingston Lodge, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and past grand master of the State of Montana in Odd Fellowship. Mr. Chambers was elected to office on the republican ticket, having been a member of that party since he reached his majority, and as this was the period when the Free Silver issue was before the country he had four competitors at the November election, but won out with a gratifying majority. His first presidential vote was cast for Rutherford B. Hayes in 1876, while he was a resident of Iowa, and he has never seen any reason to change his support of republican presidential candidates since.

In June, 1904, Mr. Chambers came into the Milk River district and established himself as a resident of Valley County, when he located at Malta, having disposed of his interests at Livingston. At that time Malta was almost all on the north side of the railroad, but he was farsighted enough to see that there would be great expansion, and bought heavily on the south side, on Front Street principally, and bought the hardware business of S. O. Backus. The Chambers business house on the corner of Front Street and Fourth Avenue was at one time a pioneer building at Malta, and in its early days housed the blacksmithing equipment of Louis DuBois. Mr. Chambers has occupied this building for more than sixteen years, and has erected a new concrete, two-story building, 50 by 50 feet, which accommodates the furniture and implement stock of the Chambers Hardware & Furniture Company. The Chambers residence is a two-story colonial building of eight rooms, and was erected by Mr. Chambers after he came to Malta.

George T. Chambers was married at Glidden, Iowa, on November 15, 1876, to Miss Elizabeth Noonan, a daughter of Michael Noonan. Mrs. Chambers' mother was a Miss Murray before her marriage to Mr. Noonan. The birth of Mrs. Chambers occured at Janesville, Wisconsin, on December 10, 1857. She was one in a family of three sons and three daughters. Mr. and Mrs. Chambers became the parents of the following children: Adelaide, who is the wife of W. J. Stockman, of Red Cloud, Nebraska; Alice, who is the wife of Thomas Olmstead, of Dillon, Montana; Gertrude, who married Don Rathbone and is now a teacher in the Malta Public Schools; and George A., who is associated in business with his father.

When the matter of creating Phillips County came before the people Mr. Chambers identified himself enthusiastically with the movement, and was especially active with reference to having Malta chosen as the county seat. His efforts in this were all the more effective because of his former experience in county division, as he had assisted in the separation of Park County from Gallatin County. In every possible manner Mr. Chambers has sought to benefit the several communities in which he has resided, and has met with more than ordinary success not only in his civic performance of duty but in his business enterprises, and through them has attracted interest to this part of Montana and thus, as in other ways, assisted in creating and sustaining the great prestige of the Treasure State.

Judge Andrew Davidson. Both as private citizen and public official Judge Andrew Davidson measures up to the highest ideals of manhood, and he has been one of the active figures in the cattle industry and ranching history of Wagner and its vicinity. He is only an American by adoption, for he was born on a shepherd's farm at Yadlee, Milknowe, Haddingtonshire, Scotland, May 4, 1852, a son of James Davidson, and grandson of Andrew Davidson.

The grandfather, Andrew Davidson, was an Englishman from Northumberland and a shepherd by calling, and he established the Davidson family in Haddingtonshire, and all of them were humble people of great industry. James Davidson was born in Berwickshire, Scotland, in 1810, and died in 1877, his widow surviving him until 1881. Although educated to be a schoolmaster, he preferred to follow in his father's footsteps and became a shepherd, and was employed by the same man as such for twenty-six years. He was a dependable man of fine character, and received many indications of approval from his employer, and during his long life, which lasted until he was sixty-seven years, he lived up to his highest conceptions of integrity. He and his wife, Margaret Melrose (Lyall) Davidson, a daughter of William Lyall, a nailmaker of Haddington, became the parents of the following children: Jane, who married Alexander Punton, spent her life at Shepherd's House and was known as the Lammermoor Shepherdess; Elizabeth, who married James Teedle, became the mother of the present postmaster of Malta, Montana; and Judge Andrew, who is the youngest born.

During his boyhood and youth Andrew Davidson followed the life of a shepherd, and tended the flocks. He was educated in Cranshaw's School in Berwickshire until he was eleven years of age, and then began working among the neighbors, receiving about 20 cents a day for his services until he was fifteen years old. At that time he was made a shepherd on the farm of Blue Cairn in Lauderdale, tenanted by Nathaniel Hume, who had attained to wealth by tending the fleecy flocks in Galawater. For 2½ years Andrew Davidson held that position, and for the next six months was similarly employed on the farm of James Maither at Kedzlie, Roxboroughshire, Scotland, who had, himself, started out in life as a poor shepherd boy and risen to a position of wealth and standing through his own industry. He became a steadfast friend of Andrew Davidson, and this tie has been held inviolate by both of them, and Judge Davidson takes great pride in this fact, especially now that he is so far from his native heath.

Some years prior to his father's death Judge Davidson returned home to take his father's place at Yadlee, and remained there until 1882, or a period of eleven years, and then said good-bye to his family and sailed from Glasgow, Scotland, aboard the ship "Manitoba" for the United States, landing at Point Levi, Canada, opposite to Quebec, from whence he made his way to Kankakee, Illinois, his objective point. The trip across the Atlantic was made without any untoward incident, and the passengers were troubled by nothing worse than a rough sea.

Andrew Davidson worked at various jobs at Kankakee and during the winter fed a bunch of cattle. In the spring of 1883 he with others from that region went West to look for land on the public domain. He looked about him at Rea Heights, South Dakota, a point on the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad, but returned East and stopped in Tama County, Iowa, where he was a neighbor of "Tama Jim" Wilson, later secretary of agriculture of the United States Government, and found him an excellent neighbor indeed. Mr. Davidson rented a farm, and when he had harvested his fall crop sold it and came to Montana. Upon his arrival in the state he engaged with Turner & Grimm at Lavina, Meagher County, as a sheep herder. Leaving that firm he went to the Snowy Mountains and managed a sheep ranch for two years for Witmer Brothers. His next location was at Melville in the Sweet Grass country, and there he bought a bunch of cattle and ran them until 1891, at which time he moved to Malta, moving his stock and establishing himself 1½ miles north of that city as a rancher on his homestead, which he called the "Yadlee Ranch." At once he embarked in the sheep business, and ran his sheep until the "dry-landers" took up the range and made the sheep business a hazardous venture. He disposed of his property there and came to Wagner, where he bought the John Ebaugh farm of 650 acres and has since then belonged to the rank of the farmers. Half of his land is under the Milk River Irrigation Project. His residence is one of the cluster of buildings marking Wagner, and he built it in April, 1914.

MR. AND MRS. W. P. JAQUETTE

Three days after he reached Kankakee, Judge Davidson made his declaration of citizenship, and he received his final papers at Livingston, Montana, before Judge Henry. He became a republican, is allied with the stalwart element of that party, and has carried his share of the local burdens in a political way in every community in which he has resided. His first official service was as a justice of the peace at Malta, and he has filled that office for ten years. He served on the School Board, and was county commissioner of Valley County when it included all of the present counties of Sheridan, Roosevelt, Phillips and Valley. His colleagues on the board were James Ferris of Hinsdale, Lee R. Cornwall of Buggy Creek, Valley County, and William McBride of Culbertson. The matters of chief importance which came before them were the building of bridges and the construction of roads, and they funded some county bonds at a lower rate of interest. Judge Davidson held this office for six years, and was during that period watchful of the interest of the big county.

An enthusiastic Mason, Judge Davidson belongs to Malta Lodge, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, No. 57, and is past master of it, and he has also taken the Chapter degrees.

On September 11, 1885, Judge Davidson was married in the old and historic city of Edinburgh, Scotland, to Miss Isabella Proudfoot Ritchie, a daughter of James and Jean (Proudfoot) Ritchie. James Ritchie was reared at Castle Craig, Peebleshire, had a common school education and died at the age of seventy-five years, his widow surviving him for a year longer. Their children were as follows: Jean, who died unmarried; Willie, who died in Scotland; Jessie, who married John Barnes, of Kirkliston, Scotland; Mrs. Davidson, who was born March 24, 1856; Maggie, who is the wife of James George, of Coatbridge, Glasgow, Scotland; Mary, who died unmarried; Adam, who is a carpenter residing at Chicago, Illinois; and Mima, who is the wife of John Spence, lives at Hinsdale, Montana.

Judge and Mrs. Davidson became the parents of the following children: Jeanie, who is the wife of Byron Hurley, of Wagner, has a daughter, Marguerite; James, who is a resident of Kimball, Minnesota, married Verna Kaylor, and they have three children, Leslie Andrew, Shirley and Margaret Isabel; Miss Margaret and William Andrew, who live at Wagner, Montana; Lillie, who is Mrs. Harry McConnell, assistant postmaster of Wagner; Clarence, who lives at Malta, Montana; and Frances E., who is the youngest in the family, lives with her parents.

James and William Davidson both volunteered for service during the World war, the latter entering the aviation branch and the former the infantry. William Davidson was trained at Kelly Field and at Waco, Texas, and then was sent to Camp Mills, Long Island, in preparation for going overseas, when the armistice was signed. James Davidson was trained at Missoula, Montana, and was discharged in the State of Washington.

Judge Davidson is an excellent type of sturdy, honest manhood, and in his office of justice of the peace displays such excellent judgment and knowledge of human nature that his decisions are seldom interfered with by the higher courts, and those brought before him cannot fail to recognize his innate fairness and sterling integrity. He attributes much of his success in life to the habits of industry and thrift he learned from his parents, and to the principles of honesty and uprightness they instilled both by precept and example, all of which he has sought to pass on to his own children, so that they in turn may, as he, rise up and call their father "blessed."

WALTER P. JAQUETTE. One of the most enterprising and best known farmers and citizens of the Flathead Valley is he whose name forms the caption to this review. He represents a family which has done much for the advancement and development of the section in which he lives. He seems to have inherited many of the characteristics of his sterling ancestors, whom history records as men who refused to forsake principle for the sake of material gain, who refused to be thwarted in their life course by untoward circumstances, and who at the same time have labored earnestly for their own advancement have not neglected their duty to their fellows. They have always stood high in the communities where they have sought to establish their homes and engage in their chosen vocations during the years past. In everything relating to the material, moral or educational development of his community Mr. Jaquette has stood for the best things and is numbered among the representative citizens of the Flathead country.

The record of the Jaquette family goes back to the eleventh century, and in the thirteenth century members of the family sat on the Public Council of Switzerland, in which country the family attained to considerable prominence. In the days of the persecutions of the Huguenots in France the Jaquettes were among those who fled from the country, taking refuge in Switzerland. Long before William Penn came to America the Jaquette family was here. The first representative of the family here was the second governor of the South River Colony, Jean Paul Jaquette, that being during the Dutch administration under Peter Stuyvesant. Later, coming with the Dutch East India Company, where five brothers and a cousin, employes of that company, and who remained here. After the family became established in America some of them continued to follow the sea, and a Pointe Jacquette, on the eastern coast of Cuba, was probably named in honor of members of the family. After England took over the Dutch colony Jean Paul Jaquette was made a squire. Their property there was an entailed estate and it extended to about ninety years ago. The City of South Wilmington is built on the old estate of the Jaquettes.

The Jaquettes were prominent during the Revolutionary period. Maj. Peter Jaquette enlisted in Haslet's regiment early in 1776, and was by the latter's side when he was killed at the battle of Princeton, and afterward joined Hall's battalion as captain of the Fourth Company. He was with DeKalb when he was fatally wounded at the battle of Camden, falling into Jaquette's arms. The Major served from 1776 until the close of the war, spending but six weeks at his home during all this time. He was in every general engagement under Washington which took place in Delaware, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York and the other eastern states. He was then ordered to join the Southern army under General Gates, and with the brave DeKalb was in the battle of Camden, August 16th, in which the Delaware regiment, consisting of eight companies, was reduced to two of ninety-six men each, the command of which devolved upon his brave comrade, Kirkwood and himself. He was at the battle of Guilford Court House, the second battle of Camden and Utah Springs, and was also in every action and skirmish under General Green, in whose army he remained until the capture of Cornwallis at Yorktown. He returned to his native state in 1782, broken down in health, to find that his estates had almost gone to ruin during his absence.

Capt. Peter Jaquette, great-grandfather of W. P. Jaquette, organized and furnished to a great extent a company of horses.

Lieut. Joseph Jaquette, commissioned April 6, 1776, was killed in battle August 7, 1776.

Among the later descendants of these worthy progenitors was P. L. Jaquette, who was born in Baltimore, Maryland, the son of Isaac Jaquette. He was a veteran of the Civil war, having served in an emergency division of the Union army. Sworn in at Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, he served under Major Benton and General Tompkins. He had married Elinor Greenfield, and left his young wife and three children to go to war. He returned safely and was honorably discharged at Harrisburg. During his enlistment he passed through some exciting experiences, the most notable of which was in connection with the incidents surrounding the assassination of President Lincoln. He was at the White House on the evening of the assassination, and after that crime his company was detailed to guard the home of Secretary Stanton. On the way to his post he heard the cry of "murder," and he ran in the direction of the cry which brought him to the door of Secretary Seward's home, where they saw the nurse who had been attacked and who was as bloody as a butcher. He was trying to attract attention to a doctor's carriage which was driving away and which contained the would-be assassin, for it was under the subterfuge of being a physician that the criminal had gained admission to the house. Just then Mr. Jaquette first heard of the shooting of the President, whom he later saw lying in state in the rotunda of the Capitol. Mr. Jaquette stated that he went into the war a democrat, but found that he was fighting democrats, so he came home a republican and has remained one ever since. Mr. Jaquette is now making his home with his son, the subject of this sketch.

Walter Jaquette was born in Pennsylvania in 1863, and is the son of P. L. and Elinor (Greenfield) Jaquette. He was reared by his parents and attended the public schools of his home neighborhood. In the spring of 1886, when he had just attained his majority, he went to California, where he remained during one summer. In December of that year he came to Sheridan, Montana, where he prospected for a time. He then came to the Flathead country, pre-empted land and proceeded to its improvement. He was energetic and industrious, and was prospered accordingly, so that he was at length enabled to buy more land. His fine estate now comprises 240 acres, located three miles northwest of Kalispell, and he devotes himself indefatigably to its operation. He also gives considerable attention to the buying and selling of land as an investment proposition, in which he has been successful. He has improved and beautified his home until it is now one of the most attractive homes in the Flathead country.

Walter Jaquette was married to Luella Belle Patton, a native of Pennsylvania, the daughter of James and Isabel (Bleakney) Patton, whose five daughters were school teachers. To Mr. and Mrs. Jaquette were born the following children: Dorothy; Paul, who after service in France with the United States Army is now a student in Brown University, Providence, Rhode Island; Isabel, who is a graduate of the Flathead County High School at Kalispell, is teaching school at Batavia, Montana; Dorothy, who also is a Flathead County High School graduate and teaching at Montford, Montana, is the wife of Mark Hodgeson; Luella is a student in the Kalispell High School, as are Josephine and Eleanor, and Nancy and James are in graded school. The mother of these children was removed by death when the family were about to move into their new home, and her sister, Mary Patton, came from Pennsylvania to care for her sister's children. Some time later she became the wife of Mr. Jaquette.

Politically Mr. Jaquette pays but little attention to party lines, preferring to give his support to those men and measures which most nearly meet his approval. Fraternally he is a member of the Brotherhood of American Yeomen, the Modern Woodmen of America and the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. In all the relations of life Mr. Jaquette has proved true to every trust and enjoys the confidence of all who know him.

Ezra Ereaux. One of the representative ranchmen and early settlers of Phillips County is Ezra Ereaux, of Wagner, who after passing through all of the experiences incident to pioneer life is now enjoying a well earned prosperity. He was born at Little Falls, Minnesota, August 18, 1880, a son of Mitchell Ereaux.

Mitchell Ereaux was born in Quebec, Canada, of French ancestry, but was brought to the United States by his parents when he was still a boy, the family locating in Minnesota. Here he was reared to manhood, taught the fundamentals of farming, and given the educational advantages afforded by the rural schools of his day and section. As he was naturally good at figures, he never found any difficulty in transacting his various business affairs through life. He became a buyer of grain, and handled his shipments through his own elevator at Topeka, Minnesota. During his earlier years he had acquired a homestead from the Government, and on it he died in 1891, aged sixty-two years.

The wife of Mitchell Ereaux bore the maiden name of Marguerite LeDoux, and she was born in Illinois, a daughter of Mitchell LeDoux. She survives her husband and makes her home at Dodson, to which city she came in 1901. Their children were as follows: Annie, who died in Minnesota, was Mrs. Brome Ducette; Frank, who is a resident of Little Falls, Minnesota; Philander, who married Ameda Ducette, of Topeka, Minnesota; Florence, who married Ed Arvet, of Malta, Montana; Lucy. who is the wife of Archie Houle, a ranchman of Wagner, Montana; Ezra, whose name heads this review; Adolph, who is a resident of Dodson, Montana; and William, who is a resident of Little Falls, Minnesota.

A man of considerable force of character, Mitchell Ereaux identified himself with local affairs as a member of the democratic party, and served Morrison County as commissioner and supervisor and his school district as a member of the Board of Education. He and his wife were Catholics, and brought up their children in the same faith.

Ezra Ereaux attended the country schools until he was sixteen years of age and assisted his father, but then left home and came to Montana, engaging as a ranch hand in the vicinity of Dodson, his employer being Ben F. Stevens. For about two years he continued to work in and around Dodson, and then went to the Bear Paw Mountains and was there employed for three years by Frank Parker. He then became a clerk in the store of L. Minugh at Belknap, Montana, and this, his first mercantile experience, lasted for two years. During all of this time he had been saving what money he could, and when the opportunity offered invested it in an outfit comprising eight horses, a wagon and a trailer, and went into business as a freighter from different stations on the Great Northern Railroad to the mines at Zortman. This proved so profitable a venture that he was engaged in it off and on for about five years. In the meanwhile he filed on a homestead on Milk River, the land he now occupies, and eventually made it his permanent home. Becoming interested in his property, he disposed of his freighting business and began to raise cattle and horses, running them under the brand "lazy DH block" on his cattle, and "7H triangle" on the left shoulder on his horses. He was so successful in these lines that in 1916 he added sheep to his ranch, and this industry proved the most profitable venture he had ever engaged in, and he ran them until 1919, when he sold, and is now confining his activities to raising cattle and horses.

Mr. Ereaux built his pioneer house of pine logs hauled from the Indian reservation of the Little Rockies, and the cabin at first had only three rooms, but two extra ones were later added, and it served the family as a shelter until it was burned in 1910, and all of its contents, save a table, consumed. When Mr. and Mrs. Ereaux commenced housekeeping they owned a cook stove, a couple of chairs left to them by his mother, a dry goods box which they used for a table, and the bedstead they obtained by hauling a load of wood to Malta and trading it for this article of furniture to Mr. Chambers. It is entirely unnecessary to say that this primitive equipment has been replaced by one entirely adequate to the requirements of the family. Mr. Ereaux entered but a quarter section in the Valley, near Wagner, but he has since added to his holdings and now has a fine ranch, and has devoted himself to it, not taking much interest in other lines of business.

Mr. Ereaux cast his first ballot at Dodson, Montana, for Theodore Roosevelt for the presidency, and has continued a republican ever since. He has attended county conventions as a delegate many times, and served his precinct as chairman of the Central Committee of his party for a number of years. For a long period he has served the Wagner district as a school trustee. While this locality belonged to Chouteau County he was road supervisor for thirteen years.

On October 23, 1902, Mr. Ereaux was married at Little Falls, Minnesota, to Miss Claris Houle, a daughter of Henry Houle and his wife, Sarah (Ducette) Houle, both of whom were born in Quebec, Canada, but came to the United States in 1878 and homesteaded in Morrison County, Minnesota, where they have since resided, having been farming people all of their mature years. Mr. and Mrs. Houle became the parents of the following children: Joseph; Mrs. Ereaux, born on December 14, 1880; Adelor: David; Paul; Clara, who married a Mr. Johnson and died; Jacob, in the parental home; and Eva, who married John Becott. All of the surviving children live near their parents except Mrs. Ereaux and Mrs. Becott, the latter being a resident of Canada. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Ereaux are as follows: Lillian, Freddie, Theodore and Sadie.

Benjamin F. Stevens, of Dodson, is one of the men who has made history in the Milk River region as a stockman, having been identified with it since 1893. He was born near McGregor, Iowa, January 19, 1863, a son of Christopher Howard Stevens, a native of Georgia but reared in Kentucky. He was married at Sprig Springs, Kentucky, to Catherine Benton, a daughter of William Benton, a native of New York State who moved to Kentucky early in the history of that state. Mrs. Stevens was also born in New York State, and she died at Stockton, California, in 1887, having borne her husband the following children: William Howard, who left home with his brother, Benjamin F., and stopped at Alton, Illinois; Annie, who died in infancy; Benjamin F., and several who died in infancy. The father of these children died in 1866, and when the sons left home their mother went out to the Coast and lived at Stockton. She died as Mrs. Hugh Jackson. Mr. and Mrs. Stevens had lived for a time on a farm near McGregor, Iowa, prior to his death.

When he was only seventeen years old Benjamin F. Stevens started West and came as far as Sidney, Nebraska, by rail, and then went with a freight outfit to Deadwood, South Dakota. There he struck the outfit with which he traveled from Bellefourche to Miles City, Montana. When he left home he had no special objective point in view, but was looking for a suitable location, as he and his brother had become tired of the conditions in Clayton County, Iowa, where they had grown up on a farm, and thought Montana would furnish more excitement and better opportunities. On the trip West he passed by Camp Crook on the Little Missouri to old Stoneville, now Alzada, and every day saw herds of buffalo, and occasionally bands of Indians, real war parties which had escaped from the reservation. The horses of the Pennell & Roberts outfit with which he was traveling were guarded nightly to save from the thieving Indians. Mr. Stevens had his share of buffalo hunting to provide fresh meat for the party, and because of that he is entitled to be numbered among the early "buffalo hunters" of the state. Young as he was he had some means, and had brought quite a number of horses with him, and it was to protect them, quite as much as himself, that he joined this outfit.

Reaching Miles City, Mr. Stevens secured employment on the construction of the Big Horn Tunnel on the Great Northern Railroad, and he left his horses with a partner and pushed on with the railroad to Livingston, and spent a year at Junction City. His first work as a cowboy was with the Chouteau Livestock Company, and he came into the Milk River Valley with cattle in company with Shonkin Pool, foreman of the Jungsbury or "two-bar" outfit, with which Mr. Stevens' own cattle were running. Prior to coming to the Valley he had been in the Big Sag country south of Fort Benton as a ranch hand and cowman, A. W. Kingsbury of Great Falls being one of the proprietors of the outfit.

Not long after he located in the Milk River country he began adding to his cattle, and also handled horses, adopting as his brand for the former the "lazy HA," and the "lazy LA" brand for his horses. When he selected a location for his permanent ranch he settled at the mouth of Peoples Creek, now in Phillips County, then on the Fort Belknap Reservation, and his ranch headquarters occupied his wife's allotment of the reservation. He has maintained his stock interests here ever since, and it is a source of gratification to him that all of his ventures have been connected with the business of food production.

Mr. Stevens connected himself with Dodson as a resident in 1917, buying the old Waddell residence, the largest and most comfortable in the city, which was erected by a former merchant of Dodson, whose career in this neighborhood terminated some time ago. In addition to his ranch Mr. Stevens is a stockholder in the Dodson Co-operative Association, and he was one of the promoters of the old Dodson Bank, but retired from the banking business in 1920.

When Mr. Stevens cast his first vote it was for a democratic candidate, and he continued to be allied with that party until the second Cleveland administration, when he was not in accord with his party on the tariff question and so became a protectionist and republican, and since then has voted for the candidates of the latter party in national affairs. He has never joined any fraternal order or society.

On September 27, 1893, Mr. Stevens was united in marriage at the Ereaux ranch on Peoples Creek to Miss Rosalie Ereaux, a daughter of "Curley" Ereaux, who came from Quebec, Canada, where he was born, to the United States at a very early day, and then to Montana. He is of French ancestry, and is an uncle of Ezra Ereaux. Mrs. Ereaux was formerly Mary Pipewoman, of the Grosventre tribe of Indians, and was born in Montana. Mrs. Stevens was born on the Teton River near Fort Benton, Montana, December 4, 1875, and is one of the following children: Julia, who is the wife of Al Schultz; Mrs. Stevens, who was the second child; Frank, who is a ranchman of Peoples Creek; and Cecelia, who is deceased, was Mrs. L. Minugh. After attending the convent at Saint Peters, Montana, Mrs. Stevens went to the public schools of Augusta, Montana, and the tribal school at Carlisle, Pennsylvania, and is a very well educated and highly accomplished lady. Mr. and Mrs. Stevens have the following children: Esther, who married Frank Hutchins, of Dodson, Montana; Benjamin L., who is a ranchman on Peoples Creek, married Gwen Evans, and has a daughter, Alloa; Katie, who is the wife of John D. McDonnell, has a daughter, Cecelia, and is ranching near Lewiston, Montana; Marie, who married Clarence Mills, of Dodson; Julia, who is a high school student at Chinook; and Helen and Rosalie, both of whom live at home.

Adolph Ereaux. The name of Ereaux is connected with some of the constructive citizenship of the Milk River country, and the upright gentlemen who bear it are a credit to their parents and the localities in which they have cast their lot. One of them is Adolph Ereaux, manager of the Dodson Co-operative Association, and a man of a varied experience in different lines of business, in some of which he was associated with his brother, Ezra Ereaux, in whose biography is to be found a complete history of the Ereaux family.

Adolph Ereaux was born in Morrison County, Minnesota, October 5, 1884, a son of Mitchell Ereaux, a native of Quebec, Canada, of French descent, who came to the United States at an early day and became one of the worth-while citizens of this great country and an important man in Morrison County, Minnesota. The eighth child born to his parents, Adolph Ereaux was reared on a farm near Bell Prairie, Minnesota, and attended the neighborhood schools. When he was twelve years old he lost his father, and he assisted his mother, and the two are still close companions, she making her home with him.

In 1900 Mr. Ereaux came to Montana, his sole capital being one nickel and two pennies when he arrived, and he earned his first money on the ranch of his uncle, "Curley" Ereaux, on Milk River. When he left that ranch he went to the Bear Paw Mountains and joined his brother Ezra, and the two were ranch hands for Frank Parker. Subsequently Mr. Ereaux engaged with Mose Anderson, a stockman near Chinook, Montana, and remained with him all summer, and then he and Ezra returned to their uncle's ranch for the winter of 1901. While working for him they also began to haul logs for the improvement of their claims, which were side by side on Milk River, near Wagner. For nine years Adolph Ereaux remained on his homestead, and during that time he was engaged in handling cattle and horses, and is still so engaged.

Leaving his ranch Mr. Ereaux embarked in a livery business at Wagner, putting up what was probably the first house in the hamlet, and he also dealt quite extensively in real estate, making both ventures pay him while he spent five years there. He then came to Dodson and erected the first garage in the city, and ran the second car on its streets, and when he had placed the business on a firm foundation he sold it and turned his attention to merchandising and is now utilizing his energies as manager of the Dodson Co-operative Association.

Reared in a home where democratic influences held sway, Mr. Ereaux, strange to say, cast his first presidential vote for a republican candidate, and he still holds allegiance to the latter party. For several years he has served as a member of the City Council of Dodson, and has been recently re-elected. The present body will have the direction of the expenditure of $30,000 for the extension of sewers, sidewalks and expansion of the electric light plant.

On January 12, 1916, Mr. Ereaux was married at Dodson, Montana, to Miss Ida Hoope, born in Pennsylvania in 1887, who came to Montana in 1915 and became a homesteader. Her father, who was a Pennsylvanian farmer of German ancestry, is deceased, but her mother survives and is now living in Phillips, as are her six children, namely: Henry, Mrs. Ereaux, Fred, Mrs. Margaret Ernest, Bertha and Louis. Mr. and Mrs. Ereaux have two children, Loraine and Victor.

Mr. Ereaux is a product of the great West, and having passed through much of the formative period of Montana feels a proprietary interest in the commonwealth which would not be his if he had come here after everything had been settled, for he has had the privilege of bearing his part in the great work, both as one of the historic "cowboys" and ranchmen. Later he has rendered equally valuable service as a business man, and has directed wisely and efficiently the civic affairs of his ward as a member of the City Council of his municipality. It is more than likely in the years to come that he will be called upon to exert himself to a still greater extent, for the people need such men as he to represent them in office.

Edgar Lee, of Dodson, one of the early settlers here, came to this region in 1899 from Winterset, Iowa, having been born in that state, in Madison

Augustus Schwarzkopf

County, on March 22, 1876. His father was Hamilton Lee, born at Utica, Ohio, September 25, 1854, a son of Elisha Bowman Lee, who took his family to Iowa when Hamilton was ten years old. Subsequently he became one of the early settlers of Kansas, and then, still later, went into Nebraska and died near Great Bend a few years later. Elisha B. Lee married Ann Shields, who survived her husband many years and passed away at Great Bend in 1916, aged ninety-three years. Their children who reached mature years were as follows: John, who is a farmer of Ness County, Nebraska; Mary, who married William Dabney, lives at North Platte, Nebraska; Hamilton, who became the father of Edgar Lee; Martha, who married Daniel Bird, died in Barton County, Kansas; and Frances, who became the wife of Charley Gunn, of Great Bend.

Elisha B. Lee was a whig and later a republican, and he furnished a son to the Union Army during the war between the North and the South. Physically he was a man of large stature and was very vigorous. For many years he was an active member of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

During his young manhood Hamilton Lee was engaged in teaching school, but when he married he became a farmer. Several months after his son Edgar had come into Montana and reported favorably of the region Hamilton Lee followed, bringing his family by rail to Dodson, then represented by one building in addition to the station house. In this was a general store, saloon and post office, all kept by W. S. Collins, and all in one room. Mr. Lee entered his homestead just east of Dodson, and erected on it a frame house of six rooms. This was one of the most comfortable and commodious houses for many miles, and the settlers envied the Lees their home. Here Hamilton Lee began raising horses and cattle, running the former under the brand "E-bar-A" and that of the latter was "reverse KZ." By the time he retired he was shipping quite extensively, and was a man of large means. Upon leaving his ranch he located at Kalispell, Montana, where he educated his youngest child, but died at Los Angeles, California, May 2, 1919. In his last years he was a democrat in politics, while for many years he maintained fraternal relations with the Masonic lodge.

On January 1, 1874, Hamilton Lee was married to Miss Martha J. Robinson, a daughter of Milton and Mary E. (Spencer) Robinson. Mrs. Lee was born in Delaware County, Iowa, in March, 1855, and was educated in the common schools of her native state. Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton Lee became the parents of the following children: Cora, who is the wife of Charles Ross, one of the commissioners of Phillips County and a ranchman near Dodson; Edgar, whose name heads this review; Laura, who is a stenographer at Cutbank, Montana; Roy, who is a ranchman near Dodson, married Minnie Nelson; and Mercedes, who lives at Dodson.

Edgar Lee attended school at Winterset, Iowa, and having learned farming has continued in this line. He entered his homestead when he came to the Milk River country adjoining that of his father, one mile out of Dodson, but his pioneer home was only a one-room log house. When he married he replaced it with one of three rooms, which is now used as the tenant's house on the farm. His was a blue joint hay claim, and he did not disturb much of the soil to farm it until the Government irrigation project came through. Since then he has engaged in alfalfa raising and general farming. Now that his land is irrigated he can do so with a certainty of results, but prior to that farming was only a gamble. In 1915 Mr. Lee improved a property adjacent to Dodson, and has a seven-room cottage. His barn is 30 by 40 feet, with mow room for twenty-five tons of hay, and for a time he was engaged in dairying.

Mr. Lee is a democrat, casting his first presidential vote in 1900 for William Jennings Bryan. He has served Dodson as a member of its school board, and was deputy assessor of Chouteau County for a couple of years under Assessor A. E. Lewis.

On February 12, 1907, Mr. Lee was married at Havre, Montana, to Miss Julia G. O'Riley. Mrs. Lee was born in Minneapolis, Minnesota, March 8, 1889, a daughter of Thomas B. and Mary M. (Best) O'Riley. Mr. O'Riley was born in Canada, and was an excavation contractor, who came to Montana during the construction of the Great Northern Railroad, as he had some of the contracts for its dump construction. He finally settled at Exeter, took a homestead, and died there in July, 1915, when seventy-eight years old. Mrs. O'Riley survives and lives at Dodson. The O'Riley children are as follows: Mrs. Daniel Nicholson, Mrs. James Fineran, Percy, Bernard, and Mrs. Lee. Mr. and Mrs. Lee have two children, Frances and Donald.

AUG. SCHWACHHEIM. Improvement and progress may well be said to form the keynote of the character of Aug. Schwachheim, a well known citizen of Cascade and one of the representative citizens of Central Montana. He has not only been interested in the work of advancement of individual affairs, but his influence has been felt in the upbuilding of the community which is honored by his citizenship. The prosperity which he enjoys is the result of energy rightly applied and has been won by commendable qualities.

Aug. Schwachheim was born in Germany on February 25, 1864, and is the youngest of the nine children born to Frank and Caroline (Jung) Schwachheim, both of whom were also natives of Germany. These parents are both deceased, the father dying in 1914, when eighty-nine years of age, and the mother passing away when the subject of this sketch was a mere child. Frank Schwachheim was a miller by vocation, and spent his entire life in the fatherland. He was a member of the Baptist Church and was a man of fine character and industrious habits.

Aug. Schwachheim was reared under the parental roof and secured a good education in the public schools of his native community. At the age of nineteen years he immigrated to the United States, landing at New York City, whence he proceeded to Cleveland, Ohio, where he spent a year, being employed as a miller, which trade he had learned before leaving his native land. From there he went to Pontiac, Illinois, where he worked at the same trade for a year and a half. The next few years were spent at Hudson, New Richmond and Boardman, Wisconsin, working as a miller, and he was next at Goodthunder, Minnesota, and other places, including Montevideo and Rush City, where he was employed as head miller. In 1899-1900 he superintended the construction of a mill at Cambridge, Minnesota, for the Cambridge Milling Company, of which he was a stockholder and secretary and treasurer. In 1910 he disposed of his interest in that enterprise and came to Cascade, Montana, where he became secretary and treasurer of the Cascade Milling & Elevator Company. In 1916, in company with others, he bought a flour mill at Manhattan, Montana, and organized the State Milling Company, of which he became president. He is also president of the State Elevator Company, vice president of the First State Bank of Cascade, a stockholder in the State Bank of Power, and president of the Craig Merchandise Company at Craig. In all these enterprises Mr. Schwachheim has been a moving spirit ,and much of the success which has attended them has been due to his energetic and persevering methods, as well as his sound discrimination and shrewd judgment in business affairs.

On June 9, 1892, Mr. Schwachheim was married to Augusta Johnson, who was born in Belleplaine, Minnesota, and to them have been born two children, Mildred, the wife of John R. Rumney, and Franklin, who is attending school.

Mr. Schwachheim is an appreciative member of the Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, having been raised in Elkton Lodge No. 58, at Elkton, South Dakota, in 1890. He later demitted and became a charter member of Meridian Lodge No. 105 at Cascade. He is an attendant of and liberal contributor to the Methodist Episcopal Church, of which his wife is a member. Politically he gives his support to the republican party. As a man of affairs he has long filled a distinctive place in the public eye, and as a leader in important business enterprises he has attained distinction in a field where sound erudition, mature judgment and strict integrity are required. Because of these qualities, which he possesses to a marked degree, Mr. Schwachheim enjoys the confidence and esteem of the entire community. He has been chairman of the Board of Education of District No. 3, Cascade County, for the past eight years.

W. H. Bally. The State of Montana extends a broad welcome to such progressive and enterprising families as the Ballys, who a few years ago located in Flathead County, and have identified themselves with the ranching interests around Kalispell.

Mr. Bally was born in Ford County, Illinois, October 22, 1875, a son of Christopher and Nancy (Blackford) Bally, being the oldest in their family of seven children. He was reared and educated in the public schools of Illinois, and in that state he married Barbara Edna Tanton. Mrs. Bally was born in Cazenovia, Woodford County, Illinois, a daughter of T. O. and Barbara (Ginrich) Tanton. Her grandfather was a Union soldier in the Civil war. She was educated in the public schools of Illinois.

For a number of years after their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Bally lived at Burnside in Hancock County, Illinois, where he developed a prosperous business as a plumber. Three children were born to their marriage, Edith Tanton, Maud Loomis and Lois Nancy.

Deciding to seek a new home in the Far West, Mr. and Mrs. Bally came to Montana in 1914, and subsequently bought their home ranch of 197 acres ten miles northeast of Kalispell. Mr. Bally at once entered with characteristic energy and public spirit into his own work and the welfare of the community. He was associated with other men of the locality in 1920 in organizing the Northwest Potato Exchange, the purpose of which is to facilitate production by better seeding and cultivation, the grading and standardization and the marketing of farm products in general. It is an organization in line with the most advanced thought on agricultural matters and promises great benefit to its membership. Mr. Bally is one of those most enthusiastic in the Exchange and is a stockholder and director.

Mr. and Mrs. Bally attend the Methodist Episcopal Church at Kalispell, of which Mrs. Bally is a member. Politically he makes his choice of candidates and measures with little respect to party lines. He is a member of the fraternal Order of Elks. Mr. and Mrs. Bally have utilized their resources and opportunities wisely, and have ideals to guide them, believing in a full and well ordered life. During the early summer of 1920 they enjoyed an interesting excursion, accompanied by their three daughters, taking an automobile tour through Washington, Oregon and California.

Henry Thien established and has been one of the active officials of the State Bank of Ryegate for the past ten years. Mr. Thien was formerly engaged in banking and in other lines of commercial activity in Minnesota and North Dakota. He has achieved much business success, is a man highly regarded in his home community, and has also reared a family to do him honor, several of his sons having made patriotic records during the World war.

Mr. Thien was born at Richmond, Minnesota, December 12, 1863. His father, Joseph Thien, was born in Hanover, Germany, in 1821, son of a Hanoverian farmer. Joseph Thien as a young man was employed in the postal service in Germany. In 1846 he came to the United States, and was a general contractor at St. Louis for a number of years. In 1861 he went to Minnesota, then a pioneer country, and established his home on new land at Richmond. He acquired extensive land interests and developed a large farm there. He was retired after 1886 and lived at Richmond until his death in 1894. He always considered the interests of the community his own, held several local offices, was a democrat in politics and a member of the Catholic Church. Joseph Thien married Maria Helena Terhorst, who was born in Hanover in 1828 and died at Richmond, Minnesota, in 1901. They were the parents of five children: Catherine, who died at Richmond aged fourteen; Anna, who died at Richmond, where her husband, John Suerken, a retired farmer, still lives; Henry; Margaret, wife of A. Abeln, a farmer at Richmond, Minnesota; and Josephine, who died young.

Henry Thien acquired a rural school education in Stearns County, Minnesota, and graduated in 1880 in the commercial course of St. John's University at Collegeville in the same county. His business career comprises a record of forty years. For two years he was a deputy in some of the county offices of Stearns County, spent 1½ years in the office of D. B. Searle, an attorney at St. Cloud, was for two years cashier of the Bank of Melrose, Minnesota, and then organized and for four years was cashier of the Bank of Browerville, Minnesota. Leaving his native state he went to Bisbee, North Dakota, and was actively associated there with the banking and lumber business from 1897 to 1910.

Mr. Thien identified himself with Ryegate in 1911, and soon afterward organized the State Bank. He was its cashier for several years and since 1918 has been vice president and active manager. The other officers of the bank are: P. A. Hilbert, president; and H. G. Jacobson, cashier. The bank has performed a distinctive service to Musselshell County. It has a capital of $20,000, surplus and undivided profits of $20,000, and its deposits aggregate $250,000. Mr. Thien is also president of the Hilbert-Thien Company, handling real estate and loans at Ryegate.

In politics he is a republican, is a member of the Town Council of Ryegate, and is affiliated with the Catholic Church. Mr. Thien married at St. Cloud, Minnesota, in 1886, Miss Ida Huhn, daughter of Rudolph and Elizabeth (Mockenhaupt) Huhn, her mother still living at St. Cloud. The father, who died at St. Cloud, was one of the first residents of that Minnesota community, going there in 1858 and for many years was a furniture merchant. The oldest of Mr. Thien's children is Robert R., who attended St. John's University and several business colleges and is now in the advertising business at Detroit, being vice president of the Walter F. Zimmer Company of that city. In September, 1917, he enlisted, was trained at Camp Dix, New Jersey, and was commissioned first lieutenant in infantry. He was mustered out of the army in December, 1918. The second child is Clara, a graduate of the School of Arts at Detroit and the wife of Floyd Dickinson, who is in the automobile business at Spokane, Washington. Leo H. Thien, who graduated from the State Agricultural College at Fargo, North Dakota, is a civil engineer by profession and a resident of New York City. In the early summer of 1917 he enlisted, was trained at Camp Lee, Virginia, joined the Two Hundred and Fourteenth Engineers, and went overseas in June, 1918. He performed some of the duties for which the American engineers were noted in the St. Mihiel and Argonne campaigns, and was returned to this country in February, 1919, and mustered out with the rank of first lieutenant. The fourth of the family is Frances K., a graduate of the Fargo High School and in the employ of the State Bank of Ryegate. Edmund J. Thien, who joined the Montana National Guards while a student in the State Agricultural College at Bozeman, did duty on the Mexican border in 1916 and in 1917 was called again to the Federal service, attending the officers' training school at the Presidio, California, and was commissioned a second lieutenant. Later he joined the Aviation Corps, and was in that department until mustered out in November, 1919. He was killed in an accident at Big Timber July 31, 1920, while engaged in electrical work at that place. The younger children of Mr. Thien are: Raymond, a fruit farmer at Grandview, near Yakima, Washington; Lucile, a graduate of the Billings High School and at home; Erminilde, a student in St. Vincent's Academy, Helena; Wilfred, who attends the Billings High School; and Harold, the youngest, who attends the parochial schools at Billings.

J. Peter P. Healy is a well educated lawyer, and has been in successful and active practice at Melstone for the past six years. The ownership of considerable farm and ranch properties around Melstone affords him diversion from his law practice.

Mr. Healy was born near Marcus, Cherokee County, Iowa, January 17, 1883. His father, John Healy, was born in County Cork, Ireland, in 1842, son of Thomas Healy, who spent all his life as a farmer in that county and died during a great epidemic in 1849. John Healy was then seven years of age, and at the age of ten years was brought by his mother to America. His mother first settled in Boston, Massachusetts, in 1852, later moved to Lincoln, Illinois, where John Healy grew to manhood and married and where he followed farming. In 1881 he moved to a farm in Cherokee County, Iowa, in 1890 went to Sioux County, Iowa, and in 1907 to the vicinity of Alvord, Lyon County, Iowa. He still owns his farm there but is now living retired at West Sioux Falls, South Dakota. He is a democrat, a Catholic, and a former member of the Ancient Order of Hibernians. John Healy married Barbara Kaufmann, who was born in Wisconsin in 1851 and died at Alvord, Iowa, in 1911. Their children are: T. J. Healy, a carpenter and plasterer in North Dakota; N. A. Healy, a farmer and barber at Bainville, Montana; J. Peter P. Healy; Daniel J. Healy, who has a farm devoted to full blood Poland China hogs at West Sioux Falls, South Dakota; Mary, who is Sister M. Emmanuel in Mount St. Clair at Clinton, Iowa; Eme, Sister M. Hyacinthe in the same convent; Valencia, who is still pursuing her studies.

J. Peter P. Healy attended the public schools at Rock Valley, Iowa, also a Catholic school there, was a student in rural schools in Lyon County, Iowa, and graduated from the high school at Inwood in 1904. Soon afterward he entered the University of Iowa, taking two years of the general college course and finishing the law course and receiving his LL. B. degree in 1909. Mr. Healy began practice at Morristown, South Dakota, in the fall of 1909, but in 1913 came to Montana and for six months traveled as a collector with headquarters at Billings. In February, 1914, he located at Melstone and opened his law office on the 2d of March. He has since conducted a general law practice and owns his office building on Main Street. He also has a modern home on First Avenue, West, and his farms and ranches comprise a half section 3½ miles northwest of Melstone and another 320 acres nine miles southeast.

Mr. Healy has performed the duties of United States commissioner at Melstone since 1915. He is a republican, a Catholic, a third degree Knight of Columbus, having affiliation with Miles City Council No. 1518, and is a member of the Musselshell County Bar Association and the Commercial Law League of America. He is also secretary of the Melstone Commercial Club.

In 1916, at Melstone, he married Miss Cecile H. Aikins, daughter of Charles F. and Harriet (Fisher) Aikins. Her father homesteaded in 1911, and he and his wife still live on their ranch seven miles southeast of Melstone. Mrs. Healy is a graduate of the high school of West Liberty, Iowa. Mr. and Mrs. Healy have two children: J. Peter P., Jr., born March 12, 1917; and Barbara Harriet, born May 13, 1918.

Cornelius Francis Kelley was born at Mineral Hill, Nevada, February 10, 1875, son of Jeremiah C. and Hannah (Murphy) Kelley. His parents located at Butte, Montana, in April, 1883, when he was eight years of age, and he acquired his early education in that city, graduating from the Butte High School in 1892. He received the degree of LL. B. from the University of Michigan in 1898, and at once began general practice in Butte. He served as assistant county attorney of Silver Bow County, Montana, from 1899 to 1901, and during that same period was a member of the Montana House of Representatives. In 1900 he was a candidate of the independent democratic party for Congress.

In 1901 Mr. Kelley entered the legal department of the Anaconda Copper Mining Company at Butte as a member of the staff. He was appointed chief counsel in 1908. In 1911 he became vice president and a director and in 1918 was elected president of the company, which office he now holds.

Mr. Kelley is also president and a director of the Inspiration Consolidated Copper Company, the Intermountain Power Company, International Smelting Company and the Butte, Anaconda and Pacific Railway Company. He is vice president and a director of the Potrerillos Railway Company, the Santiago Mining Company, the Andes Copper Mining Company and the Greene Cananea Copper Company. He is a director of the Andes Exploration Company of Delaware, Andes Exploration Company of Maine, Butte Water Company, Raritan Copper Works, United Metals Selling Company, International Lead Refining Company, Anaconda Lead Products Company, Arizona Oil Company, Guaranty Trust Company of New York and Western Montana National Bank of Missoula, Montana.

Mr. Kelley is a member of the American Institute of Mining Engineers, the American Bar Association and the Montana State Bar Association. He is a member of the Silver Bow Club of Butte, Montana, the Montana Club of Helena, Montana, and, in New York City, has membership in the University of Michigan Club, Metropolitan Club, The Links, New York Athletic Club, Sleepy Hollow Country Club and Rocky Mountain Club.

Mr. Kelley is a Catholic in religion, and a member of the Knights of Columbus, the Ancient Order of Hibernians and the Elks. He votes as a democrat.

On June 3, 1903, he married Miss Mary Tremblay, of Missoula, Montana, a daughter of Dr. J. A. Tremblay, a distinguished Montana physician. They have five daughters, Katherine, Dorothy, Frances, Cornelia and Mary.

Frank E. Hardy is a Richland County farmer and at the present time one of the board of county commissioners. He dates his permanent advent into the county from the 9th of June, 1909. Like most homeseekers of the Northwest, he immediately began looking for a proper place to exercise his homestead right to a part of the public domain, and selected its site two miles from Sioux Pass, in the northeast portion of the county.

Mr. Hardy, however, began his Montana career at Mondak, whither he arrived by train from Wisconsin, a young, unmarried man, and his first home was the proverbial shack of lumber, shingled and containing three rooms. He brought with him twelve head of horses, with the intention of engaging extensively in dry farming.

He was accompanied on the trip to this state by his brother John T. Hardy, and they obtained homesteads near each other, and are still neighbors and farmers. A sister also came with them, she being now Mrs. William Lewis, and this family are also located in the community and are numbered among the homemakers of the county. But this trio of Hardys were not the pioneers of the family in Montana, that honor resting with Sam Hardy, who was closely followed in this westward journey by Charles and Henry Hardy, and these three brothers formed a company and engaged in the cattle business in the northern part of old Dawson County, and they have since remained in that locality or not far removed from it.

Frank E. Hardy has followed his early plans as regarding farming and grain growing, and is numbered among those who have achieved success as agriculturists in this locality. Of the ten crop years he has witnessed in Montana in not one has he failed to harvest a crop, his wheat, oats and flax yielding him twenty-six bushels to the acre, and alfalfa is one of his favorite forage crops, for it matures well on dry land. Mr. Hardy's success has permitted him to add to his domain 280 acres by purchase, and his entire 1¼ sections is in one body and all fenced and improved with substantial buildings. His residence is a seven-room house, modern in its appointments, and his barn, 42 by 38 feet in dimensions, furnishes ample accommodations for the horses used on the ranch.

During the time Mr. Hardy has been a resident of Richland County from ten to fifteen school districts have been formed from the original one on which he settled, and he is now located in school district No. 26 and has been active in maintaining the standard of its schools. Since becoming a voter he has taken an active part in local politics, and in 1912 he was elected a member of the board of county commissioners to succeed C. P. Collins. He was re-elected at the expiration of his first term, defeating his fusion opponent who was endorsed by the non-partisan league. He has served with Commissioners John Bawden and O. H. Conkrite, and with Commissioners Henry Mikler and Arthur White, the two latter, with Mr. Hardy, constituting the present Board of Commissioners of Richland County. He has worked diligently for road building and road equipment, and has been influential in the purchase of two caterpillar tractors by the county for the improvement of its roads. During his tenure of office two elections have been called to test the sentiment of the county regarding the erection of a new court house, but both elections failed of endorsement by the voters. On petition of the board of county commissioners ordered an election for the purpose of obtaining local option, which petition was sustained by the voters and Richland County thereby became the first local option county in the state. On two occasions Mr. Hardy has been present at board meetings for the purpose of passing upon applications for seed grain for farmers, as provided by the statute of the State of Montana.

Although so closely identified with Montana and its interests for so many years Mr. Hardy is a native son of Wisconsin, born in LaCrosse County of that state October 30, 1881, and his boyhood days were spent on his father's farm there and his education was received in the county's district schools. His father, William Hardy, a native of Dublin, Ireland, had located in Wisconsin in 1866, and he died there during the childhood of his son Frank. His widow, who bore the maiden name of Mary Ann Agnew, still resides at LaCrosse, and she has attained the age of seventy-three years. She is the mother of the following children: Henry, John, Samuel, Frank E. and Charley, all of whom reside in the region of Sidney, Montana; Jennie, the wife of George Brannen, manager of the Jensen Coal Company of Fairview, Montana; Lizzie, wife of W. M. Lewis, of Sioux Pass, Montana; and Sadie, wife of W. M. Hartley, of LaCrosse, Wisconsin.

Mr. Hardy has never married, nor has he ever carried life insurance or joined a fraternal order. He indulges his love for reading, and this love for books and the current literature is perhaps his greatest pleasure in life. He was reared in a home of democratic influence and has supported the principles of that party, his first presidential vote having been cast for Judge Parker as against Colonel Roosevelt, the competitor of Judge Parker in the presidential election of 1904.

Andrew F. Nohle. In the sphere of business and in the domain of livestock this history of Montana and the Northwest is brilliant with the deeds and achievements of those yet living and yet active in the affairs of men. The pioneers of the first and the second settlement era have long since released their hold and passed into their reward, and those who followed them are the ancients of today and many of them are still factors in the creation of wealth and forceful in the administration of community affairs. Standing out conspicuously among this citizenship in Richland County, and among those whose efforts have counted for both the individual and the state, is Andrew F. Nohle, early settler, ranchman and financier.

He can be claimed one of the contingent of stockmen whose coming hither dates from the last decade of the old century, but he is, nevertheless, early, for he passed over a somewhat trackless region when he felt his way up the Big Muddy in 1892, trailing his cattle toward a new grazing ground, halted them on Milk River and established his first Montana ranch five miles north of Saco.

R. E. Hohl

It was the second trip this young and earnest plainsman had made to the Treasure State when he located his ranch on Milk River, and he had been absent from the region six years since his first incursion into it. The unfavorable impression made by a drouth-stricken country upon his memory had not faded away, but he had nourished the hope that climatic action had changed so as to render the region tenable for the stockman and, encouraged by this hope, he returned to a grass-green and well-watered country instead of the arid and parched country it was before.

Upon his maiden visit to the state Mr. Nohle ascended the Missouri as far west as Fort Assiniboine and there crossed over into Canada and returned east along the southern border of the British possessions to his old ranging grounds in North Dakota. He had gone into the Mouse River country of Dakota ten years before, when there was no white man eyeing the region as a place of abode and when the Indian and the game animals of the plains were almost undisturbed by the encroachments of the "pale face." He therefore knew the West and felt unafraid to enter this Montana country and take his chances in the stock business with the few "cow men" who had preceded him.

Mr. Nohle was twenty-eight years old when he crossed the Red River of the North and breathed for the first time the inspiring ozone of the Northwest. Accompanied by his brother Albert he left Lowville, New York, in 1881 and reached Grand Forks, Dakota, his destination, and there his lot was soon cast with stockmen who had much to do with shaping his destiny and centering his affections upon the stock business. He became a ranch hand, as did his brother, and was employed by men who subsequently chose him as their foreman to establish their new ranch far out on Mouse River, as it was then, and some distance west of Devils Lake.

After a year at Grand Forks, R. M. Prouty, L. B. Richardson and Charley Sprout, associated as ranchmen, sent the Nohle brothers with cattle out to the frontier and, as foreman, Andrew chose his location on Mouse River. They went out with oxteam, too primitive to think of now when we have the automobile and the flying-machine, and the wildness of the region can be best conveyed to the reader by stating that six months passed without a letter or a newspaper reaching their camp. There were no evidences of civilization present save what they brought along; just the Indians and the sneaking coyote and the game animals of the prairie for neighbors. His service commended itself so favorably to his employers that Andrew soon became a member of the firm, and he continued so until after he had established himself at Nohle's Lake many years later.

The Nohle ranch at Saco proved to be but temporary, and during the four years spent there Mr. Nohle worked the trail leading north from the Panhandle of Texas and drove two herds of cattle for the Prouty-Nohle Cattle Company over it, passing through Colorado and Wyoming to the Milk River Ranch. It was the old "N Bar N" Trail, and over it thousands of head of cattle were driven from the Lone Star State and the footprints of many old "cow men" still living in Montana were at some time made along its sinuous way. The Prouty-Nohle Company ran its stock under the brands "NP" and "lazy p" on the point of the left shoulder, and shipped its beef to Chicago from Hinsdale, Malta or Glasgow.

Leaving the Milk River, Mr. Nohle dropped down the Missouri River to the mouth of the Yellowstone and established a new ranch and a new headquarters at Nohle's Lake, just within the State of North Dakota. This region was new and untamed, and he had the use of everything nature offered humanity. His stock ranged up the Missouri and over the region north of it close to the international line, and his brand became widely known over Eastern Montana. With the passage of time he developed an extensive ranch and continued an active stockman until 1919, when other matters so crowded in upon him that he established a tenant upon his home ranch and diverted his attention to his other interests.

The Nohle ranch at Nohle's Lake is an achievement wrought with years of toil and waiting. It is a gem among ranch-farms on the Yellowstone and can be referred to as the centerpiece of the mosaic which its owner has conceived and laid. From a stock ranch the property gradually became conspicuous as a farm, and 1,600 acres of its valley lands have been brought under cultivation. It was on this ranch that the famous "Grimm" alfalfa made its first appearance, a plant that has popularized itself since and has taken a strong hold on the affections of ranchmen of the West. The erection of his splendid farm buildings, the development of irrigation under the Yellowstone Valley Project and the growing of alfalfa successfully all contribute toward placing Mr. Nohle in the category of practical men of the farm. He is called the "Father of Alfalfa in the Yellowstone Valley."

Adverting to Mr. Nohle's going to the Mouse River country, and reciting some of the incidents which affected the community where he lived, it was but a short time after his settlement until homeseekers began coming in and a civil community began to assume form. Thomas Freeman brought his family into the region in 1885, and many years later Mr. Nohle chose Thomas' second daughter for his wife. His salary as ranch foreman enabled Andrew to acquire cattle interests increasingly, and he sold many milch cows to the new settlers and many yoke of steers as well, the latter providing the horsepower to improve and cultivate the soil for the maintenance of his family. The claim furnished its owner a source of credit, for he could pledge it for his debts, and it was this provision of our law makers that made it possible for North Dakota and Montana homesteaders with bare hands and large families to stay.

As new settlers with little means came into the country they were often furnished work at hay harvest or other busy season by Andrew Nohle, and he thus contributed to their welfare in time of real need. This aid helped them to "hold fast" and to acquire a home, whereas without it many would have had to abandon the country, and their attempt to make a home in it would have proved a failure. There are many who will recall the winter of 1886-7, and the killing frost of the latter year, which worked hardships upon the weary and worn settlers and in which suffering was intensified by the seven years of drouth which followed before the climax of adverse weather conditions was reached. During these years of affliction Mr. Nohle and his company shipped in three cars of corn and oats and distributed the grain free among the settlers, another and stronger exhibition of the coursing of the milk of human kindness through his veins.

The brother who came into the West with Andrew Nohle prospered as a stockman and was for a period a partner of L. B. Richardson, but was carrying on a business of his own when he was drowned in Mouse River in 1894, while still unmarried, and his community mourned the death of a highly respected young man.

While a resident of North Dakota, Andrew Nohle deviated somewhat from the beaten path in which his feet had been trained. He became the organizer of the Dakota Trading Company at Alexander, and spent some years in mercantile life. He accepted some of the responsibility and burden of citizenship when McKenzie County was organized and became a member and chairman of the first Board of County Commissioners by appointment of Governor E. Y. Searles. He was three times elected a commissioner, was a member of the board that built the courthouse and jail at Shafer and started off the road work and bridge building in his county besides placing the county's affairs upon a business basis. Among his colleagues were some of the most earnest citizens and good business men of the county. His politics are republican, and he is a member of the Masonic fraternity and of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks.

Turning to the origin of Andrew F. Nohle, we find his birth occurred in Lewis County, New York, and that his boyhood days were spent on his father's farm, where he learned the lessons of industry and thrift which have characterized him through life. His education was obtained in the country at home and was sufficient to furnish a good foundation for the broader training which came with experience in after years. His father was Charles Nohle, born in the Rhine country of Germany, came to the United States when a young married man and settled in Lewis County, New York. The father passed his life as a farmer and gave his political support, when he became a citizen, to the republican party, which elected him supervisor of his district. He and his wife were Lutheran in religion, and he passed away when sixty-three years of age. Mrs. Nohle bore the maiden name of Wilhelmina Smith, and died when sixty-one. Their children were Albert, who is mentioned above; Andrew F., the Fairview banker; Abbie, who became Mrs. Patrick Martell and died in Jefferson County, New York; Florence married Ed Smith and died in that state; Minnie became the wife of George Rector, of Los Angeles, California; Earnest passed away in New York; George W. is engaged in the cattle business in McKenzie County, North Dakota; Constant is a resident of Lowville, New York, and Amelia, who is Mrs. Miner, wife of a "Miles City boy," resides in Los Angeles.

Andrew F. Nohle had passed far beyond his majority year when he left the parental roof to come West and to quit the scenes of his childhood forever. He brought with him such capital as he had accumulated as a farm hand and began his career with his hands among the free and easy-going people of the frontier in North Dakota. How well he carried himself and how carefully he followed business principles in the conduct of his affairs is attested by the varied interests and valuable property he owns.

In the childhood and youth of Fairview, Montana, which knows Mr. Nohle so well, he purchased an interest in Delaney Brothers' Bank, and thus identified himself with the welfare of the town and with a new business field. He subsequently acquired all the interests of the Delaneys in the bank, chartered the institution as the First State Bank of Fairview on August 22, 1908, and capitalized it at $10,000. July 17, 1913, the State Bank, of which he was then president, nationalized and became the First National Bank of Fairview, with a capital of $25,000, and of this bank he was chosen president. He is president of the First State Bank of Buford, organized in 1906, and of the Buford Mercantile Company, organized in 1901.

While we were winning the World war he became a large investor in federal securities and encouraged everywhere the support of the war to free the world of autocracy. He has ever shown an interest in the education of the young, and in Dakota he was a partisan of district consolidation and became chairman of the School Board of his consolidation district.

In the month of February, 1917, Andrew F. Nohle married the girl whom he had known in childhood and whose father, Thomas Freeman, became one of his early neighbors on Mouse River. The wedding occurred at LaGrande, Oregon, and Tena Freeman was installed as mistress of the bachelor home of her husband at Nohle's Lake. Mrs. Nohle was born at Collingwood, Canada, and as a child of the West entered into the spirit of her husband's affairs. Like him, she is responsive to the demands of the present in preparation for the future and jealous of the customs of the times before the turmoil and confusion of the World war. Satisfied with the rewards which have been bestowed for his labor, content with the possession of ample means for the future and blessed with true friends who appreciate his qualities as a man and a citizen, Andrew F. Nohle approaches his "three-score-and-ten" in the full assurance of a well-spent life.

HARRISON J. FREEBORN. While qualifying himself for the profession of law, in which he is well established at Butte, Mr. Freeborn, who came to Butte eleven years ago, spent some seven or eight years with the East Butte Copper Mining Company, and when he left he resigned the responsibilities of four of five positions that had been concentrated under his personal management.

Mr. Freeborn was born at Erie, Pennsylvania, February 17, 1890, and is a young man who has won his way and his advancement largely by his own self reliant efforts. His grandfather, John Freeborn, spent all his life in County Armagh, Ireland, where he was a land owner and agriculturist. John Freeborn, father of Harrison J., was born in County Armagh in 1853, lived there to the age of twenty-one, and on coming to the United States in 1874 located at Erie, Pennsylvania. He did some farming in Northeastern Pennsylvania and then for a time was associated with a farm implement company, covering the district around Erie and Corey. In 1901 he moved to Iowa and was an official and stockholder in the Citizens National Bank of Des Moines until he retired in 1906. He is still a resident of Des Moines and is a republican and a Methodist. In 1878, at Erie, Pennsylvania, he married Agnes Brown, who was born in Newry, County Armagh, Ireland, in 1862 and came to the United States with her parents at the age of fifteen. The Brown family located at Erie. Her parents were Robert and Martha Brown. Her father was born in Ireland in 1840, for many years was an employe of the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railway Company, and died at Erie in 1916. Her mother died at Erie in 1899. John Freeborn and wife had a family of six children: Alexander, who lives on a farm in Erie County, Pennsylvania; William J.; Madeline, wife of Ernest Susong, a farmer at Downey, Idaho; James R., timekeeper for the East Butte Copper Mining Company and a resident of Butte; Harrison J.; and Dora, who lives with her parents. The son William J. has for many years been identified with the United States army and is a captain in the regulars now located at Norfolk, Virginia. At the time of the Spanish-American war he enlisted in the navy as a sailor, and was on the same ship with Captain Hobson and volunteered to sink the Merrimac in the harbor, one of the greatest exploits ever credited to the American Navy. After that war he enlisted in the army, and was in the Philippine campaign against Aguinaldo. During the World war he had charge of the Base Hospital at Fort Riley, Kansas.

Harrison J. Freeborn attended the public schools of Erie, Pennsylvania, through the seventh grade, and finished his sophomore year in the high school at DesMoines, Iowa. On leaving home he spent a year working in the mines of the Black Hills, and in the spring of 1909 came to Butte and began employment in the mines of this vicinity. In September, 1909, he entered the Butte High School, and continued his studies until May of the following year. During that summer he again worked in the mines, and was again in high school from September, 1910, until January, 1911. At the latter date he left school to go to work for the East Butte Copper Mining Company as a laborer. At the end of eight months he was promoted to store keeper, and from time to time additional responsibilities were assigned him until he was storekeeper, timekeeper, cost accountant, assistant purchasing agent, and performed all these varied duties until he resigned in November, 1918. In spite of this busy program Mr. Freeborn was diligently studying law at night, and was qualified and admitted to the bar in June, 1918. For the past two years he has been a rising attorney with a general practice and is located in the Phoenix Building at Butte.

Mr. Freeborn is affiliated with the Methodist Church, is an independent democrat in politics, and owns a modern home at 1229 West Platinum, the finest residential street in Butte. On January 18, 1911, at Butte, he married Miss Anne Donnelly, daughter of James and Margaret (O'Toole) Donnelly. Her mother lives in Butte, where her father, a mine foreman, died in 1916. Mrs. Freeborn completed her junior year in the Central High School at Butte. To their marriage were born four children: James D., born March 24, 1912; William B., born October 19, 1913; Harriet A., born in 1916; and Margaret Patricia, born November 22, 1919.

Charles H. Clapp, who is president of the Montana School of Mines at Butte, has been professor of geology in that institution since 1916 and is one of the leading authorities in the West in economic geology, mining and metallurgy.

Doctor Clapp, who is a graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, was born at Boston, June 5, 1883, being a member of an old New England colonial family, the Clapps having come from England and settled in Massachusetts about the beginning of the eighteenth century. His father, Peleg F. Clapp, was born at Scituate, Massachusetts, in 1823, was reared and married there and spent an active life in Boston as a builder and contractor. He died in 1893. He was a democrat and a faithful member of the Unitarian Church and also belonged to the Masonic fraternity. In 1861 he enlisted in a Massachusetts regiment of infantry and was all through the war as a soldier. Peleg F. Clapp married Mary Manson, who was born at Scituate in 1845 and died at Boston in 1890. Of their six children Charles H. is the youngest, and most of them have followed professional careers. The oldest, Mary, is a teacher in the public schools of Boston. Harry is a patent attorney, practicing in Chicago. James is a Boston architect, Philip is a public accountant at Boston, while Lucy is the wife of Howard W. Read, connected with the Baker-Vawter Corporation and living at Benton Harbor, Michigan.

Charles H. Clapp attended the public schools of Boston while a boy, graduating from high school in 1901. He received his degree Bachelor of Science in mining engineering from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1905. While he has had an almost uninterrupted career as a teacher, Doctor Clapp has also performed many practical services as a scientist. From 1905 to 1907 he was instructor in mining and geology in the University of North Dakota at Grand Forks, and at the same time was assistant state geologist. From 1907 to 1910 he was instructor in geology in his alma mater, the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and at the same time was carrying on graduate studies which led to his degree Doctor of Philosophy in 1910. In the meantime, beginning in 1908 and continuing until 1913, he was geologist for the Canadian Geological Survey, most of his field investigations and other work being done in Columbia. From 1913 to 1916 he held the chair of geology in the State University of Arizona, at the same time being state geologist and also geologist for the United States Geological Survey. He was then called to the Montana State School of Mines as professor of geology, and in 1918 became acting president and in 1919 president of the institution.

Doctor Clapp is a member of the Geological Society of America, the American Institute of Metallurgical Engineers and the American Association for the Advancement of Science. He is an independent democrat in politics, affiliated with the Unitarian Church, and is a member of the Silver Bow Club and the Rotary Club of Butte. His home is at 1204 West Woolman Street.

April 19, 1911, at Devil's Lake, North Dakota, he married Miss Mary Brennan, daughter of M. H. and Mary (Coyle) Brennan. Her father was a lawyer and died at Devil's Lake, where her mother is still living. Mrs. Clapp is a highly educated woman, being a graduate of the University of North Dakota, from which she received the degrees A. B. and A. M. Doctor and Mrs. Clapp have five children: Daniel, born January 28, 1912; Michael, born October 28, 1913; Mary, born February 16, 1916; Francis, born October 28, 1917; and Lucy, born November 18, 1919.

Alfred W. Eiselein was one of the pioneers of the Town of Roundup, and established the Roundup Record, of which he is the present owner in 1908. He is a successful newspaper man, and has proved one of the ablest and most enterprising citizens of this section of the state.

Mr. Eiselein was born in Carver County, Minnesota, September 9, 1884, son of Adolph and Mina (Ziemer) Eiselein. His father was a native of Germany and was an early settler in Minnesota, where for many years he was a merchant. He also became interested in land ownership and at different times had stock in local newspapers. His wife was also a native of Germany, but they were married in Minnesota.

Alfred Eiselein, who was next to the youngest in the family of eight children, grew up in Carver County and from the age of sixteen lived with the family in Renville County. He is a graduate of the Minneapolis High School and for two years studied art in the Minneapolis School of Fine Arts. As a boy he earned his first money in the newspaper business, and the trade and profession of journalism has been his permanent interest. At the age of twenty he was working as a printer in North Dakota, and conducted several newspapers in that state. In March, 1908, he was among the first arrivals at the new Town of Roundup, Montana, and in the following April established the Record. His chief equipment was an Army hand press. He now has a complete printing establishment with modern equipment, including linotype and cylinder presses, and has made the Record an influence in the steady enlightenment and upbuilding of the community.

Mr. Eiselein is affiliated with the Modern Woodmen of America and the Elks, and in politics is a republican.

DANIEL R. CONWAY, managing editor of the Roundup Record, is one of the forceful men of his profession in Montana, whose flaming sincerity is evidenced in whatever he undertakes. He is an easterner by birth, having come into the world at Fairport, New York, June 27, 1889, a son of Thomas and Eva (Niblock) Conway. Thomas Conway was born at Elmira, New York, and died when only thirty-one years old, in February, 1892. His wife, who was born at Athens, Ontario, Canada, also died in February, 1892, when twenty-seven years old, leaving one child. Thomas Conway was a locomotive engineer on the Rome, Watertown and Ogdensburg Railroad, and lost his life through an accident. In religious faith he was a Roman Catholic. A strong democrat, he gave the candidates and principles of his party an enthusiastic support. For some years prior to his death he was a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers.

Daniel R. Conway was only two years old when his parents died, and was forced to make his own way from the time he was not much more than an infant. His first work was as a newsboy, and as he could he attended the Collegiate Institute at Athens, Ontario, Canada, and Magill University, selling papers and doing janitor work to pay his way through these institutions, having in view one objective, literary labor. His first newspaper connection was with the Athenian as a reporter. This journal was a weekly publication, and Mr. Conway remained with it for three years, and then went with the Union Gazette of Newark, New Jersey, as a reporter. Later still he was with the Cleveland, Ohio, Plaindealer for some time, and then going to Iowa engaged with the Freeman Tribune at Webster City. In 1914 Mr. Conway came to Montana and established the Sentinel at Scobey, Sheridan County, but after two years sold it and was with the Scott's Bluff, Nebraska, Star until in January, 1919, when he located permanently in Roundup as managing editor of the Record, and here his talents receive proper recognition. He belongs to the International Typographical Union. In politics he is a strong republican.

On August 2, 1913, Mr. Conway was married to Helen A. Bryler, born at Webster City, Iowa. Mr. and Mrs. Conway have one daughter, Evelyn. His road to advancement has not been without battles, but he has fought them bravely and honorably, and when opportunity came he was ready.

DANIEL CARDWELL KYLE. The late Daniel Cardwell Kyle was not only one of the most successful cattlemen of Valley County, but he was also one of the most beloved of its citizens, and is not only remembered for his good business judgment, his ability to overcome serious losses, and his foresightedness in meeting the problems of curtailment of the open range and changes in marketing, but also for his open-handed hospitality, his kindness of heart and his flaming sincerity, whch instantly impressed all who came into contact with him. Mr. Kyle's operations were carried on in the vicinity of Saco, in the Milk River Valley, but he was known all over this part of Montana.

Daniel Cardwell Kyle was born in Tennessee, July 25, 1854, but was reared on a farm in Palo Pinto County, Texas, and educated in an academy in that region. His parents, who had gone to Texas in 1858, were William and Prudence (Smith) Kyle, and their only other child was the twin sister of Daniel C., named Sarah, who married a Mr. Conatser, and she died in Palo Pinto County, Texas, leaving three daughters. There both parents also died, leaving Daniel C. the sole survivor of his family. On the site of the old Kyle farm one of the richest oil fields of Texas has been opened up, but the Kyle family is no longer interested in it.

Mr. Kyle's career as a cattleman began when he bought 600 head of cattle from "Lum" Slaughter of Palo Pinto County, Texas, one of the pioneer cattlemen of that region, and took them up to the Panhandle country of the Lone Star State. This was about 1878, and he and his wife began ranching on Salt River, and remained there for eight years, and then sold their holdings for $135,000 and moved to Secorro County, New Mexico, paying $125,000 for a ranch and bought almost a whole county of land. It required much sacrifice and untold labor to even hold his own in that neighborhood, and he failed to get ahead on account of the drouths, so he left that state and shipped everything to Orrin Junction, Wyoming, from whence he brought his possessions across to the Milk River country, and here he spent the remainder of his life.

The advent of Mr. Kyle into Montana bears the date of October, 1892, and he took up land east of Saco, on which he established his ranch and began to run his 10,000 head of cattle. Unfortunately he had not taken into consideration the difference in climate, and during the ensuing winter lost about 90 per cent of them on account of the great frosts and low temperature. When spring came the canons north of Milk River, where he had ranged them, were almost full of the carcasses. This loss was heart-rending, for it wiped out all of the savings and profits of Mr. and Mrs. Kyle during their married life. The majority of people would have been so discouraged that they would have given up the struggle, but they were made of sterner material, and so went to work at once to rebuild their fortune and clear off the $100,000 of debts this loss had occasioned. Notwithstanding these losses Mr. Kyle never lost his faith in the cattle industry, and once he realized the obstacles planned to overcome them, and so succeeded that when he died on July 19, 1910, he was one of the wealthy men of this region. His range brand was "NE," and he ran his horses under his son's brand, "KA." He never tried to run as many cattle again as he had when he came into the state, but he had those of better strain, being nearly all good grades of Herefords, and far more valuable than the Mexican "doggies" he drove into Montana.

Being among the first settlers of this neighborhood, the Kyle family became acquainted with the cowboys of the early days, who demonstrated their appreciation of the hospitality and friendship offered them by denying themselves many of the comforts of life in order to help their new neighbors get on their feet after their great loss. Some of those former "cowpunchers" are still in the neighborhood, but are now men of prominence, and are still numbered among the warm friends of the Kyles, among them being Pleas Price, John Survant, J. L. Truscott, Harry A. Vagg and Colonel Saunders of Helena, all of whom loved Mr. Kyle for his inherent worth and his loyalty to them and his ever willingness to aid any of them in time of need.

Daniel C. Hyle Mary A. Hyle

A democrat, Mr. Kyle was appointed county commissioner of Valley County after it was separated from Dawson County, and later served as sheriff. He was active in all public affairs, and was very prominent as a Mason, Kyle Lodge, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, of Hinsdale, being named in his honor. He was a Methodist, having joined the church in Texas while on a trip back there to bury one of his children, and upon his return to Montana worked in harmony with "Brother Van" in all religious activities of this region, and the two were warm personal friends. The Kyle ranch on Milk River was the first place, it is believed, that the noted Montana preacher visited in this region, and he made it his abiding place when he was in the locality. Mrs. Kyle was very active in the work of the church at Saco, being one of its first trustees and serving on its first board with C. W. Nelson and Cecil Taylor.

On March 17, 1876, Mr. Kyle was married to Miss Mary A. McAdams, a daughter of Capt. William C. McAdams, a stockman and Indian fighter of Palo Pinto County, Texas, who settled in Texas years before the war between the states, and as a youth of seventeen years participated in the Mexican war. His wife bore the maiden name of Anna Alexander and she was of English birth. Mr. and Mrs. McAdams had five daughters and two sons who reached maturity, those surviving being as follows: Mrs. Kyle, who was born October 6, 1856; Mrs. William Slaughter, of Dallas, Texas; and Mrs. Carrie Clay, of Sayre, Oklahoma. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Kyle are as follows: Quinnie L., who is the wife of Allen Shaw, of Phillips County, Montana; Callie, who is the wife of Charlie Peterson, of Glasgow, Montana; and Daniel McAdams, of Saco.

Daniel McAdams Kyle as a member of the Montana National Guard went to the Mexican border and spent several months helping to guard the Rio Grande frontier from invasion. Soon after his return home he, with the remainder of his company, was called into the service of the World war, and went overseas to France with the 163rd Infantry, known as the old "Second Montana." He was assigned to the Depot Brigade, was in the troop training service and was mustered out as a second lieutenant, reaching home early in 1919.—By J. H. Christensen.

James H. Rowe has been a figure in the business life of Butte for over twenty years, and has achieved a place where he is recognized as one of the best authorities on real estate in the city.

Mr. Rowe was born in Chicago August 6, 1874, son of Henry C. and Ellen (Regan) Rowe. His ancestors, of Irish extraction, lived in New England and Canada for several generations. Mr. Rowe acquired his early education in the De LaSalle Institute at Chicago, the Christian Brothers College at St. Louis, and the University of Chicago.

Coming to Butte in 1899, he at once began activities as a factor in local real estate and fire insurance circles. He is president and owner of the Lawlor and Rowe Corporation, which has played a prominent part in the building development, and has also handled some of the largest and most valuable transactions in real estate.

Mr. Rowe is a man of education, of liberal public spirit, and has never failed to identify himself with any movement for the public good or with any patriotic cause. He is a democrat, but is more concerned with the good government of the community than with the success of partisan movements. He is one of the active and valued members of the Butte Chamber of Commerce, is a member of the Silver Bow Club, the Butte Curling Club and the Butte Country Club, and is affiliated with the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. He married Miss Josephine Sullivan, and their two children are Helen and James H.

Donald A. Petrie. When it is remembered that the majority of men never rise above the ordinary, but live out their lives in obscurity, and, dying, are forgotten, all the more credit must be accorded those who have enriched their communities, benefited their associates, raised a higher standard for the generations to come, and demonstrated the worth of individual endeavor. The aggressive, public-spirited men of any locality plan for the future as well as the present, and so shape the future of the community. Donald A. Petrie, one of the leading merchants of Martinsdale, is accepted as a man of prudence, safe and reliable, and his advice on business transactions is sought by many.

Donald A. Petrie was born in Scone, Scotland, on June 3, 1875, a son of David Petrie. The birth of David Petrie occurred in Perthshire, Scotland, in 1847, and his death at Stirling, Scotland, in 1915. He was reared in Perthshire, where he spent the greater part of his life, and so impressed the authorities with his dependability and ability to enforce the laws that for many years he was kept in office as a member of the police force, his period of service extending over thirty-five years. After his retirement from its arduous duties he moved to Stirling, where he died. In politics he was a tory. A very religious man, he found expression for his faith in the creed of the Presbyterian Church, of which he was a devout member until the close of his career in this world.

David Petrie was united in marriage with Annie Farquharson, born in Spital of Glenshee, Perthshire, Scotland, in 1856, who died at Stirling, Scotland, in 1910. They had the following children: John, who lives at Lincoln, Nebraska, is a livestock agent for the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad; Andrew, who is deceased; David, who is a grocery merchant of Buffalo, New York; James, who died in childhood; Alexander, who handles men's furnishings at Sheridan, Wyoming; George, who is a sheepraiser of Omaha, Nebraska; Donald A., whose name heads this review; James, who is a merchant of Opal, Wyoming; Peter, who is in partnership with James at Opal, Wyoming; Finley, who clerks in the store of his two brothers at Opal, Wyoming; Robert, who lives at London, England, is a painter and decorator; Mary, who married William Malnock, formerly a member of the police force, lives at Stirling, Scotland; and Charles, who died in childhood.

Donald A. Petrie attended the public schools of Perthshire, and remained at Scone until he was nine years of age, when his parents moved to Bankefoot, Perthshire, Scotland. When he was fourteen years old he left school, and while still living at home made himself useful to neighboring farmers.

In 1900 Mr. Petrie came to the United States and spent his first three years in this country on a farm owned by his uncle, John Farquharson, in Campbell, Franklin County, Nebraska, but left that district in 1903 and went to Buffalo, Wyoming, and was a clerk in one of its stores for two years. In 1905 Mr. Petrie selected Martinsdale as his field of action, and coming here worked for H. E. Marshall, a merchant, until in June, 1915, when Mr. Petrie bought out his former employer and founded the Martinsdale Mercantile Company in conjunction with V. B. d'Autremont, and they maintain this association today. The store is located on Main Street and is one of the leading mercantile establishments in the eastern part of Meagher County, the trade coming from Meagher and Wheatland counties. Later the company was incorporated, and its present officials are as follows: V. B. d'Autremont, president; Mrs. D. A. Petrie, wife of Donald A. Petrie, vice president; Donald A. Petrie, secretary and treasurer. This store is conducted according to modern ideas, the stock is well assorted, fresh and timely, and exceptional values are given for the money.

Mr. Petrie resides on Main Street. He affiliates with the Presbyterian Church. A Mason, Mr. Petrie belongs to Musselshell Lodge No. 69, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, of Harlowtown, Montana; Harlowtown Chapter No. 22, Royal Arch Masons; Harlowtown Commandery, Knights Templar; and Algeria Temple, Ancient Arabic Order Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, of Helena, Montana. He also belongs to Buffalo Lodge No. 14, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, of Buffalo, Wyoming; and Twodot Lodge, Knights of Pythias, of Twodot, Montana.

In 1902 Mr. Petrie was married at Bloomington, Nebraska, to Miss Anna Robertson, born at Stirling, Scotland, and they have two children, namely: Lillian, who was born on January 4, 1904; and Winifred Grace, who was born on January 1, 1913.

EDWARD PATRICK GRUBER. It is truly said that "no man lives to himself alone," and in nothing is this more clearly shown than in business circles, where each industry is interdependent upon the other, and every new one opens up new avenues along which men may pursue honorable callings. With the invention, manufacture and marketing of the automobile, and its consequent almost universal adoption as the medium of transportation, came an entirely novel opening for the active man with mechanical tastes, that of providing means for the care and repair of these machines, and of the handling of new cars and supplies. Almost over night these garages sprung up, in the beginning of the business many of them being very crude, but they have been improved to meet the requirements of the trade until now they are thoroughly equipped establishments, and are to be found all over the country, even at the cross-roads of any great highway over which there is much automobile traffic. Owing to the fine roads in many parts of the state Montana has thousands of automobiles and attracts to it countless tourists, so that there is an immense demand for first-class garages, and among those who are engaged in operating them the Townsend Garage and Implement Company ranks high, and of this concern Edward Patrick Gruber, of this review, is president, secretary and manager.

Edward Patrick Gruber was born in Broadwater County, Montana, on April 8, 1890, a son of John Gruber. John Gruber was born in Germany in 1852, and was there reared, educated and married, but left his native land in 1880 and came to the United States. After his arrival in this country he located at Buffalo, New York, where he worked for several years in a lumber yard. Then, in 1885, he came to Montana, and for three years was in the employ of Senator W. A. Clarke, after which he took up a homestead in Broadwater County, six miles southwest of Toston, and is still living on this ranch, which he has expanded from its original proportions to its present ones of 640 acres, so that he is one of the pioneers of the state who is now living and prosperous. Since coming to this country and securing his papers of citizenship he has been a strong republican. Prior to coming here, like others of his country, he had the obligatory military training in the German army. The Lutheran Church holds his membership, and he is a very strong churchman.

John Gruber was married to Julia Whitteck, born in 1857, in Germany, and they became the parents of the following children: Mary, who resides in Los Angeles, California; Augusta, who married D. C. Tullmer, an oil salesman of Los Angeles, California; John, who is on the home ranch near Toston; Joseph, who is a rancher of Broadwater County; Edward Patrick, who was fifth in order of birth; and Robert, who is also on the home ranch.

Edward Patrick Gruber attended the rural schools of Broadwater County and the Butte High School through the sophomore year, and until he was sixteen years old remained on his father's ranch. For the subsequent six years he worked in the mines at Butte, and for two years was in the employ of the American Smelting and Refining Company's works at East Helena. His next occupation was that of chauffeur, and he was connected with the Butte Garage of Butte, Montana, where he learned the business very thoroughly. Mr. Gruber then spent some months on his father's ranch, but in the fall of 1914 came to Townsend and was selling agent for automobiles for a year. He then organized the Townsend Garage & Automobile Company, of which he is president, secretary and manager, A. M. Kempton is vice president, and J. E. Ward is treasurer. The garage and implement plant is located on Broadway, where there is a floor space for garage purposes 50 by 146 feet. This is, without exception, the leading garage of Broadwater County, and a general garage and implement business is carried on and Mr. Gruber is agent for Broadwater County of the Buick, Dodge and Reo cars. He carries all kinds of farm implements and specializes on Ford tractors.

Mr. Gruber is a man of other interests, and owns a ranch of 640 acres 2½ miles northwest of Toston, and his modern residence on Cedar Street, Townsend. His company owns the garage and implement building on Broadway. In his religious belief he is a Roman Catholic. He belongs to the Townsend Commercial Club and is an active factor in it.

In June, 1915, Mr. Gruber was united in marriage with Miss Dora A. Dawson, of Butte, Montana, a daughter of John and Alice (Porter) Dawson. Mrs. Dawson is deceased, but Mr. Dawson survives and resides two miles north of Cold Spring, Montana. It was during the early sixties that he came to Montana, and he became one of the prominent men of his region, now owning a large amount of ranch property. Mr. and Mrs. Gruber have the following children: Jack, who was born April 18, 1917; Donald, who was born November 1, 1918; and Dawson, who was born January 25, 1920. Mr. Gruber is a man of strong personality and has won the confidence of the men with whom his business brings him into contact. He possesses that courage and bigger vision which enable him to push ahead and handle large affairs, and do so in such a manner as to result profitably to him and to reflect credit on his community. While his business cares have been very absorbing, he has never neglected what he believed to be his duty in civic matters, and is one of the dependable men of Broadwater County.

MICHAEL HENRY CROWLEY. The M. H. & W. E. Crowley Company is known far and wide as one connected with the vital industry of agriculture, and its members, Michael Henry and William E. Crowley, have contributed much to this region in their work of developing large ranching properties and raising sheep, in their enterprises setting a high standard and in their results proving the wisdom and profit connected with the entry into and continuance at the work for which their talents and training specially fitted them.

Michael Henry Crowley, the senior member of this firm of brothers, was born at Grafton, Ohio, on February 2, 1872, a son of James Crowley, a native of County Clare, Ireland, where he was born on February 2, 1818. He died at Logan, Montana, in June, 1919. Until he was seventeen years old James Crowley lived in his native county, but left it to enlist in the British Army and fought in British India all through the Sepoy rebellion, during which campaign he was wounded three times and received a medal for carrying off two wounded officers from the battlefield under heavy fire. This medal has three clasps, and is among the cherished possessions of his family. He was at the siege of Lucknow and at Koilkonda, India, and in all spent twenty years in that country and then returned to Ireland, was married in County Clare, after which he and his wife came to the United States, arriving here in 1859, and for five years thereafter he was engaged in working in the rolling mill at Portland, Maine. During the period of the war between the states he served his adopted country by drilling raw recruits at nights and on Sundays, being admirably fitted for that work on account of his long service in the British Army. He moved to Cleveland, Ohio, and continued working in rolling mills until 1869, when he bought a farm at Grafton, Ohio. Oil was later discovered on his land, an option was taken on his property and he sold it, realizing a comfortable fortune. In 1876 he went to Knox County, Missouri, and bought a farm, on which he lived for five years, then sold it at a profit, and in 1882 came to Montana and was a rancher in the Logan district until his death. He was a democrat and a Roman Catholic, and stanch in his support of his political and religious principles. His wife bore the maiden name of Maria Bennett, and she was born in Ireland, in the same county as he, and she died at Logan, Montana. Their children were as follows: John J., who is a rancher of Saint Peter's Mission, Cascade County, Montana, was born in Ireland; Patrick, who was born in Scotland, where his parents spent a year, is a business man of Seattle, Washington; Mary, who was born at Portland, Maine, married C. M. Wilson, a rancher of Logan, Montana; Ellen, who was born at Portland, Maine, lives at Helena, Montana; James, who was born at Portland, Maine, is a carpenter and builder of Butte, Montana; Margaret, who was born at Cleveland, Ohio, married John B. Sloan, was a pioneer of Montana, and now is an extensive rancher and stock raiser on the home ranch near Logan, Montana; Catherine, who was born at Grafton, Ohio, married Joseph M. Malin, an extensive rancher and large land owner of the Logan district; Michael H., whose name heads this review; and William E., who is mentioned at length below.

Michael H. Crowley attended the public schools of Edina, Knox County, Missouri, for two years, and was brought to Logan, Montana, by his parents, and there completed the eighth grade work in the rural schools of Gallatin County. He then took a course in the Bozeman Academy and later one along commercial lines in the Montana Agricultural College at Bozeman, leaving it in 1891. Returning to his father's ranch he was employed on it until 1900. In that year he and his brother William E. bought a ranch of 600 acres at Logan, which they still own, and were managers of the Three Forks Land Company until 1910. From 1910 to 1915 they did a very large real estate business at Logan, but in May of that year removed to Townsend, since which time they have bought several ranches in the Missouri Valley and now own several sections of land which they are farming, as well as their magnificent 12,000-acre sheep ranch near Ringling, Montana, where they are doing a vast business as sheep raisers. On May 15, 1915, they opened up a real estate, loan and insurance business, with offices in the Townsend Hotel Building, and developed very valuable connections and did an immense amount of business in all lines, but closed it out so as to devote all of their attention to the sheep industry. Mr. M. H. Crowley owns a modern residence on Broadway. He, like his father, is a democrat and a Catholic. Bozeman Council, Knights of Columbus, holds his membership and has made him a Third Degree Knight, and he also belongs to the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks and formerly belonged to the Woodmen of the World.

In 1900 Mr. Crowley was married to Hannah Malin, a daughter of Walter A. and Farnetta (McAdow) Malin, and she died at Logan in 1908, having borne her husband one daughter, Farnetta, who was born on March 26, 1903. On February 8, 1910, Mr. Crowley was married to Miss Stella Coleman, a daughter of Michael and Margaret (Corcoran) Coleman. Mr. Coleman was born in County Clare, Ireland, in 1850, and died at Miles City, Montana, in 1913, having come to Montana in 1879. He first lived at Miles City, and was in the employ of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company. Mr. Coleman's wife was born in Kentucky in 1851, and died at Livingston, Montana, in 1901. Mrs. Crowley attended Butte Business College, where she secured a practical training. Her brother-in-law, J. W. Goodall, was foreman of the stock at the Roosevelt Ranch at Medora, North Dakota, during the time the late Colonel Roosevelt was engaged in ranching. Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Crowley have the following children: Margaret, who was born October 17, 1912; and Robert, who was born on July 12, 1916.

William E. Crowley, the junior member of the firm of M. H. & W. E. Crowley, was born at Grafton, Ohio, on March 17, 1875. He attended the rural schools of Gallatin County, Montana, and took a business course at the State Agricultural College at Bozeman, Montana. Subsequently he studied law in Notre Dame University at Notre Dame, Indiana. Since returning to Montana he has been in partnership with his brother Michael Henry Crowley in the enterprises mentioned above, their interests being identical. He, too, has a modern residence on Broadway. His political and religious connections are the same as those of his brother. He belongs to Bozeman Council, Knights of Columbus, in which he has been made a Fourth Degree Knight, and he also belongs to the Elks.

William E. Crowley was married to Mary Donaghy, born at Ogden, Utah, and their children are as follows: William, who was born in May, 1912; Mary Virginia, who was born in December, 1913; June, who was born in June, 1916; and Raymond, who was born on June 21, 1918.

During the World war both brothers took a very active part in all local war activities. William E. Crowley was one of the four-minute speakers and had charge of the minute men of Broadwater County and had them thoroughly organized. Through their efforts much effective work was accomplished in assisting the administration in carrying out its projects.

The association of these brothers has been maintained through their maturity, and having always worked in conjunction they have accomplished more than if each had remained alone. Being mere children when brought to the state, they are essentially Montana products, and it would be difficult to find men more thoroughly imbued with the great tolerant spirit of the West than they, or who are more keenly alive to the possibilities of this region, so many of which have been developed through their industry and dependable enthusiasm. They are men who are sure that they live in the finest county, state and country in the world, and are exerting themselves to still further improve conditions so that no one can have any doubt as to the truth of their contentions.

EUGENE MCCARTHY was born in South Amboy, New Jersey, September 12, 1868, a son of Eugene E. and Ellen (Geoghegan) McCarthy. He was second in a family of six, five sons and one daughter.

When he was six months old his parents moved to St. Lawrence County, New York, in which state both of his grandparents lived and died. Four years later his parents moved to Erie County, Ohio, where they took up their residence and remained for six years, or until the spring of 1879, when they again moved westward, this time to Bismarck, in what was then known as the Territory of Dakota, arriving there before the Northern Pacific had crossed the Missouri River. His father being a contractor on the construction work of the Northern Pacific Railroad, the family spent the hard winter of 1879-1880 in the Bad Lands of Dakota in dug-outs, and the problem of food and fuel during this most severe winter was always a serious one.

The spirit of the West still calling, the McCarthy family again moved onward in the spring of 1880 and camped on the Yellowstone River near the present site of the City of Glendive. Here the elder Eugene McCarthy hunted buffalo for their hides. The younger Eugene accompanied his father on his hunts and tended camp while his father shot and skinned the bison.

After a season of buffalo hunting his father returned to construction work on the railroad, and Eugene went to work as a water-boy until he was strong enough to drive a span of mules on a slush scraper during the summer and hauling freight during the winter.

In the winter of 1882-1883 his father took a contract for two miles of construction work on the Northern Pacific in the Jocko Canyon, about two miles east of the present station of Ravalli. When this work was completed the family moved into the Flathead Valley, arriving there in May, 1883.

In speaking of his early boyhood the Judge said it was not a bed of roses that he was raised on, and his recollection is of hard knocks and privations. Many a night in zero weather he has cooked his meager supper of bacon and flap-jacks after shoveling a hole in the snow drift to build his camp fire, and then roll up in his blankets in the freight wagon to sleep from sheer exhaustion, only to roll out the next morning before daylight, get his breakfast, feed his stock, and be ready to start on the road again with the first trace of dawn. Such were the hardships the early pioneer freighter had to contend with, and though the roads be bad and the weather severe he could not delay or dally, for in those days the food and ofttimes the life of the community depended upon the prompt arrival of the freighter.

He states, however, that his early life of hard knocks, the living in the open and subsisting on the simplest and coarsest kind of food have given him a physical constitution that has never deserted him in time of need. He is fifty-two years of age and has never been sick in bed a day in his life, or required a doctor's attention except when injured.

In the winter of 1885-86 the first public school in Flathead Valley was started near the present site of Ball's Crossing, just south of the City of Kalispell, and Eugene was enrolled as one of the first students. A trapper, Henry Robinson, was employed as a teacher, and he seemed to take a special interest in Eugene and endeavored to instill in him a desire to obtain an education.

In the spring of 1887 he left the Flathead Valley and went to work for the Northern Pacific Railroad as timekeeper for an extra gang, returning home again that fall to resume his study at school. . The following spring he again went to work, this time for Sheets & Harrison, a firm of civil engineers who had the contract to survey the northern boundary line of the Flathead Indian Reservation. It was this survey which definitely established the northern boundary of the reservation, it having been in dispute for some years, the Indians claiming that the line should be some twenty miles to the north and including nearly all of the Flathead Lake within the reservation. Young Eugene noticed that the line, as established, left the greater part of the best farming land in the Dayton Creek Valley outside of the reservation, and he decided then and there that when he became of age he would file on a homestead in this fertile valley. This decision was later fulfilled.

In the following year he packed the United States mail from Thompson Falls to Murry, Idaho, in the heart of the Couer d'Alene mining district. Later, in the winter of 1888-1889, he accepted a contract to get out ties and poles for the railroad, the operations being carried on at Trout Creek, Montana.

It was with a view of continuing in this line of work that he and his partner, Bill Hardy, outfitted themselves and crossed the Rocky Mountains over the Marias Pass before the survey for the Great Northern Railroad was completed across that pass. Here, on September 29, 1890, he squatted on the land upon which the Town of McCarthyville was platted, the town being so named in his honor. This town became famous in the annals of the upbuilding of the West, and is so well known to old-timers in Montana and to readers of the Saturday Evening Post that it is needless to repeat its history. A few tumbled-down log cabins are all that remain of this famous construction camp of which young McCarthy was once the mayor.

In the spring of 1891, in company with William and Dave Mumbrue, he put in the first saw mill on Flathead Lake. This mill was located on what is known as Goose Bay, on the west shore of the lake. In the fall of the same year he moved to his ranch in Dayton Valley, where he remained for seventeen years.

In October, 1895, he was married to Clara Deschamps. Three of the four daughters with which they were blessed are now married, and a son, Duncan A., who is now sevénteen years old, is a student in the high school. Nellie B. is now Mrs. Gurden H. Foy and has a son, Perry. Katie B. is now Mrs. Ire R. Cope. Stella M. is now Mrs. John P. Barry and has a son, Rodney. The third daughter, Clara M., died at the age of eleven years.

Mr. McCarthy was employed for eight seasons in the service of the United States Geological Survey, and while so engaged helped to establish the international boundary between the United States and Canada and also to map the Glacier National Park.

In the summer of 1906, being a widower, he sold his Dayton Valley ranch, and in November of the same year he was married to Mrs. Malinea Lalond Benson, who had two children, a daughter Violet, who is now Mrs. Roy Gill Sparke, and a son Andrew Lee Lalond, of Seattle, Washington.

Eugene McCarthy

From 1908 to 1916 Mr. McCarthy was engaged as sales manager for a real estate firm selling large tracts of land located in various parts of the United States and Canada, and this afforded him an opportunity for quite extensive traveling throughout the country. Among other successful transactions was the sale of a fifty-acre addition to Palm Beach, Florida. It is known as the Palm Beach Heights Addition and is now the most valuable residential property in the city. This transaction netted him a very handsome profit.

He was elected a justice of the peace of Kalispell Township in 1916 and in 1917 he received the appointment as police judge, and is at present holding both these offices, having been re-elected in our last general election.

Big of heart, genial in manner and thorough in whatever he undertakes, Mr. McCarthy is typical of his times and the great West which he has so notably helped to develop. In the prime of life, he has already experienced more than a half dozen ordinary men do in a lifetime, but these experiences have only served to widen his horizon and expand his nature, and makes him realize that there is a bit of good in the worst of men and a touch of bad in the best, and he renders his decisions with this in view.—Written by J. H. Christensen.

William Ralph Gordon. Agriculture today continues as essential in peace as it was in war, and consequently now more than ever must the farmer take advantage of every opportunity offered him for making his work more effective. The state and national governments have recognized this and are aiding those engaged in this most important industry to learn necessary facts relative to the structure, composition and physiology of farm crops and their environment, such as climate, fertilizers and soil. As the vital interest in any community, the success of agriculture as the great basic industry is of paramount importance, and one of the enthusiastic young men of Montana who recognizes this and is devoting his talents and knowledge to the promulgation of agricultural information and the securing of co-operation among the farmers is William Ralph Gordon, county agricultural agent for the Broadwater region with headquarters at Townsend.

William Ralph Gordon was born at Wheeling, West Virginia, on April 21, 1892, a son of William C. Gordon. The latter was born at Powhattan, Ohio, in 1866, and is now a resident of Wheeling, West Virginia. He was reared in his native place, which he left for Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, where he completed his collegiate training, following which he became a druggist of Sisterville, Ohio. Later he was in the drug business at Bellaire, Ohio, and then in 1888 went to Wheeling, West Virginia, to be married, and in 1891 located there permanently. When he first went to Wheeling he bought an interest in a drug store, later becoming its sole owner, and he is now engaged in conducting it. In politics he is a republican. William C. Gordon was married in 1888 to Laura Cecelia Thompson, born at Wheeling, West Virginia, in 1868. They became the parents of the following children: Gertrude, who married H. E. Gimpel, a capitalist of Brooklyn, New York; and William Ralph, whose name heads this review.

William Ralph Gordon attended the public schools of Wheeling, West Virginia, and was graduated from its high school course in 1912, following which he entered the University of West Virginia at Morgantown and was graduated therefrom in 1916 with the degree of Bachelor of Scientific Agriculture and as a member of Phi Kappa Sigma Greek Letter College Fraternity. He also belongs to the Skull and Key, a sophomore honorary college fraternity, and the Sphinx, a senior honorary college fraternity.

In 1916 Mr. Gordon came West to Arlee, Montana, as instructor of agriculture in the Consolidated High School, and held that position for seven months, when, in April, 1917, he was sent into Powell County at the time of this country's entrance into the World war for emergency agricultural work. After a short time he was transferred to Townsend, arriving in this city on May 22, 1917, and continued to do emergency work for the Government until the close of the war. This emergency work had for its object the increasing of agricultural production under the United States Department of Agriculture and the land grant colleges, co-operating, in other words, with the other agricultural colleges. The results were so gratifying and beneficial that the Government has made this work permanent, and Mr. Gordon has been made county agricultural agent for Broadwater, and is carrying out this same work today. His offices are on Broadway, and he resides at the Commercial Hotel.

In his political views Mr. Gordon is independent. He belongs to the Christian Church. Well known as a Mason, he is a member of Valley Lodge No. 21, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, Helena Consistory No. 3, in which he has been made a thirty-second degree Mason, and Algeria Temple, Ancient Arabic Order Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, of Helena, Montana. Mr. Gordon is not married. Along other lines he is educating the agriculturists to take advantage of such important aids as irrigation, dry farming, selective plant and animal breeding, specialization in crops, fertilizers and cold storage, and is introducing and disseminating technical and practical information relative to crops, methods of cultivation, markets, prices, and similar topics.

Judge Edward H. Goodman, judge of the District Court and one of the most distinguished jurists of this part of the state, is claimed as a resident by the people of Townsend, who are proud of the fact that their community has given to the bench of Montana a man of his caliber. Judge Goodman was born at Meeme, Manitowoc County, Wisconsin, on September 14, 1855, a son of Thomas F. Goodman and grandson of Patrick Goodman, the latter a native of the north of Ireland, who came to the United States in the early forties and settled in New York State, later leaving it for Chicago, Illinois, where he died.

Thomas F. Goodman was born in the north of Ireland in 1831, and coming to the United States, settled at Sheboygan, Wisconsin, and later bought land and went into the hotel business at Meeme, Wisconsin. In 1855 he went to Sacramento, California, and in 1861 enlisted in the Second California Volunteer Cavalry for service during the war between the states. His death took place at Salt Lake City, Utah, in 1863, when he was sent to that city on account of difficulties with the Mormons. He married Mary Roberts, who has survived him and makes her home at Watseka, Illinois, being now an aged lady, as she was born in Wales in 1833. Their children were Robert J., who was a retired farmer and died at Watseka, Illinois, in 1917, and Judge Goodman, who was second in order of birth. After the death of Mr. Goodman his widow was married to Meltire Nye, who was a brick manufacturer and farmer of Watseka, Illinois, and who died at that place in 1912. Mr. and Mrs. Nye had two children, William R., who is a farmer of Michigan, and Mary, who married Fred Myers, a carpenter and builder of Watseka.

Judge Goodman attended the public schools of Chicago, to which city his mother had moved in 1862, taking the high school course. In 1870 he went with his mother to a farm near Watseka, Illinois, and assisted her on the farm until 1879. He then took the scientific course at the Northern Indiana Normal School at Valparaiso, Indiana, from which he was graduated in 1881, with the degree of Bachelor of Science, and in 1883 was graduated from the department of law of Valparaiso University with the degree of Doctor of Laws. That same year he was admitted to practice law by the Supreme Court of Indiana. The subsequent year he went West to Emporia, Kansas, was admitted to the bar of Kansas, and remained there for a year. In June, 1885, he came to Townsend, Montana, and was one of the pioneers of this town, teaching its first school and remaining as its principal until 1888, when he entered upon the practice of his profession, becoming one of the most eminent attorneys this part of the state has ever produced.

Always a democrat, he was elected on his party ticket attorney of Broadwater County, and served as such from 1897 until 1902. In 1889, 1890 and 1891 he represented Townsend in the State Assembly, serving in the First and Second Sessions. At that time Townsend was in Meagher County. Judge Goodman was on the judiciary committee during both sessions, and was chairman of the Code Commission during the Second Session. In December, 1919, Judge Goodman was appointed judge of the District Court, comprising Broadwater, Meagher and Wheatland Counties, by Gov. S. V. Stewart, and his offices are now in the Court House.

Judge Goodman belongs to the Broadwater County Bar Association, the Montana State Bar Association and the National Bar Association. During the World war he took a very active interest in all local war activities, and was head of the Red Cross Chapter of Broadwater County and assisted in putting over all of the drives.

Since coming to Townsend he has been active as a worker in the Episcopal Church. Judge Goodman is very active as an Odd Fellow, belonging to North Star Lodge No. 19, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, of which he is a past grand, and he is also a past grand of Montana, and served for six terms as grand representative in the Sovereign Grand Lodge of the World, Independent Order of Odd Fellows. He is a member of Townsend Camp No. 365, Woodmen of the World, of which he is past counsel commander, having been the first to hold that office in this camp, and he is now head watchman of the Head Camp, comprising nine Western states. Not only has he served in the Head Camp for four sessions, but he has served on the legislative committee of the Head Camp for several years.

Having always had a lively faith in the future of Townsend, Judge Goodman has not hesitated to invest in its realty. He owns a fine modern residence, one of the best in the city, located on Cedar Street, and it is well supplied with all conveniences. He also owns an office building on Broadway, where he still maintains his law offices, and other pieces of valuable property at Townsend, and a ranch of 480 acres of partially irrigated land 1½ miles northeast of Townsend.

In June, 1888, Judge Goodman was married in Wyoming to Miss Eva Allen, a daughter of E. A. and Sebrina Allen, both of whom are deceased. Mr. Allen was a lumberman of Wisconsin who came to Montana in the early eighties and was engaged in the lumber industry in this state. Judge and Mrs. Goodman have one daughter, Mary Z., who is at home.

Judge Goodman is a man whose comprehensive knowledge of the vast and intricate questions of his profession is almost unlimited, and has been acquired through a long experience at the bar, all of which he feels has been of educational value. As a citizen his tangible and practical efforts to raise the standards of real Americanism have been animated by the highest motives, and his liberal views and public spirit have endeared him to the people of the Broadwater country. His advancement has never been spectacular; although many honors have been conferred upon him, but he has risen because of his firm grasp of his profession, his love of humanity and his complete realization of the need for a fair and impartial administration of affairs and a sound and just enforcement of the law. The country has too few men of the caliber of Judge Goodman not to show appreciation of him and what he has accomplished in his section. He is fitted by training and years of experience as well as natural temperament for the larger and broader experience of his office, and is already making a record in it which promises to reflect new distinction upon him and his community.

FRED A. JOHNSON is a Helena building contractor, head of a growing and prosperous business developed through his initiative and out of a number of years of practical experience as a carpenter.

Mr. Johnson is a native son of Montana, born at Helena, July 11, 1888. His father, John A. Johnson, was born in Sweden in April, 1851, grew up in his native country, and had some training in the regular Swedish Army. In 1870, when about eighteen years of age, he set out for Australia and did farm work on that continent for two years. He then embarked as a sailor, and was on freighting vessels plying to nearly all ports of the world for nearly ten years. Several times he rounded Cape Horn. About 1882 he came to the United States, remained in Chicago a short time, and in 1886 settled at Helena, Montana, where he has been a resident for the past thirty-five years. He is a carpenter and builder and is still at work, being a member of the organization owned by his son Fred. He is a member of the Lutheran Church, belongs to the Carpenters Union, and is a member of Garnet Camp No. 105, Woodmen of the World, and the Woman's Woodcraft of the World. He married Josephine Anderson, born in Sweden in 1858. Besides Fred A., the oldest of their children, there are: Agnes, wife of Glen Lenhart, a janitor in the State Capitol and a resident at 819 Eighth Avenue; Olga, wife of Axel Larson, a miner at Butte; Arthur, a machinist at Helena; Carl, an electrician; Elmer, a carpenter; and Ernest, an electrician, the three latter also living in Helena.

Fred A. Johnson was educated in the public schools of Helena up to the age of nineteen. His first regular employment was with the Northern Pacific Railway, beginning as call boy and eventually being promoted to foreman of the switch engines in the yards. He left railroading in 1910 and became an apprentice carpenter and followed that trade from 1910 to 1918. He then took up contracting independently, and established and is proprietor of the Northwest Construction Company, whose offices are at 130 Sixth Avenue, East.

Mr. Johnson is a member of the Carpenters Union and is active in the Helena Commercial Club, serving on the committee promoting the building campaign now in progress in Helena. He is a republican voter and a member of the Presbyterian Church.

WILLIAM HODGSKISS AND FAMILY

Mr. Johnson and family reside at 310 Howie Street. He married in Helena in August, 1913, Miss Ruby Longstaff, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Longstaff, the latter now deceased and the former manager of the Continental Oil Company in Helena. Mrs. Johnson is a graduate of the Helena High School. To their union have been born two children: Raymond, born May 11, 1914, and Lila, born August 21, 1916.

Sherwood S. Cross. One of Montana's ex-service men who shared in the splendid record of achievement made by the American Engineers in France, Sherwood S. Cross was recently appointed and is now giving his entire time to his duties as county surveyor of the new County of Glacier, with home at Cut Bank.

Mr. Cross was born in Minneapolis, Minnesota, October 23, 1893, son of David W. and Mary C. (McLaren) Cross. His mother was born in Ontario, Canada, and both parents were of Scotch ancestry. Sherwood S. Cross, one of four children, completed his early education in the Minot High School in North Dakota, and subsequently entered Leland Stanford University in California, where he spent two years, 1913-14, pursuing a general engineering course. After leaving university he was employed as a transit man by the Great Northern Railway Company and the Canadian Pacific, but was only fairly started in the work of his profession when America entered the war. He volunteered and was mustered in at Fort George Wright, Spokane, in Company F of the Twenty-fifth Engineers. Soon afterward he was sent to Camp Devens, Massachusetts, had a period of intensive training, and sailed from Hoboken, New Jersey, on the old German steamship America, landing at Brest, France, January 2, 1918. At Bordeaux he was employed for six months in the construction of the Army Base in S O S. Subsequently he was on front line duty, and was in the great fighting through the Argonne region, culminating with the taking of the historic city of Sedan. He was gassed while on the Meuse. Later he was returned to Brest, where as an engineer he took part in the reconstruction of the camp and remained on duty there until May 14, 1919, when he returned to the United States on the Kaiserine Auguste Victoria. Mr. Cross was honorably discharged at Fort D. A. Russell, Cheyenne, Wyoming, June 4, 1919.

He had been out of the army only a few days when on July 15, 1919, the Board of County Commissioners of Glacier County appointed him to his present office as county surveyor. This office in a new county involves important responsibilities, but he is well equipped by previous experience and technical skill for their performance. Mr. Cross is a republican, a member of the Masons, and the American Legion, and was reared in the Presbyterian Church, the church of his parents.

Ory J. Armstrong. A native son of Montana who saw actual service on the western front in France, Ory J. Armstrong returned to his native state to find the duties of civil office awaiting him, and was soon called from the ranks to his present duties as deputy clerk and recorder of the new Glacier County.

He was born at Choteau in Teton County, Montana, May 29, 1893, son of James W. and Amelia (Smith) Armstrong, being one of their nine children. He acquired a good education in the Choteau High School, and spent one year in the University of Iowa and another year in the Salt Lake City Commercial College.

Soon after completing his education America entered the war with Germany, and he volunteered at Fort William H. Harrison at Helena, being mustered in May 15, 1917, in Company M of the Second Montana, later the 163rd Infantry. He was transferred to the 102nd Infantry, Company E, July 15, 1918, and November 14, 1918, became a member of Company A of the 127th Infantry. In the meantime he was with the troops that sailed from New York December 14, 1917, reaching Liverpool the day before Christmas and landing at LeHavre, France, January 1, 1918. For the first three months he was with the S O S at Bordeaux, following which he entered the Army Training School at Langres, and on July 9th was commissioned a second lieutenant and assigned to the 102nd Infantry. Lieutenant Armstrong participated in the historic campaigns of the Argonne and St. Mihiel, and after the signing of the armistice he was with the Army of Occupation from November 14 until April 25, 1919. He was with the troops recalled to Brest April 25th, sailed from that French port on the 5th of May, and reached New York Harbor May 15th. He was honorably discharged at Fort Russell, Wyoming, May 23, 1919, and at once returned to Montana and engaged in ranching until the Board of Commissioners of Glacier County called him to his present duties as deputy clerk and recorder on December 28, 1919.

Mr. Armstrong is a prominent member of the American Legion Post and also belongs to the Thirty-second Division Veterans Organization. He is a republican and is affiliated with the Masonic fraternity.

William Hodgskiss, a Northern Montana pioneer, a prominent ranch owner and business man of Choteau, is a citizen of world-wide travel and experience. He was born in England and as a young man while in Australia developed especial skill in the art of shearing sheep. Even today a skillful sheep shearer follows an itinerant vocation, commanding very high wages, and many of them follow their work wherever the season's demand takes them, whether north or south of the equator.

Mr. Hodgskiss was born in Staffordshire, England, April 12, 1852, son of John and Ursula (Yardley) Hodgskiss. His parents were natives of England and spent all their lives there as farmers. His father died at the age of eighty-one and his mother at sixty-seven. William was the fifth of their seven children, five of whom are still living.

William Hodgskiss grew up on his father's English farm and acquired a common school education. He spent one season farming for himself in England, and for six years of his early life was a member of the Queen's Royal Yeomenry of Cavalry in Staffordshire. In 1881 he went to Australia and did work mostly in sheep shearing. Altogether he spent six years in Australia and New Zealand, and his services were in great demand in the shearing of sheep.

Mr. Hodgskiss came to America in 1888, spending a few months in New York and then going to the California and Nevada sheep ranges found employment as a sheep shearer during 1888-89. He also worked for sheep outfits in Idaho, Oregon and Montana. In the fall of 1889 Mr. Hodgskiss came to Teton County, Montana, and located at Choteau. Here he conducted the pioneer hotel, the Choteau House. In 1892 he engaged in the cattle and horse ranch business, and when the range was free and open he frequently had from 600 to 800 head of cattle on the pasture and about the same number of horses. For nearly thirty years he has been a factor in the ranch industry, and still owns a valuable ranch adjoining the Town of Choteau, and is one of the largest owners of city property. Besides these holdings he owns about 5,000 acres of ranch land in Teton County and 320 acres in South Dakota.

Mr. Hodgskiss is a republican, and while never caring for public office, served one term as county assessor of Teton County, being elected in 1894. He has affiliations with Choteau Lodge No. 44, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, Choteau Chapter No. 19, Royal Arch Masons, Helena Consistory of the Scottish Rite, and Algeria Temple of the Mystic Shrine at Helena.

In December, 1890, he married Miss Margaret Gyldenskog, a native of Norway. To their marriage were born five children: John E., William L., Ursula Caroline (who died in December, 1918, at the age of twenty-two), Ruby Florence and Grant H. These children are all graduates of the Montana State College of Agriculture and Mechanical Arts at Bozeman.

IDEN M. RASMUSSON, the first and present clerk of the District Court of Glacier County, is an honored ex-service man from Montana, who served nearly two years during the World war. He is one of the active members of the American Legion.

Mr. Rasmusson was born at Willmar, Minnesota, a son of Peter and Carrie Rasmusson, being one of a family of five children. His parents came to Montana during his youth and he completed his education at Cut Bank and for one year was a student in the Wesleyan University at Helena. After leaving college he was employed in the First National Bank of Cut Bank and also took up a homestead. His good mother, a devoted Christian woman, died in 1916, mourned by a large circle of friends.

Mr. Rasmusson was early in the service of his country when America entered the war against Germany. He was mustered in at Fort William Henry Harrison at Helena July 30, 1917, being assigned to Company H of the 163rd Infantry. The detailed record of his service is as follows: On detached duty at Blossburg, Montana, August 28th to September 30th; left Helena for Camp Mills, New York, October 26th; from Camp Mills was sent to Camp Merritt, December 6th; from Camp Merritt to Hoboken, New Jersey, December 14th, and the same day embarked for foreign service on the converted German steamship Leviathan and landed at Liverpool December 24, 1917; arrived at Camp Morn-Hill, Winchester, England, December 25th, and after a brief stay left that camp December 30th, crossing the English Channel and landing at Le Havre the 31st; arrived in Carbon Blanc January 4, 1918, and at Camp Genicart January 8th, leaving there for St. Aignan March 19th and arriving March 20th. Left St. Aignan for Montrichard June 5th, where he remained continually training troops arriving from the States and then conducting them to the lines of defense when called for. His duties in training and instructing troops continued until after the signing of the armistice. Leaving Montrichard for Brest January 24, 1919, he arrived in that port January 26th, and started for home again on the United States steamship Leviathan February 3rd, reaching American shores February 11th. On the 12th he left Hoboken for Camp Merritt, New Jersey, thence to Camp Dix on the morning of the 16th, arriving the same day, and soon afterward was sent to Fort Logan, Colorado, where he arrived February 26th and was discharged March 6th.

He immediately returned home and on April 1, 1919, was appointed by the Board of County Commissioners as clerk of court for the new County of Glacier. He now gives all his time to his official duties.

Mr. Rasmusson is a republican in politics, is affiliated with the Ancient Order of United Workmen and the Masons and is a member of the Presbyterian Church. He stands high in his home community not only for his record as a soldier but for his sterling character and ability as a citizen.

GEORGE F. INGRAM, a resident of Helena, where he has been well known in official and business life, has been emphatically a man of action, and a record of his changing experiences, beginning in the early days of Montana Territory, has much of the value of real history.

George F. Ingram was born at Princeton, Caldwell County, Kentucky, son of George J. and Mary (Martin) Ingram, being one of their thirteen children. He attended the public schools of his native town and also Cumberland College up to the age of sixteen.

Strenuous life began for him at the age of seventeen, when he entered the Confederate army. He was a member of Company G of the First Kentucky Cavalry, his early commander being the great cavalryman General Forrest, while later he was with Gen. John Morgan and for the last two years of the war his company was a body guard to another conspicuous Confederate leader, Gen. Joe Wheeler. At the capture of Fort Donelson Mr. Ingram was made a prisoner, spent several months at Camp Morton, Indianapolis, and at the end of six months was exchanged at Vicksburg. He was then attached to the Eighth Kentucky Infantry until remounted. As a cavalryman he was constantly on the move, and nearly every day was exposed to the hazards and hardships of raiding and scouting expeditions. One of his experiences involved another well known Montanan, Col. A. A. White of Kalispell. Mr. Ingram under General Forrest commanded a small troop that descended suddenly upon the City of Memphis, Tennessee, driving in the picket lines, the express object of the expedition being the capture of Maj. Gen. C. C. Washburn of Minneapolis, who with several other Union officers had his headquarters at the Gayosa House at Memphis. The attack failed of its ultimate purpose because Sergeant White, of the Union picket line, with the aid of a fleet horse was able to get to the hotel before the arrival of Forrest's men and arouse the sleeping generals, who fled with their trousers over their arms to the safety and protection of a fort and garrison a half mile away.

Mr. Ingram at the close of the war was in Alabama and came north through Tennessee to Kentucky and after a few weeks, in 1865, set out for the Far West. He went to Virginia City, Nevada, went back to Salt Lake City the same year, and in the fall made a trip to Boise City. After spending the winter of 1865-66 at Salt Lake he started for Montana as assistant wagon boss of Gilman and Saulsbury, freighters. He left the train at the head of Black Trail Canyon and rode by coach into Virginia City on July 2, 1866. The following morning he took a coach for Helena, and in that mining camp, now the capital city, he worked for his brother in a wholesale and retail grocery. He left that to establish a restaurant opposite from the present site of the City Hall. He lost that business and all his accumulated capital and then went to placer mining at Montana City. From October, 1866, to the end of the year he was in the Gallatin Valley, and on the first of January returned to Helena and soon afterward took charge of a herd of cattle on which his brother had a mortgage at Crow Creek. The first of April, 1867, he returned to Helena and six days later started for the Salmon River country of Idaho, where he remained during the summer. He embarked in the grocery business there and again was unfortunate, returning to Helena in the spring of 1868 with a debt of $2,200 dollars. He then bought a bull outfit and engaged in freighting out of the Gallatin and Madison valleys. One season he bought all the potatoes raised in that country and freighted them to Helena, driving one of the teams himself. Another trip he made with his wagons to the Oneida Salt Works eighty miles east of the present site of Idaho Falls, and brought to Montana six loads of salt, three wagons drawn by nine yoke of oxen each. On this trip he passed over the site of the present City of Butte, then merely the Silver Bow mining camp, and sold one load of salt to the late A. J. Davis for chlorinization purposes. His next stop was at Deer Lodge, where he sold another load to the late Ed Larribie, then proprietor of a small grocery store on Main Street and afterward one of the great bankers of Montana. The third load of salt he brought to Helena. From there he went to Fort Peck on the Missouri River, twelve miles above the mouth of Milk River, for the purpose of taking freight from boats that were unable in that season to proceed higher up the stream. Lieutenant Townsend of the Thirteenth Infantry with a company of troops was on guard for about 300 teams bringing freight from Fort Peck to the wreck of the Amelia Poe, a boat sunk below the mouth of Milk River.

The first of November Mr. Ingram was back in Helena and during the winter of 1868-69 he taught a school at Willow Creek on Jefferson River. The next spring he went to Corinne, Utah, reaching there the ninth of May and the next day went on by train to Promontory, where he witnessed the driving of the golden spike linking together the Union and Central Pacific railroads. While at Promontory he conducted a billiard hall for Ephe Garns, later moving the billiard equipment to Ogden, which city became the official junction point of the Central Pacific roads. April 1, 1870, Mr. Ingram accepted employment as a brakeman on the Central Pacific with a run west of Ogden. After four months he removed to Kilton, ninety miles west of Ogden, and conducted a barber shop six weeks. He left there for the Snake River diggings, at what is now Twin Falls, and ten days after reaching that point opened a grocery store at Upper Falls. In order to get his goods on the ground it required a windlass and rope in effecting the descent of 200 feet. The next fall Mr. Ingram bought the S. P. Bridger and Company store at Clark's Ferry. The spring of 1871 brought him for a third time to bankruptcy as a merchant, and out of a capital of $4,000 he left for Montana with a horse, a pointer dog, a double barrel shot gun and $60 in money. Reaching Helena again he took employment with the Northern Pacific Railroad Company during the first preliminary survey in the Territory of Montana. He was a railroad commissary, and the next winter he trapped and hunted on the Yellowstone. In March, 1873, he left Bozeman for the Yellowstone National Park, and there built for Horr and McCarthy the first log house in the park at Mammoth Hot Springs.

This work done, he went to the Crow Agency, now called the Old Mission, nine miles below Livingston, and began work for F. D. Pease, Indian agent, holding different positions, part of the time as superintendent of sawmills, in charge of the beef herds, and general superintendent of farm work. In April, 1874, Mr. Ingram went to the Judith Basin, and for Storey and Dawes, whose post building is still standing at Lewiston, became one of a party of four who took seventy-five wild horses from the ranch at Emigrant on the Yellowstone and delivered them to Dawes to be traded for buffalo robes from the Indians. A few days after delivering the horses Mr. Ingram formed a new connection with the Diamond R freight outfit, going to Carroll on the Missouri River, seventy-one miles from Livingston. He hunted in the vicinity of Carroll until the first day of July, when the first steamboat arrived from Bismarck. It was the Penina, under the command of Capt. Dan Maratta. With dispatches of the Diamond R Company on the same day Mr. Ingram started for Helena, leaving at sunrise and leaving the capital city on the evening of the third of July, having traveled 235 miles in three days, changing horses three times. The Diamond R Company then employed him to run an express from Helena to Carroll, and he operated that during the summer and fall of 1874. He was again in Helena from the first of November until the first of January, 1875, and then started for Carroll, reaching there the first of February. This jouney was notable because it was made in the coldest winter ever known in the State of Montana. One night while he was camped at Hoply's Hole the Government thermometer at Fort Benton registered 65 degrees below zero. The average temperature for the month of January, 1875, was 14½ degrees below. The snow was also four feet deep in the Judith Basin and Mr. Ingram was four days in traveling thirty miles. In the spring of 1875 he took another commission from the Diamond R Company to carry mail from Fort Buford to Carroll, that being practically half of the route of the Government contract from Buford to Helena. He ran the mail until the first of May, 1876, when the route was discontinued. A steamer then took him to Benton, and about the first of July he went by boat to Bismarck, and by team to Deadwood City in the Black Hills.

Mr. Ingram has many interesting reminiscences of the Black Hills country during the mining excitement. For a time he clerked in the grocery store of Miller and McPherson, next bought a saw mill, and also owned a third interest in the No. 4 mine at Deadwood Gulch. Another owner of this mine was William Gay, who afterward was hanged at Helena for the murder of Sheriff Rader of Meagher County.

September 30, 1877, Mr. Ingram married Miss Lizzie Nichols, who was born and reared in the Bitter Root Valley of Montana. Their marriage was the first in the Black Hills at which a minister of the gospel officiated. Two children were born to their marriage, the first dying unnamed. The second, George W., was born July 24, 1880, and was killed while serving with the American Volunteers in the Philippines in 1900. Mrs. Ingram died in May, 1883.

Mr. Ingram remained in the Black Hills until the fall of 1885, when he went to Chicago and soon afterward left for Honduras, Central America, as superintendent of the Chicago and Honduras Mining Company. His business duties took him on to Venezuela, where he made a report on a placer mine, and he returned north by way of New Orleans to Chicago and thence to the Black Hills. He served as deputy United States marshal in charge of all of Dakota Territory west of the Missouri River. The United States marshal at that time was his old acquaintance, Capt. Dan Maratta. Resigning in July, 1889, Mr. Ingram returned to Montana, reaching Butte in August, and directly after the great fire left for Spokane, Washington. In the fall of 1890 he returned to Montana from Spokane, and during the past thirty years neither his business nor inclinations have taken him far from the City of Helena, which he has regarded as his permanent home. However, he has been constantly active, serving as assistant inspector of seals, weights and measures for the city, as deputy marshal under William McDermott, three years as assistant freight agent under Henry Neil, and for the past ten years has been state agent for the Preferred Accident Insurance Company of New York.

On Christmas Day of 1887 Mr. Ingram married for his second wife Miss Minnie Craig, of Deadwood. A son and a daughter were born to their marriage, Craig and Doris Ingram. Craig served with the rank of ensign in the navy during the World war and was twice overseas. Doris is an instructor of home economics in the Red Lodge High School. Both children are graduates of the State College at Bozeman. Mr. Ingram is affiliated with the Eagles, the Woodmen of the World, Knights of Pythias, Elks, and as an ex-Confederate is a stanch democat in politics.

JOHN E. LEWIS, who is one of the proprietors of the Glacier Park Hotel, is a Montanan whose name is not unknown and unappreciated throughout the nation. He is a pioneer hotel man, and through his individual efforts and the institutions over which he has presided has wielded a tremendous influence in promoting the growth and development of the wonderfully scenic country in which Columbia Falls, his home town, is located.

Mr. Lewis was born in Iowa in 1865, a son of Samuel and Catherine (Oberichter) Lewis. He is a college man, having graduated from the Iowa State University in 1889. He has spent practically all his active life in Montana, coming to the state in the fall of 1890. For a time he lived at the Indian trading post of Egan in the Flathead country, and was employed by Ramsdell Brothers, general merchants. In 1891 he moved to Columbia Falls, and is now one of the oldest permanent residents in that town. He built the first hotel there, named The Columbia, and operated it a number of years. Later he assumed the management of the large Gaylord Hotel. As the country grew and attracted an ever increasing volume of tourists Mr. Lewis recognized the need of and made plans to establish there a large, modern and commodious hotel at Glacier Park. As a result a few years ago the great hotel was completed, standing at the north end of the park and with convenient access to Lake McDonald. The Glacier Park Hotel has 152 rooms, and every season its accommodations are taxed to the limit. The Glacier Hotel has entertained many celebrities, including many parties from Europe. It maintains a thoroughly competent staff, and every effort is made to serve the most exacting and discriminating tastes of the guests. This is one of the few hotels where wild game is still a regular part of the menu. In season it is possible to order venison or the meat of the Mountain Goat and even bear meat. The management of the Glacier Park Hotel is under the personal supervision of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis, who for many years have given their personal attention and the utmost study to hotel keeping as a profession.

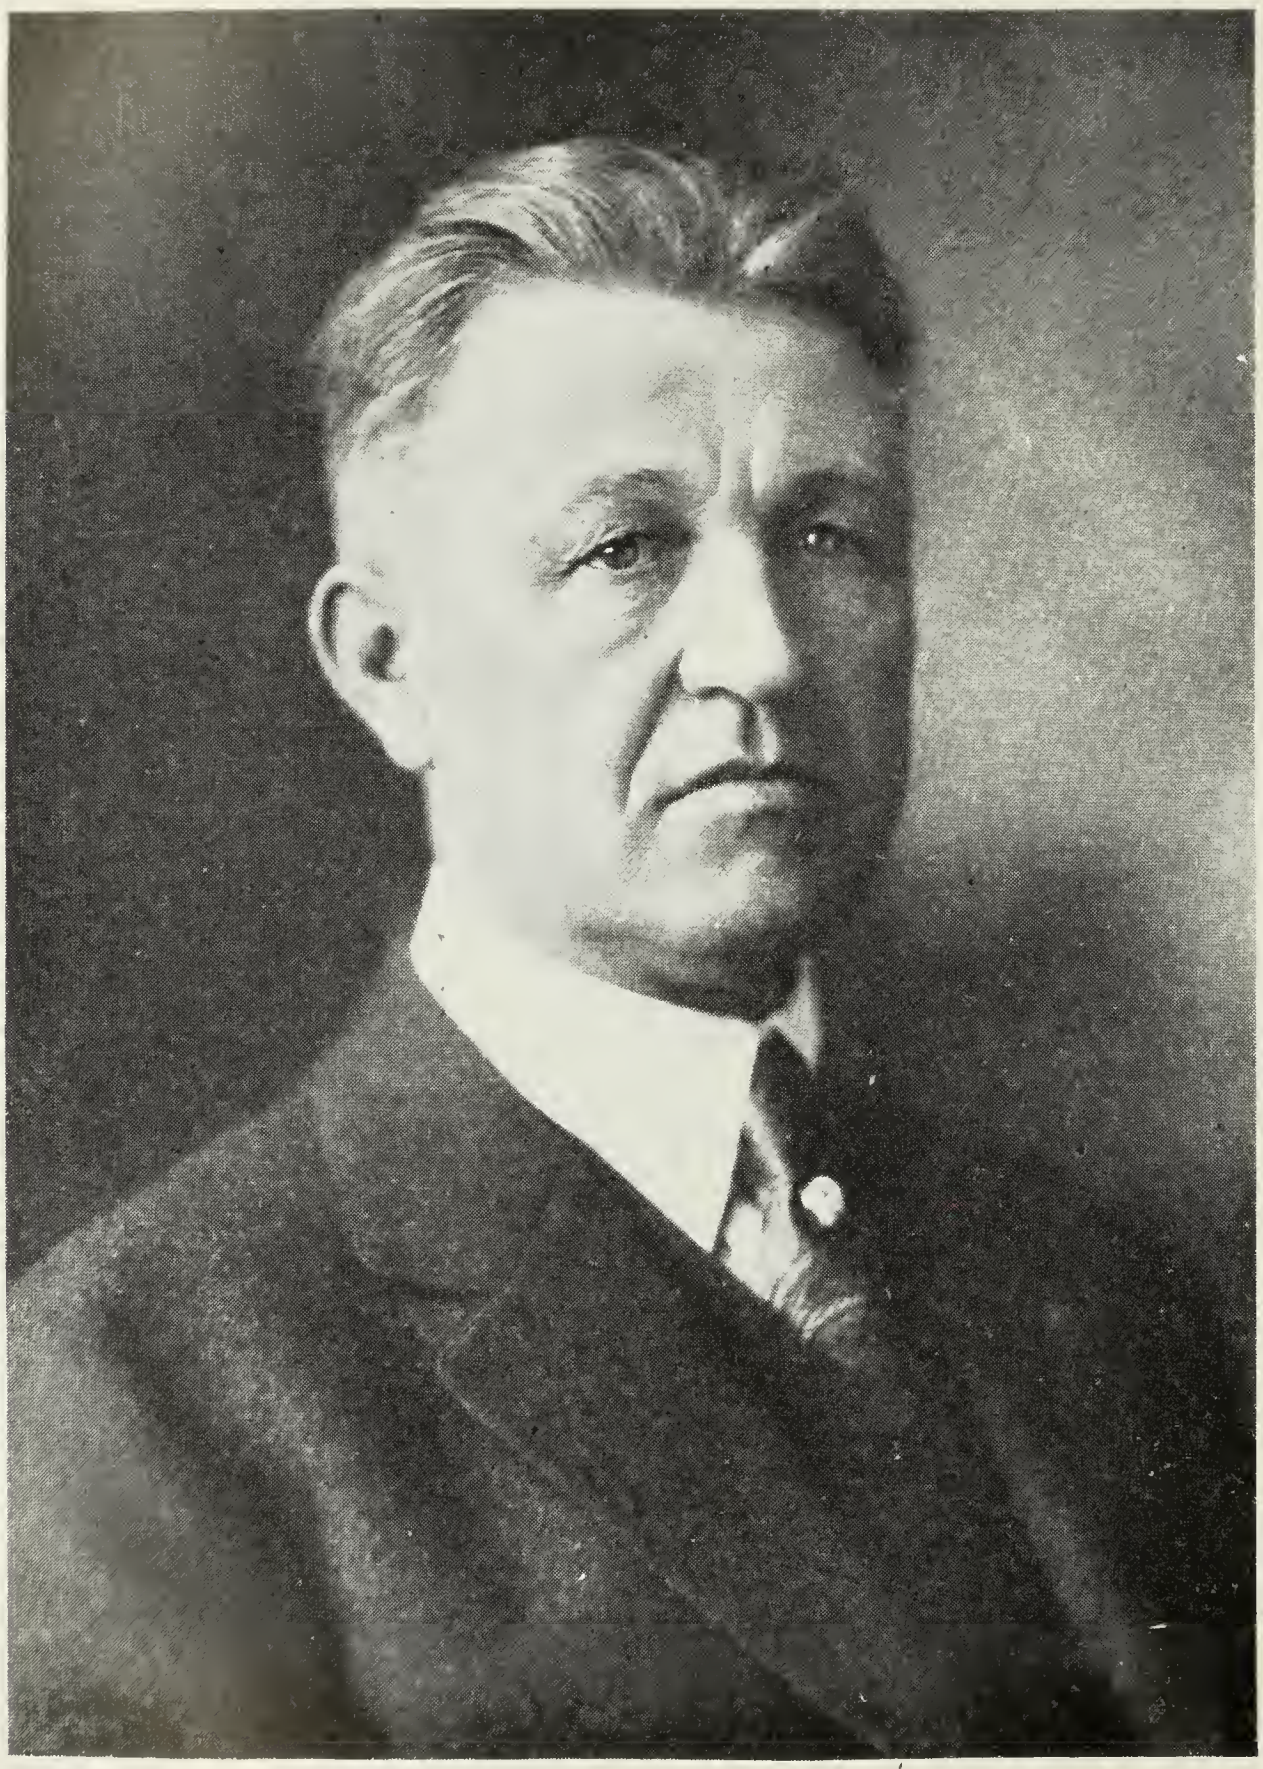
Mr. Lewis married at Missoula Miss Olive Sellman, also a native of Iowa and daughter of Benton and Emily Sellman. She was educated in an Iowa high school. Mr. Lewis is affiliated with the Masonic fraternity, the York and Scottish Rite Masons, with the Elks, Independent Order of Odd Fellows and Modern Woodmen of America, and Mrs. Lewis is a member of the Rebekah Lodge. Politically he is a stalwart republican, and for years has been an ardent admirer of the late Colonel Roosevelt. Some members of the Roosevelt family have been entertained in his hotel. In the interests of the great national Glacier Park Mr. Lewis has been called to Washington several times to consult with the Department of the Interior and act as a competent witness upon matters relating to its improvement.

Mr. Lewis and his former partner, Mr. C. C. Miller, now have under appraisement a plan for remodeling the Gaylord Hotel at Columbia Falls, to serve the needs of a first class modern hostelry at that point. Their plans if carried out will involve an expenditure of at least $25,000. Mr. Lewis is a successful business man and has been thoroughly public spirited in connection with every matter where the vital interests of the Flathead country were at stake.

Under appointment from President Roosevelt he served five years as receiver of public moneys at the Kalispell Land Office. Mr. Lewis is an enthusiastic baseball fan, and in his younger days was a star player. He made a record in baseball while a student in college, and during one vacation he played on a professional team and drew a salary of $2,500, then an almost unprecedented sum for a professional ball player. Mr. Lewis possesses a splendid physique, and is still more of an athlete than many younger men. Many will recall the performance by him at Columbia Falls several years ago, when standing at the Odd Fellows Building he threw a baseball over the width of two streets and completely over the three-story Gaylord Hotel, a throw which for distance would probably equal the world's record.

JOHN S. WISE. To the old time generation of Montana, and to hundreds of tourists who have sought out the charms of the scenic Montana, John S. Wise is best known as Jack Wise, the pioneer guide of Glacier Park and an old time Indian fighter.

He was thrown into the midst of excitement and events of more than passing interest when only a boy. He was born at Mendon, Illinois, April 9, 1860, a son of George Wise. When eleven years of age he shipped as a cabin boy on the steamer Old Far West under Captain Johnson, and journeyed up the Missouri River to the head of navigation, Fort Benton, Montana. That was in 1872. At Fort Benton he worked for a time for the T. C. Power Company in their general merchandise store. He soon began trading with the Indians, exchanging guns, ammunition and provisions, and was what was known as an "enlisted trader." In return for these manufactured products he received from the Indians furs and also the dried buffalo meat known as pemmican. Mr. Wise quickly accommodated himself to the hazardous vocation of Indian trading. More than once he visited an Indian camp on purposes of peaceful trade, and discovering a hostile attitude made the best of his escape. He was at Fort Benton from 1872 to 1876, and then determined to start out for himself. He traveled down the Missouri River to old Fort Peck, an Indian trading post that had been abandoned in 1874, and moved to the Polar Creek Agency. At that time, asserts Mr. Wise, the Indians were wild and ugly. The Government was issuing bacon and flour, but the Indians having an ample supply of fresh meat did not appreciate the value of Government provisions. Mr. Wise has seen them pile bacon and burn it, empty the flour on the ground, saving only the sacks for use as blankets.



J. E. Chandler

Through these various experiences Mr. Wise mastered all the arts of woodcraft known not only to the white men but to the Indians, and became a skilled hunter and trapper and was a scout who excelled even the Indians in following a trail. During the winter of 1881 and 1882 he engaged in hunting buffalo at the mouth of Little Dry Creek on the Missouri River at the place known as Bill Norris' Store. The buffalo was killed only for their hides and the carcases allowed to spoil on the ground. Mr. Wise has seen as many as 250,000 hides piled on the ground.

In time Mr. Wise decided that his personal welfare demanded a permanent home, and in 1887 he pre-empted 160 acres in the Flathead Valley, across from Columbia Falls. In 1900 he homesteaded another 160 acres at the head of Lake Five. In 1895 he married Miss Sallie Decker, of Bozeman. Two sons were born to their marriage, Harry, now deceased, and George. Mr. Wise married for his second wife Mrs. Rachel Scott, of Walla Walla, Washington.

At the time of the Spanish-American war Mr. Wise volunteered in Company H of the First Montana Volunteers, and was mustered in at Helena. He went with this regiment to San Francisco, then to the Philippine Islands, and saw eighteen months of service before he was discharged at the Presidio in San Francisco. He is an active member of the Spanish War Veterans, and in politics is a democrat.

Mr. Wise participated as a scout and as a volunteer in some of the last Indian hostilities in Montana, particularly in the rounding up of some of the notorious bad men. Perry Paul and Lalla See were two notorious Indians that had killed two white men while sleeping in camp. Later a white man named Duncan from Post Falls, Idaho, was killed by an Indian named Pascel. Three prospectors near Libby were also murdered by an equal number of Indians. These outrages caused the white men to arm themselves, and Mr. Wise played a helpful part in hunting out the murderers. Two of the Indians were captured and hanged at Demersville, Mr. Wise being present at the execution, and subsequently Ralph Ramsdell, a deputy sheriff, caught Antley and brought him to Egan. Mr. Wise and four other men rounded up Perry Paul and Lalla See, catching the former at Antwines Ferry on the Pend Oreille River. Lalla See was captured at Camas Prairie, but escaped to Ravalli and surrendered to Duncan McDonald. He was later hanged. Four Indians were hanged at Missoula, Perry Paul, Lalla See, Antley and Pascel. Mr. Wise was also present at the surrender of the noted chief Rain-in-the-Face at Polar Creek in the fall of 1880. He had served as a scout with the forces under the command of Colonel Ilgers, of the United States regular troops, who received the surrender of Rain-in-the-Face and turned him over to Colonel Miles. Mr. Wise was also present at the surrender of Sitting Bull in the spring of 1881 at Fort Buford, at that time being retained as a scout in the service of the regular army.

Mr. Wise has seen a remarkable panorama of change occur in Montana during the nearly fifty years of his residence. These changes have been especially noteworthy in the Flathead country. He is familiar with every valley, every mountain trail, and practically every nook and corner in the Glacier Park and surrounding region, and has acted as guide to hundreds of tourists and travelers, including many celebrities from the East. Mr. and Mrs. Wise have an attractive home three miles west of Belton on the Northern Transcontinental Highway between St. Paul and Seattle. Their home is at the head of Lake Five in very picturesque surroundings, and they offer splendid and unique accommodations for the traveling public, where many tourists stop a few hours or a few days, enjoying the products of Mrs. Wise's kitchen, and the fishing and hunting in the vicinity. Jack Wise is not only one of the best guides in the northern country, but is a social, companionable spirit whose friendship is sought by many prominent men. He is a character of Flathead County who is indispensable to the history of that locality.

Joe E. Choisser. The community of Forsyth holds a distinguished regard for the late Joe E. Choisser, who died at his home in that city October 21, 1919. He had been a resident of Montana more than forty-five years, and his years in the state were signalized by a high degree of business enterprise, an initiative that made him a leader in community affairs, and he exemplified all the best traditions of the patriotic American.

He was born at Eota, Minnesota, January 15, 1866, son of William and Mary Jane (Provine) Choisser. His father was a native of Illinois and his mother was born in the State of Tennessee. While Joe Choisser was born in Minnesota, he was reared chiefly in Illinois, and acquired his early education in the common schools of that state. When very young he began to be depended upon at home as a helper in the family support, and whatever capital he began business on later was made with either his head or his hands or both. He was seventeen years of age when he accompanied the family to Montana. The family party consisted of his father and mother and seven children. They made the journey by rail to Miles City and took up their home on a ranch on Rosebud Creek, about seven miles above the Town of Rosebud. That was the family home until recent years, and is everywhere in that region still known as the Choisser Ranch. The good mother passed away at the ranch in 1906, but the father now lives at Forsyth. William Choisser was a Union soldier during the Civil war, and is one of the few surviving veterans of that struggle still living in Rosebud County. Of the seven children five survive: Mrs. Charles Taber, of Forsyth; William, Jr., also of Forsyth; Mrs. W. A. Twitchell, of Glasgow, Montana; Earnest, of Forsyth; and Mrs. C. D. Foster, of Castle Rock, Montana.

After coming to Montana Joe Choisser did not long remain with the family on the ranch, but traveled about over the state or territory, following different occupations. He selected as his permanent home Forsyth and established himself in business there. For twenty years he was one of the busiest men of the community, identified with various commercial and civic enterprises, and as a builder of the town erected his first business house on Main Street. He became the owner of much property and eventually employed his capital in the construction of the Choisser Block, a three-story brick building, the upper floors of which are the chief part of the Alexander Hotel, while the lower floor is occupied by the postoffice and business concerns.

During the World war Mr. Choisser was one of the real leaders in Rosebud County, serving as chairman of the County Council of Defense, chairman of the executive and finance committee of the Red Cross, and as a member of the State Draft Board. He was very liberal of his private means to support war work, and in every way proved himself a genuine American. He was one of the few of the county who went the limit in the purchase of baby bonds.

Mr. Choisser had also served as a member of the State Fair Board of Montana. He was a stanch republican, having learned his politics from his old soldier father. However, his mother being a Southern woman by birth and training, presented to him the principles of Jeffersonian democracy. Mr. Choisser was always interested in county politics, and was an interested spectator at nearly all the sessions of the Montana Legislature, though he never sought an office for himself. His only fraternity was the Elks. His social and community side was well developed and his benevolences were in keeping with the needs of the people and institutions among whom he lived. He believed in church, made contributions to all the local denominations, but was especially interested in the Presbyterians, since Mrs. Choisser was of that faith. His generosity extended to the needy everywhere, and hearty, generous good fellowship was one of the dominant characteristics of his life.

At Miles City, Montana, September 25, 1901, Mr. Choisser married Miss Florence Gilliland, who since the death of her honored husband has shown the ability of a thorough business woman. Mrs. Choisser came to Miles City with her parents. She was born in Douglas County, Nebraska, daughter of Jasper Newton and Elizabeth (Hickey) Gilliland, her father a native of Missouri and her mother of Illinois. Her father gave his entire life to active business, though he lived quietly and with no part in politics beyond voting as a republican. He died at Forsyth, October 23, 1919, at the age of sixty-three, just two days after the death of Mr. Choisser. Besides Mrs. Choisser the children of the Gilliland family are Mrs. Thomas Moran, of Wyoming, and Newton J., who is manager of the Alexander Hotel of Forsyth.

Mrs. Choisser has one daughter, Kirtlye Winifred, who attends grade school at Forsyth. Mrs. Choisser acquired her education in Montana. During the World war she was superintendent of surgical dressings in the local Red Cross Chapter and also chairman and later vice chairman of the Chapter. She is an active member of the Presbyterian Church.

Louis Byron Woods. Since July 1, 1918, Mr. Woods has been assistant general freight and passenger agent for the Great Northern Railway, with headquarters at Helena, and with the entire State of Montana as his jurisdiction. He has known hardly any other line of experience except railroading, beginning as a telegraph operator soon after his graduation from high school.

Mr. Woods was born at Waverly, Bremer County, Iowa, May 5, 1872, son of James Weston and Adeline Estella (Walling) Woods. His father was a native of Boston, Massachusetts, and was an Iowa pioneer. He was in the West early enough to take part in the Blackhawk Indian war, in which he served with the rank of colonel. Later he became a lawyer, and was also a lawmaker of the State of Iowa, helping formulate the first constitution. He died in Iowa in 1883. His first wife was Caroline Wells, a native of Illinois, who died in Utah. The only living child of this union is Judge William W. Woods, a prominent lawyer and judge of the District Court at Wallace, Idaho. The second wife of James W. Woods was born in New York State and survived her husband many years. She was the mother of two sons, George W. and Louis B. The former is a newspaper publisher at Belle Plain, Iowa.

Louis Byron Woods attended grade schools in Iowa, and when he was eight years of age his parents moved to Eldora in Hardin County. There he completed his high school education, and after learning telegraphy was made a station agent with the Minneapolis and St. Louis Railroad. Later he transferred his services to the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railway, and was with that company until 1890. For a time he was employed by the Cudahy Packing Company at Omaha, and spent eight years as station agent and telegraph operator of the Union Pacific Railway in Wyoming.

Mr. Woods' first location in Montana was at Boulder, where he served as block train despatcher for the Great Northern. He was transferred to Belt, and then to Helena, where he was promoted from station agent to the traffic department. His headquarters were moved to Butte in 1903, where in 1909 he became general agent of the freight department of the Great Northern, and from those responsibilities was promoted at the date above given to assistant general freight and passenger agent. At about that time he removed his home to Helena, where he resides at 110 South Beattie Street. His offices are in the Power Block. In his career as a railroad man he has always filled with credit to himself and benefit to his employers various positions, and has frequently won honorable mention and high commendation from superior officials.

Mr. Woods is interested in fraternalism, being affiliated with Laramie Lodge No. 3, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, at Laramie, Wyoming, Helena Chapter No. 2, Royal Arch Masons, at Helena; Zabud Council No. 2, Royal and Select Masters, at Butte, Treasure State Camp No. 6306, Modern Woodmen of America, at Helena, and the Royal Neighbors of America. While living at Butte he was a member of the Silver Bow and Anaconda clubs. In politics he is a democrat and during his earlier residence in Helena represented his ward in the Central Committee in 1902. Outdoor sports make a strong call upon his interest, especially hunting and fishing.

At Missoula in 1910 he married Miss Janet Schoeller, whose parents live at Post Falls, Idaho. Her father is a rancher. Mrs. Woods is a graduate of the Spokane High School. They have one child, Wallis, born September 18, 1911, now a student in the Helena public schools.

Claude F. Morris, president of the Montana State Bankers Association and a former state senator, educated himself for the law, but probably never handled a court case in Montana, all his interests and connections here having been as a banker, a position in which he has won high honors.

Mr. Morris was born on his father's farm in Audrain County, Missouri, January 10, 1869, son of Harrison F. and Nancy Catherine (Domigan) Morris. His father, who was born in Georgetown, Scott County, Kentucky, September 25, 1824, was a true son of Kentucky as exemplified in his interests in fine livestock, particularly saddle horses. He moved from Kentucky to Audrain County, Missouri, in 1867, and was a successful farmer, breeder of Durham cattle and of horses the rest of his life. He lived to the venerable age of nearly ninety years, passing away June 10, 1914. He took no interest in politics as the means of getting office; was a democrat, and for thirty years was an elder and earnest working member of the Presbyterian Church. His wife, Nancy Catherine Domigan, whom he married at North Middletown, Kentucky, in 1850, was born in the community of Bourbon County, December 11, 1834, and died January 8, 1907. Eight children were born to their union, and seven are still living. Claude Frank was the fifth among the children and the first born after the family came to Missouri.

His early life environment was his father's stock farm in Northeastern Missouri. His early education was acquired in district schools, and later he took a business and normal course at Sedalia, Missouri. Mr. Morris made his first acquaintance with Montana at Fort Benton, where he arrived May 10, 1892. The following four years he was employed as a bookkeeper in the Stockman's National Bank of Fort Benton. There he learned the fundamentals of good banking, but after four years he resigned to accept a clerkship in the agricultural department of Washington under Secretary James Wilson. He remained in Washington five years, and during four years of that time he devoted all his leisure time to his law studies at the Columbian, now the George Washington, University. Among the members of the faculty of that law school from which he received instruction were Justices Harlan, Brewer and Vandeventer of the Supreme Court. Mr. Morris has always deeply appreciated the honor of being president of the class of ninety-three members.

In August, 1903, he returned to Montana with the intention of practicing law. He was prevailed upon, however, by S. McKennan, a prominent financier of the Northwest, to enter banking with the McKennan interests, and accordingly for three years he served as secretary of the Union Bank and Trust Company of Helena. He left Helena to become vice president of the First State Bank of Malta, settling up the affairs of that involved institution. Then in March, 1907, he came to Havre as cashier of the Security State Bank and in 1911 was elected vice president of that institution. Mr. Morris has used his training as a lawyer chiefly to handle the trust and admininstrative work connected with his banks. He is interested in a number of other banking institutions over the state.

He is also president of the Bearpaw Live Stock Company, which operates a ranch of 5,000 acres in the Bearpaw Mountains. His first important political honors came in 1914 with his election to the House of Representatives, and in 1916 he was sent to the State Senate. One noteworthy distinction of his legislative career was as author of the $15,000,000 road bill passed in the session of 1918. Mr. Morris took his early Masonic degrees while at Washington, and is affiliated with Havre Lodge, Chapter and Commandery, Scottish Rite Consistory and Algeria Temple of the Mystic Shrine at Helena, and is a member of the Havre Lodge of Elks. He is also one of the trustees of the Masonic Temple at Havre. In politics Mr. Morris is a democrat.

October 25, 1905, at Ann Arbor, Michigan, Mr. Morris married Miss Alice Cary Manwaring. She was born near Binghamton, New York, daughter of T. P. and Mary (Griswold) Manwaring. Her father was a prominent horticulturist. Mr. and Mrs. Morris have three children, Catherine, Philip M. and Richard McKennan.

Nick Arnet, who has had a rich and varied experience in the western country, is one of the substantial business men of Cut Bank, proprietor of a flourishing business as a harness dealer.

He was born in Alsace Lorraine, August 15, 1884, son of John and Margaret (Reich) Arnet. His father was an officer in the French army during the Franco-Prussian war when France lost Alsace-Lorraine.

He had a thirst for adventure common to most youth, and in 1901, at the age of seventeen, entered the Government lighthouse service on Lake Michigan, being employed in taking supplies and building material to the different lighthouse stations. During the fall of 1902 he assisted in building lighthouse towers on the Government piers at Milwaukee and Sheboygan.

At Cut Bank in 1914 Mr. Arnet married Mrs. Martha Pearce, and since then he has given all his time to his growing and prosperous harness business at Cut Bank. He is a republican in politics, is a past master of the Masonic Lodge, and was a member of the City Council when Cut Bank was first incorporated in 1911. He also served as the first city marshal, and for two years had experiences in keeping law and order in that then typical wild west cattle town, requiring all his resources, courage and tact.

Fred D. Morck. While his home and office are in Antelope, the business service performed by Mr. Morck covers a wide scope of country around the town. He has the leading farm loan agency in this community, and has been actively identified with Antelope since 1911, coming here soon after the building of the railroad and when the chief institutions of the town were the store of Grayson Brothers and the Citizens State Bank.

Mr. Morck has had an unusually wide and profitable experience, and by travel and residence is well informed on conditions both in the Northwestern United States and abroad. He was born at Ossa, near Aalburg, Denmark, December 8, 1885, and his early training was chiefly in scientific agriculture. His father, William Morck, and his mother, Emma Jacobson, were both born in that part of Denmark. His father entered the merchandise business in 1863, and the following year left his store to join the Danish army in the war against Germany, at which time the rich and populous Province of Schleswig-Holstein was taken from Denmark and annexed to the German Empire. In later years the youth of Denmark were always given frequent reminders of that loss of territory and assured that some day the province would be returned. That prophecy is now being realized and fulfilled as a result of the new map of Europe following the World war. William Morck after this war continued a successful merchant in Denmark and died in 1910, at the age of seventy-five. In politics he always supported "the party of the left" in the Danish parliament. He and his wife were both Lutherans. His wife's father was Peter Jacobson, one of the wealthy mill men of Denmark, and at one time a winner of a capital prize of $50,000 in a Government lottery. Mrs. Emma Morck is still living in Denmark. She was the mother of thirteen children and Fred D. is the only one in America. The others are: Julius, a minister; Emil, of Aasa; Carl, a traveling salesman; Valdemar, of Odense; Gorm, a farmer near Odense; William, a customs officer at Copenhagen; Charles, a hardware dealer at Kolving; Matilda, housekeeper for her brother Julius; Carrie, wife of S. Husum of Aalburg; Thyra, wife of Alfred Jensen, of Odense; Mrs. Dagmar Heilskov, whose husband is a large farmer and dairyman near Gudumholm; and Mrs. Lillie Jensen, whose husband conducts a straw goods factory at Copenhagen.

Fred D. Morck as a boy acquired a general education and later was in a technical school for the study of scientific farming. For one year he studied dentistry, but decided that profession was not congenial to him. About that time he left Denmark and came to the United States for the purpose of spending a year and gaining knowledge and experience that would be useful to him in the old country. He sailed from Copenhagen aboard the steamer

United States for New York, and ended his journey at Bemidji, Minnesota, where a cousin lived. He shortly afterward went into the lumber woods, and was soon overcome by the life and opportunities of the northwestern country. After a year or so he became a contractor getting out timber. When he abandoned that business he made his first trip to Montana. After that he returned to his native country for a visit in 1907, and after an absence of eight months returned to the United States for the purpose of making a permanent home here. The following three years he spent on the Pacific Coast at Seattle, connected with Lehlan Brothers, wholesale dealers in grain and flour.

In was from Seattle that Mr. Morck came to Antelope in 1911. Here he opened a business of collection, real estate, insurance and farm loans. He began the farm loan business in earnest in 1912 as local representative of E. J. Lander and Company, and through the Morck agency of this corporation a large amount of capital has been distributed over the region around Antelope and has become directly productive in stocking and equipping the farms. The company has always shown a liberal policy and in spite of adverse conditions has exhibited an undeviating faith in the stable prospects of this part of Montana.

Through his business and also personally Mr. Morck has been actively associated with farming and rural improvement around Antelope. The springtime seeding of grain and flax has been a part of his annual program and he is recognized as one of the stanch and loyal friends of the entire region. He was one of the organizers of the Antelope Telephone Company and became its vice president, and is also one of the founders and a director and vice president of the Antelope Publishing Company. Mr. Morck took out his citizenship papers at Plentywood in 1914 and as a voter has acted with the democratic party. He is the present town treasurer of Antelope.

At Plentywood January 28, 1915, Mr. Morck married Miss Hildred Benson, who was born at Crystal, North Dakota, where her parents, James and Isabel Cunningham Benson, were homesteaders after removing from Walkerville, Ontario. Her parents are now farmers at Swift Current, Saskatchewan. Mrs. Morck, one of a family of five sisters and three brothers, was liberally educated, taking a commercial course and for a few years prior to her marriage did office work at Swift Current. Mr. and Mrs. Morck have one son, Gerald, born October 17, 1917.

WILLIAM PRESTON MCMANNAMY. The respect which should always be accorded the brave sons of the North who left homes and the peaceful pursuit of civil life to give their services, and their lives if need be, to preserve the integrity of the American Union is certainly due the gentleman to a brief review of whose life the following lines are devoted. He proved his love and loyalty to the Government on the long and tiresome marches in all kinds of situations, exposed to summer's withering heat and winter's freezing cold; on the lonely picket line a target for the missile of the unseen foe; on the tented field and amid the flame and smoke of battle, where the rattle of the musketry, mingled with the terrible concussion of the bursting shell and the deep diapason of the cannon's roar, made up the sublime but awful chorus of death. All honor to the heroes of 1861-5. To them the country is under a debt of gratitude which it cannot pay, and in centuries yet to be posterity will commemorate their chivalry in fitting eulogy and tell their knightly deeds in story and in song. To the once large but now rapidly diminishing army that followed "Old Glory" on many bloody battlefields in the sunny South, crushed the armed hosts of treason and reestablished upon a firm and enduring foundation the beloved Government of our fathers, the subject of this sketch belongs.

William Preston McMannamy, retired lumber and mill man and now living in honorable retirement at Kalispell, was born at Port Jefferson, Shelby County, Ohio, on January 31, 1842, and he is the son of Samuel S. and Orinda (Kelley) McMannamy. He was reared at home and in his youth attended the schools of his neighborhood. At the outbreak of the Civil war young McMannamy promptly offered his services to the Government and enlisted in Seneca County as a member of the Fifteenth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, for three months' service. At the expiration of his first enlistment period he re-enlisted at Columbus, Ohio, in the infantry and was assigned to the Benton Cadets, named in honor of Senator Benton of Missouri, the father-in-law of Gen. John C. Fremont, and they were designated as the body-guard of the last named officer. He served with his regiment in Missouri, being in close relationship with General Fremont, until the latter was superseded in command. Young McMannamy was then appointed one of the detail to convey the general's baggage to St. Louis. On leaving St. Louis the soldiers were conveyed across the Mississippi River in a big but old ferry boat. McMannamy with several comrades were in a large omnibus which was driven onto the ferry boat, and the boys, without any particular reason for their act, decided to get out of the omnibus and walk about the boat. They had hardly done so when by some accident the omnibus, horses, driver and all, fell off into the river and were lost. On returning to his command Mr. McMannamy was mustered out and returned home. There he promptly enlisted again, this time for three years or until the close of the war. He was assigned to the Twentieth Regiment of Ohio Infantry and veteranized at Vicksburg, Mississippi. The Twentieth Ohio Regiment was one of the heroic regiments of the Civil war and took part in many of the most important engagements of the war. After participating in the historic battle of Shiloh they went to Boliver, Tennessee, where Mr. McMannamy was taken prisoner. After being held for thirty days he was exchanged at Vicksburg and rejoined his regiment at Boliver. Thereafter he took part in many important events, including the successful siege of Vicksburg and Sherman's celebrated march from Atlanta to the sea. On the battle roll of this regiment are Shiloh, Boliver, Grand Junction, LaGrange, Jackson and Raymond, the latter being, according to Mr. McMannamy, the hardest fought of all. His company went into the battle with thirty-five members, ten of whom were wounded. After three years' service, his country still needing him, Mr. McMannamy enlisted for the fourth time and, after ten days' furlough, rejoined his regiment at Kenesaw Mountain, in which bloody engagement he participated. He was at Atlanta in 1864 and assisted in repelling Hood's terrific attacks and took part in the evacuation of that city. He continued in active service from Savannah to Buford Island, South Carolina, thence on to Pocotelago, with Richmond as their objective point. After the surrender of Lee at Appomattox they took part in the Grand Review at Washington, and then returned to Columbus, Ohio, where they were mustered out.

Upon returning to civil life Mr. McMannamy went to Chillicothe, Missouri, where for a number of years he was engaged in the operation of a planing mill. In 1891 he came to Kalispell, Montana, or, rather, to the locality where Kalispell later stood. He was literally among the pioneers of this section and he has been a witness of the splendid growth and wonderful development of this section of the great Treasure State. Eventually he engaged in the manufacture and sale of building material, operating the most complete lumber yard and mill in this locality, his material entering into the construction of a majority of the early buildings of Kalispell. Of late years, however, he has retired from active business and is enjoying that rest to which his years of toil so richly entitle him.

Oscar Brackett

On December 20, 1868, Mr. McMannamy was united in marriage with Olive Mead, the daughter of Hiram and Sarah (Fosdick) Mead, of Chillicothe, Illinois. To this union were born two children, Anna and Hugh P. The former is now Mrs. Piper, of Portland, Oregon. Hugh is continuing the business formerly operated by his father, having a planing mill at Kalispell and a saw-mill ten miles northwest of Kalispell. He was married to Mabel Bolton, who was born in Wisconsin, and they have two sons.

Politically Mr. McMannamy has been a life-long supporter of the republican party, while fraternally he is a member of the Grand Army of the Republic Post at Kalispell. Though almost four score years old he still takes a keen interest in everything pertaining to the best interests of the community. During their active years he and his wife were always counted on as active supporters of every movement for public improvement. Mrs. McMannamy, who passed away on February 16, 1915, left behind her silent evidences of her public spirit in the magnificent shade trees which now adorn many of Kalispell's best streets, and which were planted under the auspices of the Woman's Improvement Club, of which Mrs. McMannamy was secretary and one of the leading spirits. She was a good wife, a loving mother and faithful friend, who enjoyed to a remarkable degree the love and affection of all who knew her. She was an active member of the Order of the Eastern Star. Mr. McMannamy has lived a life true to his highest ideals and he enjoys the universal confidence and esteem of the entire community in which he has been a leading figure for so many years.

Oscar Brackett, the proprietor of the Brackett Hotel at Ismay, has the distinction of being one of Montana's earliest pioneers. He arrived in the state in 1876 from Bismarck, where he had preempted a tract of land near where the bridge over the Missouri River has since been built, and he made his home there and did the work of proving up. In December, 1875, he was a member of a party of thirty-five which started for the Black Hills country. This was then a prohibited region to the settlers, but despite that fact the little party evaded the watchful eye of Uncle Sam's guardians and made its way across the hills without detection, camping at Bear Butte. General Custer had taken his army into the region the summer previous, and Mr. Brackett's little party found his trail and while pursuing it saw their first Indians. Soon a small band of the red men were seen at closer range, and immediately two warriors came toward them, and the party began firing over their heads. The Indians retreated, but soon returned with reinforcements, and the battle began. After many shots had been exchanged the reds set the prairie on fire, and to offset this the exploring party backfired and kept in the wake of the flames during the remainder of the day, and went into camp at night prepared for a strong defense in case they had been followed. There were no casualties on either side, and as the Indians did not pursue it was felt they were satisfied to call it a draw.

The party drove over to Rapid Creek, where General Custer had made the first gold discovery, and secured claims about fifteen miles above where Rapid City is now located, and although they picked up a little gold during that winter it was not in sufficient quantities to warrant a digging, and Mr. Brackett accordingly left the party and went on to Deadwood, where the rich mine of the Hills had just been opened. However, he did not find the outlook encouraging there, and he started with a wagon train for Bismarck.

During the first night out on his return trip the train was attacked by a band of Sioux, but after the firing of a few volleys and the wounding of a member of the wagon train the red men gave up the attack, although a few followed along and two attacked again during the day, but failed of their purpose. The two red men were finally disposed of by Mr. Brackett and a companion, who lay in wait far to the rear, and when the two Indians passed they shot one of the horses, dismounted his rider, and Mr. Brackett and his companion then joined the train. No further trouble from the Indians was experienced.

On arriving at Bismarck, Mr. Brackett found the Messrs. McClain & McNiter to have contracted with the Government to establish a hay and wood camp on Tongue River and were in need of help, Mr. Brackett accordingly joining them. The party went up the Missouri River to old Fort Union overland, escorted by Government troops to the objective point, and they established camp on the island near the mouth of Tongue River. They succeeded in putting in the wood for the camp, but there was no hay to cut during that season. Mr. Brackett remained with the party until the work was finished, and then joined a small party and began his career as a buffalo hunter.

The hunting party selected as its location the region near the mouth of the Little Porcupine, pitched camp, and remained there during the winter of 1876-7, but in the meantime changed their vocation from buffalo hunters to trappers of wolves and beaver, as there was no sale for buffalo hides. In the following spring Mr. Brackett and Pete Jackson, still living at the mouth of the Little Porcupine, made themselves boats and trapped down the Yellowstone River to Fort Buford, where they found the steamboat Far West, which had brought up the Seventh United States Cavalry, and they went on board with their pelts and went down to old Miles-town and sold their winter's catch. Afterward Mr. Brackett established yards there for supplying wood to steamboats, also put up hay during the summer, and in the fall he and his companion, Mr. Jackson, returned to the Little Porcupine and engaged in killing buffalo and rafting meat down to Miles-town. They spent the winter there smoking buffalo hams, and early the next summer Mr. Brackett bought one of the big "flatbottoms" which had brought vegetables down from Bozeman, loaded it with his meat and floated down the Yellowstone to the Indian Reservation at Berthol, where he sold his meat and then journeyed on to Bismarck.

Mr. Brackett at this time had been absent from his native home in Maine since 1872, and he decided to return there for a visit. He had one buffalo ham left, and this he took with him as a treat for his friends, and it was probably the only buffalo meat which ever found its way into that eastern country. After spending a month at home Mr. Brackett returned to Bismarck and hired to a company having a Government mail contract, was stationed twenty miles out on the route as station man, and was thus employed for eighteen months. In the winter of 1879 he again made his way into Montana and hunted buffalo on Fallon Creek, covering the region about Ismay as well as the country around Brackett's Butte, southeast of Baker, and succeeded in obtaining 700 hides during the winter. In the following winter he hunted at Teepe Buttes on Grand River, duplicating his catch of the preceding season, and he sold his hides at Selley Springs. In the following spring he went into the region north of where Terry is now located and started a sheep ranch on Brackett's Creek, and remained in that locality until the winter of 1886-7. He started in the winter with 7,000 head and came out in the spring with 2,400. Eighty per cent of the stock of the country died during that disastrous winter, the most severe in the history of the state.

Leaving Brackett's Creek, Mr. Brackett crossed over to the Yellowstone, established his headquarters on Ash Creek, and was engaged in the cattle business there for two years, when he sold his cattle and engaged in the raising of horses, continuing that occupation for a similar period. It was at the close of this venture in 1907 that he abandoned the stock business, built a hotel at Ismay, and with the exception of two years has since given his time and attention to the conduct of this hotel. He has been successful in this new venture, and has made his hostelry one of the best known places of its kind in the community.

Although Mr. Brackett has spent the greater part of his life in the West, he was born in Maine, at East Cornish, February 6, 1850, and his boyhood days were spent on a farm. The educational training which he received in his youth was obtained in the common schools, and his parents' home was his own until he had passed the age of maturity. His father, James Brackett, was a native of Aroostook County, Maine, became one of the selectmen of his town, and was widely known for his interest and participation in public affairs. He lived the life of a farmer, was fairly successful in his endeavors, gave his political support to the republican party, and was a Baptist in his religious affiliations.

James C. Brackett married Elizabeth Ball, a daughter of Isaac Ball, a member of an old Maine family of colonial times, as were the Bracketts of Portland. James C. Brackett, who was born in 1818, lived to the age of eighty-four years, and his wife, born in 1828, passed away when about fifty years of age. Their children were: Mary, who married Ed Lewis and resides in Maine; Oscar, the only representative of the family in the West; William, of Cornish, Maine; Martha, the widow of Charles Parent and a resident of Lewiston, Maine; Miss Ellen, a trained nurse living in Massachusetts; and Elizabeth, who resides in the City of Cornish, Maine.

Oscar Brackett married in Custer County, Montana, Miss Ella V. Hibbs, who was born near Cadiz, Ohio, and was well educated. After completing her schooling at the Barnesville, Ohio, Normal School she came out to Montana and taught at Lame Deer in the Cheyenne Indian Reservation and later at Terry. When she first located in Custer County its area embraced all the territory out of which the Counties of Fallon, Carter, Powder River, Prairie and Rosebud were afterward created, and the entire county then contained but three schools and Montana was divided into only thirteen counties. Four children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Brackett, but the oldest, Frank, was drowned when a young man of eighteen. The daughter Edith is engaged in teaching in Ismay. She was educated in the schools of Dillon, Montana. Constance, the second daughter, is editor of a school magazine in Minneapolis, Minnesota, and has spent several years as a teacher. The youngest daughter, Evelyn, is the wife of Earl Smith, of Thermopolis, Wyoming, and they are the parents of one son.

Mr. Brackett cast his first presidential vote as a republican, and in the main he has supported the principles of republicanism since that time. He is now serving as a member of the Board of Aldermen of Ismay.

JUSTIN C. SIMPKINS, M. D. One of the dependable and scholarly physicians and surgeons of Valley County is Dr. Justin C. Simpkins of Glasgow, who has been here in active practice since 1908, and during that period has firmly established himself in the confidence of the community. He was born in Tippecanoe County, Indiana, June 26, 1859, a son of Dr. Robert J. Simpkins.

Dr. Robert J. Simpkins was born at Natural Bridge, Rockbridge County, Virginia, where his father had located, and where he spent his mature years as a planter. There were five sons in his family, all of whom entered the medical profession, and moved to different localities, one of them being John Simpkins, one of the noted physicians of Indianapolis, Indiana, during its early period. The death of Dr. Robert J. Simpkins occurred in 1894, when he was seventy-two years of age. He was married to Margaret Gilbert, a daughter of John Gilbert, who was one of the leading men and a representative farmer of Tippecanoe County, Indiana, and one who took a very active part in republican political affairs. John Gilbert was a member of the Indiana State Assembly prior to the outbreak of the war between the states. His death took place in Tippecanoe County, but he was born in Ohio. Mrs. Robert J. Simpkins was his eldest child who lived to maturity, and she died at the age of seventy-one years, in 1912. The children born to Dr. Robert J. Simpkins and his wife were as follows: Dr. Justin C., who was the elder; and his sister, Lizzie C., who has spent her life as a public school teacher.

Dr. Justin C. Simpkins took his collegiate course in Wabash College, Crawfordsville, Indiana, from whence he was graduated when he was twenty-three years old. As was but natural, coming as he did from a family of medical men, he decided to enter the medical profession, and did his preliminary studying with his father, and took his first course of lectures at Rush Medical College, Chicago, Illinois. He subsequently studied in the Indiana Medical College at Indianapolis, Indiana, from which he was graduated in 1886. While still a junior student he began practicing at Marshfield, Indiana, and when he had completed his course he located at Boswell, Indiana, where he remained for twelve years. During this time he did post graduate work at Chicago, Illinois, in physical diagnosis and surgery, and he has always shown a preference for surgical cases. In 1904 he was graduated from the Chicago Polyclinic in post-graduate work, and has never relaxed his diligence in studying to keep abreast of the progress in his calling.

When Doctor Simpkins left Boswell he established himself at Danville, Illinois, and while living there occupied as his residence the house adjoining the one of Hon. Joseph E. Cannon, the noted leader of republican forces and for so many years congressman from his district in Illinois. Doctor Simpkins numbers other noted men among his friends, for he was a personal friend of Gen. Lew Wallace, author of Ben Hur, and no one took more interest in the success of that celebrated author than he.

Leaving Danville, Illinois, Doctor Simpkins came further west and homesteaded in the vicinity of Granville, North Dakota, and he proved up his claim and continued his practice. However, he found that the climate was not suited to him, and he left North Dakota and went to Nevada in the hope of improving his health. For two years, with that object in view, he engaged in mining and prospecting in the mountains of that state, and in August, 1903, erected the first tent at Rawhide, Nevada, where by December of that year there were 3,000 people. It was a gold camp, and the mines proved to be good producers, and the several claims of Doctor Simpkins and his partner, known as the "Gold Quartz" property, sold at a high figure, and with his profits the former came to Montana.

Like his honored father, Doctor Simpkins is a radical republican, but, unlike him, he has been very active in the affairs of the several communities in which he has lived. While at Boswell he was township trustee for six years, and as such had under his supervision the township educational affairs and road work, and he introduced what was then the innovation of the establishment of a central school, which was the first ever established as far as he knows. Upon coming to Valley County Doctor Simpkins continued his public-spirited efforts, and served it as health officer for three years. His first presidential vote was cast in 1880 for James A. Garfield. Fraternally he belongs to the Odd Fellows and the Elks. In Indiana and Montana he has been interested as a member of the various medical societies.

In June, 1884, Doctor Simpkins was united in marriage with Miss Alice Van Houten in Warren County, Indiana, where she was born in September, 1861, a daughter of Richard and Hulda (Steadman) Van Houten. Richard Van Houten was born in the United States, but his parents were natives of Holland. A farmer by calling, during the war between the states he enlisted in the Union army in an Indiana regiment, and it is believed he was killed while in the service. Mrs. Simpkins was the only child born to her parents, and she was educated in the Williamsport High School. Doctor and Mrs. Simpkins had the following children born to them: Rupert R., who is one of the faculty of the State Normal School at McComb, Illinois, having been graduated from the Indiana State University, is married; Albert, who was a druggist and is now engaged in farming but maintains his residence at Minot, North Dakota, married a Wisconsin lady; Mrs. Mabel Fairman, who lives at Glasgow; Mrs. Frances Estes, who lives at Valejo, California; and Madaline, who is stenographer for a prominent law firm of San Francisco, California. Mrs. Simpkins died at Valejo, California, in 1918.

During the late war Doctor Simpkins rendered his community and country a very valuable service by acting as examiner for all of the recruits and drafted men at Glasgow.

Frederick B. Gillette, United States commissioner of this district, came into Montana to make his home in 1904. He was then just twenty-one years of age, and came to the state to join his father and sister and take up Government land. These relatives had preceded him here a year, and they all filed on land in the Milk River Valley, three miles west of Hinsdale.

Mr. Gillette came into Montana from Chicago, Illinois, where he was born January 21, 1883. His father, Stanley A. Gillette, continued his identification with this region of Valley County more or less from 1902 to 1914, and in that time proved up a claim. He was born at Rome, New York, grew to mature years there, and was a schoolmate of ex-Secretary of State Lansing. In his early life Stanley A. Gillette entered the railroad service, serving as a traffic man during the remainder of his life. He was first with the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy and finally with the Great Northern, and during the most of his service was stationed at Chicago. He passed away there May 10, 1919, at the age of sixty-one years. He was of colonial stock, originally from Alsace-Lorraine and French Huguenots, and his forefathers left Europe about the time of the St. Bartholomew massacre and established the family in the New Amsterdam Colony. Among the Revolutionary ancestors on the Distaff side was Malcolm Henry, who served under General Marion, the Swamp Fox, and took part in the battles of Kings Mountain and Cowpens. Malcolm Henry was a relative of Frederick B. Gillette's maternal great-grandmother, who married Joshua Gentry, the first president of the Hannibal and St. Joe Railroad Company, the first railroad to be built west of the Mississippi River, and the Gentry home was in Hannibal. In his younger days Mr. Gentry was appointed by President William Henry Harrison as first sheriff of the Territory of Missouri. Richard Gentry, another maternal ancestor, was a Virginia soldier in the Revolution, and was present at the surrender of Lord Cornwallis at Yorktown.

Stanley A. Gillette was a son of Alonzo Gillette, who spent his life in the Rome locality of the State of New York as a farmer. He married a Miss Sloat, whose family originally spelled the name von Sloatten, of Holland stock. Stanley A. Gillette was one of three children, his brother being formerly a railroad man and miner at Durango, Colorado, but now located at Traverse City, Michigan, and his sister, Mrs. Emma Norlin, is a resident of Teluride, Colorado.

Stanley A. Gillette married Mary A. Bolling, a daughter of Alexander and Adaline (Gentry) Bolling. Mr. Bolling was of old Virginia stock, although born in Kentucky, and he spent the vigor of his life at Hannibal, Missouri, where he was a pork packer and farmer. Mrs. Gillette, who was born at Hannibal, attended the college of that city and was a teacher before her marriage. She died in Chicago in November, 1914, the mother of two children. The daughter, Miss Edna F., was a resident of Montana for several years, where she took up a claim, but she has returned to Chicago.

Frederick B. Gillette completed his high school training in the old South Division High School in Chicago, and after his graduation there secured a position with a wholesale metal company, was later in the office of the Northern Assurance Company there, and then came to Montana and took up a claim. During a period of ten years he maintained his home on his land and farmed the family lands, following the business on an extensive scale until he found it was not profitable. He entered enthusiastically into the irrigation project started by the Government, and continued to encourage the project for a dozen or more years.

When he finally abandoned farming Mr. Gillette secured a position with the Great Northern Railroad Company at Hinsdale as an operator. In 1912 he was appointed United States commissioner at Hinsdale, and has since held that position. During his tenure of office a major portion of the region tributary to Hinsdale has been filed upon and proved up. He entered the employ of the Imperial Elevator Company in March, 1915, and has ever since continued as their Hinsdale manager.

Mr. Gillette was brought up in a home of a "hard-shell" republican, and when he cast his first presidential ballot at Hinsdale in 1908 it went for Mr. Taft. As a citizen he has always manifested more or less interest in the county, but not in an official capacity.

In Missoula, Montana, August 2, 1916, Mr. Gillette was married to Miss Marguerite Noeth, whose father settled in Montana many years ago and lived in the vicinity of Great Falls and Missoula. He came to this state from near Detroit, Michigan, the birthplace of his daughter. Both Mr. Noeth and his wife were of Bavarian origin, and Mrs. Gillette is their oldest surviving child. She graduated from both the Missoula High School and the Montana State Normal at Dillon, and taught in Hinsdale from 1909 to 1912, and from 1913 to 1916 in the Missoula schools. A son, Frederick B., Jr., was born to Mr. and Mrs. Gillette May 10, 1918.

Mr. Gillette was the first candidate to enter Masonry in Kyle Lodge No. 96, at Hinsdale, and for years has served as secretary of the lodge, and his records are conceded to be the most complete to be found in any local lodge. He is a member of Chapter No. 17, Royal Arch Masons, at Glasgow. He was active in the consolidation of fourteen Masonic lodges from Malta east to the North Dakota line and also along the Scobey branch. They were consolidated under the title of the Masonic Welfare Association of Northeastern Montana, of which he was elected the first president.

Mr. Gillette was registry agent under the selective service act, and registered practically everyone available for military service in this territory. Under the questionnaire system he had an unlimited amount of experience helping to fill out these forms. He was chairman of several of the bond and Red Cross drives, and always arranged it to report "Over the top" at 7 o'clock of the morning the drive opened and always made the assertion good. He is the president of the Hinsdale Chamber of Commerce.

Pleas Martin Price has been identified with the locality and the interests of the Hinsdale community of Valley County since the year 1888. He came here from Texas with a trail herd bound to the Home Land and Cattle Company, the Niederinghaus people. It was the "STV" brand of stock, and they started north from the range in the Panhandle of Texas.

Mr. Price was reared in Texas, and was born in Fannin County of that state October 22, 1863. His father died just before the son's birth. It is believed he was a Confederate soldier. In an early day he went from Virginia to Texas and settled in the county where his son was afterward born. He married a Virginia Lady, Miss Josephine Milam, and Pleas M. Price was her only child. She subsequently became the wife of Levi Perryman and died in Montague County, Texas, about the year 1878.

Left alone in the world by the death of his mother, Pleas M. Price was brought up in the home of Levi Perryman, his stepfather, in Montague County, Texas, and the limited educational training which he received was gained in the schools of his home community and under difficulties. Indians were numerous there and were constantly seeking whom they might scalp or put to death, keeping the people in constant dread, and they very often sought protection behind stockades. Mr. Price was in Texas when the buffalo left that region, and it is remembered by him that many of the prairie dogs followed along with the buffalo to the Canadian line, but none of the dogs crossed into the British possession.

Mr. Price remained loyal to his stepfather until he reached the age of maturity, and he then began driving cattle on the trail from Texas north. He made his first trip in 1882, going to Abilene and Dodge City, Kansas, and later to Ogalalla, Nebraska, driving over the old eastern Chisholm trail several times. On his first trip to Montana with the "STV" outfit in 1888 he remained in the territory and entered the employ of the Home Land and Cattle Company, holding the cattle he helped drive through. Continuing with that company until 1894, he began ranching for himself on Beaver Creek, near Hinsdale, and the homestead which he entered there became the nucleus of his ranch. He settled on his claim in 1893, but did not file on the land until 1897. His first home was a three-room log house, which is still doing duty as the family abode, and it was the home into which he brought his bride. His stock interests have been confined to range horses and cattle, which he has run under the brand "M5" on his cattle and "W-K" on his horses, and stockraising and farming still comprise his life's vocation.

When he first located in this locality Mr. Price was in Dawson County, and to reach the county seat, Glendine, he had to go by way of St. Paul, if by train or take pack-horse and bed and grub if he made cross country drive, Valley County was not set off until 1893, since which date his residence has been in the latter county, this change having been effected without removal of his home. During several years his residence was temporarily at Great Falls, while educating his children, but he has always claimed allegiance to Valley County. He has always maintained an interest in local politics, in national affairs supporting the principles of the democratic party, and during the early years of his residence here he served as one of the trustees of the Hinsdale School District.

Mr. Price married in Chinook, Montana, in June, 1896, Miss Cora M. Galvin, who was born in Wisconsin and came to Montana in 1895. She has a brother, Will Galvin, living at Martindale, Montana. Mrs. Price's education, like that of her husband, was limited, and it was while living with her brother in Saco that she became acquainted with Mr. Price. Two children have been born to them, Tressa and Earline, the former a graduate of St. Mary's School in Great Falls.

During the period of the World war Mr. Price added his interest and assistance enthusiastically to the needs of the period as a farmer, returning to his farm to grow food for the needs of the nation, and he also bought generously and patriotically of stamps and bonds.

James McIntyre is the president of the First National Bank of Hinsdale, and he has been a Montana resident since the spring of 1916. He first located at Glasgow, where he was associated with the Milk River Valley Bank until the fall of 1916, when he associated his interests with Hinsdale and promoted the organization of the First National Bank.

Mr. McIntyre was born at Wolfe Island, Ontario, March 11, 1862, a son of John McIntyre, who was born in Ireland of Scotch parents, a son of James McIntyre. The early generations of the family were farmers. John McIntyre lived to the good old age of eighty years, and died in Michigan. James McIntyre married a Miss Reid, and both lived to the advanced age of ninety years. They were the parents of four children: James, who died in Kingston, Ontario; Jane, who married David Donley and died on Wolf Island, Ontario; Martha, who married an Irishman named McCarthy and moved to Western Canada. John McIntyre was the youngest of the children. He married Margaret Marshall, who was born in Ireland, a daughter of John Marshall. The following children were born to John and Margaret McIntyre: William, the treasurer of Isabella County, Michigan, and a resident of Mount Pleasant, that state; James, the Hinsdale banker; John, the foreman of a North Dakota cattle ranch in McHenry County; Mary J., who married Captain Horne, in the Great Lakes Navy service and a resident of Sarnia, Ontario; and David, the youngest, is a machinist at Sarnia.

JUDD P. HEDGES AND SONS

Daniel J. Oliver G. Harry H.

James McIntyre was not a pupil in school after he attained his eighth year. His mathematical education came to him largely through experience as he has found the need. He left home when a child of ten and began fighting his own battles at that early age and working at whatever presented itself within his strength, much of the time on the farm. When he became older he went to the lumber woods of Ontario, where he spent many winters in the logging camps, and was there until after he reached his majority. On one occasion while driving his team a horse buyer from Manitoba came along and bought it, and Mr. McIntyre hired to the buyer to accompany him out to Brandon, Manitoba, where he accepted the foremanship of a large farm and remained there until 1888, going to Minnesota in that year.

Mr. McIntyre came into the United States with so little capital that it was hardly worth the name, and he depended upon his manual efforts for a living until he became a merchant. He was seriously crippled in 1892, while out hunting, falling with his gun while going through the timber and shooting off his hand. On first locatng in Minnesota he began farming in Kittson County, and after two years there, in 1890, removed to Pembine County, North Dakota, where he engaged in running a ferry on Red River, and when he left that county in 1893 he went to Walsh County and took up merchandising at Forest River, his stock also including implements. In 1898 he disposed of his interests there to engage in the hardware and implement business in Conway, North Dakota, and in the spring of 1902 disposed of that business and removed to McHenry County, where at Bantry he was a banker and interested in farm lands. When the Great Northern built through the county he organized the State Bank of Bantry, and was elected its cashier, but is now serving the institution as its president. He still maintains his dual interests there.

From McHenry County, North Dakota, Mr. McIntyre came into Montana in the spring of 1916 and settled at Glasgow. The First National Bank of Hinsdale was chartered in October, 1916, capitalized at $25,000, with a surplus of $8,000, and it still maintains its original officers: James McIntyre, president; Thomas Dignan, vice president; and Verne McIntyre, cashier. The other members of the board of directors are: J. H. Rutter, R. R. Black, Julius Waber and R. F. Ater. Notwithstanding the crop failures and adverse conditions generally of this locality the bank has been constantly adding to its surplus fund whatever profits that might have been paid out as dividends, making it a stronger and safer institution. Mr. McIntyre's other interests outside of banking in Hinsdale comprise his home and small land holdings. He has always kept aloof from the burdens and responsibilities of local service, although he has carried the responsibilities of citizenship as a voter and is a republican in national affairs.

In Selby, Ontario, May 21, 1881, he was married to Frances A. Bruton, who was born at Napanee Mills, Ontario, in October 1865, a daughter of James A. and Eunice (Wagar) Bruton. The father was a stationary engineer. Mrs. McIntyre was the second born in a family of twelve children, and she received her educational training in her home town. Five children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. McIntyre. William A., the oldest, is a farmer in McHenry County, North Dakota. He is married and has six children. Alfred B., the second son, is a druggist in Spokane, Washington. He volunteered for service in the World war, but was rejected. He married Elizabeth Semm. Verne, the third son, and the cashier of the First National Bank of Hinsdale, volunteered for war service, went into the Marines, and was stationed at Portsmouth, New Hampshire, during most of his service, receiving his discharge as a corporal and returning home in January, 1919. Frances is the wife of C. M. Gilbertson, cashier of the State Bank of Bantry, North Dakota. Robert K. left high school at the age of eighteen to enlist for war service, and was made an observer in the One Hundred and Third Aero Squadron and was with the LaFayette Esquadrille in France. He spent eight months overseas, and was discharged after the signing of the armistice, reaching home in February, 1919. He is now completing his high school training in Hinsdale.

Mr. McIntyre is a member of the Masonic fraternity, belonging to Kyle Lodge No. 96, Hinsdale, and is now treasurer of his lodge. During the period of the war the First National Bank took a leading part in the work of the Hinsdale community, and is special depository for Government funds such as Liberty Bonds and certificates of indebtedness.

Dr. Judd P. Hedges. The record of the subject of this sketch is that of a man who by his own unaided efforts has worked his way from a modest beginning to a position of influence in the professional world. His life has been of unceasing industry and perseverance and the systematic and honorable methods which he has followed have won him the unbounded confidence of his fellow citizens of Ekalaka, Carter County.

Judd P. Hedges was born in Cayuga County, New York, on May 15, 1857, and is the son of Stephen and Ruth (Gault) Hedges. Stephen Hedges, who also was a native of New York State, spent his active life as a tailor's cutter, making clothing at Weedsport, where his death occurred. He was a Union soldier during the Civil war, first as a three-months' member of the old Nineteenth Regiment, New York Infantry, and then he enlisted for the duration of the war. However, he was discharged before the expiration of his enlistment period, owing to sickness, and died early from the effects of his service. His father was American born, but of English stock. To Stephen and Ruth Hedges were born the following children: W. Ralph, who was a commissioned officer in the Civil war and later died at New Haven, Connecticut; Montriville M., who also was a veteran of the Civil war, died at Mellstone, Montana; Agnes, who was the wife of William Wilson, died at Bridgeport, Connecticut; Judd P., of this sketch.

Judd P. Hedges received his education in the public schools and at the age of sixteen years he went to New York City, where he entered a dental office, agreeing to work for a year for nothing, but after a few weeks he had acquired such a knowledge of the profession that his employer paid him $15 a week. His health failed and on the advice of his doctor he went West, locating at Fargo, North Dakota, where he rustled around among the old-timers, among whom he soon located H. S. Back, General Sibley's old chief of scouts and one of the noted frontiersmen, who initiated the young man into western ways. In 1879, in company with several other men, he first entered the Territory of Montana, for the purpose of hunting buffalo. The region was so undefined as to boundary markings that for a time the party did not know they were in Montana, until they passed down the Little Missouri from near its head. For two or three months the party camped and killed the big game along the Wyoming-Montana line, the object being both the hides and the meat. Doctor Hedges was not again in Montana until 1882, when he again accompanied a party of buffalo hunters. They hunted on the head of Big Beaver, Cedar Creek and Cabin Creek of the Yellowstone all of the winter of 1882-3, returning to Fargo in the spring. In the spring of 1884 Doctor Hedges bought up a bunch of cattle and returned to Montana, locating on Box Elder, being the first ranchman to locate on that stream. He engaged in the cattle business there for two years, and during the hard winter of 1886 he was put to the necessity of wintering his cattle on cottonwood and on the meat of his dead cattle, which he used by boiling and mixing a little hay with it. Doctor Hedges then abandoned ranching and engaged in freighting, hauling pelts and wool to Miles City, Wibaux and Terry. Two years later he took the mail contract from Powderville to Ekalaka, delivering mail at the latter point twice a month, for which he was paid $125 a trip by the settlers. Eventually the Government established a mail route to this point.

About that time Doctor Hedges had acquired some dental stock and he began practicing dentistry at the cow and sheep camps, and this service rendered to the cowboys and sheep herders eventually led him to establish an office in Ekalaka. He remained actively engaged in the practice there until 1898, when he joined Troop I of the Grigsby Rough Riders of Montana for service in the Spanish-American war. Troop I was mustered into the service at Miles City and was sent to Chickamauga Park, Georgia, and there remained inactive until the close of the war. After returning home the Doctor resumed the practice of his profession at Belle Fourche, remaining there about three years. Then for a short time he was engaged in the retail liquor business at Camp Crook. Returning to Ekalaka, he reopened his dental office and has continued the practice of his profession to the present time.

At Lead, South Dakota, in September, 1900, Doctor Hedges was married to Mrs. Nellie Frees, of Syracuse, New York, whose maiden name was La Porte. To Doctor and Mrs. Hedges have been born the following children: Oliver G. who served in France during the recent World war and was among the first troops to reach the Rhine, on December 8, 1918. He is now employed in the stock yards at Omaha, Nebraska. Harry H. was a marine during the recent war, being on the Lake Oswego, and was promoted three times in service. He is now a ranchman of Carter County. Daniel J. enlisted at the age of fifteen years in the recent war, was first on a gunboat on the Pacific Ocean, but was transferred to the Atlantic. He was on two different submarines, in which he was in the war zone and saw fighting at close quarters. He is now in Ekalaka, returning uninjured, as did both of his brothers. The two daughters are Ruth and Lucile.

Politically Doctor Hedges is a republican. He was always a great admirer of Colonel Roosevelt, by whom he was invited to join his troop for the Spanish-American war, and the Doctor has regretted that he did not accept the invitation. He has taken an active interest in everything pertaining to the welfare of the community in which he lives. He was the first mayor of Ekalaka and has served on its board of education. During his years of residence in Ekalaka the Doctor has not only gained an enviable notoriety in his chosen profession, but has also established a sound reputation for unrightness and noble character in all the relations of life. Because of his success and his splendid personal qualities he enjoys the confidence and good will of all who know him.

JULIUS WABER represents the business life of Hinsdale as the proprietor of its pioneer drug store. He became identified with the locality in 1905 and began as a ranchman in Rock Creek Canon. He settled on the public domain there and became extensively interested in the stock business, handling at one time about 1,000 head, branded "H9" on the left hip. He continued actively in the business for five years, and is still a stockman, although he has changed his location.

Mr. Waber took his homestead five miles north of Hinsdale, the improvements thereon enabling him to live comfortably during the process of proving up, and he occupied it at times for five years, when he acquired his patent. He has since purchased land nearer Hinsdale, under the Milk River Irrigation Project, and is improving his property with permanent buildings and bringing the land under cultivation. He employed a unique method in clearing the sage brush from the land, pulling a road grader over it with a traction engine and clipping off the brush like corn stalks. He was then able to rake them into winrows and burn them. He first tried the mattock, but found this too slow and laborious a process, and the idea of clearing with a road grader came to him after some experimenting.

On leaving the ranch Mr. Waber established himself permanently in Hinsdale, where for five years he served as the postmaster of the town, having been appointed to the office in 1909, and serving therein until April, 1913, when he turned it over to his successor, Mr. Rutter. Mr. Waber opened his drug store, the first in the town, in June, 1910, and prior to this he was a clerk for Mr. Nelson, and also had charge of the machinery and implement department for a year of the Hinsdale Mercantile Company.

Mr. Waber came to Montana from Elysian, Minnesota, where he was born and reared. He was born June 6, 1881, a son of Frank Waber, who came from his native Vienna, Austria, to the United States when a young man, thus avoiding army service and joining friends in Minnesota. He established a blacksmith shop at Elysian, that state, and spent the remainder of his life at the anvil and forge. From the prosperity which he derived from this vocation he invested in farm lands, and continued interested in the agricultural life of that region. He early became an American citizen, and his interest in public affairs was never permitted to lag, always supporting the principles of the democratic party.

Frank Waber was first married to Theresa Summer, who was born near her husband's birthplace and died in 1891, the mother of four children: Rudolph, a farmer in LeSueur County, Minnesota; Julius, of this review; Emil, a rancher in the Milk

River Valley of Montana; and Oswald, a farmer in that valley. Frank Waber married for his second wife a Miss Schram, who bore him three daughters, Christina, the wife of P. L. Gainsforth, of Dodson, Montana; Anna, who is the indispensable aid in her brother's drug store; and Josephine, a trained nurse in Minneapolis.

Julius Waber supplemented his common school training with one year in the high school at Elysian, Minnesota. Until twenty years of age he continued farming in his native state, spent the following year in Oklahoma engaged on the construction of the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railroad south from Oklahoma City, returned at the close of that period to Minnesota, and soon afterward came to Montana, coming to the West to join intimate friends and primarily to engage in the cattle business. After locating in Hinsdale he served for nine years as a member of the School Board, during two years was one of the county commissioners of Valley County, serving on the board with Messieurs West and Anderson, and was placed in charge of this improvement district by the board and has remained in charge ever since. He is also a director of the First National Bank of Hinsdale and one of its original organizers.

Mr. Waber's political activities began as a republican, his first presidential vote going to Colonel Roosevelt in 1904, and he has supported the nominees of his party in every presidential campaign since.

THOMAS DIGNAN. The name of Thomas Dignan has been influentially associated with the Town of Glasgow since 1902. He is one of the leading attorneys of the community and one who has borne a conspicuous part in the affairs of his city and county.

He was born in the State of New York, at Richfield Springs, February 22, 1871, and his father, David Dignan, was from Ireland, born in County Roscommon, December 18, 1847. David Dignan was liberally educated in his native land, and he was a son of David Dignan, a civil engineer and a man of education. He was born in 1802, and came to the United States before the Civil war, locating in Otsego County, New York, where he was engaged on Government work as an engineer, one of his numerous connections being in the Navy Yard in Brooklyn. But he finally abandoned his profession to engage in farming in Otsego County, and he died as a farmer in 1894. The senior David Dignan married Mary E. Degnan, and their children comprised eight sons and two daughters.

David Dignan, Jr., the oldest of the ten children, spent his life as a farmer in Otsego County, New York, and died there in October, 1884. He married Margaret Brady, a daughter of Thomas Brady of County Mayo, Ireland. Mrs. Dignan still resides at Richfield Springs, New York, and has attained the age of seventy years. Four children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Dignan: Thomas, the Glasgow lawyer and business man; George C., whose home is in Front Royal, Virginia; Ellen, of Richfield Springs, New York; and Anna, the wife of Edward C. Hargadine, of Glasgow, Montana.

As a child the home life of Thomas Dignan was the farm, but when he reached the age of twenty-one he left the country, and three years before this he had also engaged in teaching school, finished his high school and normal school courses, and graduated in law from the University of Minnesota in 1902. His teaching was done in the public schools of Otsego County.

His graduation from the law department of the University of Minnesota admitted him to practice law in that state, and he was also admitted to practice on motion in Montana in February, 1903, before the Supreme Court. He had already selected Glasgow as his location, and he tried his first lawsuit in the state at this point. Early in his career here he formed a partnership with George Hurd, and the firm of Hurd & Dignan was associated in law practice for five years, and after its dissolution Mr. Dignan practiced alone for eleven years, when the firm of Dignan & Barton was formed, about 1912, and continued in existence until Mr. Barton was elected the county attorney. Since 1919 Mr. Dignan has been associated in practice with Mr. Shea, as the firm of Dignan & Shea.

Mr. Dignan has followed a general practice, both civil and criminal, and has also carried along at times an official service. He was first elected to the office of city attorney, and in 1908 was made the county attorney. During his tenure of those offices the enforcement of saloon regulations and the anti-gambling laws were given their proper attention, the first municipal electric light plant of the state was constructed at Glasgow and the water works and sewer systems were installed, all municipal plants. He was next elected a member of the Board of Aldermen of Glasgow, during the administration of Mayor Dawson, and this council completed the municipal improvements above mentioned. Mr. Dignan became a stockholder in the Milk River Valley Bank at Glasgow some time after its organization, and is now the vice president of that institution. He is also the vice president and was interested in the organization of the First National Bank of Hinsdale. During his residence in Montana he has become a large land holder and farmer, and much of his valley land is under the Government Irrigation Project and is being gradually developed as an alfalfa ranch.

Mr. Dignan was married at Owatonna, Minnesota, June 30, 1908, to Miss Mary E. Cashman, who was born in that Minnesota community in October, 1876, a daughter of Edwin and Mary A. (Welch) Cashman, the father born in Ireland and the mother in Massachusetts. After graduating from the University of Minnesota Mrs. Dignan engaged in teaching, and was elected the county superintendent of schools of Steele County, Minnesota. Four children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Dignan: Margaret M., Thomas C., George and Ellen M.

Mr. Dignan grew up in a home where democratic principles were taught, and when he cast his first presidential vote in 1892 it supported Grover Cleveland, and he has supported the national party ticket at each succeeding election. He has the unique distinction of having voted for W. J. Bryan in the three states of New York, Minnesota and Montana. While the country was engaged in the World war Mr. Dignan was county chairman of the Four Minute Men, a member of the Legal Advisory Board of the County of Valley, a member of the executive committee of the Red Cross, and assisted actively in putting over each of its loan drives. Mrs. Dignan was assistant secretary of the local chapter of the Red Cross and a member of the executive committee, and was active in organizing branches of the Red Cross throughout the county. Mr. Dignan is fraternally associated with the Knights of Columbus, the Foresters and the Modern Woodmen of America. The Dignan home is one of the good residences of Glasgow.

MARK D. HOYT, M. D. For nearly thirty years Doctor Hoyt has been not only a leading physician and surgeon of Valley County but a man whose influence and leadership have counted in behalf of every forward movement made in that vicinity. Doctor Hoyt was a surgeon in some of the field hospitals just back of the fighting lines in France in the summer and early fall of 1918, and came out of the war with the rank of major in the Medical Reserve Corps.

Doctor Hoyt was born at St. Paul, Minnesota, September 19, 1868. His grandfather, Benjamin F. Hoyt, was a native of Ohio, in which state he followed farming. He became an early pioneer at St. Paul, Minnesota, where for many years he was extensively engaged in the real estate business. He was the chief factor in building the First Methodist Church in St. Paul. He married Miss Haney, of Ohio, and their sons were Lorenzo, Freeman, Henry, Mark and John F., while their daughters were Mary, who became the wife of Dr. John H. Murphy, of St. Paul, Cynthia, who was the wife of Dr. Lafayette Morrow, of Indiana, and Hannah, who was Mrs. George H. Hazard, of St. Paul.

John F. Hoyt, father of Doctor Hoyt, was a lawyer by profession and had some pioneer experience in Montana. He was only a child when his father moved to Minnesota. John F. Hoyt came out to Montana in 1862 and spent about two years in the territory, sharing in some of the very notable experiences of the pioneers. He was appointed the first vigilante judge at the Moore-Reeves trial at Bannock City. Though there was no doubt of the guilt of the murderers, both men were acquitted because only one man on the jury, N. P. Langford, had the courage to vote for a conviction. But after the trial and the same night a party of the Vigilantes took the murderers and hanged them. John F. Hoyt had some varied experiences as a prospector in Montana and on returning East studied law, being a law student in the office of the distinguished Senator Cushman K. Davis at St. Paul. He practiced in St. Paul, served as judge of the Probate Court of Ramsey County, was for years president of the Board of Water Commissioners, chairman of the Board of Public Works, and long a leader in the democratic party of Minnesota. He was a Mason, but had no church affiliation, though his father was prominent in the Methodist Church. John F. Hoyt, who died in 1910, at the age of seventy-five, married Mary E. Hobart, a native of Illinois, whose people were early settlers of Minnesota. She died three years later than her husband, at the age of seventy-four. They reared three children: Dr. Mark D. Hoyt; Frances, wife of A. W. Mahon, and she died at Glasgow, Montana, in 1907; and Florence, wife of W. E. Lindeke, of St. Paul.

Mark D. Hoyt, who was born at St. Paul September 19, 1868, grew up in his native city, graduated from the St. Paul High School at the age of eighteen, and prepared for his professional career in the medical department of the University of Pennsylvania at Philadelphia, where he graduated in 1891. Almost immediately after securing his diploma he came to Montana and located at Glasgow, where his time and energies have been absorbed in a large general practice. In earlier years, when his professional responsibilities were not so arduous, he served as county superintendent of schools. He was the originator of the movement for the Deaconess Hospital at Glasgow, and since coming here has been a local surgeon for the Great Northern Railway Company. Many times he has served as health officer and county physician. He is a leading member of the Montana State Medical Society. For a number of years he was a member of the old drug firm of Mahon & Hoyt.

With America's entrance into the World war Mr. Hoyt served as secretary of District Exemption Board No. 2 until February, 1918, when he resigned to enter the army himself. He had enlisted at Kalispell August 8, 1917, receiving his commission as a first lieutenant in the Medical Reserve Corps. He was commissioned captain May 15, 1918, and saw his principal service with the Jefferson Hospital Unit No. 38 of Philadelphia. He went overseas June 30, 1918, and was on duty with a surgical and operating team all the time detached from the Hospital Unit. He was with the French for nine weeks and then went to the Argonne, and was on duty throughout the Argonne drive. On the day the armistice was signed he was in Mobile Hospital No. 1 about forty kilometers northwest of Verdun and across the Hindenburg line. He and the party experienced shell fire, also enemy bombing from the sky, but escaped without wounds or capture. On the signing of the armistice Doctor Hoyt also received his major's commission. He left France April 6, 1919, sailing from Brest for Boston, where he arrived the 16th of the same month, was discharged at Camp Dix, New Jersey, April 23rd, and arrived home at Glasgow May 2, 1919.

For many years Doctor Hoyt has been prominent in Masonry, being affiliated with North Star Lodge No. 46, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, Royal Arch Chapter No. 17, Great Falls Council, Royal and Select Masters, is past eminent commander of Glasgow Commandery No. 13, Knights Templar, and is a member of the Helena Consistory of the Scottish Rite and Algeria Temple of the Mystic Shrine.

At Glasgow, February 8, 1897, Doctor Hoyt married Miss Mary T. McKinnon. She was born at Cornwall, Ontario, February 14, 1872, and came to Montana in 1890.

Tyson D. Duncan. The latter decades of the nineteenth century were characterized by the emigration of the pioneer element, which made the great State of Montana very largely what it is today. These emigrants were sturdy, heroic, sincere and, in the main, upright people, such as constitute the strength of the commonwealth. It scarcely appears probable that in the future another such period can occur, or, indeed, any period when such a solid phalanx of strong-minded, brawney-armed men and noble, self-sacrificing women will take possession of a new country. The period to which reference is made, therefore, cannot be too much or too well written up, and the only way to do justice to such a subject is to record the lives of those who led the van of civilization and founded the institutions which are today the pride and boast of a great state and a strong and virile people. Among those who braved the obstacles and discomforts of those early days should be mentioned Tyson D. Duncan, one of the best known ranchmen, now retired, in the Flathead Valley.

Mr. Duncan might be called twice a pioneer of Montana. He first came in the thrilling and romantic days of the sixties, as one of the younger members of the Duncan family. Later, after an absence of a number of years, he returned again, and in the early eighties he and his wife were among the first to settle in the wonderful Flathead country, at what is now Kalispell. Fortunately for the value of history it is possible to reproduce Mr. Duncan's impressions and experiences largely in his own language.

He is of pioneer American stock. About 1795 his grandfather migrated from Maryland to Kentucky, which had just been admitted to the Union but was still a part of the Western wilderness. The family lived there until 1817, and then with wife and five children, two sons and three daughters, the grandfather migrated to Howard County, Missouri, which marked another Western frontier. They made their home five miles east of Fayette, the county seat, and started the clearing of the land and the building of a home. About two years later, while out hunting, the grandfather Duncan was mistaken for a bear by a neighbor, and his death was one of the tragedies of the frontier community. It was a heavy blow to the little family, but the grandmother showed the courage of many pioneer women and with the aid of her boys eventually saw her ambition fulfilled for a comfortable home. The children grew up and married and settled down in homes of their own.

When the family moved from Kentucky to Missouri, Ashley Duncan, the youngest son, was about nine years of age. Ashley Duncan remained in Howard County until 1848, when he bought a tract of land in the abandoned Mormon settlement in Northwest Missouri, at Far West, in Caldwell County, about seven miles from the county seat of Kingston. On this land was a large log house that had been used for a store building. He and his family moved into that house in the spring of 1849 and lived there two or three years, until he could erect a more suitable dwelling.

At that time Tyson D. Duncan was about a year and a half old. He was born at the old home near Fayette, September 28, 1847, son of Ashley and Eliza (Sproul) Duncan. He was the twelfth of their thirteen children. Mr. Duncan's early memories and associations are all centered at the old neighborhood at Far West. He was early put to work, and at the age of fourteen was considered a good hand on the farm. Fortunately for him, his older brothers assumed most of the responsibilities of running the farm, and he was allowed to attend school regularly. Mr. Duncan feels that the schools of his day would compare favorably with those of the present time, and of one thing he is sure, that the teachers were exceedingly strict. In time all the Duncan boys went West except one who went South and entered the army, but returned after the war.

Two of his brothers and two half-brothers and Mr. Duncan's only sister came to Montana in 1864. The party traveled overland with ox teams. Then, in the spring of 1865, his father, having sold the farm, went to St. Joseph, and April 25th he and his wife and younger children, including Tyson, took passage on the steamer Cora bound for Fort Benton, Montana. At sunrise May 1st, when the boat was about thirty miles above Omaha, it struck a snag and sank in the shallow water close to shore. The passengers remained on board three days, until they were transferred to the Twilight, owned by the same company, and proceeded on the journey. There was low water that season, the boat was heavily loaded, and progress was exceedingly slow. After passing all the settlements along the banks there was much to interest young people, including Tyson. However, his most vivid memory of the journey is associated with the mouth of Yellowstone River, at which point the boat was nearly held up by a migration of buffalo herds going north, numbering in Mr. Duncan's estimate literally millions. The river was no barrier to the animals, who would jump into the water, hardly regarding the boat, and hundreds were mired down and lost their lives in the quicksands. The passengers killed many of the animals and there was abundance of buffalo steak the rest of the voyage.

About June 20th, relates Mr. Duncan, the boat landed at the mouth of the Maries River, where two of the Duncan boys were waiting with ox teams to take the family on to Helena. That part of the journey was accomplished without incident, though at the time the Sioux Indians were on the war path. They reached Helena about July 10th, and within a month the family suffered the grievous loss of the death of the mother. Of his early memories of Helena Mr. Duncan recalls seeing gold dug out of the dirt in the streets at Last Chance Gulch. Helena was in fact nothing but a typical mining town, the houses, spread over a great deal of ground, being built of logs. The Duncan family located in the Boulder Valley, thirty miles south of Helena, and Tyson Duncan remained there until the following spring, when he entered the service of a Mr. Nelson and drove a freight team of five yoke of oxen. He was employed at that work until July, and in September joined a party of sixteen, leaving Helena with two four-horse teams for Fort Benton. Here they secured a good strong boat, 40 feet long and 11 feet wide, fitted with oars and sail, and started on a voyage down the Missouri River that Mr. Duncan even now regards as the most delightful experience of his career. The entire trip from Fort Benton was not marred by a single accident or mishap. A cook stove was on board, and cooking was done regularly. Each mess took three turns at cooking and three turns at the oars, and the boat was run night and day, with four men on duty at night and twelve in the day. This continuous run was necessary while passing through the hostile Indian country, but after reaching Sioux City, Iowa, they tied their craft to the shore at night. The entire voyage from Fort Benton to St. Joseph, Missouri, was made in thirty-one days, considered very good time for an open row boat.

The next seventeen years of his life Mr. Duncan lived chiefly in Missouri, two years in Jackson County, in the vicinity of Kansas City. In November, 1868, he went to St. Clair County, Missouri, and there on November 25, 1869, married Miss Sarah Caton. It is appropriate to look ahead from that date just fifty years to November 25, 1919, when Mr. and Mrs. Duncan in the presence of congratulating friends celebrated their golden wedding anniversary.

During the early seventies Mr. Duncan spent two years in Colorado, six months in Bent County and the rest of the time at Silver Cliff in Custer County.

In the spring of 1881, while in Missouri, Mr. Duncan contracted a severe case of western fever, and in February, 1882, having sold his little farm, he joined a party of about thirty bound for the West and Northwest. They left Kansas City March 1, 1882, traveling over the old Kansas Pacific through Denver and Cheyenne, reaching the terminus of the California and Oregon Railroad March 9th. There they procured a team and drove to the Rogue River Valley in Oregon. The stay in Oregon was brief, only ten days. Mr. Duncan was not pleased with the country, and he then continued his journey to Portland, and on the 30th of May took boat and went up the Columbia River to The Dalles, thence taking the trail over the mountains to Montana. The route was by way of Pendleton, direct to Boise, Idaho, thence through the Lost River country to the Salt Lake and Virginia Emigrant Road at Camas Creek, and thence north across the mountains and down the Ruby Valley and the Jefferson by Whitehall to Boulder Valley, the place that Mr. Duncan had left seventeen years previously.

Here began his second period of pioneering in Montana. His plans being unsettled, Mrs. Duncan soon returned to Missouri, but he remained there until the following April, when with Edgar Brook and a young man named Mossburg he fitted up a four-horse team and started for the Bitter Root Valley with the intention of taking up land. They followed the old Mullin Road, and on arriving in Missoula met the Indian Agent Peter Ronan, who advised them to go into the Flathead Valley, where settlement had just begun. The travelers were not entirely sure as to the exact location of the Flathead Valley and had to be reassured by the Indian agent that it was in the United States and not in Canada. At that time the line of the Northern Pacific was being built, and Mr. Duncan and companions, accepting the advice of Ronan, followed the route over to the Flathead Reservation and continued on north thirty-five miles to the foot of Flathead Lake. April 16, 1883, they reached the Flathead Valley at the west side of the lake, and Mr. Duncan was convinced that the most beautiful scene was outspread before his eyes that he had ever witnessed. The entire country was covered with a heavy growth of bunch grass, resembling at a distance a vast grain field. After looking around for several days he and Edgar Brook picked their claims, built a log cabin, and then returned, stopping at Helena to complete their filing. That was about the first of June, and Mr. Duncan went on to the Boulder Valley and assembled his possessions. About the 20th of June he started for Deer Lodge Valley, following the old Mullin Road, and while on that part of the trail he narrowly escaped being a participant in a stage hold-up. His journey led through Anaconda, where the first smelter was in course of construction, the cornerstone of the greatest smelting plant in the West. Near Anaconda he took employment with a rancher, helping him put up hay, and about the 15th of August his wife joined him after coming from Missouri, and on the 27th of the same month they loaded their few belongings into a wagon and started for their new home in Flathead Valley.

At Garrison they struck the line of the Northern Pacific and followed the right of way to Missoula. They reached Gold Creek just one day too soon to witness the ceremony of the joining of the two ends of the track and the driving of the gold spike in the presence of the head officials of the road and also former President Grant. Leaving the railroad at Ravalli they proceeded across the reservation to the foot of Flathead Lake, and thence by his original route to the homestead cabin, which they reached September 9, 1883. It was a certain sense of humor that sustained many of the pioneers on their first introduction to the bare surroundings, and evidently Mrs. Duncan had that sense, since to her question whether this was their future home and Mr. Duncan's affirmative reply, she said "a pretty gloomy looking outfit it is," and Mr. Duncan could only confess that her words were an apt description. It was a little log cabin, had neither roof, doors nor windows, and what was more there was not a foot of lumber to be had nor a sawmill within 100 miles. However, both were young and strong and could make the best of circumstances. Within a few days Mr. Duncan had a dirt roof, had plastered the cracks between the logs both outside and inside with mud, and going into the woods he cut small logs, splitting them in halves, and smoothing off the flat sides so that when laid on the ground they had what eastern people called a slab or puncheon floor. By similar contriving with axe and draw knife he made a rough door, hung on wooden hinges, and with a wooden latch whose string hung in the proverbial manner on the outside. The country was then full of Indians, and they soon discovered the inviting latch string, and, as was their custom, came into the house without the formality of announcement. They were not hostile, but nevertheless were frequently troublesome intruders and stayed much longer than they were welcome. When Mr. Duncan was at home he would curtly order his Indian visitor out, using the Indian tongue, but it was not so easy for Mrs. Duncan to get rid of them. However, one day she lost her patience and drove an Indian buck out of the house with a stick of stove wood, and the next time Mr. Duncan came onto the Indian he was profuse in his expressions of apology, calling Mrs. Duncan "much good woman" and saying that she was going to kill him with a stick.

Mr. Duncan also eked out the meager furnishing by contriving a table from a soap box, and later he secured a four-light window that relieved the gloom of the interior.

The following winter was literally the worst ever experienced by the oldest settlers in that section of Montana. Mr. Duncan had made what preparation he could against the coming of the season, erecting a stable for his team and getting up a supply of wood. His nearest neighbor and the first settler in that part of the valley was Nicholas P. Moon, who had located there about three years before. From him Mr. Duncan bought enough potatoes and other vegetables to last through the winter, though some other families that came the same fall had to do without. Nevertheless there was an ample supply of deer meat, and for several years venison and fish were almost the only meat consumed by the pioneers. Mr. Duncan was busy cutting posts and making rails up to about the 15th of December, when it began snowing, and by the first of the year the snow lay on the level about twenty-four inches deep. Then came heavy rains, converting the snow into an ice sheet, and following that came other snows and alternative rains, until by the 20th of February, the date of the last snow, the ground was covered to a depth of about three feet on the level, most of it solid ice. It was a matter of extreme difficulty to go anywhere, except on long snow shoes or skis, and the long and lonesome winter was especially trying to the women of the community.

That winter brought them their first experience in high cost of living, bacon being 30 cents, sugar 25 cents, salt 6 cents, flour $7.50 a 100, coal oil $1 a gallon. Mr. and Mrs. Duncan resorted to economy in the use of oil or kerosene. After the chief work of the evening was done the front doors of the cook stove were opened, a pine knot put on the coal, and the blaze furnished enough light until bedtime. The snow did not disappear until about the middle of April, and by the first of May Mr. Duncan had about forty acres fenced in with posts and rails, and was ready to plant his first crop. Seed was scarce, but he managed to secure a little seed grain and vegetables, and with ample rain everything grew in abundance and there was a surplus to sell the great crowd of home seekers who arrived during the season.

In the fall of 1884 Flathead Valley held its first election. Montana being still a territory, there was no vote for president. The people in the Flathead were in the jurisdiction of Missoula County, and they only nominated township officers, all of the county to the Canadian line being Jocko Township. The offices to be filled were two justices of the peace and one constable. John Lang and Mr. Duncan were elected justices, and a few days after the election Mr. Duncan started to Missoula, the county seat, to qualify, driving 140 miles for that purpose. He had the honor of being the first official to qualify for office in the Flathead Valley. During the following two years Justice Duncan presided over some local cases of peculiar interest, which he usually solved to the satisfaction of all concerned, and he also married a few couples.

John. L. Selwaz

During the fall and winter of 1886 Mr. Duncan participated in the stampede to the newly discovered gold district on Wolf Creek, sixty miles west. He and his partner staked out their claims, and. on their return they made their night camp and with plenty of wood for fire endured in comfort the extreme low temperature, and when they finally returned to the settlement they learned that the country had been visited by a severe blizzard and that all the prospectors were believed to have been lost, and rescue parties had been proposed.

During successive years, as a result of hard and persistent work, Mr. Duncan had his claim fenced, and was enjoying the fruits of prosperity as a farmer. He established a nucleus of cattle and horses, built a better house, and by 1890 was thoroughly established and contented. During the spring of that year he put in a large crop, and with a good season had his largest surplus of grain, hay and vegetables. One day in November of that year the community became much aroused, strangers were rushing in rapidly, and it was learned that townsite men had come in advance of the Great Northern Railroad and were acquiring options on eight or ten ranches for the purpose of laying out a large town. Then came surveyors driving their stakes, and by the 15th of April, 1891, the town was being platted. Mr. Duncan in dealing with the townsite men let them have three forty acre tracts, three-fourths of his farm, reserving one forty for himself. This was the founding of the new Town of Kalispell, and Mr. Duncan platted 8½ blocks, each block containing twelve lots, and called it Duncan's Addition to Kalispell. Thus almost before he knew it he was in the townsite business, and all of Duncan's Addition except twelve lots have long since been sold. This addition, because of its wide streets, gentle slope and other attractive features, is one of the most attractive parts of Kalispell. Now after thirty-seven years of residence in the Flathead country and despite the fact that he has attained the age of three score and thirteen, Mr. Duncan periodically experiences a touch of the western fever, though he realizes that the western frontier has practically disappeared through the gates of the Pacific Ocean, and doubtless he will be well satisfied to spend the rest of his life in the beautiful valley where he pitched camp so many years since.

Politically Mr. Duncan gives his support to the democratic party and is a strong admirer of William Jennings Bryan and Woodrow Wilson, fine portraits of both men adorning the walls of his home. Religiously he is a member of the Free Methodist Church and Mrs. Duncan is of the Presbyterian faith. Mr. Duncan is recognized as a man of extraordinary characteristics, who, by reason of years of indefatigable labor and honest effort, has not only acquired a well merited material prosperity, but has also richly earned the highest esteem of all with whom he has been associated.

JOHN LLOYD SELWAY. While the earliest settlers of Montana were prospectors and gold seekers, the Selways, who came here in the '60s, have been almost entirely ranchers and stock raisers. It is a notable family group, and the representatives today, descended from four pioneer brothers, are widely scattered over the state.

John Lloyd Selway, whose home is in Custer County, was born near Kenosha, Wisconsin, July 31, 1861, and was about five years of age when brought to Montana. His father, John R. Selway, was born in England, a son of Robert Selway, who finally returned to that country. Four of the sons, John R., James, Thomas M. and Robert H., all made for themselves names in Montana as stockmen. They are now deceased but have left the trail of their deeds behind them. Their mother, whose maiden name was Eliza Bartlett, came West with two of her sons and was preceded by one of her sons, James, who came to Montana in 1863. It is believed she was one of the first white women in Beaver Head County, and was loved by all the pioneers. She was frequently given the custody of money by the freighters for safe keeping from road agents, since "Grandma" Selway was an inviolable personality even among the bad men of the country. She died in Beaver Head County and is buried at Dillon. John R. Selway and all his brothers died in Beaver Head County, all left children, and the second generation is engaged chiefly in the stock and farming industry.

John R. Selway married Jane Reynolds, daughter of John Reynolds, who came from Wales as a child and spent his life in Wisconsin. Jane Reynolds Selway started the first Sunday school in Montana that became a permanent organization. The ring which the Bible class of that school presented her, made of Bannock gold, is the property of her son Lloyd. John R. Selway died at the age of sixty-four and his wife when about fifty. Their children were: Charles, of California; John Lloyd; Robert R., of Sheridan, Wyoming; Senator E. O. Selway, of Dillon, one of the best known men of the state; Delos Duncan, a farmer and stockman of Powder River County; Blanche, who became the wife of Lewis Alger and died in St. Louis, leaving two children; and Richard A., who is an extensive stock raiser at Alzada, Montana.

John Lloyd Selway acquired his education in the country schools of Montana and was the only member of his family who failed to get a college education.

John R. Selway brought his family to Montana joining his brother James and coming about a year after his mother had reached the state. He settled in Beaverhead Valley. He had come by ox team from Wisconsin over the Bozeman trail, and he brought with him only his family, a yoke of steers and a yoke of cows. He followed the Platte River up through Nebraska and crossed the Big Horn River at old Fort C. F. Smith and the Yellowstone above Livingston. He had been a farmer in Wisconsin, and applied his efforts in the same line in connection with stock raising in Montana. He first tried cattle and then took up sheep. He was one of the pioneer wool growers of Montana. In company with a brother-in-law, R. A. Reynolds, he brought in from Oregon about 800 head of ewes. This was one of the pioneer flocks in Montana. Some of them later fell into the hands of Charles Daly on Little Pumpkin Creek and some of that old stock or blood is still found there. John R. Selway brought his stock into Custer County in 1881 through his son Lloyd and Charles Daly. While their flocks were held at Miles City they loaded a burro with their pack and went into the Powder River region, and on the farm where Mr. Selway now lives they made camp and from there proceeded up the river to select their winter quarters. In 1882 the Selway ranch was selected by Lloyd Selway and in July he took his sheep to the Main Pumpkin Creek, where the family has since maintained a ranch. He and Mr. Daly were associated in hay making, sheep shearing and in a general business partnership for several years, though one was located on Big Pumpkin and the other on the little fork of that stream. Mr. Selway remained in that locality until 1887, when he was succeeded by his brother R. R. Selway, Lloyd returning to Beaverhead Valley in Beaverhead County. He continued in the sheep business as manager of the Ruby Sheep Company's business for several years. He finally returned to Custer County and established his ranch north of the Yellowstone in the Jordan country until after the disastrous blizzard of 1905. At that time he would have been forced out of stock raising altogether but for Mr. Jordan, the banker, who supplied him with financial backing. On coming to the locality of his present ranch in the Powder River country he ran his sheep on the range, and has built up a ranch devoted to mixed stock raising, owning 3½ sections along the river. Raising sheep for wool and mutton has been a leading feature in his stock enterprise, and at the climax of his business he had three flocks, comprising about 9,000 sheep. He has gone through all the ups and downs of the sheep business, but the era of low prices for wool never brought him near financial ruin. Recently he has added cattle and also to some extent horses, breeding the Percheron draft horses. This branch of the industry was particularly profitable during the World war.

June 2, 1908, in Custer County, Mr. Selway married Miss Katherine Wiese, a native of Iowa and a daughter of Jocklin Wiese, an Iowa farmer. Mrs. Selway is one of a large family and the only one of them to live in Montana. The Selways have been republicans for half a century or more and Mr. Selway has served as precinct committeeman.

KAARE O. CARLSON. Northeastern Montana is pre-eminently a country for young men, men alive to new opportunities and ready to embark their energies and resources in a development work that in time will give this section of the state its merited place as a commercial and agricultural district. One of these live and hustling young men is Kaare O. Carlson, cashier of the State Bank of Redstone.

Mr. Carlson was born at Gaasver, Norway, January 19, 1891, son of Karl and Oline (Knudson) Olson. His father spent his life in the same locality as a merchant and fisherman. Of his children three sons survive: Jorgen, who is still in Norway; Reverend Olaf, a Lutheran minister at Fairview, Montana; and Kaare Oliver. The mother by a previous marriage had a numerous family of children.

Kaare Oliver Carlson acquired a common school education in Norway and left his native country at the age of seventeen, sailing from Trondjhem to Hull, England, thence to Liverpool, and the ship that brought him across the ocean was the later ill-fated liner the Lusitania. He arrived in New York August 25, 1908, passing through Ellis Island, and finished his journey at Fort Ransom, which was then the home of his brother, Rev. Olaf Carlson. He had no knowledge of English when he came to this country, but rapidly mastered the elements of an English education, and from savings acquired as a farm hand he paid for a three months' course in a college at Fargo in 1911. While in school he made a record that put him second in a class of 210 in bookkeeping. After that for another year he worked on a farm at wages of $30 a month and board, and from the farm he came to Montana, reaching this state in May, 1913. At Joplin in Hill County he was employed as a yard man for the Piper-Howe Lumber Company, but in June, 1914, removed to Westby, Montana, and was bookkeeper for the Kulaas Lumber Company of that town. This company next sent him to Plentywood as yard manager, and before the end of the year he was transferred to Redstone and put in charge of the company's business there. His home has been at Redstone since 1915. His qualifications as a business man attracted the attention of the State Bank of Redstone, and he was invited to become that institution's cashier, a service he has performed creditably and has gained many friends for the bank.

Mr. Carlson made his declaration of citizenship while at Stanley, North Dakota, and his final papers were issued while he was in Plentywood. Though he cast his first presidential vote in 1916 for Mr. Wilson, his political convictions take him in the republican ranks. He was made a Mason at Redstone and has taken the Blue Lodge degrees.

At Minot, North Dakota, June 24, 1915, he married Miss Bertha Anderson. She was born at Belgrade, Minnesota, in August, 1894, a daughter of Andrew and Anna Anderson, both natives of Denmark. Mrs. Carlson is the oldest of three children, the other two being Dewey and Della, both of Wilmer, Minnesota. Mr. and Mrs. Carlson have a daughter, Ada, born June 23, 1916.

HERBERT J. ADDEN. The entire abstract of title business of Valley County is now concentrated in one office and under one organization, the Valley County Abstract Company, the active head of which for a long period was Herbert J. Adden, whose active experience in abstract work covered a period of ten years and who became a resident of Glasgow in April, 1913.

Mr. Adden was born at Mount Olive, Macoupin County, Illinois, November 19, 1882. His grandfather Adden was born in Germany of Low German stock, came to America in early days, and spent his active years as a farmer near Bunker Hill, Illinois. Adde H. Adden, father of the Glasgow business man, was born near Bunker Hill, Illinois, and became a traction and stationary engineer and was also identified with the operation of some of the early coal mines of Southern Illinois as a stationary engineer and sunk several air shafts for the Consolidated Coal Company. He owned and operated several saw mills in Macoupin County. His death occurred at Ashton, Iowa, in 1896, at the age of forty-six. He was one of a family of five children, and his wife, Hattie Keiser, was one of the seventeen children born to Herbert Keiser, of Fosterburg, Illinois. Mrs. Hattie Adden, a native of Illinois, is now living at Gladys, North Dakota, the wife of John Essmann. Her husband proved up a homestead at Gladys. The children of Adde H. Adden and wife were: William H., a farmer at Gladys; Margaret, wife of Joe Hickman, of Ellsworth, Minnesota; and Herbert J.

Herbert J. Adden lived in Illinois to the age of ten years, in Macoupin County, and his parents then moved to Litchfield, Illinois, and he completed his education in the public schools there. About that time the family came West to Ellsworth, Minnesota, and for one year he was a student in Hamline University in St. Paul. Mr. Adden left college in 1906, and he regards his best education as the product of his actual business experience.

In 1906 he went to the country north of Williston and took up a homestead, building a little house 12 by 14 and occupying it as a bachelor. He had an actual farm experience there, harvesting three crops during six years. He was also township clerk for Orthell Township, and there as in Montana took a prominent part in the establishment and maintenance of church and Sabbath schools. He was the originator of the Gladys Sunday School at the postoffice of Gladys, and since coming to Glasgow served five years as superintendent of the Methodist Sunday School and is chairman of the board of trustees and the board of stewards of the church.

After leaving his homestead he located at Williston, where for three years he was a factor in the life of the town and was secretary of the Westergaard-Blair Abstract Company. On coming to Montana he and O. P. Hovind bought the Montana Loan and Abstract Company in April, 1913, and in May, 1915, purchased the Valley County Abstract Company. In November, 1917, Mr. Adden became sole manager of the business, buying out O. P. Hovind. On March 1, 1920, the Valley County Abstract Company took over the abstract business of the Rundle Land and Abstract Company, thus acquiring all the abstract records of the county. The initial effort to write up a set of abstract of title records for Valley County was made by Pierce and Shoemaker, who established the original Valley County Abstract Company. The business was later acquired by R. E. and C. C. Johnson of Glasgow, and they in turn sold their interests to Adden and Hovind in 1913.

On March 1, 1920, Mr. Adden sold his interest in the Valley County Abstract Company to Messrs. Rasey, Bertsch and Paul. He moved with his family to an irrigated ranch of 300 acres one mile west from Nashua, Montana, and sixteen miles southeast of Glasgow. The land is rapidly being broken up to get the irrigable areas producing alfalfa. The farm is adapted to stock raising and grain and alfalfa farming. Mr. Adden intends making this a stock and alfalfa farm.

Whether in business or in community affairs Mr. Adden has always proved a man of convictions and willing to actively support any cause in which his heart is enlisted. He has been president of the Anti-Saloon League of Valley County for several years, worked effectively to make the county dry, and also assumed some responsibilities in the statewide prohibition movement. During the World war he was on the committee of Four Minute men at Glasgow, and was especially interested in the success of the drive for funds for war auxiliary purposes. He grew up in a republican home and cast his first vote for Colonel Roosevelt, and continued his support of Roosevelt as a progressive in 1912. In 1914 Mr. Adden was a candidate for the Legislature on the progressive ticket.

At Williston, North Dakota, November 28, 1912, he married Miss Carrie Fosse. She was born at Ruthven, Iowa, September 22, 1886, third among the twelve children of Mr. and Mrs. Ole O. Fosse, natives of Norway, who were married in the United States and are farmers at White Earth, North Dakota. Mrs. Adden finished her education in St. Olaf College at Northfield, Minnesota, and had been a teacher for two years when she married. Mr. and Mrs. Adden are the parents of four children: Dorothy F., Harriet May, William Wesley and Constance Margaret.

Quincy Percell McClammy. While he was a cowboy when he came into Montana a quarter of a century ago, and was in the employ of several of the prominent ranch outfits, Mr. McClammy for about fifteen years has been an independent farmer and rancher at Oswego, and his stock interests, his farm home, his family and his other relationships stamp him as one of the prominent men of that community.

Mr. McClammy was born near Pineapple, Alabama, October 20, 1872. In the paternal line he is of Irish stock. His grandfather, John McClammy, was a slave holding planter of Alabama and his wife, it is said, was a member of the Cherokee tribe of Indians in that state. Their sons were William, Mark and Dot. William McClammy, father of the Oswego rancher, was a native of Alabama, served in the Confederate army during the war between the states, and after the war was sheriff of his county. He died about 1876. His wife was Mollie Snowden, daughter of a planter and slave owner. At his death his widow was left with a family of children whose later or present locations identify them as follows: Tod, of El Paso, Texas; Mark, who died in Spokane, Washington; Quincy P.; Bettie, Mrs. Robert Boone, of Imperial Valley, California; and William, of Poplar, Montana.

Soon after the death of her husband Mrs. William McClammy took her family out to Texas and first established a home at Elgin, later moving to Williamson County, near Hutto, where her children grew up. She died there as Mrs. Charles Payne, and by her second marriage had a daughter, Katie, now married and living in Texas. On the death of their mother the McClammy brothers located their little sister Bettie with a family in Elgin, and they then scattered in different directions.

Quincy P. McClammy had no schooling worth mentioning. Even when he was in school playing mumble-the-peg and running horses furnished him a diversion instead of books, and he has always regretted the lack of an education that would have helped him over some of the hard places in later life. From Texas he went north into the Cherokee nation of Indian Territory, his only possessions at that time being a horse and saddle and a few dollars. He hired out to a half-breed Chickasaw, Frank Colbert, the Colbert ranch being at Pauls Valley. Young McClammy remained there six years keeping track of the Colbert cattle. Subsequently he was sent to the Colbert farm near Denison, Texas, and for a time acted as foreman of the negro labor on the plantation. On leaving the Colbert employ he entered a business that was then comparatively new, "bone picking" over the Indian country. It was an industry that engaged hundreds for a time, especially with the disappearance of the buffalo from the plains. Mr. McClammy also gathered up the bones of cattle and horses and even the skulls of Indians. His shipping points were Colbert, Stringtown and McAlister. He was thus engaged for a year, and carried from the enterprise some capital.

His next experiences were at Amarillo, Texas, where he remained enjoying a "good time" with his ranger friends, and when his money ran low his friends staked him to a saddle horse and pack and he made a line for Channing, Texas, on the staked plains, and there joined the VVV outfit and came up over the northern trails with a bunch of their cattle. Leaving that outfit he came across to the "N bar N" outfit on Prairie Elk, one of the outfits of the Home Land and Cattle Company, and thus began his adventures and achievements in Montana in the year 1896.

While on Prairie Elk he met and became a companion of two of the old time cowmen who remain in the Wolf Point locality, John B. Randall and Hank J. Cusker. After two years with the "N bar N" he went to the Sweet Grass Hills, and was employed by the DHS, now known as the Pioneer Cattle Company, owned by Conrad Kohrs. He ranged over the regions of that concern until it closed out its affairs, and about that time he discovered the companion of his life.

December 23, 1906, the wedding occurred which made Quincy P. McClammy and Miss Minnie Knapp man and wife. Mrs. McClammy is one of the native women of the Sioux tribe, a daughter of Daniel Knapp, a prominent pioneer of the Missouri River country and the first merchant of Oswego. Mrs. McClammy was born at Fort Buford, North Dakota, in 1882, attended school at Poplar, and finished her education with a liberal training at Great Falls. To Mr. and Mrs. McClammy were born six children, Pearl Bettie, Abbie, Montana Ore, Mark Benjamin, Lucy and Percella.

After his marriage Mr. McClammy settled down at Oswego and began a career of his own. He had previously gathered a bunch of horses, running them on the range under the brand "Diamond tail walking K" and later on the circle 3 on the jaw and his present brand is D on the right shoulder. Horses and cattle have constituted his stock interests. Since his marriage he has had his home in Oswego, and his residence is one of the conspicuous ones of the town, was designed by Mr. McClammy and built with his money. It is an eight-room bungalow with basement under all, hot air furnace, and all the conveniences and comforts of a modern home. Interesting features of the McClammy home at Oswego are some of the trophies of the chase and his long experience on the range. They include mounted animals, a deer and her fawn, an American eagle, a coyote, a leopard and a squirrel. Mr. McClammy grew up in a democratic state, and cast his first presidential ballot for Mr. Bryan and continues to support the party in national affairs. He is one of the interesting citizens of Oswego, a man of much public spirit, identifies himself with local movements for the improvements, and has always been well satisfied that he cast in his lot with Montana in early life.

Spurgeon E. Paul has had an interesting participation in the development of Sheridan County for several years, both as a lawyer and as a homesteader. His home is at Redstone, and the people of that community have learned to respect highly his abilities and his profession and also his good citizenship.

Mr. Paul was born at Brookville, Illinois, March 14, 1889. His grandfather, Solomon Paul, was probably a native of Germany and spent his early life in Pennsylvania. He married a Miss Walters, and his last years were passed on a farm near Polo, Illinois. His family consisted of two daughters and five sons, all the sons becoming farmers. One of them is Levi W. Paul, who was born in Illinois sixty-three years ago, and is now occupying his son's homestead near Redstone, Montana. He exercised his own privileges as a homesteader at New England in North Dakota, and after making the necessary improvements acquired title to his land and lived in the state several years. Later he returned to Freeport, Illinois, to educate his younger children, and finally followed his son to Montana. He married Sarah E. Miller, who was born in Carroll County, Illinois, where her father, Warner Miller, was a pioneer wagon maker. Warner Miller came West from Pennsylvania, and when he first saw Chicago it was a village clustered around the lake front and the Chicago River. Levi Paul and wife have three children: Spurgeon E.; Mae, wife of James C. Powell, of Portland, Indiana; and Warner, a medical student of the University of Minnesota.

Spurgeon E. Paul grew up on his father's farm, part of his boyhood being spent in Minnesota, where his parents lived near Wheaton. From the public schools he entered the University of Minnesota, completed his law course and was admitted to the Minnesota bar on motion before the Supreme Court. He then returned to Freeport, Illinois, took the bar examination in 1912, and was admitted and tried his first law suits there. In Illinois he was associated in practice with R. J. Carnahan.

Mr. Paul came from Freeport to Montana and was soon enrolled among the lawyers of Sheridan County. His first case was in defense of a neighbor whose claim had been contested, and he secured a favorable verdict for his client at the Land Office trial. Later he himself was made defendant in the courts against the charge of the Government that his claim was Indian land. The Department had previously accepted his filing on the same tract, and in the contention the case was eventually referred to the Secretary of the Interior, who decided that the Indian claim was invalid.

Mr. Paul also took advantage of the opportunity to procure a farm, and entered a half section five miles northwest of Redstone. While proving up he made it his chief object to comply with all the Federal requirements, building his pioneer shelter of boards 10 by 12, and occupying it as a bachelor. He made a serious effort to cultivate his land by proxy, and these efforts were not altogether disappointing. Wheat was harvested, some flax grown, and oats and other feeds matured, showing that with seasonable weather cereals grow as successfully here as elsewhere.

One of Mr. Paul's neighbors and fellow homesteaders was Miss Grace Crossen, whom he made his wife. At their marriage their combined efforts continued a modest development work in that locality until November, 1919, when they abandoned their claims as a place of residence. A feature of his experience on the claim was that Mr. Paul, while still unmarried, made his daily trips on foot to Redstone to his law office, and thus was able to continue his practice and carry on the practical work of his profession.

Mr. Paul has been one of the very earnest and active citizens of his locality. He was one of the first officers of the Redstone Commercial Club, and was president of the Redstone Improvement Association, which among other things was chiefly responsible for the erection of the mammoth livery barn at Redstone, an improvement greatly needed for the accommodation of the country trade tributary to Redstone. For the past four years Mr. Paul has served as United States commissioner. In national politics he is a republican, but partisan ties are not allowed to interfere with his choice in local elections. During the war he gave generously of his time and professional abilities to the promotion of local patriotism, and served as chairman of the local Red Cross one year and as a member of the Legal Advisory Board of Sheridan County, and as a member of the Liberty Loan and War Savings committees. Since locating at Redstone he has served as clerk of the school board.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul were married at Minot, North Dakota, January 10, 1917. Miss Grace Crossen was born near Sparta, Wisconsin, October 31, 1893, youngest of the four children of William Crossen. She acquired a high school education and in 1914 came with her mother to Montana and entered the claim, and while proving up came to know and appreciate the good qualities of the young lawyer at Redstone. Mr. and Mrs. Paul have one son, Levi William, born in November, 1917.

James H. Drake, another of the well known ranchmen of the lower Powder River country, dates his advent to Montana from the spring of 1900, at which time he accompanied a shipment of Texas cattle from Canon City, Texas, to Moorcroft, Wyoming. This was his maiden trip into this northern cattle region and he became a factor on the "T. A." ranch of George A. Pemberton, a Texas man who spent the vigorous years of his life in the cattle business, and who upon leaving Montana settled in his present home City of Denver.

JAMES H. DRAKE

Mr. Drake worked for Mr. Pemberton "until the last cow was sold," a period of some eight years, during which time he bought some cattle of his own and thus embarked in the business. He was given his incentive to do so by his employer, as the latter encouraged his men who were ambitious to enter the field, and Mr. Drake remained within eight miles of the old Pemberton ranch until 1911. This ranch, it may be noted, was situated just below the mouth of the Little Powder River, and it was on Pilgrim Creek that Mr. Drake started his own operations. He was a squatter there and had access to the whole region, starting with seventy-five head of cattle and driving his marketable stock to Belle Fourche, where he shipped them to the Chicago market. He became a larger grower as time passed, borrowed of his former employer, and bought 200 head more, which he handled at a profit. After selling out he left the Pilgrim locality and invested some of his capital in the ranch which he now owns at the mouth of Black Tail Creek. During his stay here he has accumulated by purchase and by entry of the public domain more than a section of land, having entered his homestead in 1918, and is entering upon the initial work of its improvement. When he came to his present ranch he moved into the small log house built by Dick Standifer, a noted character in this country who met the fate merited by his kind. By additions and extensions to these improvements the home has developed into one of the comfortable ones along the river. Here along the lively waters of the Powder he has continued his interest in cattle and his "YS" brand is one of the familiar ones of the region.

Mr. Drake's efforts at horse raising have met the reward such efforts deserve and these and his cattle have made up the enterprise to which his late years have been devoted. James H. Drake's experience as a "cow puncher" covers a period of more than fifty years. He began it as early as he could ride a pony down in Southern Texas, and worked on the Pecos River for about eight years for the old Texas cowman, M. Half, then spending a year with the Five Wells Company out on the plains, from that employment going to Montana with Mr. Pemberton, as above noted.

Mr. Drake's father, Frank Drake, was a native Texan, born in Hardin County, from whence he moved to Coryell County, where his farm was on Owl Creek, a tributary of the Leon River. Later he went to South Texas and re-entered the cattle business in McMullen County, and still later became a settler of Crockett County and there passed away. He was a Confederate soldier and was wounded in battle in the knee. He took part in the engagement of Bull Run and was in the service until the Confederacy fell with the surrender of General Lee. Mr. Drake was a high Mason, was a Baptist in his religious faith, and in politics was a stanch and undeviating democrat.

The grandfather of James H. Drake was James Drake who, it is believed, was born and reared in New York State. He planted the family in Hardin County, Texas, where he died, and left one son, Frank, and three daughters, Mary, Elizabeth and Evaline, who married, respectively, Alexander, William and Jimsy Franklin, and all spent their lives in Texas. Frank Drake was an unlearned man save for the education which came to him from the pioneer schools of Hardin County. He married for his first wife Susan Danforth, a native of Texas, who died leaving one child, James H., of this notice. For his second wife Frank Drake married Margaret Evetts, who bore him children as follows: Lizzie, the wife of John Young, of El Paso, Texas; Hugh, whose present location is unknown; William, who resides at San Angelo, Texas; Dee, the wife of Max Myers, of El Paso, Texas; Bruce, of Crockett County, Texas; and Millard, of Ozono, that state.

James H. Drake's part as a citizen has been played privately and as a voter his convictions place him in the list of parties as a democrat. He was married first in Texas, to Miss Mary Ramsey, of McMullen County, and they had four children: Edgar, of Arizona; Luther, who met an accidental death while in the train service of a large railroad company; Mary, who is married and lives in Arizona; and Susan. Mr. Drake married December 20, 1910, Mrs. Mary J. Marston, a lady who had come from Leicestershire, England, the place of her birth, two years before. She was born July 22, 1862, a daughter of Thomas Flavell, who married Elizabeth Lovett. Mr. Flavell was a farmer and a great huntsman, hunted for a half century, following his hounds, and was a noted cross-country rider. His family was composed of eight children who lived to grow to maturity, namely: Annie, who married Thomas Stevens and spent her life in the City of London so far as is known; Eleanor, who married Thomas Sewell and lives at Cheltenham, England; Lucy, who married Fred East and died in London; Mrs. Drake, of this notice; Lillie, who married John Crofts, of Alsager, near Stoke-on-Trent, England; Joseph, a farmer near Upingham, England; Kate, the wife of W. G. Payne, of Miles City, Montana; and Thomas, who is in Australia. Mrs. Drake died January 2, 1921.

PETER HEXOM has been a factor in the commercial affairs of Northeastern Montana from a date prior to the opening of the railroad route which has had so much to do with the development and growth of population in what is now Sheridan and adjoining counties. Mr. Hexom is a resident of Flaxville and manager of the Flaxville Co-operative Company.

He was born on his father's farm near Waukon, Alamakee County, Iowa, March 25, 1883. His father, David D. Hexom, a retired farmer living at Decorah, Iowa, was born at Toten, Norway, in 1843, came to the United States in the Civil war period, and has spent all the rest of his life in the vicinity of Decorah. A tailor by trade, he never established himself in a shop after coming to this country, but did an itinerant business, much after the fashion of old country tailors, going from home to home and sewing and making up clothing. Without any knowledge of farming he invested a modest capital in land, and his success as an agriculturist was phenomenal for a man who started as he did. As soon as the law permitted he acquired American citizenship, identifying himself with the republican party. He filled some local offices while living in the country, and has always been a consistent Lutheran in religion. He married Augusta Johnson, who was born in Alamakee County, Iowa, a daughter of Carl Johnson, who settled there on coming from Norway. David D. Hexom and wife had the following children: Carl, a farmer on the old Iowa homestead; Emma, wife of A. G. Westby, of Winnesheik County, Iowa; Dr. John D., of Decorah; Mrs. Amanda Johnson, of Flaxville, Montana; Peter; Dora, wife of Harry Thompson, of Flaxville; Helmer, a farmer in Iowa; and Minnie, Clara and Wilhelm.

Peter Hexom had some practical experience on an Iowa farm, attended country schools and finished his education in a business college at Decorah. He was part of the parental establishment until past his majority, and had two brief experiences in the Dakotas before he came to the Northwest to stay. At Souris, North Dakota, he worked as a farm hand and was also employed in a local elevator, first as a helper and then as elevator manager. He exercised his homestead rights in Williams County, North Dakota, and went through a rather long process of acquiring title to his land by residence and improvement. He also had some other interests while there. After leaving his claim he returned to Souris, and from that state moved to Montana.

His first location was at old Orville, near the present site of Flaxville. He was a merchant there as a silent partner in the firm of Kirkeby and Rafshol, and continued connection with that firm when the railroad came through, the store then being moved to Flaxville. In 1919 the business was sold to the Flaxville Co-operative Company, and Mr. Hexom has since been manager of that concern.

Mr. Hexom is one of the liberal and public spirited citizens of his community. He is a republican in politics and has served as precinct committeeman. He voted for Mr. Taft in 1908, but in 1916, like thousands of other republicans, supported Mr. Wilson's candidacy. Fraternally he is a past grand in Flaxville Lodge of Odd Fellows.

At Flaxville, December 16, 1914, Mr. Hexom married Miss Nettie Anderson, who was born in Minnesota in September, 1895, a daughter of Andrew and Anna (Urdahl) Anderson, natives of Norway. The Anderson family moved to Montana from Columbus, North Dakota, in 1912. Mrs. Hexom, one of five surviving children, acquired her education at Columbus and in Aauker's Business College at Grand Forks, North Dakota. Mr. and Mrs. Hexom have three children: Frances, Adolph and Philip.

Thomas R. Jones, who is serving his second term of capable administration of his duties as register of the United States Land Office at Glasgow, has been a resident of Montana for over thirty years, and this was his first and only public office. He is a veteran railroad man, and when he left the Great Northern to enter the Land Office at Glasgow he was one of the oldest locomotive engineers in the service of the company.

Mr. Jones is a western man by choice and inclination. He grew up in the East, but obeyed that impulse which comes to nearly every normal and high-minded youth, to seek life's opportunities in a country comparatively new and where problems are to be solved and difficulties overcome. He was born at Steuben in Oneida County, New York, April 9, 1864. His grandparents were John and Margaret (Hughes) Jones, both natives of Wales and early settlers in New York State. Of their eight children the only one now living is John J. Jones, who was born in Oneida County, New York, and has reached the venerable age of ninety-two. He acquired a common school education, spent his active life as a farmer, and in early manhood volunteered for Civil war service but was rejected owing to a crushed foot. His life has been one of honorable industry and without pretense or seeking the distractions of public office. He has always been a democrat, and is about the only member of his party in his home Town of Westmoreland, New York. John J. Jones married Ruth Smith, who is also still alive at the age of ninety. She is of Revolutionary stock, daughter of Benjamin and Ellen (Griffith) Smith. Her father's uncle, George Smith, was a Revolutionary soldier, enlisting at Palentine Bridge, New York, and was with General Herkimer at the historic battle of Oriskany, the battlefield being marked by a monument standing near the main line of the New York Central between Rome and Utica, New York. Ruth Smith was mother to a large family of children before she had children of her own, and from girlhood her life has been one of service. She was one of fifteen children herself, and after her uncle was killed as a Mexican war soldier her father brought twelve of his brother's children into his home, and she discharged most of the responsibilities of rearing them as well as looking after her younger brothers and sisters. John J. Jones and wife, who have been Methodists in religious affiliation, were the parents of the following children: Melvina, who died unmarried; Margaret, widow of Albert Carroll, of New York City; Thomas R.; Gurney, of Utica, New York; and Walter, of Cleveland, Ohio.

Thomas R. Jones grew up on the large farm of his parents and lived at home to the age of nineteen. He finished his education in the Union High School at Holland Patent, New York, and when he left the scenes of his home locality he came out to Minnesota and went to work as a fireman on the St. Paul, Minneapolis and Manitoba branch of the Great Northern Railway. After three years he was promoted to engineer, and was in the service of the company in that capacity during the construction of the Great Northern into Montana. He was in charge of an engine hauling material from Minot to Butte, and from 1892 until 1913 was a passenger engineer, running on the Montana division, and in his experience covered practically all the lines of the system in this state. Beginning his work for the company in 1881, he was on duty almost consecutively for thirty-two years, the only important interruptions being his confinement in hospital with a broken leg as the result of a wreck, and about eight months on leave.

During an active service of nearly a third of a century Mr. Jones naturally had various experiences and hazards, but one of the most interesting to the people of Montana was the train robbery pulled off by "Kid" Curry July 4, 1903, just east of Wagner, Montana. Mr. Jones was engineer of the train. Some miles before reaching that point a bandit came over the tender, ordering the engineer to stop at a certain point, and on reaching there two other men came out from under a bridge, and a fusilade of shots were sent down the side of the train, wounding two passengers and a brakeman. The engine crew were marched back to the express car, the messenger was brought out, and the safe was blown open with dynamite and $80,000 taken.

Mr. Jones was appointed registrar of the Glasgow Land Office in 1913 as successor to Truman M. Patten, beginning his duties on the first of August. He was reappointed for his present term August 1, 1917. He cast his first presidential ballot for Grover Cleveland at St. Vincent, Minnesota, and has never deviated from the party faith thus established. At Glasgow May 1, 1902, he married Miss Maude Hawthorne, the oldest of the four children of Mr. and Mrs. William Hawthorne. Mrs. Jones was born at Berry Island, Canada, November 17, 1884, and came to Montana from Jamestown, North Dakota.

Mr. Jones is a past master of North Star Lodge No. 46, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, at Glasgow, having served two terms in that office.

TRUMAN M. PATTEN is a civil engineer whose professional experience covers more than thirty years. He was an engineer on the survey and construction of several of the railroads of the Northwest, and for a quarter of a century has been identified with Valley County, Montana, where he has practiced his profession, served six years as the first registrar of the Glasgow Land Office and is also a former county treasurer.

Mr. Patten comes of an old Maine State family and was born at Bangor May 11, 1861. His grandfather, William Patten, a native of Maine, was a farmer and married Abigail Whitney. They were the parents of fourteen children, and of the eight sons several were soldiers in the Civil war. Capt. William Patten, father of the Montana engineer, was born in the vicinity of Bangor and spent his active life as a farmer in Penobscot County. He was always interested in local politics as a democrat and late in life became affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. He was born in 1831 and died at the age of eighty-six. Captain Patten married Emeline Curtis, who died at the age of fifty-one. Her parents were Ebenezer and Sarah (Dingley) Curtis. The latter was a relative of Nelson Dingley, author of the Dingley Pass Bill. Captain Patten and wife were the parents of three children: Florence, who married Edgar Shaw and died in Maine; Truman M.; and Edmund P., of Bangor.

Truman M. Patten grew up on his father's farm, was well educated in local schools, and as a training for his life work studied engineering in the University of Maine, graduating in June, 1883, at the age of twenty-two.

At that time the best opportunities for a civil engineer were in the West, where many new lines of railway were being projected. His first service was as a transit man with the Soo Line in the preliminary survey between Minneapolis and Fargo and from Escanaba to Sault Ste. Marie, Michigan. He also did some of the preliminary work on the Midland Pacific Railway, though that road was never built, and was resident engineer on the construction of the Yankton and Norfolk Railway. Beginning in 1890 Mr. Patten's headquarters were at Sioux Falls, South Dakota, and from that city he came to Montana in 1896 and established his office at Glasgow. For about a decade following he gave his professional service to land surveying, irrigation and reservoir work, surveying for private irrigation systems for ranchers and farmers along the Milk River and over Valley County, which then included all the territory from six miles west of Malta to the North Dakota line.

The Glasgow Land Office was opened in 1897, and as a man of admirable qualifications Mr. Patten was selected for the office of register, beginning his duties in June, 1907. He served as first term and half of the second four-year term and was succeeded by the democratic incumbent. Upon him devolved the responsibility of opening the system of records and acting as custodian of all transactions affecting public lands in the region. The district at that time embraced all the territory east of the Dakota line, south to the Missouri River and as far west as Havre.

Leaving the office in 1913, Mr. Patten resumed his profession, and in 1914 was elected county treasurer of Valley County, as successor of John C. Duncan. He served two terms, four years, and since leaving the office of treasurer in March, 1919, has devoted his time to his profession and also performs the duty of commissioner of streets in the City of Glasgow.

Mr. Patten also has a legislative record, having been elected in 1904 and again in 1906 as a member of the House in the Ninth and Tenth General Assemblies of Montana. He served under Speakers Willis Hedges and Ernest King, and his service was aimed for the general good of the state. He helped elect both Senators Carter and Dixon, and became well acquainted with the party leaders of the state. He has also served as a delegate in several republican state conventions, and began his active republican affiliation when he voted for James G. Blaine in 1884. He is a charter member of the Glasgow Commercial Club, is a Knight Templar Mason and affiliated with Algeria Temple of the Mystic Shrine at Helena.

At Newport, Maine, March 22, 1893, Mr. Patten married Miss Mary E. Whitney, of an old and prominent Maine family, and daughter of John F. and Victoria (Piper) Whitney. Mrs. Patten graduated from a high school in Exeter, New Hampshire, and for several years was a teacher in the schools of her native state. She was the oldest child of her parents, and her brother George C. Whitney is a resident of Malta, Montana, and her sister Miss Anna V. lives in Seattle, Washington. Mr. and Mrs. Patten have a son, Wendell W.

CHARLES F. TURNER. A better known citizen in Valley County it would be difficult to find than Charles F. Turner, the present county treasurer. For a number of years he was a traveling salesman all over this northwestern country. He also did his share of local development as a homesteader, and built the first frame shack in township 26, range 40 of Valley County

Mr. Turner, who has found the Northwest an interesting theater of his activities and experiences for over twenty years, was born at Hartsgrove, Ashtabula County, Ohio, November 17, 1862. His family went to the old Ohio Western Reserve from the vicinity of Windsor, Connecticut. His father, John Turner, died during the Civil war, in 1863, while foreman in the Government shops at Chattanooga, Tennessee. The mother of the Valley County treasurer was Elizabeth Hurlbert Grant. She was born at Ashtabula. Her father had brought his family and possessions from Buffalo, New York, on a row boat which he paddled along the shores of Lake Erie. He located on the site of the famous Ashtabula bridge disaster of 1876, when P. P. Bliss and hundreds of others lost their lives in a train wreck. Elizabeth Grant was liberally educated and was a teacher when a young woman. She was a Methodist and very outspoken in her abolition sentiments. She expressed her feelings on slavery in open church, and was practically turned out of the congregation and in the very county where Benjamin Wade and Joshua Giddings, the great anti-slavery advocates, lived. She outlived the humiliation and disgrace of this act, as, in the words of her son Charles, "some folks now living will outlive the disgrace of being a pioneer in the political reform work of the modern generation." John Turner and wife had twelve children, Charles F. being the youngest. His mother was forty-six years of age when he was born. Eight of these children reached mature years, and the five now living are: Orrin, of Hartsgrove, Ohio; Eugene, who was a pioneer settler at Fargo, North Dakota, saw the town grow up, burn down and grow up again, and is now living with his sister, Mrs. Belle McLain, at Geneva, Ohio; Florence, widow of N. C. Morgan, who was prominent for many years in the official life of Fargo during territorial days, and she is now matron of the Fargo City Hospital; and Charles F.

Charles F. Turner grew up in Ashtabula county, attended the public schools and also the noted center of education known as the Grand River Institute at Austinburg. At the age of fourteen he was working as a clerk in a store at Austinburg. Having acquired a thorough business training, at the age of twenty-three he became a traveling salesman for the L. D. Mix Company, a subsidiary of the Standard Oil Company. He sold oil in Buffalo, then over the western part of New York State, and on leaving that concern became traveling representative selling the goods of a pant and overall house at Erie, Pennsylvania, through Ohio and southern Michigan. That was his business for two years.

At the ontbreak of the Spanish-American war in 1898 Mr. Turner enlisted at Geneva, Ohio, in Company E of the 5th Ohio Volunteers. This regiment rendezvoused at Columbus, went to Tampa, Florida, and was scheduled as the second regiment to cross into Cuba. The colonel commanding the regiment was responsible for its failure to go over, and as a result of his mismanagement the troops remained at Tampa until the close of the war. Mr. Turner was mustered out as a private in the ranks at Cleveland.

It was after this military experience that Mr. Turner sought a new field in the west and coming out to North Dakota established a home at Fargo. There he was in the land business with Colonel Morton for a time and later with W. A. Scott. He then resumed work as a traveling salesman, selling hardware for the Hall-Robertson Hardware Company of Fargo. He was with that company five years and for a similar time was with the Simmons Hardware Company at St. Louis. For the Hall-Robertson people he established and built up a large business over the territory around Minot, where he had his home and headquarters for three years. He continued selling hardware after he came to Montana until he left the road in response to a demand to become a candidate for county treasurer.

Mr. Turner came to Montana July 4, 1909, and at once undertook the improvement of his claim. He acquired title, and has made his half section into a valuable farm, now operated by tenants. Two hundred acres are under the plow and other improvements include a four-room cottage, shelters for stock, and the entire farm is fenced.

Mr. Turner was elected county treasurer of Valley County in 1918, succeeding Truman M. Patten. He was elected on the democratic ticket. In politics he has been a man of progressive views and has worked with the party which he felt most nearly expressed his individual sentiments. His first vote was cast for McKinley as governor of Ohio. He declined to support McKinley for president because of the results of the St. Louis convention and the class that ruled the republican party at that time.

At Geneva, Ohio, Mr. Turner married for his first wife Miss Letitia Knapp. She was the mother of the following children: Winona, wife of Charles Bristol, of Fargo, North Dakota; Ella May, wife of Ralph V. Russell, a farmer near the Turner farm in Valley County; Ethel Virginia, wife of James Palmer, of Fargo; and Laura, wife of Dr. Paul Taylor, of Butler, Pennsylvania. Mr. Turner married for his present wife Sarah Henrietta Propp, a native of Minnesota and a daughter of Lewis Propp, now of Seattle, Washington.

ALBERT M. STEVENSON. As there are few white men still living whose residence began on the Crow Reservation at an earlier date than Albert M. Stevenson, so likewise there are perhaps none whose memory of important affairs and developments on the reservation surpasses his. He was a witness and actor in the last outbreak of the Crow Indians, was an early range rider, for many years associated with the mercantile business both under the government and through his own initiative, and still takes an active and interested part in the affairs of Lodgegrass, his home town.

Mr. Stevenson was born in the university city of Ann Arbor, Michigan, October 4, 1866. His father, Dr. Samuel Stevenson, was a native of Canada, was educated in medicine at Ann Arbor, and afterwards removed to the southern line of Michigan and practiced at Morenci from 1862 until his death in 1912 when about eighty-three years of age. Doctor Stevenson married Sarah Babcock, a native of Ann Arbor. Her father Marvin Babcock in his time was well known for his scholarship, was a noted skeptic, and a lecturer on the subject of infidelity. The Stevensons and Babcocks were English, and the Babcocks were for many generations residents of New York State. A brother of Mrs. Dr. Stevenson was C. T. Babcock, prominent in the history of the Crow Indian Reservation of Montana, where he was the original post trader. Doctor and Mrs. Stephenson had three children: George B., who came out to Montana about three years before his brother Albert, was a clerk in the Babcock Indian store, but a few years later became a rancher near Red Lodge and subsequently removed to Canada and died in the Province of Alberta. The two younger children were Albert M. and Alberta M., the latter the wife of Edward Clark of Morenci, Michigan.

Albert M. Stevenson grew up at Morenci, attended public schools and the St. John High School. Before he had reached his majority he had become restless and discontented with the life of the placid country community in Michigan, and when he left home it was without the consent of his parents. The influence that drew him to Montana was the presence here of his uncle Mr. Babcock and his brother George Stevenson. He did not inform his parents of his address until he was located on the Crow Reservation.

Mr. Stevenson reached the Crow Agency April 1, 1887, and has lived here for a third of a century. He was given employment by C. T. Babcock, and a few months later he was in the midst of the climax of the difficulties when the last outbreak of the Crow Indians occurred. The Indians, says Mr. Stevenson, had been annoyed by the loss of stock at the hands of the Pegan Indians. They threatened to retaliate by leaving the reservation and stealing some horses from their enemies and otherwise punishing them. Mr. Williams, the southern agent of the Crows, forbade their leaving the reservation, some of the warriors disobeyed, stole some of the stock and killed two of the squaws of the Pegans. It was the threatened arrest of the warriors by the agent that brought affairs to a climax. Members of the tribe began preparations for a battle that would wipe out the agent, whites and all other intruders. Suspicion was aroused because of the sudden demand for cartridges at the post store. Albert Stevenson was waiting on the line of braves in the store, accepting the silver money of the Indians for cartridges. His brother was standing behind the counter loading his own rifle, and quickly realizing the meaning of the purchases he swept all the cartridges on the counter off behind it and ordered the Indians to file outside. When they were out the store doors were barricaded with barrels of sugar, and all was put in readiness for the siege. The Crows at once began the attack on the store firing several shots, though no one was hit. Albert Stevenson suddenly realized that ten thousand cartridges were stored in the barn within plain view of the red men. He volunteered to leave the store and go to the barn. The Indians grabbed him as soon as he dropped from a window to the ground, but he explained that he was going out to feed the horses. The Indians were distracted by something going on at the agent's office and all ran in that direction. Reaching the barn Mr. Stevenson poured several sacks of oats over the cartridges hiding them completely, and they laid there for several weeks unmolested. Later in the week a party of soldiers arrived, and a brief battle was fought just behind where the Indian schools stand. A few were killed by the gatling gun, and the rest gave up the fight. Some of the leaders of the insurrection were rounded up and sent to Leavenworth as punishment, and a few became so obstreperous that they were sent on south to Florida where they served their time. Finally all were released and returned home and it is believed that all have now disappeared except "Knows his Coos."

J. M. Harrison

After a few years Mr. Stevenson left the store and engaged in range riding on the reservation. Among the several cattle outfits then doing business there were the Ox Yoke, the Quarter Circle Oz, P. B. Wear of Chicago, the 7 bar 7 of Paul McCormick of Billings, the I D, the Crow Indian brand, and during the few years he was on the range Mr. Stevenson was employed by several of these concerns.

His next venture was to purchase the stock of W. H. Simonds and engage in merchandising at Lodgegrass. Later he bought the business of George H. Pease, combining the stocks, and thus continued on a large and profitable scale of business since 1902. He has outlived any other white man in business in this place, and only three or four men on the reservation have had a longer residence, those around Lodgegrass who have been here longer being Major Pease, Barney Prevo and George P. Deputee.

For nine years Mr. Stevenson was Indian trader under permit from the Government. At the end of that time he bought forty acres, established his business on the land, erecting a store, and has since sold goods without a Government license. His brick store was built in 1911. The tract he purchased has been platted, and from its lots he has donated for church and school sites. He has been a member of the school district board. He established the first electric light plant in the town, and continued the service until his dynamo became too small for the purpose. He has also been interested in the livestock industry, with ranch holdings adjacent to Lodgegrass. His cattle and horses are run under the brand "Quarter Circle VT" and "A bar Y." He has sent shipments of stock to market both at Omaha and Chicago.

Mr. Stevenson is a director of the First National Bank of Lodgegrass, being one of the charter members of the bank. He is a stockholder in the Hardin State Bank and the Yellowstone Packing Company of Billings. During the World war he was postmaster of Lodgegrass and assumed many responsibilities for keeping up the patriotic record of his home community, helping sell bonds and other government securities.

At Billings, Montana, November 7, 1898, Mr. Stevenson married Miss Hester McKinley. She was born near Red Cloud, Nebraska, October 21, 1878, daughter of Oliver P. and Nancy Jane (Bennett) McKinley. She was educated at Pana, Illinois, and came to Montana in 1896. Mr. and Mrs. Stevenson have two children, Samuel M. and Marjorie. Samuel, who spent a year in the Bozeman Agricultural College, is a farmer near Lodgegrass, married Miss Rena Benbrook. Marjorie completed her high school education at Sheridan and also attended a business college at Fremont, Nebraska.

Judge Henry Cleveland Hall, judge of the Seventeenth Judicial District of Montana, is a native son of Montana, having been born at Butte October 13, 1892, a son of John Henry Hall. His paternal grandparents, natives of the North of Ireland, came to America at an early day, locating at Toronto, Canada. They had three sons and two daughters.

John Henry Hall was born at Toronto, Canada, and when he was fifteen years old began to be self-supporting, at that early age entering the employ of the Canadian Pacific Railroad Company. While still little more than a youth he came to the United States, and entering the service of the Great Northern Railroad Company, he was one of its first passenger conductors, and remained with this road as long as he was a railroad man. In the early nineties he left the railroad service, located at Great Falls, Montana, and embarked in the real estate business, which he conducted very profitably. In 1909 Governor Edwin L. Norris appointed Mr. Hall deputy state game warden, and he held that office until he was appointed state commissioner of agriculture and labor, and in that connection made such an enviable record that he was elected a member of the State Board of Railroad Commissioners, taking charge of his duties in January, 1913, and retiring in January, 1919. During a portion of the time he was on the Board of Commissioners and he was its chairman. In politics he was a democrat and always took a very active part in local and state affairs. Well known in Masonry, he was past eminent commander of the Montana State Grand Commandery, and past potentate of Algeria Temple, Ancient Arabic Order Nobles of the Mystic Shrine.

Mr. Hall was married to Marie Antoinette Cleveland, a daughter of John Cleveland, of Wisconsin. Mrs. Hall was born at Columbus, Wisconsin, and survives her husband, being now a resident of Montana. Mr. and Mrs. Hall had two children: Judge Hall, and a daughter, Doris Antoinette. John Henry Hall died in Portland, Oregon, August 12, 1919, when fifty-six years old, and during his brief span of life accomplished much and at his death was probably one of the best known men in Montana.

Judge Hall was reared at Great Falls, Montana, and attended its schools and the Helena High School, and after being graduated from the latter he matriculated in the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor, from which he was graduated in 1914 with the degree of Bachelor of Laws. Immediately thereafter he formed a partnership with Messrs. Norris and Hurd at Havre, Montana, under the caption of Norris, Hurd & Hall, and was in charge of the Havre office. On September 6, 1919, he was appointed to the bench of the Seventeenth Judicial District by Governor Stewart, succeeding Judge Hurley, and is the youngest jurist of Montana. On September 13, 1919, following his appointment, Judge Hall established his home at Glasgow, and heard his first case in this city.

Judge Hall is a veteran of the great war, having entered the army August 14, 1918, and was trained at Fort Missoula, Fort Worden, Washington, and at Pennfield, Texas. He was in the Coast Artillery, and reached France the day the armistice was signed, November 11, 1918. Judge Hall was discharged from the service at Fort Logan, near Denver, Colorado, January 25, 1919. He is one of the organizers of Havre Post, American Legion, and also of the one at Glasgow.

On May 10, 1919, Judge Hall was united in marriage at Great Falls, Montana, to Miss Georgie Coleman, a daughter of George Coleman, who came to Montana from Missouri. Mrs. Hall was born at Memphis, Missouri, August 20, 1895. Her mother bore the maiden name of Frances Broadwater, and she belongs to the same family as the pioneer Broadwaters of Montana. Mr. and Mrs. Coleman had two daughters born to them: Mrs. Hall and Miss Martha Coleman. Like his honored father, Judge Hall is a democrat, and he cast his first presidential vote for Woodrow Wilson. He is a Master Mason.

Presley L. Herring is now serving his second term as postmaster of Glasgow. While this is his only public office and he has never sought leadership in political affairs, Mr. Herring is widely known over this section of the state as a very successful farmer and rancher, and has given the patrons of the postoffice of Glasgow a complete measure of satisfaction and service.

Mr. Herring, whose operations as a cattleman began in Montana about eighteen years ago, had a wide experience in that industry in the South before coming to Montana. He was born at Peoria, Hill County, Texas, January 9, 1863. His grandfather, John Herring, was a native of England, came to this country early in the nineteenth century, and was descended from a Herring whose family originated in a German province. John Herring was a farmer and lived for a number of years in Peoria County, Illinois. Jesse L. Herring, father of the Montana postmaster, moved overland from Peoria, Illinois, to Texas some years before the beginning of the war between the states. He was one of the first settlers in that portion of Hill County where the village of Peoria was established. When the war came on he entered the Confederate Army, but otherwise spent his active career as a farmer. He died in the spring of 1885, at the age of sixty-seven. He had a large family, the children of his first marriage being: Will, who spent his life in Hill County; Cornelius T., a prominent oil mill operator, land owner and banker in the Panhandle country of Texas at Amarillo; John, who died at Blanco, Texas; Emerson, a Texas farmer; "Doc," who died in Greer County, Oklahoma; F. E. (El), of Oklahoma City. At Peoria, Texas, Jesse L. Herring married for his second wife Martha J. Webb, who was born in Mississippi, daughter of Presley Webb, a farmer and an early Texas settler. Mrs. Martha Herring is now living at Pyote, Texas, at the age of eighty-seven. Her children were: Sarah; Mrs. Frank Green, of Lodi, California; Presley L.; George O., of Grand Falls, Texas; Euna, wife of Sam T. Wilkes, of Powell, Texas; Thomas J., of Hillsboro; Lottie, wife of James Armstrong, of Grand Falls; James, still living in Texas; Pet M., a farmer at Pyote, Texas; and Lillie, wife of N. C. Young, of Marshall, Texas.

Presley L. Herring grew up in a rural district of Texas, attended the local schools, and left the old home at the age of sixteen, spending his first year as a wage worker. About that time he began riding the range, and he hardly remembers a time when he was not perfectly at home in the saddle. The following winter he spent with his brother C. T., going to East Texas and Arkansas, buying cattle, and after collecting them driving to Fort Worth and holding them on the range until sale. This expedition was repeated yearly until 1884, their purchases being made largely in Arkansas, Louisiana and Texas, with Fort Worth as the ultimate market.

In the spring of 1884 Presley L. Herring drove a herd of cattle across the Indiana Territory to Caldwell, Kansas, for sale, delivering them in November. With his outfit of horses and wagons he moved into Western Indiana Territory on the north fork of Red River, establishing a camp near where Navajo now is. For the following ten years he and his brother Cornelius T. carried on an extensive business as cattle men. In the spring of 1894 Mr. Herring moved toward Woodward County, Oklahoma, establishing a ranch near old Fort Supply. In February, 1897, going to Memphis, Tennessee, he bought up about 25,000 head of cattle, about 15,000 of which he took to the Kaw Nation in Northeastern Oklahoma. Here the Texas fever struck the herd and in three weeks 1,900 head had died. In the fall the larger part of the cattle were shipped to Englewood, Kansas, and the remainder the next spring, and Presley Herring drove about 7,000 head to Coolidge, Kansas, where he made his headquarters, running his stock on the Arkansas River along the Colorado and Kansas line.

In order to secure more range, since the public domain of Western Kansas was being rapidly divided up among settlers, Mr. Herring came into Montana in 1902 and located his ranch headquarters near old Kismet on the Musselshell River. He continued handling cattle there until the spring of 1906, when he made the final disposition of his holdings as a range stockman. He had brought in his first consignment of cattle in 1901, and the following year the remainder of 12,000 head. These were kept on the grass until 1904, before the first shipment was made. Prices were exceedingly low in the early years of the century, and his experience furnishes a vivid contrast to modern war time prices. A shipment of 5,000 head sent out to market in 1904 netted him between $29 and $30 a head. In 1905, 4,000 head went to market, averaging a little over $31 apiece. The final shipment, cleaning up his herd, in 1906, brought about $50 a head. In the meantime, after the final checking up was made, it was discovered that about 1,800 head of the "lazy S" brand had disappeared and could not be accounted for.

On leaving the stock business as a range man Mr. Herring entered a homestead two miles south of Glasgow, in the Milk River Valley, in 1905. For seven years he and his family lived on the farm and ranch, and enjoyed the comforts of a good country home, a seven-room frame house with waterworks. While there Mr. Herring did much to develop agriculture, believing in the fertility of the soil, and his experiences demonstrated the possibilities of crop growing. His best wheat yield was from thirty to thirty-five bushels per acre, his oat crop was equally promising, and an experiment with potato planting yielded approximately 400 bushels to the acre. Still more remarkable was his corn yield. A measured acre of ground yielded more than 100 bushels of squaw corn. Around his home he developed a tract of half a section to an alfalfa farm. The second crop grown on his land had alfalfa seeded in the ground, and that great legume proved its worth, and the farm is now practically a hay farm.

During these years Mr. Herring also carried on a business as a horse dealer, shipping his stock to railroad and ditch contractors in this country and Canada. While the Herring residence is in Glasgow in winter it is on the farm in summer, where the children have a better environment and learn the lessons of industry. Mr. Herring was brought up in a democratic home, cast his first presidential vote for Mr. Bryan at Englewood, Kansas, though as already stated, he was never burdened with the cares of office until his appointment as postmaster of Glasgow in 1915. He succeeded Mrs. Mary L. Bohnard, and was reappointed for his second term in August, 1919. His term has covered a busy time in postal affairs, involving many extraordinary items of finance for the Government.

At Henderson, Tennessee, April 25, 1897, Mr. Herring married Miss Carrie Baynham. She was born December 3, 1873, at Lafayette, Kentucky, a daughter of Alexander and Martha J. (Rossiter) Baynham. Mr. and Mrs. Herring have two children. The daughter, Carrye Neal, is a student in the Ward-Belmont Seminary, one of the leading woman's colleges in the South, at Nashville, Tennessee. The son, Charles Thomas, popularly known among his mates as "Tom," is in the Glasgow High School.

Curtis W. Powell, sheriff of Valley County, came to Montana a year or so before statehood, as a cowboy was associated with many of the strong and reckless men of the ranch and range period, has been in business for himself as a rancher, freighter and merchant, and his character is identified with many of the fine qualities which the people of Montana admire and respect.

Mr. Powell has spent most of his life on the frontier of the Northwest, and his father was a man of many adventures and experiences in the country. He was born in Scott County, Iowa, December 12, 1867. His father, William Powell, was a native of England, and at the age of three years was brought to the United States by his parents, Frank and Amanda (Reece) Powell. Frank Powell took up a homestead in Scott County, Iowa, and subsequently became a California forty-niner. He was in the placer mines for several years, and returned to Cleveland, Ohio, with a "good stake." He spent his last years as a farmer in Scott County, Iowa.

William Powell, third child of his parents, acquired a limited education, but had the native intelligence and the resourcefulness to carry on any business successfully in which he engaged. One of his first experiences of early manhood was his enlistment for service in the Civil war. He joined Company G of the Fourteenth Iowa Infantry, was under General Butler at New Orleans, in the battle of Pittsburg Landing at Shiloh, was taken prisoner in Alabama, and spent eighty-six days of trial and suffering in Andersonville prison. After his exchange he returned home, but three months later again entered the army as a substitute for Charles Pinneo, and was on duty until the close, coming out with the rank of sergeant. Though in many battles he was never wounded. He left his business as an Iowa farmer and sought the opportunities of the Far West, becoming a bull team freighter in Wyoming as early as 1878. He operated five outfits, each consisting of five wagons and with from eighteen to twenty-five yoke of cattle to the string. He freighted from Fort Cheyenne to Fort Laramie and Fort Fetterman and to Running Water north of Cheyenne, and in 1880 moved his family out to Cheyenne. After about 1885 he engaged in ranching at Running Water, now Lusk, Wyoming. His tastes and inclinations always kept him on the frontier of civilization. Finally he joined a party of adventurers bound for Alaska, that being two years before the discovery of gold in the Klondike. He did prospecting and mining in the Far North, and was in Dawson City and one of the first men to go to Nome after the gold discoveries there. For a number of years he spent his winters at Long Beach, California, and returned to his mining business every spring. He and a partner sold their mining property in the North for $120,000, but evidently money was not the goal of his ambition, since he continued mining as a fascinating game, and had expended nearly all his fortune before he died. He passed away at Skagway, October 9, 1911, when almost seventy-one years of age, and was buried in that city of the Far North. William Powell married Pauline Culbertson, who was born in Pennsylvania, a daughter of Hiram and Virginia (Scott) Culbertson, and she is now living at Long Beach, California. Her children were: Curtis W.; Lena, wife of George J. Dunn, of Salt Lake, Utah; and Bertha, wife of George Highley, of Edgemont, South Dakota.

Curtis W. Powell was reared in Wyoming from the age of thirteen. He was presented with ideal opportunities for a liberal education, but was not disposed to take advantage of them, and had only a common school training. On his father's ranch he was made acquainted with the work of a cowboy, and when he left home in 1885 he went to work for John Kendrick, now United States senator from Wyoming, and then foreman of the "77" ranch, sixteen miles west of Lusk. After a year there he joined the Converse Cattle Company, going on the "OW" ranch under Jerry Drummond as foreman, and continued in that locality, about sixteen miles north of Lusk, until the fall of 1887.

Soon afterward Mr. Powell came into Montana and earned his first dollar in the state at common labor, hauling cordwood and banking it on the Missouri for steamboats. His employer was "Uncle" Bill Williams, and his work was done at the mouth of the Musselshell River. About May 15, 1888, he entered the service of the Pioneer Cattle Company, one of the old livestock concerns of the state, owned by the venerable Conrad Kohrs, now of Helena. While with the Pioneer Company Mr. Powell became acquainted with a number of men who were real characters of that early day. Among them were the Curry brothers, one of whom, "Kid," later became a train robber; John R. Smith, foreman, a man of wide reputation in the ranching life of the Northwest at that time; Lem Branson, now hotel proprietor at Nashua; Bill Coyle and Ben Rogers, the latter now an old man but still ranching on Squaw Creek south of Malta; Horace Brewster, a "packer" in Glacier Park, Montana; Jim Thornhill, a close friend of Kid Curry, but a good citizen and still in the stock business at Globe, Arizona; Sam Moore, known among his pals as "Hurricane Bill," a name descriptive of his wild, reckless disposition, but ever a good citizen and a man of good intentions, who recently died at Lumpkin, Georgia, as a cotton planter. These and others frequently rendezvoused for their periods of gayety at Malta, which was tributary to the headquarters of the company, but contained nothing but a stock yard, a store and saloon and an apology for a hotel, whose proprietor was Jim Hyatt. These boys all became identified with the Pioneer Company about the same time, and most of their names are only memories now cherished by such permanent citizens as Mr. Powell.

The latter remained with the Pioneer Company from the spring of 1888 until the spring of 1893. While with them he shipped the first car of stock over the Great Northern, six miles east of Malta at what was then Bodoin but now Streeter Siding. Leaving the range in the spring of 1893, he and Bill Reeves engaged in the saloon business at Malta and at the same time ran a bunch of cattle on the range. Mr. Powell was at Malta until the spring of 1895. He married while there and soon afterward went to Landusky and continued in the liquor business and as a cattle man. After disposing of his saloon he took up freighting, hauling ore from Landusky to Chinook with two string teams, one of ten horses and the other of twelve horses. That business, continued for about three years, brought him some profits, and when he sold his outfit he opened a general store at Landusky and for two years was a merchant. Returning to Malta in 1900, he took up a ranch, and combined horse and cattle raising with some farming.

That region was then in Valley County, which extended some six miles west of Malta to the North Dakota line. On January 1, 1905, Mr. Powell was appointed deputy sheriff under Sheriff Griffith, now of Scobey. He continued to look after his ranching interests during his two years as deputy. In 1908 he became republican nominee for sheriff of Valley County, but was defeated in the election. His home and headquarters were on the ranch until the fall of 1910, and on the 1st of January of the following year he moved to Glasgow and served during 1911-12 as under-sheriff with Sheriff Stephens. On returning to Malta he engaged in the livery business, and in 1914 was again in politics as republican candidate for sheriff, being elected and succeeding Pat Nacy, now sheriff of Roosevelt County. Mr. Powell was re-elected in 1916 and in 1918, receiving the largest majority in 1916 of any candidate on the ticket.

May 1, 1895, Mr. Powell married Miss Lizzie Allen, who was born in Minnesota, May 15, 1872, daughter of Leon and Sarah (Coombs) Allen, her parents natives of Maine, and they spent their lives as farmers. There were seven children in the Allen family, five of whom are still living, two in Canada and one in North Dakota, while her mother and a sister reside in Spokane. Of the four children of Mr. and Mrs. Powell, Frank W. is in the train service of the Great Northern, Emmet J. is jailor under his father, and Cora and Evely are in school at Glasgow.

Mr. Powell cast his first presidential vote at Malta for Benjamin Harrison in 1892, and has always been a "regular" in party matters. He became affiliated with the Masonic Lodge at Glasgow and also the Chapter and Commandery, and is a member of the Mystic Shrine at Helena.

As this review indicates, Mr. Powell has always lived in close touch with men and affairs in his section of Montana and there should not be left out of the record some account of what he did during the World war. He was chairman of the local board for selective service, and in his official capacity as sheriff proved a strong arm of patriotism in combating disloyalty and sedition and kept draft evasion down to a minimum.

Jacob Lybrand De Hart. Although during the past we Americans may have wasted some of our important national assets, a change has taken place, much attention now being given toward the preservation of our forests, the utilization of our natural water supply and the protection of wild life in all parts of our country. Every state in the Union has adopted fish and game laws and regulations, and has state officers to see that these laws and regulations are faithfully carried out. Prominent among the men thus employed is Jacob Lybrand De Hart, of Helena, state game warden of Montana and secretary of the Montana Game and Fish Commission, positions for which he is amply qualified, and which he is filling with credit to himself and to the satisfaction of all concerned. A native of Wisconsin, he was born March 27, 1861, in West Lima, Richland County, a son of the late Joseph Lepley De Hart.

His paternal grandfather, Henry B. De Hart, was born and bred in Martinsburg, West Virginia, being a lineal descendant of one of three brothers who came from France to America with General LaFayette in colonial days, one settling in Florida, one on Long Island, while the founder of the branch of the family from which he descended located in New Jersey. Following the pioneer's trail to Wisconsin, he settled in West Lima, Richland County, where he was engaged in the manufacture of shoes until his death in 1879. He was a great lover of sports, and although he was a strong believer in the protection of wild life was a noted hunter during the hunting seasons. He married Elizabeth Lepley, a daughter of Joseph, who migrated from Pennsylvania to Ohio, becoming a pioneer settler of the Wester Reserve. She was born in Ohio, and died at West Lima, Wisconsin. The great-grandmother of Mr. De Hart was a member of the Morrison family, Congressman Morrison of Illinois being one of her collateral kindred.

Joseph Lepley De Hart was born in Mount Vernon, Knox County, Ohio, in 1835, and was reared and educated in Southwestern Wisconsin. A man of much energy and enterprise, he became prominent in the business circles of that locality, not only as a farmer and livestock raiser and dealer, but as a lumber manufacturer and dealer. Migrating to Minnesota in 1856, in pioneer days, he drove the stakes for a surveying party that laid out the town of Glencoe, and subsequently became interested in Government freighting from Fort Snelling near St. Paul to Fort Abercrombie. Returning to Wisconsin, he took unto himself a wife, and was engaged in farming, stock raising and lumber dealing until 1873, making his home at West Lima. Going in that year to Sioux Falls, South Dakota, he was engaged in the pioneer labor of farming and land dealing for about ten years.

Coming from there to Montana in 1883, Joseph Lepley De Hart located at Miles City, where in addition to becoming a ranchman he was manager of the De Hart Live Stock Company, which was located on the Rosebud River, twenty miles south of the Yellowstone River, in what was then Custer County. Disposing of his interests there in 1900, he moved to Great Falls, Montana, where as a representative of the Twin City Stockyards he had charge of shipping all consignments of cattle, horses and sheep, and of purchasing all of the grain and hay for them, continuing thus occupied until his death in April, 1906. A democrat in politics, he took an active interest in party affairs, and attended many state and national conventions. He cast his first presidential vote for John C. Fremont, the republican candidate. He was a member of the Ancient Free and Accepted Masons. During the Civil war he served as head of the commissary department, being located at Camp Randell, Wisconsin.

Joseph Lepley De Hart married Margaret Johnson Ammerman, who was born in Muncie, Indiana, in 1839, and died in Livingston, Montana, in 1912, her body being laid to rest at Great Falls, Montana. Five children were born of their union, as follows: Ivan, who lived but six years; Jacob Lybrand, the special subject of this sketch; Alice, wife of Paul W. Mahoney, a prominent attorney of LaCrosse, Wisconsin; Bransom Bailey, a cook in the lumber woods and also for men employed in railroad construction, was accidentally killed in January, 1913, at Seattle, Washington, his body being buried at Great Falls, Montana; and Mary Elizabeth, whose husband, Robert M. Burris, a merchant of Great Falls, died in 1906.

Leaving the public schools of West Lima, Wisconsin, at the age of seventeen years, Jacob Lybrand De Hart engaged in the live stock business with his father, accompanying the family to South Dakota, and to Miles City, Montana. Locating in Livingston, Montana, in 1888, he was engaged in the publication of the Livingston Herald, a democratic newspaper of which his brother-in-law, Paul W. Mahoney, was the editor, being its circulating manager until 1895. Sweet Grass County being created in March of that year, Mr. De Hart was elected sheriff of the county for a term of two years, and in 1897 was re-elected to the same position. Becoming associated with the Strayhorn, Huttons, Evans Commission Company of the Chicago Stockyards, he served as its Western representative for three years, from 1899 until 1902, and was subsequently with Rosenbaum & Company, a Chicago live stock firm, for three years, with headquarters at Great Falls, Montana.

JENNIE M. MORRIS AND ROBERT PEARCE

From 1905 until 1909 Mr. De Hart had charge of the Conrad Land & Investment Company of Valier, Montana, and for the ensuing two years had charge of the two ranches of Mr. Augustine Heinze in Teton County, Montana, and of his live stock interests. From 1910 until 1913 he was connected with the Humane Department of the State of Montana, with headquarters at Great Falls. In 1913 Mr. De Hart was appointed by Governor S. V. Stewart state game warden and secretary of the Montana Game and Fish Commission, positions which he has since filled most ably and satisfactorily, his long tenure of office bearing visible evidence of his ability and fidelity. Mr. De Hart is also interested in other matters, being a stockholder in the "Cream of the West," a company manufacturing a cereal at Billings, Montana, and is vice president of the Gold & Silver Mining Company of Cooke City, Montana. Politically he is a stanch democrat, and fraternally he is a thirty-second degree Mason. He was made a Mason at Richland Center, Wisconsin, in 1881, by special dispensation; is a member of Livingston Consistory and of Algeria Temple, Ancient Arabic Order Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, of Helena. Mr. De Hart married in 1896 Miss Jennie Dillon, a daughter of Capt. Henry and Ann Dillon, neither of whom are now living. Her father served as a captain in the Sixth Wisconsin Battery during the Civil war, and afterward settled at Lone Rock, Wisconsin, where both he and his wife spent their closing years. Mrs. De Hart, a woman of fine mental attainments, was educated at the Platteville Normal College at Platteville, Wisconsin. Mr. and Mrs. De Hart have one child, Joseph Henry Dillon De Hart, born January 13, 1899. Inheriting in a large measure the patriotic ardor of his ancestors, Joseph Henry Dillon De Hart, not waiting to be drafted, enlisted in the World war June 1, 1917, and was sent to Mare Island, California, from whence as a member of the Medical Corps he made several trips to New York, Boston and other Atlantic ports, sailing on the United States steamship "Evansville," a fast boat going by the way of the Panama Canal to the Atlantic Coast and back. He was mustered out of the service in October, 1919, and immediately resumed his studies in the high school, from which he was graduated in June, 1920.

Mr. De Hart is an ardent sportsman, and is a firm believer in the protection and propagation of wild life. In 1898 he served as enrolling clerk in the State Senate of Montana, and in 1900 was sergeant-at-arms in the Montana House of Representatives.

Mrs. Jennie M. Morris. Throughout the entire history of the town of Baker Mrs. Jennie M. Morris has been identified with its interests and its progress, and her name is enrolled among its first settlers. With her husband, Robert Pearce, she arrived here in the spring of 1908, but Mr. Pearce's advent to this spot dates from March 17th of that year, his wife joining him about the 10th of the following month. Mr. Pearce at once erected a general store building, the rooms above the store serving them as a home for a year and a half, when a residence was built. Mr. Pearce also entered a forty-acre tract on the townsite as a homestead, but subsequently relinquished his right, and that forty acres is now platted and forms a part of the original townsite of Baker.

Mr. Pearce became the pioneer merchant of Baker, and continued his mercantile interests during the remainder of his life, although for some years before his death he also served as the president of the First National Bank. To him also was accorded the honor of being the first postmaster of Baker and its first mayor, and in this latter capacity he remained in office for two terms. He was serving in the office of postmaster at the time of his death, having then entered upon his second term. He assisted in the organization of the First National Bank of Baker and was its president ever after, remaining a central figure in the conduct of the institution. He was one of the active men in the county during the fight and helped secure the county seat for Baker. Thus as an honored pioneer, as a business man, as a public official and as a true and loyal citizen the name of Robert Pearce is inscribed high on the honor roll of Baker, the town which he assisted so materially in founding. He gave his political allegiance to the republican party, but his official service was given only as the mayor of his town and as its postmaster.

The birth of Mr. Pearce occurred in England, at the town of Sherbin in Dorsetshire, July 12, 1873. His father was Samuel Pearce, a farmer who passed the last years of his life at Frazee, Minnesota, and who now lies buried there. His wife, nee Elizabeth War, bore him eight children, all of whom still survive, save the son Robert. When this son was a child the family became residents of Becker County, Minnesota, where he grew to manhood's estate and was educated in the common schools. This training was supplemented by a course in the Wesington Springs Methodist College, his father having been a devout member of the Methodist Church.

From Minnesota Mr. Pearce made his way into Morton County, North Dakota, where for eight years he followed ranching. His local postoffice was Dogtooth, now known as Raleigh, on the Northern Pacific Railroad, and he was a squatter there. He gradually drifted into the cattle business, in time becoming one of the large stock dealers of the region, but with the settlement of the country and the reduction of the range he sold his stock and turned his attention to merchandising at Dogtooth. He opened the first store in the town, freighting his goods from Mandan, North Dakota, a distance of fifty miles, and he made a success of this mercantile venture. But finally he disposed of his interests in North Dakota, and with his wife journeyed into the newer land of Montana, where success again awaited his efforts and where he linked his name so prominently with the life and interests of the community in which he established his home.

It was at Frazee, Minnesota, on the 8th of August, 1901, that Robert R. Pearce and Miss Jennie M. Chilton were united in marriage. She was a daughter of one of the early pioneers of Becker County, that state, James Chilton, whose arrival there antedated the building of the railroad. It was in 1868 that he made the journey from Kingston, Canada, to Becker County, and Mrs. Chilton was the first white woman to locate within its borders. Mr. Chilton was born in Canada, of English ancestors, and he was married at Kingston to Anna Redpath. Her death occurred at Frazee in 1894. To the union of Mr. and Mrs. Chilton were born eight children, seven of whom survive, namely: Alexander, whose home is in Winnipeg, Canada; Horatio, of Twin Valley, Minnesota; Guy H., of Baker, Montana; Mrs. Morris, who was born in Frazee, Minnesota, July 11, 1874; Mrs. N. A. Anthony of Oklahoma City, Oklahoma; Garfield, who died unmarried at the age of twenty-six; James R., Jr., of Bend, Oregon; and Sidney, whose home is in Band Point, Idaho.

Four children were born to bless the union of Mr. and Mrs. Pearce; but three died in infancy. The only surviving child is Kenneth G. Mr. Pearce, the father, was called from this earth on the 21st of November, 1913. He had been active for a number of years in the fraternal order of Odd Fellows, and was recognized as the head of the organization in Baker. His church affiliations were with the Methodist denomination. He was a man of splendid physique, six feet in height and weighing 230 pounds, and no illness had ever troubled him until he was stricken with appendicitis, which terminated his life.

During her girlhood days Jennie M. Chilton attended the public schools, also Fargo College, and during one year was a student in the State Normal at Moorehead, Minnesota. With this excellent training she became a teacher in the rural schools, and continued in the profession for a time after her marriage.

In December, 1916, she was united in marriage with Benjamin Morris, whose name is also enrolled among the early settlers of Montana. It was in 1888 that he came here from Wales, and he spent his life in smelter work and as inspector for the Anaconda copper smelters.

Mrs. Morris built her modern bungalow home in 1918, and succeeded Mr. Pearce as a stockholder of the First National Bank and in the Baker State Bank. She cast her first presidential ballot in 1916, and upholds the principles of the republican party. She is a member of the Eastern Star, being worthy matron, was reared as a Methodist and continues a loyal member of that church, and is a member of the Woman's Club of Baker, whose object primarily is study and the improvement educationally of its members.

St. Mary's Parish, Helena, Montana. In the City of Helena there are two Catholic parishes, the St. Helena Cathedral Parish and the Parish of St. Mary's. The latter is situated chiefly in the Sixth Ward or Depot District of the capital city. The first noteworthy Catholic activities in this section of the city date from the opening of a Sunday school for the children in 1897. In 1905, after a personal survey of the situation, Bishop Carroll took steps to define and fix the parish boundaries, to provide quarters for divine service, and selected Rev. John L. McMullen as first pastor. Previous to this time the people attended Mass at the Cathedral of the Sacred Heart, and for a time a priest offered Mass on Sundays in the old building at 1332 Gallatin Avenue. This place was also the place used for church and parochial school in the beginning of the parish. Father McMullen took steps for the erection of the present combination building on Roberts Street for church and school, and the new edifice was dedicated on October 23, 1910. Father McMullen served until elected president of Mt. St. Charles College in September, 1911. He was succeeded by Rev. Michael Hannan, who was succeeded by Rev. John L. Kennedy, the present rector of St. Helena Cathedral. Father Nolan was appointed in August, 1916. Irrespective of creed or class, it is generally recognized that St. Mary's has been a bulwark for good in the Depot District of Helena.

George Harfield Conrad is president of the Conrad Trust & Savings Bank at Helena, one of the largest and soundest financial institutions in the State of Montana. It was established by his father, W. G. Conrad, and it is appropriate to review somewhat in detail the career and experiences of that great Montana pioneer, business man and banker.

William G. Conrad was born in Warren County, Virginia, August 3, 1848, a descendant of Joseph Conrad, who came from Germany and was a colonial settler in the Shenandoah Valley of Virginia. The father of William G. Conrad was James W. Conrad, who married Maria Ashby, descended from one of the first families of Virginia. Her great-grandfather, John Ashby, was with George Washington in the Braddock expedition, and her grandfather, Benjamin Ashby, was on Washington's staff during the Revolution. Colonel Conrad owned a large Virginia plantation, served as colonel in the state militia, as district judge, and in 1874 came to Montana and spent his last peaceful years in this state.

William G. Conrad was the eldest son in a family of thirteen children. He grew up on a Virginia plantation, attended private schools and the Washington Academy, and at the age of nineteen he and his brother Charles came to the great Northwest. Most of their journey was made by the river routes from the Western Alleghenies to the head of navigation on the Missouri at Fort Benton. Arriving there, W. G. Conrad became identified with the mercantile firm of I. G. Baker & Company, and after four years as clerk became a member of the firm, and a few years later he and his brother Charles acquired the entire business. A great many old-timers and prominent business men of the Northwest in their reminiscences never failed to refer to the widespread activities of the Conrad Company and their personal associations therewith. The firm were merchants and traders doing business all over the Northwest and across the line in Canada, operating freight trains to the most remote mining camps and settlements. W. G. Conrad had charge of the Montana branch of the business, with his brother Charles in control of the Canadian department. The firm did an enormous business, handling military and Indian supplies, and as a matter of necessity transacted a banking business. In 1888 the Canadian branch was sold to the Hudson's Bay Company. The firm acquired large holdings of land and were extensively engaged in cattle ranching.

W. G. Conrad established the First National Bank at Fort Benton in 1880, and he and his brother were the sole owners. Subsequently the institution was moved to Great Falls and renamed the Northwestern National Bank. During the nineties the control of this bank passed to the interests of the Boston & Montana Copper Company, and two months later the bank closed its doors. The bank had been a cherished institution of W. G. Conrad for over fifteen years, and while no longer officially identified with its affairs he felt a sense of personal responsibility that is highly significant of the business character he always exemplified. As soon as he was told that the bank had failed, he sent a telegram saying, "I want every depositor paid in full," and through his influence in securing the appointment of a receiver and with the authorities at Washington no depositor lost a cent by the failure. This incident of Montana financial history might with profit be told and retold, since it is one of those circumstances that serve to justify men in the faith in their fellow men and illustrate the power of business integrity as a force in the welfare of mankind.

W. G. Conrad established the Conrad Trust & Savings Bank at Helena in 1910, with a capitalization of $200,000. In addition to the presidency of the Conrad Trust & Savings Bank of Helena, he was also president of the Conrad National Bank of Kalispell, the Conrad Banking Company of Great Falls, the Pondera Valley. State Bank of Conrad, Montana, and of the First State Bank of Livingston, Montana. He was also a large stockholder and the first president of the Montana Life Insurance Company, president of the Conrad Townsite Company, a corporation handling the extensive land and water interests and power plants of the family; was treasurer of the Conrad-Price Cattle Company, extensively interested in the mining industry, and an official of a number of other banks and business institutions scattered throughout the state.

W. G. Conrad was frequently honored with public office. He affiliated with the democratic party and while a resident of Chouteau County was elected and served as county commissioner, was a member of the State Senate in 1879, was the first mayor of Fort Benton, and in 1889 lacked only four votes of being sent to the United States Senate.

In 1876 he married Miss Fannie E. Bowen, daughter of Paul L. and Almira (Hopper) Bowen, of Virginia. She died at Helena, February 20, 1911. She had long been one of the prominent women of Montana, and the significance of her life was appropriately marked by an adjournment of the Legislature at Helena at the time of her death. William G. Conrad had five children: William Lee, who died in 1878; Maria Josephine, who married Gilbank Twigg, of New York; Minnie Atkisson, who married Charles Ried Riley, of Washington, District of Columbia; George Harfield, and Arthur Franklin.

George Harfield Conrad was educated in Randolph Macon Academy at Front Royal, Virginia, and married Miss Kathryn M. Kennedy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Kennedy. Mrs. Conrad was born in Chouteau County, Montana. They have two children: Kathryn Elizabeth and Frances Lucile. Mr. and Mrs. Conrad are members of the Episcopal Church. Fraternally he is affiliated with the Elks, and is a democratic voter. Personally as well as through his bank he was closely allied with the patriotic forces of Montana during the World war, conserving the financial resources of the Government, assisting in the sale of Liberty bonds and performing other services required from time to time. Mrs. Conrad was also one of the leading workers at Helena in the Red Cross.

HARRY E. MCAFEE, division general manager at Helena for the Mountain State Telephone & Telegraph Company, went into the telephone industry soon after completing his college education, and has been identified with constituent departments of the Mountain State Company for the past thirteen years.

Mr. McAfee was born at Evans, Colorado, May 23, 1885. His people were among the pioneers of Colorado. His grandfather, John McAfee, was one of the men who heeded the advice of Horace Greeley to go West, and was one of the Horace Greeley colonists into Colorado about 1870. He was a brick manufacturer and died at Evans in that state. Samuel J. McAfee, father of Harry, was born in Illinois July 15, 1861, and has spent nearly all his life in Colorado. He was educated at Evans, was married there and, for a number of years had some prominent business and official associations with that town. He served as postmaster, kept a general store and was also in the sheep business. In 1903 he removed to Greeley, and served three terms as sheriff of Weld County. Since 1917 his home has been at Denver, where he is superintendent of the De Lue Detective Agency. He is a republican and is affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks and the Woodmen of the World. Samuel J. McAfee married Sallie Bovard, who was born at Valparaiso, Indiana, in 1861. Harry is the oldest of their three children. Mona, the second, is the wife of B. E. Heizer, a civil engineer, cattle rancher and county commissioner at Las Animas, Colorado. George, the youngest child, a resident of Denver, enlisted at the outbreak of the World war, and went overseas with the Thirteenth Field Artillery. He saw some arduous service in France, was at the Argonne and San Mihiel and other important drives, accompanied the Army of Occupation to Germany and was mustered out with the rank of sergeant.

Harry E. McAfee attended public school at Evans, Colorado, graduated from the Greeley High School in 1902, was a student in the Colorado College at Colorado Springs through his sophomore year, and for two years attended the State Normal College at Greeley. He had one year of practical experience in the civil engineering profession before he took up telephone work. March 7, 1907, he began his duties as cashier for the Colorado Telephone Company at Greeley, and in 1909 was promoted to traveling auditor, with headquarters at Denver. Two and a half years at that post and he was transferred to Butte, on July 1, 1911. At that date the Colorado Telephone Company took over the Rocky Mountain Bell Telephone Company, and the consolidation resulted in the present Mountain State Telephone and Telegraph Company. Mr. McAfee while at Butte served as district manager for Western Montana until May, 1917, at which date he was promoted to division general manager for the State of Montana and the northern half of Wyoming, with headquarters at Helena. He is the highest official of the company in Montana. The offices of the company at Helena occupy the third and fourth floors of the Gold Block, and in the district over which he has supervision are 1,500 employes.

Mr. McAfee is a well known and popular member of a number of fraternal and social organizations. He is affiliated with Occidental Lodge No. 20, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, at Greeley, Colorado, Butte Consistory No. 2 of the Scottish Rite, Bagdad Temple of the Mystic Shrine at Butte, and is a member of the Silver Bow Club and the Country Clubs of Butte, the Montana, Rotary and Country Clubs of Helena.

The McAfee family reside at 501 North Benton Avenue. April 19, 1916, at Great Falls, Montana, Mr. McAfee married Miss Bertha Florence Foster. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Louis E. Foster, reside at Great Falls, where her father was one of the early settlers and long prominent in business. He is still manager of the Great Falls Hotel and a director in one of the city's banks. Mr. and Mrs. McAfee have one son, Harry Foster, born April 30, 1917.

SAM STEPHENSON located at Great Falls, Montana, in the year 1892, coming with a license from the State of Ohio to practice law, and with only about $15 in cash capital. He immediately secured permission to practice in Montana, and began making acquaintances and friends and building up a business in his profession. The many friends of Mr. Stephenson today know how well he has succeeded as a lawyer, and are also aware that he is connected officially with a number of leading business concerns of this section of the state.

He was born on his father's farm in Carroll County, Indiana, August 9, 1868, a son of John and Nancy (Alexander) Stephenson. His parents were both natives of Ohio and his mother is still living. His father, who died in 1912, at the age of seventy, was a farmer throughout his active career in Ohio and Indiana. He was a Presbyterian and later a Methodist, and always took an active interest in republican politics. Of seven children four are still living, Sam being the third in age.

Sam Stephenson as a boy on the farm earned by hard manual labor the money necessary to put him through college. He graduated from Miami University at Oxford, Ohio, with the class of 1891. He studied law in an office at Hamilton, Ohio, and was admitted to the Ohio bar in 1892, soon afterward coming to Great Falls. Here he first engaged in practice on his own account, but is now a member of one of the leading law firms of the state, Cooper, Stephenson & Hoover.

In 1914 Mr. Stephenson was elected president of the First National Bank of Great Falls. He is also president of the Great Falls Townsite Company and of the Rocky Mountain Fire Insurance Company, and holds an official position in other important companies. He also has considerable ranch interests.

He is a life member of Great Falls Lodge No. 214 of the Order of Elks, and politically is a stand-pat republican. With all his business and professional cares he manages to get some fun out of life, and spends several weeks every summer following his favorite recreation of fishing and hunting at his summer cabin in the Highwood Mountains. July 12, 1906, Mr. Stephenson married Annie Nelson Hall, and they have two sons, John De Camp and Sam, Jr.

Orville Snell Haverfield, M. D. Not only is Dr. Orville Snell Haverfield the pioneer physician of Hardin, but he is one of the leading members of his profession in this part of the state and a man who stands deservedly high in public esteem. Doctor Haverfield came to Hardin in 1911, and in September of that year he began the practice of his profession in this locality, although it was not his initial attempt. When he first came to Montana he spent a few months at Musselshell, leaving that community for Hardin.

Doctor Haverfield was born at Assumption, Christian County, Illinois, on December 15, 1886, and it was in that locality his childhood and youth were spent. After the grammar schools, the high school in his native town gave him his literary training, and he then took a medical course at the St. Louis College of Physicians and Surgeons, from which he was graduated in 1910. For the subsequent six months he was connected with Jefferson Hospital of St. Louis, Missouri, as head physician, and then felt fully prepared to enter upon a career of individual practice. Although he had no acquaintance with Montana save a family one, he resolved to cast his lot with the Treasure State, and subsequent events have proved the wisdom of his choice.

In addition to carrying on his general practice, Doctor Haverfield has been able to render valuable service to his locality, and was selected as the first of the men to act as coroner of Big Horn County, and he is now holding that of county physician, being the only man to hold the office in the new county. Recognizing the need for it, Doctor Haverfield early conceived the idea of opening a county hospital at Hardin, and went before the board of commissioners with his plans, but it was two years before he received an answer to his question as to the opinion of the members. They replied after that somewhat protracted period that in their opinion the proposition could not be made a profitable, or even a paying one. After this decision had been made to him, Doctor Haverfield purchased the equipment that had already been provided and was in actual use, and took upon his own shoulders the responsibility of owning and conducting the institution. In 1915 he erected the Haverfield General Hospital at Hardin, equipped it according to the most modern ideas, and opened it during the early months of that year.

The Haverfield General Hospital is a two-story stucco building built upon the bungalow hospital plan, containing twenty-two rooms besides two dormitories for nurses, and equipped with everything of modern plan and appliance. Every class of surgical and medical case is treated save that of contagion, and Miss Lucile McGinn is acting superintendent and head nurse; Miss Ruth Wiggins is night nurse, and Miss Lane is her assistant. The surgical work is all done by Doctor Haverfield himself and the institution has popularized itself over a wide radius of Big Horn Valley.

From the day he cast his first vote Doctor Haverfield has been a republican and it was on the ticket of that party that he has been elected. Well known as a Mason, Doctor Haverfield belongs to Billings Consistory, and Algeria Temple, Mystic Shrine of Helena. He also belongs to both the subordinate lodge and encampment of the Odd Fellows, is a Woodman of the World and a Modern Woodman and an examiner for the fraternities which handle fraternal insurance.

Doctor Haverfield is a son of Samuel and Nellie (Snell) Haverfield, who have made Assumption their home for many years. Mr. Haverfield went to Christian County as a schoolteacher and has taught in almost every school district of that county. For the past thirty years he has been city clerk of Assumption. The children born to him and his wife are as follows: Olive, who is the wife of Winfield Keyes of Bloomington, Illinois; Ira, who is a minister of the Methodist Church of Waterloo, Iowa; Doctor Orville Snell, whose name heads this review; Maud, who is Mrs. Emery McKitrick of Billings, Montana; Lyle, who is a medical student of the St. Louis College of Physicians & Surgeons, will graduate July, 1921, and will enter partnership with his brother; and Miss Mabel, who lives at Hardin.

Doctor Haverfield was married at Assumption, Illinois, on September 19, 1910, to Miss Ada McKitrick, a native of that locality, and a daughter of Thomas McKitrick. Doctor and Mrs. Haverfield have one son, Orville S. Haverfield.

Barnard J. Mathewes. Among the men who have for many years occupied a leading place in the community with which they are identified is the gentleman whose name forms the caption to this brief review and who is now a successful land holder in Pondera County. Though now in the golden sunset of life's journey and past the best years of his activity, he is still in full possession of his faculties and is as alert mentally as in the days of his prime, being still able to maintain the general oversight of his homestead farm in Pondera County.

Barnard J. Mathewes was born near Dublin, Ireland, on the 3rd day of July, 1856, and is the son of Barney and Mary (Malone) Mathewes, both also natives of the Emerald Isle. When but two years of age Barnard J. lost his father by death, and four years later his mother also died, her death, however, occurring in Tennessee. Barnard is the youngest of the six children born to these parents. Some time after the death of the husband and father the widowed mother, in the hope of better conditions under which she might rear her children, brought her family to America. The trip was made by sailing vessel, the slow-going boat requiring six weeks to make the trip. They landed at Boston, where the subject was reared and received a common school education. Eventually he went to La Salle County, Illinois, where for a time he was employed as a farm hand, his first remuneration being at the rate of $12 a month. Later he spent two years in Iowa and Dakota, and in 1887 he made the overland trip to Montana, arriving at Fort Benton on July 5th. For about 1½ years he was engaged in the restaurant business, and then conducted a saloon for five years. In 1897 he took up a homestead in that part of Teton County which is now Pondera County, about one mile from Conrad postoffice, and he has since given his undivided attention to agriculture. He carried on general farming and has met with a well deserved success. He is wide awake and progressive in his methods, being a firm believer in improvement along all lines.

Orville S. Haverfield

In his political affiliations Mr. Mathewes is a democrat, and since 1911 he has served as justice of the peace to the entire satisfaction of the law abiding people of his community.

Mr. Mathewes married Belle Peterson, who was born and reared at Fort Benton, Montana. They have a comfortable home and enjoy the sincere regard of a large circle of friends.

Tom Cooney, who was educated as a mining and civil engineer, has devoted his technical skill for nearly forty years to the Northern Pacific and Great Northern Railway Companies, and for many years has been chief land examiner for the Northern Pacific. His home and headquarters are at Helena.

He was born December 18, 1853, at Chester, England, son of James and Mary Cooney. His grandfather, Martin Cooney, was a native of Ireland, but practically all of his life was spent in the English Army. For many years he was stationed in India, and served as a soldier during the Napoleonic wars. He was in the Peninsular campaigns under Wellington and later under the same commander at Waterloo, where he was seriously wounded. One of his sons was killed at the battle of Inkerman.

James Cooney, who was born in County Mayo, Ireland, was reared chiefly in England, and on leaving home became a sailor. Three years were spent on a whaling vessel, and one winter his ship was frozen in the ice north of Cape Barrow. After that cruise he came to the United States, and was one of the pioneer settlers in Minnesota Territory. Three years later he was joined in Minnesota by his family, consisting of his wife, two daughters and one son. The family home was at Afton in Washington County, where two other children were born, a son and a daughter. James Cooney enlisted and served in the Union Army during the last two years of the Civil war, and was with his regiment in several engagements, including the battle of Fort Pillow. After the Civil war he returned to his former occupation as a farmer near Afton until his death in April, 1896, at the age of eighty-three. His wife, Mary Cooney, died in March, 1917, aged ninety-two. They were the parents of five children: Annie, deceased, Ellen, Tom, Lizzie and Henry. All the girls taught school at one time or another, and Henry is a practicing physician at Princeton, Minnesota.

Tom Cooney was three years old when his mother brought him to Minnesota, where he grew up on his father's farm. He was educated at the St. Croix Valley Academy in Washington County, and at the State University pursued special courses in civil and mining engineering. He has been engaged in those professions since 1881, and almost altogether for the Northern Pacific and Great Northern Railway Companies. He had attained his position as chief land examiner of the Northern Pacific when he resigned in 1898 to serve in the Spanish-American war. He held the commission of first lieutenant, Company K, Second Regiment, United States Volunteer Engineers. When the war was over he went back to his former duties with the Northern Pacific, and has now completed an uninterrupted consecutive service of twenty years. He also maintains a farm at Afton, Minnesota.

Mr. Cooney has never married. His business and profession have constituted the big interests of his life, and he has never regarded practical politics as a means of satisfying his personal ambitions. All things being equal he prefers the republican candidate, but like many other thinking citizens is rather independent when it comes to voting. His only secret society is the Masons.

J. A. Roe. One of the careful business men and respected citizens of Western Montana is J. A. Roe, the well known dairyman of Kalispell, a man whose history furnishes a splendid example of what may be accomplished through determined purpose, laudable ambition and well directed efforts. Starting out in life in moderate circumstances, he has steadily worked his way upward, winning success in his chosen field of endeavor and gaining the public confidence, which he has retained through careful "hewing to the line" in all the relations which he has sustained to his fellow men.

J. A. Roe was born in Ontario, Canada, and is the son of Samuel J. and Mary J. Roe. He was reared under the parental roof and secured a good practical education in the public schools of his home neighborhood. In 1894 Mr. Roe came to the Flathead country and established a farm home about a mile northwest of Kalispell. He went earnestly to work to improve his home and cultivate his land. About three years after locating on this place he began the dairy business, which he has continued to the present time and in which he has achieved a notable success. His dairy is rated today as one of the finest in this section of the state, and Mr. Roe enjoys an enviable reputation on account of the excellence of his products and the high quality of his service. He keeps a number of Holstein cattle and a herd of grades, and has all the conveniences which tend to make his work a pleasure instead of a drudgery. He is conducting one of the large industries of the Flathead Valley and is counted one of the live, energetic and progressive men of the section. He is intensely practical in all he does, and the general appearance of his place indicates him to be a man of sound ideas and good judgment. His cow barn is 60 by 18 feet in dimensions, with an annex 16 by 60 feet in size, while the silo has a capacity of 65 tons of feed. He raises on 20 acres of land enough feed for 65 head of cattle.

Mr. Roe was united in marriage with Gratia N. Proud, who is a native of Kansas and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Proud. They have four children, namely: Zela Ramona, Helen Lucile, Verna Maurine and Archie Dean.

Politically Mr. Roe is nominally a republican, but in fact he is independent of party lines in his attitude toward political measures and candidates for office. Fraternally he is a member of the Masonic Order, holding membership in the Blue Lodge, Chapter of Royal Arch Masons and the Commandery of the Knights Templar, while he and his wife are members of the Order of the Eastern Star. Mr. Roe is universally recognized as a splendid citizen, progressive in all that the term implies; a man of lofty character, sturdy integrity and unswerving honesty. During the pioneer period here he shared the difficulties known to the early settlers of any locality, but he bore his part in the general upbuilding of the community in such a way as to win for him the confidence and esteem of all who know him.

J. T. Blose. It is an unquestionable fact that the biographies of enterprising men, especially of good men, are instructive as guides and incentives to others. The examples they furnish of patient purpose and steadfast endeavor cannot help but influence others. Some men appear to belong to no exclusive class; apparently insurmountable obstacles have in many instances awakened their dormant faculties and served as a stimulus to carry them onward and upward to ultimate success. J. T. Blose, one of Flathead County's most enterprising farmers and public spirited citizens, is a man who has succeeded at his chosen life work through his individual efforts and his persistency, despite obstacles and discouragements.

J. T. Blose was born in Saltsburg, Westmoreland County, Pennsylvania, and is the son of Andrew and Malinda (Forbes) Blose, of whose seven children he is the youngest. He was reared at home, but when he was but thirteen months old he suffered the loss of his father, who was accidentally killed while at work in a coal mine at McKeesport, Pennsylvania. He has made his own living since he was ten years old. Leaving Pennsylvania when he was twenty-one years of age, ambitious to begin the battle of life on his own account, he turned his face towards the great western country, about which he had heard such glowing accounts. With several neighbor boy friends he started West, their first objective being Kansas. From there he went on to Santa Fe, New Mexico, and from there to Flagstaff, Arizona, where he engaged in the cattle business. Later he went to Prescott and Phoenix, remaining in Arizona about four years. He then went to San Francisco, California, and Portland, Oregon, remaining until 1882, when he came to Montana, locating in the Yellowstone Valley, where he was engaged in mining during one winter. He then went to Cheyenne Bluffs, where he made application for work. He was pretty well dressed and the foreman, looking him over, questioned his honest desire for work, and it took young Blose some minutes to convince him that he was in earnest. He worked there until the following spring, when he went to Portland, Oregon, going up the Rogue River, where he was employed by a contractor who had engaged to get out ties for the Oregon & California Railroad, the first rail connection between those two states. However, before the job was completed the contractor failed and Mr. Blose and his fellow workmen lost their wages, which they had not drawn. Mr. Blose then went to Seattle, thence back to Old Mexico, where he was employed as a pump repair man on a railroad. Some time later he came to Butte, Montana, and, after looking the country over, he filed a pre-emption claim on 160 acres of land in the Flathead Valley, about two miles northwest of where Kalispell now stands. In 1888 Mr. Blose returned to his old home neighborhood in Pennsylvania, where he was married. Soon afterward he and his bride came to Montana and entered upon the task of improving their new homestead, engaging in farming and stock raising, in which he met with a very gratifying degree of success. During the subsequent years Mr. Blose made many improvements, of a permanent and substantial nature, on his ranch, the general appearance of which indicated him to be a man of sound judgment and excellent taste. He is a believer in the use of up-to-date and improved methods of farming and has earned the reputation of being a progressive and enterprising farmer. He gave himself unremittingly to the operation of his farm until about ten years ago, when, feeling that he had reached the place where he could afford to lay aside the implements of husbandry and take a rest, which he had richly earned, he sold the old farm and moved into Kalispell, where he is now living.

In 1888, in Pennsylvania, Mr. Blose was married to Belle C. Irwin, who was born in Armstrong County, Pennsylvania, the daughter of John and Sarah (Windrem) Irwin. She was reared at home, attended the public schools and completed her education in Leechburg Academy at Leechburg, Pennsylvania. To Mr. and Mrs. Blose have been born two children, Charles O. and Minnie A. Charles O., who was born in June, 1889, worked on the home farm with his father until twenty years of age. In the meantime he had taken a course in the Kalispell Business College, and he then engaged as a shoe clerk in the employ of Bogart, Hollensteiner & Company at Kalispell. He is now employed in the shoe department of Myer & Frank, of Portland, Oregon. In 1912 he was married to Winnie Ohmart, and they have two children, Orville and Willis Wendell. Minnie A. Blose, after graduating from the Kalispell High School, where she fitted herself for school teaching, was employed for five terms as a teacher in the district schools of Flathead County, and gained an enviable reputation because of the success which crowned her work as an educator. She became the wife of T. Clare Williams, of Kalispell, who is connected with the Interlake office, and they have one son, Kenneth Leland.

Politically Mr. Blose is an earnest supporter of the republican party, though he is broad minded in his attitude toward public affairs, preferring to give his support in local affairs to the men whom he considers best fitted for the office. Fraternally he is a member of Kalispell Lodge No. 50, Independent Order of Odd Fellows. Mr. and Mrs. Blose are consistent members of the Presbyterian Church, to which they give generous support. Besides the operation of his farm Mr. Blose bought and sold many other tracts of farm land and possessed a very accurate knowledge of the values of land in this section of the state. He has always enjoyed the absolute confidence of all with whom he has had dealings and has been numbered among the representative men of his community.

T. Kopsland. To a great extent the prosperity of the newer sections of the United States is due to the honest industry, the sturdy perseverance and the wise economy which so prominently characterizes the foreign element, both those who have come direct from the European nations and their American-born children. They have entered very largely into our great cosmopolitan population, and by comparison with their "old country" surroundings these people have readily recognized the fact that in the United States lies the greatest opportunities for the man of energy and ambition. And because of this many have broken the ties of home and native land and have entered earnestly upon the task of gaining in the new world a home and a competence. Among this class may be mentioned the Kopsland family, of whom T. Kopsland, a retired resident of Flathead County, is a worthy representative and the head of his family in this country, a man who has performed his full duty in every phase of life's activities in which he has engaged and who is now enjoying the good will and confidence of all who know him.

George T. Depuleo

T. Kopsland is a Scandinavian by nativity, having been born in Norway in 1850, and is the son of Thomas and Karen Marie Kopsland. He was educated in the schools of his native land, where he remained until he was nineteen years of age. In 1869, with a laudable ambition to improve his material affairs, he immigrated to the United States, landing in New York harbor on April 12, 1869. He at once went to Northeastern Iowa, to which place friends from his home land had preceded him, and there he obtained employment. Later he went to Minnesota, where he engaged in farming and also in the buying and selling of grain for elevators, in all of which he was successful. He also received the appointment as postmaster of Watson, Minnesota, which office he filled for four years, and he also served as school director. Mr. Kopsland was located in Lignite, Burke County, North Dakota, for a number of years, and in that locality, as in all other places where he has lived, his unusual ability, energy and honesty have been quickly recognized. On May 27, 1907, he received a commission as postmaster of Lignite, he having been mainly instrumental in having the office established. He gave eminent satisfaction in the office and was appointed to succeed himself, filling the position until July 10, 1915. During this period, Assistant Postmaster-General James McCleary was a warm personal friend of Mr. Kopsland. During this official period Mr. Kopsland's assistants were his daughters, Sigrid, Ulrikke, Hannah and Caroline. It was in the '70s that the great grasshopper plague visited the middle western states, doing an incalculable amount of damage. It is related that at times the swarms of grasshoppers flying high in the air were so thick as to obscure the sun like a heavy cloud. Getting on the rails of the railroads, they actually made the rails so slippery as to stop the progress of trains. Mr. Kopsland also gives some interesting figures in comparing prices of farm products in those days with the present war prices. Then eggs were sold for 3 cents a dozen and butter at 3 cents a pound, while other things were proportionately cheap.

In 1915 Mr. Kopsland came to Montana, to which state some of his children had already come, and he first located at Reed Point, sixty-seven miles west of Billings, Stillwater County, where he remained three years. At the end of that time he came to Flathead County and purchased a comfortable and attractive home, five miles south of Kalispell, in the Foy's Lake country, where he makes his home during the beautiful summer months, but when the more rigorous winter weather comes on the family moves into their home in Kalispell. Mr. Kopsland was a real pioneer of the several localities in which he lived prior to coming to Flathead County, and performed a good work in the upbuilding and development of those sections. He was also prosperous financially, and, being a good manager and wisely economical, he is now able to live in quiet enjoyment.

While a resident of Minnesota Mr. Kopsland was married to Anna Giertson, who was born in Fillmore County, Minnesota, the daughter of Ole and Sigrid Giertson. To them have been born the following children: Frederick, Marie, Ole, Caroline, Hannah, Sigrid, Ulrikke and Leslie. The older of these children were educated in the public schools of Minnesota; Hannah and Caroline, in the high schools of North Dakota; Marie and Caroline took business courses in Billings, Montana, and they, with Sigrid, are employed in Kalispell, Marie as bookkeeper and stenographer for the Robinson Furniture Company, Caroline as stenographer for Doctor Brassett, and Sigrid as assistant in the Hileman photographic studio. Ulrikke graduated from the Kalispell High School in 1919 and is now taking a business course. Hannah is the wife of F. E. Remus, of Alberta, Canada, and they have one child, Beatrice Evelyn. Ole was married to Ora Ovren, and they have two children, Carmen and Virginia.

Politically Mr. Kopsland gives his earnest support to the republican party, in the success of which he is deeply interested. Religiously he and the members of his family are identified with the Lutheran Church.

Mr. Kopsland has never regretted leaving his native land for America, and is enthusiastic when he speaks of the opportunities that exist in this great republic for those who really desire financial independence and are willing to undergo the necessary discipline and labor to earn it. He draws some sharp contrasts between customs in his home land and here. For example, he relates that in his school days there the maps were free-hand drawings, and that the map descriptive of America had all that territory lying west of the Mississippi River marked "Great American Desert." It is a great satisfaction to Mr. Kopsland to be able to personally witness the refutation of that libel, for he feels that he now lives in one of the garden spots of the world. He has ever stood stanchly for those things which gave promise of being for the betterment of the whole people, and has himself set a good example in the way of clean living, for it is the consensus of opinion among those who know him best that he is worthy to be counted among the representative men of his community.

George Deputee. One of the rare and distinctive honors conferred by an Indian tribe was awarded by the Crow Indian Council at their meeting May 3, 1920, when they formally adopted as a member of the tribe George Deputee of Lodgegrass, one of the oldest white residents of the Crow Reservation. His association with the tribe, his residence on their property, dates back a third of a century, and his service warranted this recognition by reason of his work as an instructor in the matter of citizenship and always as a true friend and adviser. He was adopted a member unanimously, and his membership entitles him to all the rights and immunities of a native born Crow.

From boyhood Mr. Deputee has shown his willingness to accept the hazards and the varying circumstances and situations of life and has been a witness and actor in the development of the great west for practically half a century.

He was born in Wayne County, Indiana, September 11, 1854. His father Joseph L. Deputee was a native of the State of Delaware and of French ancestry. As a young man he went west and at Economy, Indiana, he married Sarah Worth. Her father, Daniel Worth, was a Methodist minister, an ardent abolitionist, and was subjected to imprisonment in the South on account of his outspoken convictions on slavery. He was bailed out by his Indiana church, and was not allowed to return because of the imminent danger to his life. Joseph A. Deputee was a cooper by trade, and followed that industry in the Village of Economy. When the Civil war came on he put down his tools and went to the front as sergeant of his company. He was wounded and discharged, and rejoined his wife and children who in the meantime had gone to Troy, Ohio. After recovering he raised a company in that vicinity and again went to the front with the commission of a first lieutenant. He was at Nashville when the war closed. On rejoining his family he took them to Lodi, Indiana, where he resumed his trade, but died at Perrysville in that State in the spring of 1872 at the age of forty-five. His wife had died before him and both are buried at Lodi. Their three sons to reach mature years are, Lyborn of Columbus, Montana; George; and Lyndon, also of Columbus.

George Deputee finished his education at Lodi, Indiana, and when he was about sixteen years of age he started for the West. For about eighteen months he was at Arkansas City, Kansas, and then went into the Cherokee strip of Indian Territory, and worked for the Indian trader Bartels on Caney River, on the site where the prosperous oil city of Bartlesville, Oklahoma, now stands. Leaving there he drifted through Kansas and Nebraska, and eventually went into the Black Hills region of South Dakota. His primary object in going to that section of the Northwest was to get an afflicted brother into a healthy climate. That brother recovered and is a resident of Columbus, Montana, today. His first employment in the Black Hills region was assisting Mr. Stewart getting out lumber for use in the building of the city of Deadwood.

Leaving that he became a miner in the Homestake mine at Leeds and remained there until 1882, when he came out to the territory of Montana. He joined his brother who had also had mining experience, and they with McDonald Brothers, took contracts for blasting down the mountain sides preparatory to the laying of the track of the Northern Pacific Railroad from the mouth of Rosebud Creek west towards Billings. When the grading work terminated, they contracted for ties for the road on White Beaver.

Giving up his railroad work Mr. Deputee went to the present location of Big Timber, and was employed by the pioneer settler C. T. Burns in getting out logs for lumber. This work engaged him for two years along the Boulder River. From that point he came down to the Crow Reservation at Crow Agency, and was so well pleased with the locality that he remained as assistant farmer on the reservation. A year later he became an independent farmer and later left this to join the Indian trader Albert M. Stevenson, with whom he was associated fourteen years. Constant and unremitting work during this long period had weakened him physically, and there was a time when he made the restoration of his health and strength his chief ambition. After recuperating he engaged in the butcher business, and that is the chief business in which he is engaged at Lodgegrass today.

His experiences have been such as to enable him to appreciate the wonderful strides of development in Montana. All the railroads have been built since he came, and it is a matter of satisfaction that he has contributed something substantial toward this development himself. Politically he is a republican in national matters. While in Kansas in 1876 he cast his first presidential vote for Rutherford B. Hayes. In 1880 he voted for Mr. Garfield and four years later for the "plumed knight," James G. Blaine. At Crow Agency Mr. Deputee married a native of the Crow tribe, Susie Noname. She died leaving two daughters. Jennie is the wife of Frank Wolf of Lodgegrass and has a daughter and son. Flora is the wife of Ben Bear Below of Lodgegrass, and has a daughter Matilda.

George D. Hahn. Wonderful indeed has been the transformation of Montana since it was first beheld by George D. Hahn, of Kalispell, one of our early pioneers and an influential and highly honored citizens, for when this sterling character cast his lot here he found a wide-stretching wilderness, still the domain of Indians, and also the haunts of various species of wild animals. But he was not a man to be discouraged by seemingly insurmountable obstacles—in fact, being a man of courage and farsightedness, he underwent the hardships and trials incident to life in a new country and enjoyed it better than being hampered by the civilization of the old Keystone State, from whence he came. He is a man whom all have admired for his sterling honesty, his courage, his hospitality and his public spirit, and he is eminently deserving of a permanent place in a history of this section.

George D. Hahn was born in Wyoming County, Pennsylvania, and is the son of John and Elizabeth (Walter) Hahn, he being the second in order of birth of their four children. He was reared under the parental roof and secured a good education in the district schools of his home locality. When about twenty-four years of age he paid a visit to Colorado and was charmed by the scenery, which appealed to him as no other section of the country had. The great mountains thus had a call for him that he could not resist, and finally he came West to Montana, locating first at Anaconda, where he spent the winter. In the spring of 1888 he came to the Flathead country and purchased the ranch of a Mr. Plume. He had left his wife at Anaconda, whither he returned for a time, but finally moved his family to the new home, making the trip in a typical prairie schooner, the trip requiring nine days. In the spring of 1889 he also preempted a claim and there he established his permanent home, building a substantial and commodious residence and farm buildings. Mr. Hahn was a progressive and energetic farmer, his industry being rewarded by bounteous crops. He became deeply interested in irrigation, particularly with the Ashley project, which had its beginning in February, 1897, and has seen some wonderful results from irrigation. For instance, on one tract of his own land he has made as many as three cuttings of alfalfa in one season, amounting to an average of eight tons to the acre a season. Mr. and Mrs. Hahn remained on this farm until 1914, when, having acquired a sufficiency of this world's goods to satisfy their modest needs for the future, they relinquished the active work of the farm and moved into a comfortable home in the City of Kalispell, where they now reside.

Mr. Hahn for many years made a specialty of stock raising, particularly Hereford cattle, of which he bred and raised great numbers for the market. He faithfully maintained the standard purity of his stock, and maintains that pure-blooded stock raising has been one of the great contributing elements of the success which has attended farming in the Flathead Valley. In the early days of his residence here wild game of all kinds was plentiful, the settlers' table being well supplied with the finest of wild meats. Indians too were plentiful and occasionally were annoying, though they seldom committed serious depredations in this section of the state. That was before the Town of Kalispell was founded and the settlers' cabins were widely scattered through the length of the valley. On April 21, 1891, while Mr. Hahn was working on his farm, he heard unusual hammering and, looking down into the valley he saw workmen raising the frame of the first house in Kalispell. He and his good wife have been witnesses of and participants in the wonderful development of this section of the state, and they have a justifiable pride in the part they have played in this transformation. They are proud of the state of their adoption, which they consider one of the choicest sections of the great Northwest. Here soil conditions are almost perfect and with irrigation phenomenal crops may be raised; the weather is not excessively severe in winter and is delightful in summer; the scenery is beautiful, and wild game and fish are here in abundance for those who seek such sport. What more could be desired?

George D. Hahn was married in Pennsylvania to Minnie Kelley, a native of Wyoming County, Pennsylvania, and the daughter of Levi and Rhoda (Vose) Kelley. Mrs. Hahn's maternal ancestral line contains the names of a number of patriots, the record being in brief as follows: Lemuel Vose, who was a relative of the Governor Winslow family of New York State, was born at Killingly, Connecticut, April 30, 1753, and died on March 2, 1827. In 1777 he married Prudence Cady, who was born on April 20, 1750, and died on July 28, 1826. Lemuel Vose was the son of Thomas and Experience (Tucker) Vose. Thomas Vose was the son of Lieut. Henry Vose. Lemuel Vose was a volunteer soldier in the Continental army during the the war of the Revolution, and was wounded in the battle of Bunker Hill. This record of patriotic service entitles Mrs. Hahn to membership in the Daughters of the American Revolution, and she is identified with the chapter of that society at Kalispell.

Politically Mr. Hahn assumes a broad-minded attitude and is not bound by party ties, preferring to vote as his conscience dictates, giving his support to those men and measures which in his opinion are for the best interests of the greatest number. He has been a consistent supporter of every local movement for the public good, and because of his sterling worth, his material success and his excellent personal qualities he enjoys the confidence and esteem of the entire community.

ARTHUR M. HODGSON. That the plenitude of satiety is seldom attained in the affairs of life is to be considered a most beneficial deprivation, for where ambition is satisfied and every desired end realized, if such be possible, apathy must follow. Effort would cease, and creative talent would waste its energies in inactivity. The men who have pushed forward the wheels of progress have ever been those to whom satisfaction lies ever in the future, who have labored continuously, always finding in each transition stage an incentive for further effort. Arthur M. Hodgson, farmer and stock raiser of Flathead County, is one whose well directed efforts have gained for him a position of desired prominence in the various circles in which he moves, his energy and enterprise have been crowned by success, and, ever having had the best interests of his community at heart and sought to promote them in every possible way, he has well earned a place along with other enterprising and representative citizens in this permanent record of his state.

Arthur M. Hodgson was born in Livingston County, Illinois, and is the son of Zimri and Martha (Voorhees) Hodgson, who were successful farming folk in their home community, Zimri Hodgson having gained a wide reputation as a breeder and raiser of pure-bred live stock. Arthur Hodgson was reared on the home farm and secured his education in the district schools. For a number of years he remained associated with his father in business, but finally engaged in farming and stock raising at Forrest, Illinois, and later at Healey, that state. From boyhood he has been deeply interested in the breeding of live stock, and from the beginning one idea has always been uppermost in his mind, namely, the improvement of the breed and the maintenance of as high a standard as possible. Mr. Hodgson arrived in Montana in 1904 and immediately came to the Flathead Valley, where he has since been located and where he has achieved a most pronounced success in his chosen vocation. He relates in a very interesting manner the story of his family's connection with this business, and the following reminiscences are reproduced from a recent issue of the Montana Farmer: "When first I can remember—which was about the close of the Civil War—the Hodgsons were showing grade Norman colts at the state and county fairs in different parts of Illinois. In 1882 Ed Hodgson, of El Paso, Illinois, imported from France for my father, Zimri Hodgson, a dappled gray stallion, three years old, which grew to weigh 1,800 pounds and cost in France $900. Two or three years later the same buyer brought from France for Zimri Hodgson and his boys on their Illinois farm two gray weanling stallions and four yearling fillies—two gray and two black—at a cost of about $400 each. We have been growing good grade 'Normans' (as they were then called), and we found that colts from our full-blood mares were nearly always larger and better in disposition than colts from our high-grade mares. Stud books were being formed and we recorded first in the French Draft and later the same animals in the Percheron book. The pure-bred mares matured at about 1,700 pounds in fair flesh; the stallions grew somewhat larger than the mares. I moved from Healey, Illinois, to Kalispell, Montana, with my wife and daughter, in 1904 bringing two mares and a stallion from the full-blood stock which Cousin Ed had imported for father some thirty years before. One mare proved a failure as a brood mare and I sold her to a logger for $200. The other, Surprise 25849, gave us five stallion colts, which sold in our local market of Montana and Idaho for $1,260, or $252 each, and were sold at two years old or under. Also we have four of her pure-bred daughters. * * * At work horse prices these mares should be worth $800, which, added to $1,260, makes $2,060 for one mare's colts in twelve years. Besides she has been one in our team in all kinds of farm work."

At present Mr. Hodgson has three especially fine brood mares of which he is justifiably proud and which are registered as follows: Grace, 122916; Enterprise, 122936; Minnehaha, 136386. He also has a magnificent stallion, General Joffre, 121742, and three blooded fillies. Mr. Hodgson's farm is well improved, the permanent buildings being of a character that reflect credit on the owner. He has shown a progressive and enterprising spirit in all his operations, and his success has been commensurate with his efforts.

Mr. Hodgson was married to Myrtle Kent, who was born in Waynesburg, Green County, Pennsylvania, the daughter of Thomas B. and Elizabeth M. (Ingersoll) Kent, who moved to the Flathead Valley in 1904 and engaged in farming. Mr. and Mrs. Hodgson have a daughter, Jennie, who graduated from the Kalispell High School in 1911 and from the Kalispell Business College, and she is now secretary to Professor Randall, of the Flathead County High School.

Politically Mr. Hodgson is not bound by party ties, preferring to give his support to the candidates who in his opinion are best qualified for the offices they seek. Religiously he and his wife are members of the Christian Church, to which they give generous support. In all the relations of life Mr. Hodgson has commanded the respect and confidence of those with whom he has had business relations, and he has richly earned the high standing which he now enjoys in the community.

ANDREW C. GRAVES. Since the death of Andrew C. Graves, which occurred March 3, 1913, Harlowton has become the county seat of Wheatland County. It is significant that Mr. Graves was widely known as the "father of Harlowton." He was one of the first to establish a business there, was owner of the townsite, and with multiplying interests his influence and example were conspicuous in every phase of advancement by which Harlowton has achieved its place among the thriving and progressive cities of Eastern Montana.

The career of Mr. Graves was a most unusual one, since he had come to America a penniless youth, familiarized himself with the English language in the intervals of hard work, and literally earned his bread by the sweat of his brow even after coming to Montana.

He was born in Denmark March 12, 1865, third of the four children of Jens Graves and wife. About the time Andrew C. Graves was born the father was fighting in the armies of his country against Germany.

The educational opportunities of Andrew C. Graves were limited. From the age of eight he was contributing his labor and earnings to the family. He came to this country at the age of sixteen, and spent the first two years at Grand Rapids, Michigan, where in addition to regular employment he studied faithfully to master the English language. From Michigan he moved to St. Paul, Minnesota, and was employed chiefly in manual labor there and at Duluth until 1890. Then after one year at Seattle, Washington, Mr. Graves came to Montana in 1891, and made his home at Helena until 1898. In that year he engaged in the meat market business at Cassell in Meagher County, also did a large business as a dealer in hides and wool, and in 1900 moved his business headquarters to Harlowton. Here he erected the second building in the town, continued in the meat, hide and wool industry, and rapidly increased his holdings and interests until he was one of the wealthiest men of that locality. Besides his real estate ownership in the town he invested heavily in outside lands, developed several ranch properties, aggregating many thousands of acres, a large part of it under irrigation. He was one of the leading cattle and sheep men for a number of years. Due to his enterprise was erected the Graves Hotel, an honor to the town, and he also built and operated the electric light plant and put up the home of the First National Bank, of which he was one of the organizers and served as the second president.

"Chris" Graves, as he was widely known, possessed character, rugged strength, persistent ambition, and by honest and honorable methods made his work count heavily in the destiny of a large and important section of Montana. He exemplified sound sense and public spirit in his relations with his home town and state, but was never ostentatious, and his modesty kept him out of politics. He served for a time as an alderman, and cast his vote as an independent republican. He was long affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and was interested with his wife in the Rebekahs and with the Lutheran Church.

August 16, 1904, Mr. Graves married at St. Paul, Minnesota, Mrs. Louise (Barquint) Digobich. Mrs. Graves, who survives her honored husband and lives at Harlowton, was born in Minnesota, daughter of John Berquint. She is the mother of one daughter, Mary.

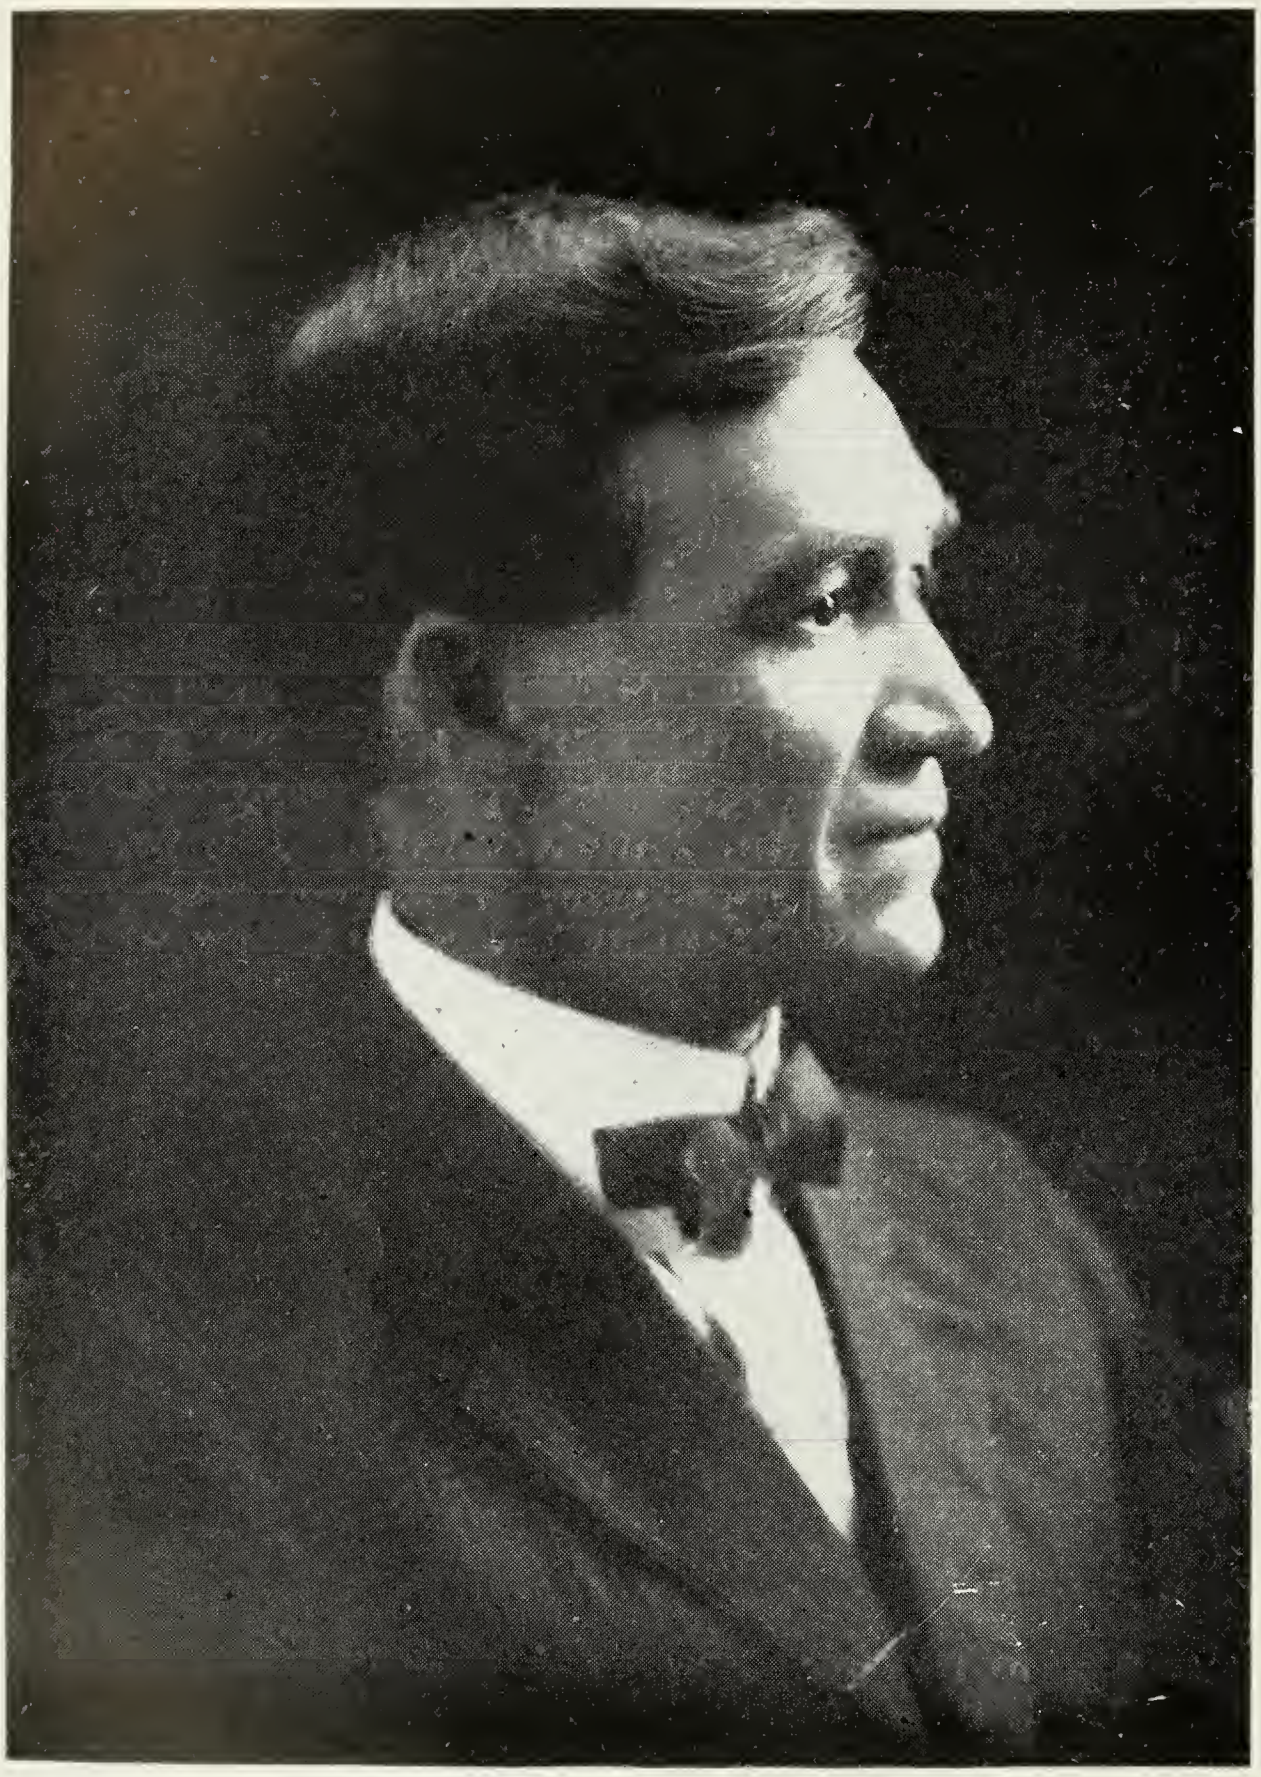
ROBERT N. JONES was born in Iowa City, Iowa, on November 15, 1884, and is the youngest of the three children born to David W. and Margaret (Pate) Jones. David W. Jones is a native of Wales, born on March 22, 1852, and when four years of age was brought to the United States by his parents. They landed at New York City, but soon came to Iowa, where David grew to manhood and was educated. He was the seventh in order of birth of eight children, and when he was but a child he lost his father by death, so that he was early thrown on his own resources. For a number of years he was employed as a farm hand, but later engaged in farming on his own account in Johnson County, Iowa, and he still lives in that community. In 1905 he engaged in the real estate business in Iowa City. Politically he is a republican; in religion he is a Congregationalist, and fraternally he is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. His wife was a native of Pennsylvania and died when her youngest child, the immediate subject of this sketch, was but two years of age.

Robert N. Jones secured a good elementary education in the common schools and then became a student in the University of Iowa, where he was graduated in the course of liberal arts in 1909. Having decided to make the practice of law his life work, he then entered the law department of his alma mater, graduating in 1911 and was admitted to the bar of that state. He at once came to Harlowton, Montana, and entered upon active practice, and has been more than ordinarily successful in its prosecution. In 1915 he was appointed city attorney, and in November, 1918, he was elected county attorney of Wheatland County.

On September 22, 1915, Mr. Jones was married to Edith Woodbury, who was born in Greeley, Colorado, the daughter of Joseph and Rebecca Woodbury, of whose two children she was the younger. To Mr. and Mrs. Jones has been born a daughter, Caryl.

Politically Mr. Jones has been an earnest supporter of the republican party, in the councils of which he stands high. He rendered efficient service as chairman of the Republican County Central Committee in 1914 and 1916, and is a member of the State Executive Committee. He is a member of the Montana State Bar Association. Fraternally he is a member of Musselshell Lodge No. 69, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, and is a past master of that body; is a past high priest of Harlowton Chapter No. 22, Royal Arch Masons; is the present commander of Palestine Commandery No. 18, Knights Templar; and is a member of Algeria Temple, Ancient Arabic Order Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, at Helena and is in the Divan of that organization. He is also a member of the Greek-letter college fraternity, Phi Delta Phi.

In addition to his creditable career in one of the most exacting of professions, he has proved an honorable member of the body politic, rising in the confidence and esteem of the public, and in every relation of life he has never fallen below the dignity of true manhood nor in any way resorted to methods and wiles that have invited criticism or censure. He has long enjoyed a reputation as a safe and conservative counselor, is deservedly popular among his professional brethren and has built up a large and lucrative legal business and enjoys a splendid reputation as a lawyer, citizen and neighbor.



P. F. Smith

Richard F. Smith, cashier of the Baker State Bank, has been identified with the development and business interests of Baker since the infancy of the town, and has held his present position since the bank was organized in March, 1909, absorbing a private banking institution, the first one of Baker. He was born in Anoka County, Minnesota, on January 7, 1872, a son of Orrin and Hattie (Reed) Smith, and grandson of Daniel Y. Smith. After meeting with some material prosperity in Maine, his native state, Daniel Y. Smith brought his family west to Minnesota, and became extensively interested in realty in and about Anoka, handling city and farm lands upon a large scale. He became a member of the first Board of Directors of the Anoka National Bank. At his death his remains were interred in the cemetery at Anoka.

Orrin Smith was born in Trust County, Maine, and after coming to Anoka, Minnesota, with his father became interested in different business enterprises. His death occurred in December, 1912, and he was survived by his widow until December, 1914, when she, too, passed away. Both were strong Presbyterians. Their children were as follows: William C., who is a resident of Bethel, Minnesota; Laura Ella, who is the widow of Henry Lutchsinger of Bethel, Minnesota; Charles H., who lives at Anoka, Minnesota; Richard F., whose name heads this review; Fred, who lives at Sioux City, Iowa; and Ernest, who died at the age of four years in 1880.

Richard F. Smith's educational advantages were confined to those offered by the public schools of Anoka, Minnesota, up to the eighth grade. As he then left school his further instruction came from experience in business life. Coming to Montana while yet a lad in his teens, Richard F. Smith secured work as a cowboy with Mr. Wibaux, a pioneer cattleman of Wibaux, of French origin, who was known as a cattle expert. Mr. Smith remained there for three years, gaining an experience that was useful to him later on in his career. Leaving the range, he entered the mercantile firm of Cannon & Orgain of Wibaux as a clerk, and remained with this concern for several years. Six years later he entered the banking business for Mr. Cannon, a private banker of Wibaux. Subsequently Mr. Smith was associated with several others in the organization of the Dawson County Bank, a private bank with a capital stock of $5,000, which he served as cashier until it was purchased by Freeman Brothers, and Mr. Smith returned to the mercantile firm of Cannon & Orgain, and remained with it until 1909, when he came to Baker.

He opened the Baker State Bank in Lang's store when it was in its old site, and began business with a capital of $20,000. The officials then were as follows: R. E. Morris, president; W. G. Lang, vice president; and R. F. Smith, cashier. Its Board of Directors was composed of the following: R. L. Anderson, J. H. Price, David Bickle, William Fulton and the above named officials. The bank erected its permanent home, a substantial two-story brick building, in 1910, and a year later it was extended to a length of 100 feet, the total cost being $21,000. The present officials are as follows: R. F. Smith, president; F. R. Savage, First Vice-president; R. E. Morris, Second Vice-president; and L. E. Rushton, cashier. The capital of the bank has been increased to $50,000, and the total assets are more than $500,000. The institution has enjoyed a steady growth since its organization, and for some years was practically the only bank in this region, just as it is the oldest. Of late years other banks have been established along the Chicago, Milwaukee & Saint Paul Railroad and their prosperity, taken together with that which the Baker State Bank has always held, indicates that the banking business of eastern Montana is steadily increasing in importance as well as volume. The Baker State Bank has been back of practically every movement having for its object the progress of this region, and the credit it has vouchsafed various concerns has given to business at Baker and contiguous territory a stability that could only be attained from a sound bank.

In the movement which resulted in the establishment of Fallon County Mr. Smith was one of the active forces, and he was one of the men who brought the county seat to Baker. With the incorporation of Baker as a city Mr. Smith was appointed as a member of the first City Council, and at the first general election he was elected to that office, but later on resigned. He has served on the school board and has always been a warm friend of the public schools. During the World war Mr. Smith took a very active part, serving as chairman of the Fallon County Liberty Loan Committee during all five drives, and was also a member of the Fallon County Council of Defense. As treasurer of the Red Cross he assisted in raising considerable money for that organization, and in every way possible worked to aid the administration in carrying out its policies.

Brought up in a republican family, it was only natural that Mr. Smith should espouse the cause of that party and he cast his first presidential vote for William McKinley at Wibaux. An ardent admirer of Colonel Roosevelt, he became a progressive in 1912, but, like the majority of this branch of the party, has returned to his old allegiance.

On October 18, 1898, Mr. Smith was married at Wibaux to Nellie Agnew, a daughter of Barney J. Agnew. Mrs. Smith was born at Appleton, Minnesota, April 1, 1877. Her father was a native of Ireland, and he and his wife had four sons and one daughter in their family. Mr. and Mrs. Smith have the following children: Alice, who is employed by the Baker State Bank; Lloyd, who is employed in a bank at Hardin, Montana; and Donald and Edna, both of whom are attending school at Baker. A sound, reliable and dependable man, Mr. Smith has reached his present responsible standing in his bank and community through his own efforts, and is deservedly regarded as one of Baker's most influential men. Having lived in Montana during the most important years of its history, he has played the part of an earnest, clear-headed man in the development of his portion of the state, and is proud of the progress he sees on every side.

George Henry Taylor, who has claimed Montana as his home for nearly forty years, is a resident of Helena, is custodian of the Grand Army of the Republic room at the State Capitol, and is an old soldier with many interesting memories of campaigns and battles through the South at the time of the Civil war.

He is a New Englander by birth and ancestry and was born at Jaffrey, New Hampshire, March 21, 1842. His people came from England in colonial times. His grandfather, Arthur Taylor, spent all his life on a farm at Jaffrey. Elias Taylor, father of George Henry, was born at Jaffrey in 1797. He was about three years old when General Washington died, and was able to remember seeing the Jaffrey Church draped as a memorial to the great president. He grew up and married at Jaffrey, and in the early days before railroads were built operated a transportation outfit. He had several six-horse teams, transporting goods between the Village of Jaffrey and the adjacent cotton factory to Boston. In 1849 he moved to Littleton, New Hampshire, lived on a farm there and in 1854 moved to a farm in Tompkins County,

New York. At the venerable age of eighty-six, in 1883, he and his wife came to Helena, and they lived at the home of their son George Henry. Elias Taylor died at Helena in 1890. He was a republican from the organization of that party, and at his home Town of Jaffrey served as a selectman. He was a member of the Methodist Church. His wife was Abigail Bullard, who was born at Mason, New Hampshire, December 20, 1804, and died at Helena October 10, 1889. She and her husband were among the first laid to rest in Forestvale Cemetery. Both had been converted at Newfield, New York, in 1852, and joined the Methodist Church. Her life was a constant expression of practical christianity. This good christian woman was the mother of seven children. Mary, the oldest, lives at Ithaca, New York, widow of Charles Blackmar, a business man. Ellen M. has her home at Peabody, Massachusetts, and is the widow of Frank Harvey, who was a contractor and builder at Boston, putting up many buildings in the Back Bay and other parts of that city, and Mrs. Harvey continued his business successfully for many years after his death. Anna A. lives at Freeville, New York, near Ithaca, widow of Frank Mitchell, who was a farmer. Abbie J. died at Wichita, Kansas, and her husband, John Maynard, a liveryman, died at Lowell, Massachusetts. The fifth in the family is George Henry. Frances Ivy is the wife of Amassa J. Drake, a retired mason contractor, their home being at Roseburg, Oregon. Emma, the youngest, is the wife of Charles E. Teague, who for many years was a shoe merchant and is now truant officer at Peabody, Massachusetts.

George Henry Taylor acquired his early education in the public schools of Ithaca, New York, also attended the New Ipswich Academy in New Hampshire, and as a young man learned telegraphy when that art was in its infancy. He was a telegraph operator until the Civil war broke out. October 5, 1861, he enlisted in the Seventy-sixth New York Infantry, and went into camp at Albany as first sergeant. Soon afterward he was taken ill with pneumonia and was invalided home. In the meantime his company was assigned to the Third New York Artillery, and when he rejoined the command in the summer of 1862 the battery was at Newbern, North Carolina. He at once received appointment as corporal and was on duty at Hatteras Island and Roanoke Island, but in the fall of 1863 was sent to Virginia. About that time he re-enlisted for three years or the duration of the war. Mr. Taylor was a participant in the great campaign waged by General Grant, beginning in the spring of 1864 at Petersburg, and was in the fighting there and other points around Richmond. April 3, 1865, he was with the troops that entered Richmond six days before the surrender of Lee. He received several promotions, and was mustered out June 26, 1865, at Richmond, as second lieutenant of his battery. For about a year after the war he traveled through the West, remaining for some time at Detroit and St. Louis, and then returned to Ithaca, New York, and was in business as a merchant tailor there until 1881.

Mr. Taylor reached Helena, Montana, in April, 1881, traveling by stage from Dillon to Helena. For a time he was in business as a painting contractor, and then took up the practice of dentistry. For several years he was associated with Doctor Blake and Doctor Wait. In 1891 he opened an office of his own, and has been practicing that profession ever since. He had an interesting experience as a dentist engaged in both army and private practice at Fort Benton from 1893 to 1906, visiting also Fort Assinniboine every other month. One of his patients then stationed at Montana forts was a young lieutenant named Pershing, now known to fame as General Pershing. Since 1906 Doctor Taylor has lived at Helena, and is still in practice, with offices in the Horsky Block.

He has long been prominent in the Grand Army of the Republic, is assistant adjutant and quartermaster general of the Department of Montana, and for several years has been a member of the National Council of the Grand Army of the Republic. He cast his first presidential vote for Abraham Lincoln, and is now classified as an independent republican. He is a past noble grand of Montana Lodge, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and is a member of the Helena Commercial Club.

Mr. Taylor resides in the Horsky Block. March 14, 1877, at Ithaca, New York, he married Miss Ellen Hull, who was born in New York City. Doctor Taylor has one daughter, Margaret N., a graduate of the Helena High School, now the wife of W. S. Towner, an attorney at Fort Benton. They have five children, the eldest, George Crosby Towner, is in the junior class of the Naval Academy at Annapolis. The other children are John W., Margaret Natalie, Welling Samuel and I. Crosby. Mrs. Ellen Taylor is a prominent member of the Woman's Relief Corps Wadsworth No. 1, of which she is a past president, and for several years has held the office of treasurer of the corps, and is a past department president of the Woman's Relief Corps, Department of Montana.

JOHN H. RUTTER. To the present postmaster of Hinsdale, John H. Rutter, belongs the distinction of being one of the real pioneers of this section of Valley County. He arrived in this vicinity in 1885 with a pack outfit and in company with Charley Rasor, now of Lewistown, Montana, both on a voyage of exploration of this Hinsdale region for a cattle range. Mr. Rutter represented and was working for the Nyobrara Cattle Company, owned by E. L. Newman, one of the early mining men of Montana, and Mr. Rasor was in the employ of the Lee Scott Cattle Company. The men had each two saddle horses and two pack horses, and they struck the deep coulee running into the Milk River near Hinsdale. Mr. Rutter continued with the Nyobrara Cattle Company until the spring of 1889.

At that time he went into the service of the Home Land and Cattle Company, the largest cow outfit ever located in the state and owned by the Niederinhaus Brothers of St. Louis, which had established its ranch seven miles north of where Hinsdale is now located, and during the seven years he remained with that company Mr. Rutter was their range foreman. In the spring of 1897 he took a bunch of horses to the Dakotas for himself, and after disposing of them returned to this region and filed on a homestead four miles east of Hinsdale. This act made him a permanent resident of this locality, and he lived on his claim two years before he married. His pioneer dwelling, a log house and at the time it was erected the largest one of its kind in this country, still stands and is sheltering his tenants. He engaged in the stock business, running both horses and cattle, his horses under the brand "7" on the right shoulder, and his cows under the "EA" brand on the left shoulder. He continued ranching and occupied his claim as a home until 1916, and was also interested in a horse ranch eighteen miles northeast of Hinsdale with S. E. Ruyle. He then established his home in Hinsdale, and since April, 1913, has served as the postmaster of the town.

Mr. Rutter has had Hinsdale as his postoffice ever since he has been in this country. The office was at first established 1½ miles east of its present location, and its name was given it by the railroad company. When the hamlet was moved to its present site all there was to move was the section house, and this building still stands and is being used as the home of the section foreman. Mr. Rutter purchased lots at the new townsite, on two of which he has built residences. He was one of the organizers and a director of the first bank to be established in the town, the First National Bank, organized in October, 1916. He was also one of the promoters in the organization and development of an irrigation plant in the valley just across from Hinsdale, and is the secretary and treasurer of the company, known as the Rock Creek Canal Company. It takes its water from Rock River, seven miles north of Hinsdale, and extends east to Lime Creek and waters 9,600 acres of valley lands and renders the region reliably productive.

Mr. Rutter came into Montana with the Nyobrara Company in 1884 from the State of Nebraska, but he is a native son of Indiana, born at Elkhart, December 13, 1858, a son of Henry and Mary (Haney) Rutter. His parents were both born in Virginia, the father in Wheeling, West Virginia, and the mother in Richmond. They met and were married in Wheeling, and a few years before the Civil war removed from there to Elkhart, Indiana. Henry Rutter clung to his southern ideas, and when the states divided he went with the South and enlisted in the Confederate army somewhere in Virginia, and lost his life in the service. The widow continued to maintain her home in Elkhart, and died there in 1896. She was the mother of five children: Bettie, who died in Elkhart, Indiana, unmarried; Fannie, who married Clem Powell and resides in Indianapolis, Indiana; David, of Detroit, Michigan; Lewis P., of Duluth, Minnesota; and John H., the Hinsdale postmaster.

John H. Rutter left his mother's home when but six years old and was brought to mature youth in the home of a cousin, Crockett McDonald, at Wellington, Missouri. He went with the McDonald family to Kansas and lived with them near Howard in that state until 1877, when he left his cousin's home and began an independent career in Texas. In Cook County of the Lone Star State he worked for Addington Brothers, and also served them on their Indian Territory ranch on Cow Creek. Railroad facilities in that region at that time were extremely inadequate, and the stock was driven from the Addington ranch in the Indian Territory to Whiteboro, Texas, for shipment.

In the fall of 1878 Mr. Rutter separated from the Addingtons and engaged with the firm of Hunter, Evans and Hunter, who had large beef contracts with the United States for supplying the Indians at Fort Sill and Fort Reno, these being the Cheyenne and Comanche Indians, and they held their herds close to the agency for killing. In October, 1879, he left the employ of this company and returned to Howard, Kansas, remaining during that winter with the McDonald family, and in the spring of 1880 went on to Fort Elliott, Texas, and secured employment with the "LXBar," and started from their ranch just above old Dobe Walls for Hunnewell, Kansas, with a herd of beef over the Monument Hill Trail. On reaching the Cimarron River crossing he found a southern Texas trail herd going to Nebland, and joining this outfit Mr. Rutter reached the Pine Ridge Agency in South Dakota. When the herd was delivered to the Government there in the following November Mr. Rutter started with a four mule team from Pine Ridge Agency to Deadwood, South Dakota, and he remained in that mining camp during the winter, and in the spring went to Running Water, Nebraska, and entered the service of the Nyobrara Cattle Company, with whom he later on came to Montana.

The school days of Mr. Rutter were none too numerous and somewhat scattered. He was a pupil in the schools of Wellington, Kansas, and during a period of four years attended school at Howard, Kansas, this ending his educational career in a school room, and whatever knowledge he has gained since has come to him through the channels of experience. He began his career in politics when he cast his first presidential vote for Grover Cleveland at Stacy, Montana. He has maintained national allegiance to the democratic party since that time, and is classed as a rock-ribbed democrat. His first official service was in 1894-95, when he was the deputy sheriff for Harry Cosner, and in 1898, 1899, 1910 and 1911 he was the deputy for Sheriff Small, Mr. Rutter having been defeated for the office of sheriff in the latter year. He was named as the postmaster of Hinsdale in 1913, on the 6th of March, taking the office as the successor of Julius Waber April 21, 1913. He was reappointed in September, 1918. The only rural route out of the town is fifty-four miles long, it supplying five different country offices and serves a population of 1,200 people.

In Glasgow, Montana, January 23, 1899, Mr. Rutter was married to Miss Elsie M. Clough, who was at that time serving as the county superintendent of schools of Valley County. Mrs. Rutter was born at Fond du Lac, Wisconsin, April 12, 1875, a daughter of J. H. and Margaret (Kinney) Clough. The father, who was a native of Maine, learned the carpenter's trade and became a bridge contractor on the Northern Pacific Railroad when it was being built, and later filled the same position with the building of the Great Northern. He finally located at Seattle, Washington, and at the time of his death there he was a wharf contractor. Mrs. Clough is a resident of Glasgow, Montana, and the mother of three children, Mrs. J. L. Dillard, of Wolf Point, Montana, Mrs. Rutter, and Fred G. Clough, of Butte, Montana. The following children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Rutter: Lewis H., a student in the State Agricultural College at Bozeman; Elsie V., a teacher in the Valley County schools; and Marjorie L., a high school student in Hinsdale. The two older children finished their high school training in Sacred Heart Academy at Fargo, North Dakota.

Mr. Rutter has attained a high degree in Masonry. He is a past master of Kyle Lodge No. 96, of Hinsdale, and belongs to Chapter No. 17 at Glasgow, and to Glasgow Commandery No. 13. He also belongs to Algeria Temple and the Helena Shrine.

James Chase Dow. It is oftentimes considered by those in the habit of superficial thinking that the history of so-called great men only is worthy of preservation, and that little merit exists among the masses to call forth the praise of the historian or the appreciation of mankind. A greater mistake was never made. No man is great in all things and few are great in many things. Many by lucky stroke achieve lasting fame who before that had no reputation beyond their immediate neighborhoods. It is not a history of the lucky stroke that benefits humanity most, but the long study and effort which made the lucky stroke possible. It is the preliminary work, the method, that serves as a guide for others. Among the citizens of Montana who have achieved success along steady lines of action is James C. Dow, of Great Falls, a man whose character is above reproach and who richly merits the confidence and esteem which are freely accorded him, for he has taken a deep interest in the welfare and development of the locality, always standing ready to do his full share in the work of progress.

James Chase Dow was born in Faribault, Minsota, on the 22d of September, 1877, and is the son of James J. and Myra A. (Brown) Dow. Mr. Dow's paternal grandfather, James Chase Dow, was for many years a missionary to India. In 1848, when his son, James J., was six weeks old, he returned to the United States and settled in Maine. Later he moved to a farm in South Dakota, where he remained for a time, but eventually came to St. Charles, Minnesota, where he spent the remainder of his days and died.

James J. Dow was, as might be inferred from the preceding paragraph, a native of India, having been born in Midnepore on February 15, 1848. Brought to the United States in infancy, he received a common school education, but when fifteen years of age he enlisted in defense of the Union during the Civil war, joining Company F, Second Maine Regiment of Cavalry, with which he served until the close of the great struggle, taking part in all the battles, skirmishes, campaigns and marches in which his regiment had a share. Of the 100 men on the original roll of his company, three were killed in battle and forty-nine died of disease. After being discharged from military service Mr. Dow went to Minnesota, and became a student in Carlton College at Northfield, where he and his wife were the sole members of the first graduating class from that institution in 1873. He then became principal of the schools at Austin, Minnesota, filling that position two years, and then was appointed superintendent of the Minnesota State School for the Blind at Faribault, where he still remains. Mr. Dow has had a most remarkable record as head of this great school, which has become recognized as one of the leading schools of its kind in the country. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, in which he has attained the higher degrees, and is also a member of the Mystic Shrine at St. Paul, Minnesota. His religious membership is with the Congregational Church, of which he has served as clerk for a number of years. Politically he is independent. Mrs. Myra Dow was born in Massachusetts in 1850 and died in 1909. They became the parents of eight children, of which number three are living.

James Chase Dow received his elementary education in th public schools and then became a student of the University of Minnesota, where he was graduated from the department of electrical engineering in 1900. His first active work after leaving school was with the Twin City Rapid Transit Railway Company, with whom he remained for one year. On July 1, 1901, Mr. Dow came to Helena, Montana, and entered the employ of the Missouri River Power Company and the Helena Power Transmission Company, being employed up to July 1, 1906, in constructing the substations and steam plant in Butte. During the following year he was in the employ of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company at Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. He then went to Mankato, Minnesota, where for a year he was connected with the Mankato Electric Company and others. He then returned to Butte, Montana, and was with the Missouri River Power Company until 1910, when he joined the Great Falls Power Company and the Montana Power Company, as operating engineer of the northern division, in which capacity he is still serving. He sustains most important relations to the company, much of the success of its operation depending upon his judgment and management. Thoroughly practical and conversant with every phase and detail of electrical equipment, he has demonstrated in an unmistakable manner his competency to take charge of large undertakings in his line and he has gained the entire confidence of his associates.

On July 18, 1905, Mr. Dow was married to Lillian T. Howard, a native of St. Albans, Vermont. Fraternally he is a member of Euclid Lodge No. 58, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons; Great Falls Chapter No. 9, Royal Arch Masons; Black Eagle Commandery No. 8, Knights Templar; Great Falls Consistory (thirty-second degree), Scottish Rite Masons; and Algeria Temple, Ancient Arabic Order Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, at Helena. He is also a member of the Commercial Club, the Rotary Club and the American Institute of Electrical Engineers. Politically he is independent, while his religious membership is with the Congregational Church. His life work has been of unceasing industry, and the systematic methods which he has followed have resulted not only in success in his profession but also in the increased respect and esteem of all who know him and are familiar with his accomplishments.

Roscoe V. Tucker is one of the men of Malta who is proving his worth as a man by rendering his community service that is reliable and sympathetic, and his undertaking establishment is one recognized as making the most reasonable of charges to its patrons in their time of great bereavement. He has served the county as coroner, and has proved himself dependable in every way, and worthy the confidence of his fellow citizens.

Roscoe V. Tucker was born at Westfield, Chautauqua County, New York, April 22, 1854, a son of Elisha Tucker, and grandson of Samuel Tucker. Samuel Tucker was born at Collins, Erie County, New York, and was one in a family of eleven children. All of his mature years were spent in farming until increasing infirmities led him to retire. His death occurred in Chautauqua County, New York, when he was eighty-five years old. He was the father of four children, namely: Anna, who married Velorus Lake; Elisha W., who is mentioned at length below; Rosetta, who married Austin Culver; and Eliza, who married Philander Olds, a soldier in the Union army and who died in the service.

Elisha W. Tucker was born at Collins, Erie County, New York, in December, 1829, and lived in that state, where he was a farmer, until 1889, in that year coming to Montana and identifying himself with Malta. He took a homestead on what is now the townsite of Malta, and the old Malta House, erected by him, was his hotel and he conducted it in partnership with his son. Mr. Tucker was also interested in merchandising, was engaged in a livery business, and was a sheep raiser, generally doing business under the name of E. W. Tucker and Son, although he was for a time associated with R. W. Garland under the name of Tucker and Garland. He continued to be actively engaged in business until he was seventy-one years of age. His death occurred in January, 1901, and his remains were taken back to his old home and laid beside those of his wife, who had died in 1885.

In 1852 Elisha W. Tucker was married to Sarah A. Lombard, a daughter of Lucius Lombard, born in Chautauqua County, New York. Lucius Lombard was also a native of New York State, who went into Chautauqua County while it was still unsettled and still mainly a wilderness. He married Betsy Shove, and Mrs. Tucker was one in a family of two sons and two daughters. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Elisha W. Tucker were as follows: Roscoe V., who was the elder; and Fluvilla, who married Ed Hughes and is a resident of Chautauqua County, New York.

William J. Lang

As a usual thing Elisha W. Tucker voted the republican ticket, although now and then supported democratic candidates if he believed them to be better fitted for the office in question. He was not identified with any church, but was reared in a Quaker home. While his education was not uncommon, he was an excellent and forceful conversationalist, and he was capable of taking an intelligent part in a discussion upon almost any subject. Politics and fraternities never interested him. He was a man below medium height and weight, but such was the strength of his personality that he always impressed people as a man of importance. Big of heart and brain, he did much good in the world, always cheerfully rendering a service whenever the opportunity offered, but doing it quietly and as an individual, rather than as a member of some publicity-seeking committee. He died as he had lived, a kindly, upright and honorable man, a tender husband, a watchful father, liberal patron, temperate adviser, and stainless gentleman.

Roscoe V. Tucker did not pursue his studies beyond the confines of the common schools, and as he grew to manhood he learned farming. Both in New York and later in Montana he was associated in business with his father, and the tie between them was very close. As his father's partner he was engaged in the hotel and livery business at Malta, and then he branched out into ranching and sheepraising, and is still interested in the latter. His ranch of 840 acres is on Beaver Creek, 2½ miles south of Bowdoin, Montana. This is chiefly a hay farm and is under a private irrigation system.

About the time he came to Montana Mr. Tucker commenced rendering services as an undertaker, not then as a professional, but only to assist his fellow citizens in rendering a decent burial to their relatives. Finding that he was fitted by temperament and sympathies for the work, he finally decided to adopt it as his chief line of business, and in 1908 went into it in a professional manner at Malta. His establishment is one of the best equipped in Phillips County, and he is often called upon by those who live at a distance, as well as those in his immediate neighborhood. Mr. Tucker is also an auctioneer of reputation, and in partnership with Mr. Cauffman, under the firm name of Tucker and Cauffman, is widely known as unusually able and efficient, and he and Mr. Cauffman serve the people in this capacity throughout a radius of fifty miles whenever they have anything to sell.

Mr. Tucker was elected coroner of Phillips County when it was created, and is still holding that office. He has always taken a most aggressive part in the promotion of improvements for the city and county, and has led every procession as marshal which has been organized to celebrate the different events since he came to Malta with the exception of one. In 1876 he cast his first presidential vote, giving it to Rutherford B. Hayes, and ever since then has voted the republican ticket.

On October 14, 1875, Mr. Tucker was married in Chautauqua County, New York, to Miss Jennie Hungerford, a daughter of Parkes Hungerford, and she died in 1880, without issue. On August 10, 1883, Mr. Tucker was married to Miss Julia Walcott, a daughter of Merritt and Margaretta (Dewey) Walcott. Mrs. Tucker was born in Chautauqua County, New York, February 15, 1865, and was the third of six children born to her parents, namely: Louella, who is the widow of Adelbert Anderson, of Chautauqua County; Ledter, who is also a resident of Chautauqua County; Mrs. Tucker, who resides at Malta; Dewey, who lives at Strawberry Point, Iowa; Carrie, who is the wife of Merritt Gifford, of Chautauqua County; and Chauncey, who is a resident of Jamestown, New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Tucker became the parents of the following children: Mabel, who is a trained nurse connected with Saint Peter's Hospital, Helena, Montana, was bookkeeper for the Malta Mercantile Company for twelve years, and had been in the postoffice at Malta as clerk, leaving that to form a partnership with her sister under the caption of Tucker Sisters. They handled ladies' furnishing goods until Miss Mabel went with the Malta Mercantile Company. When this country went into the World war she left her excellent position, went to Boseman and took a course in training with the intention of going overseas as a Red Cross nurse, but the signing of the armistice rendering this unnecessary, she entered Saint Peter's Hospital so as to complete her training. Grace, the second child of Mr. and Mrs. Tucker, was in the post office at Malta, and also in the mercantile business with her sister Mabel. She then took a business course at Great Falls, Montana, following which she was employed as a clerk in the county clerk and recorder's office at Glasgow, Montana. Still later she was married to E. O. Cauffman, proprietor of the Fifth Avenue Grocery at Malta.

William G. Lang. The Lang family is one of the oldest in eastern Montana, and its members have always been among those who upheld law and order and did their part in developing their communities. This family was founded in this region by Gregor Lang, father of William G. Lang of Baker, whose name heads this review. He was a Scotchman by birth, who later went to Ireland, and from there came to the United States as manager for the ranch and holdings of the Pender Cattle Company. The site of the ranch was selected by Mr. Lang, and he established his headquarters on the Little Missouri River, twelve miles east of the Montana line and about thirty-five miles south of Medora, North Dakota. It may be remembered that Medora was only seven miles north of the Roosevelt ranch, and was the trading and shipping point of Colonel Theodore Roosevelt during the days in his young manhood, when he was engaged in ranching in the northwest.

Gregor Lang had nothing to do in establishing his claim to the Pender ranch site except to "squat" upon the unsurveyed public domain. His grazing field lay on both sides of the Little Missouri River. There he erected a log cabin for his headquarters, and about this primitive building cling many sacred memories because of the warm friendship he there enjoyed with the Nation's hero, Theodore Roosevelt, and his own kindly communion with his neighbors. Locating there in 1883, he entered upon an experience of many hardships, carrying on the work of ranch development for Sir John Pender, breeding ranch cattle and marketing the product successfully until the disastrous winter of 1886-7, when only about 300 head of cattle survived until the spring out of a herd of about 2,000. This so discouraged the English owners that they decided to abandon their undertaking, and were ready to dispose of the remnant of their cattle. Mr. Lang, having established himself in the country and holding firmly to his faith in its possibilities, was ready to buy. He chose to remain on the site of the ranch he had selected for the English company, and the buildings and other improvements were included in the property he purchased. He changed the old Scotch Thistle band of the original company to "JXL," and his numerous horses bore this same brand. As time went on he gave more and more attention to horses, and he became conspicuous as a stockman and proprietor of the Lang ranch. His range covered all the country he could occupy, for he died before this part of the state was surveyed, and no settlers had come in to dispute his domain. When the land was thrown open his widow entered the tract upon which the ranch improvement stood as her homestead, and proved up her title, and this formed the nucleus of the extensive holdings of their son William G. Lang. Gregor Lang and his wife established a store on the ranch and the post office of "Yule" was opened in October, 1890. The store was conducted until the fall of 1908, when the coming of the Chicago, Milwaukee & Saint Paul Railroad brought about the establishment of Baker and the store was moved to the point.

Gregor Lang was born in a Scotch home, near Glasgow, and it is believed that Dumbarton was his native heath. He grew up on the banks of the Clyde and received as did his brothers and sisters, a liberal education. His father was a highly educated man of many accomplishments, and proprietor of cloth mills. Reverses took from his family some of the wealth he had accumulated, but they still retained the comforts and some of the luxuries to which they were accustomed. Gregor Lang was the youngest of a family of sixteen children, and was given the opportunity of completing his education in a college. He was born July 2, 1834, and so was twenty-eight years of age when in 1862 he took his young wife with him to Ireland and located at Barn Hill and later resided at Clonsilla, Cadublin, only seven miles from Dublin. There he became manager of a distillery, and was so engaged when his services were secured by the Pender interests. When he was a lad Sir John Pender served an apprenticeship in one of the factories owned by the father of Gregor Lang, and during their after lives Sir John Pender and Gregor Lang were warm friends. During the five years that Gregor Lang was manager for Sir John Pender's ranch, the latter did not visit it, but his son James did so frequently, taking an inventory of the stock and looking into the conditions.

When Gregor Lang first located on his ranch a few buffalo remained on the prairie along the Little Missouri River, but he seldom hunted them himself. He liked the outdoor life, and was a rugged, healthy man, short of stature, quick and active, although weighing about 180 pounds. His first papers of citizenship were taken out at Missoula, Montana, and his final ones at Bismarck, North Dakota. He became a strong democrat, and remained an adherent of that party all of his life. Very intelligent, he liked politics and kept himself well posted on current events, and was recognized as the best read man in this region. Elected commissioner of Billings County, North Dakota, he held that office for several years, becoming chairman of the board, and resigned just prior to making a visit back to his old home. As long as he lived Gregor Lang held his warm friendship with Theodore Roosevelt as one of his most precious possessions, and loved to recall the days when Colonel Roosevelt would visit the Lang ranch, and there, among Mr. Lang's books and papers, the two men of high ideals and profound insight into human nature would discuss politics and other subjects. Such an attachment grew up between the two that whenever Mr. Roosevelt came back into this region on hunting trips he never failed to visit the Lang ranch and renew his friendship with his old friends.

Gregor Lang married on July 1, 1862, Janet Tait Huggin, a daughter of a William Huggin, a contractor and builder of Jedburg, Scotland. She was born December 9, 1838. It was while on a visit to Scotland that Mr. Lang passed away in March, 1900. His widow remained on the ranch, during this visit, but in December, 1909, removed to Baker, Montana, where she died on August 23, 1915. Mrs. Lang's father was one of the well-to-do class, and his children were all well educated. Mrs. Lang proved her efficiency by taking up the responsibilities her husband's death had created, and soon made her influence felt all over the neighborhood. She was a woman of unusually strong character, and under her decided rule the ranch, store and postoffice flourished, and she increased the family's prosperity in a marked degree. She was a believer in the orthodox Christian religion, but could not agree with many things tolerated by the churches, which seemed abuses to her. Although she was a member of the Church of Ireland while residing in that country she did not connect herself with any religious organization after locating in this country. Both she and Mr. Lang agreed in spiritual matters and both conducted themselves with a freedom and sincerity most marked among their associates. The children born to Gregor and Janet Lang were as follows: Sophia, who is the wife of David F. Wishart, of Edinburg, Scotland, where she has reared her own family; Lincoln A., who lives at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, represents a Chicago concern located in that city, and is an inventor of some note; and William G., who is the youngest.

William G. Lang was born near the City of Dublin on October 30, 1878. He was about five and one-half years old when brought to the United States by his mother to join his father on the ranch along the Little Missouri River, where he was reared. His educational training was carried on by private teachers and in an agricultural college at Bozeman, Montana. After the demise of his father he assisted his mother in the management of the ranch and store, and later entered into the cattle business, developing into a breeder and grower of fine registered stock of the Hereford strain, which bear the old "JXL" brand, as do the Percheron horses he also breeds. His ranch comprises 8,000 acres of deeded and leased land, the greater portion of which belonged to the property conducted by his excellent mother. Mr. Lang still continues to operate his ranch, but sold the store in 1917. He was the first to buy a lot for a business site at Baker, and he became one of the builders of the village, of which he became a resident in December, 1908. On December 15, 1908, he opened his store for business.

When Mr. Lang came to Baker it was but a cluster of houses, and was located in Custer County. He soon realized the need of the creation of a new county, with Baker as the county seat. A natural organizer, he soon interested others in the movement to secure the organization of Fallon County, and then to make Baker the center of government for the new county. This precipitated two fights. Some who wanted the new county were not willing that Baker should be given the county seat. The usual rival claims of other communities for the honor developed, necessitating much labor to bring about an equitable and satisfactory adjustment. Baker, of course, was the logical site for the county capital, but it took time and hard work to bring about the proper action, and Mr. Lang and his associates deserve much credit for what they accomplished. With the establishment of Fallon County and the final selection of Baker as its capital the little village took on a period of expansion that resulted in a remarkable growth, and in all of it Mr. Lang bore a constructive part.

He was one of the founders of the Baker State Bank, the first one in the city, and of the First National Bank at Ismay, remaining vice president and a director of the first named institution ever since its organization, and a member of the official board of the latter for some time, or until it had passed the formative period and was firmly grounded in public confidence.

Mrs. J. Lang

Gregor Lang

Like his father, he is a democrat, and cast his first presidential vote for William Jennings Bryan, a fact that gives him but little pleasure at present for he is a sound money man and holds to none of the radical doctrines of the day. When his country or community need his services he lays aside politics, remembering only that he is an American of the highest type of citizenship, and yields to no man in his loyalty to both. In religious matters he follows in the belief of his parents, and has not joined any church organization. The Elks hold his membership, but aside from that he belongs to no lodge. Mr. Lang has not married.

The review of the history of the Lang family is an interesting one, and should be included in every record of this community, for these people have played so important a part in the changing of conditions of the neighborhood that no true account could be given of the state without due credit being paid to them. Mr. Lang has many of the characteristics of both of his parents, and his connection with any enterprise gives it stability from the start, for his fellow citizens know that he will not take up anything unless he is certain that the cause is a just and honorable one, and that there is a reasonable certainty of ultimate success. He has a tenacity of purpose that has carried him through in his undertakings, which, combined with his natural ability, long and varied experience and knowledge of human nature make him a desirable addition to the community which he assisted in developing and in which he and his name are held in such high esteem.

Otto M. Christinson. In reviewing the lives of the men of foreign birth who have come to the United States it oftentimes appears as though they are possessed of unusual capabilities to be able to make such a success of their undertaking, but perhaps some of this progress is due to the fact that they work with a definite object in view and do not relax their efforts, but keep on striving to attain to something a little better. Otto M. Christinson, senior member of the Christinson Land Company of Glasgow, is one of these men, and because, through his own efforts, he has risen from a poor emigrant to a position of wealth and responsibilities his biography is instructive and illuminating.

Otto M. Christinson was born at Gandrup, Denmark, August 24, 1883, a son of Christ and Mary Christinson, and the third of their eleven children, nine of whom reached to mature years, namely: Christian and Alfred, who are still residing in Denmark; Otto, whose name heads this review; James, who is a resident of Moosejaw, Saskatchewan, Canada; Carl, Anton and Marius, who live in Denmark; Albertine, who is a resident of Minneapolis, Minnesota; and the ninth child is also residing in Denmark.

Growing up in his native place, Otto M. Christinson was sent to school for about four months annually until he was twelve years old, and this meagre training, supplemented with three short terms at the North Dakota Agricultural College at Fargo, North Dakota, comprise his educational advantages. The economic necessities of the family made it obligatory for him to begin working as a farm hand when only eight years old, and he was entirely self-supporting from the time he was twelve. By the time he was twenty he saw that there was no adequate opening for him, and so he decided to seek better opportunities in the United States. He knew nothing of the language and had no money, but with the enthusiasm and courage of youth he dared all, borrowed sufficient money to pay for his passage on board the Helling Olaf, bound from Copenhagen, Denmark, for New York City, and after a voyage of two weeks landed without mishap.

It was his intention to join a sister of his mother's, a Mrs. Nelson, of Brainard, Minnesota, but while waiting for his relatives in the station at Brainard he was robbed of what little money he had left, and had it not been for the kindness of a merchant who found the poor lad wandering about the city, hungry and discouraged, his future history might have been somewhat different. The generous act of this merchant, who fed him and sent him the twenty miles to his aunt, gave him such a favorable impression of the people of his new land that his courage revived, and he faced the future bravely.

Almost immediately he secured a position with a country merchant at Milac Lake, about twenty-five miles from Brainard, at house painting, for which he received $20 per month, and remained with him for three months, earning his first American money. For the subsequent three or four years he divided his time, working in the summers in the sawmills, in the winter in the lumber woods of Minnesota, and in the harvest months, in North Dakota. He then engaged for steady farm work in Cavalier County, North Dakota, and during the five years he was thus employed his pay ranged from $25 to $35 a month. After paying back the money he had borrowed to come to this country he sent for his brother, paid his way through agricultural college, and accumulated a little surplus, so that when he came to Montana, which he did in 1909, he had about $900.

Selecting Glasgow as his field of operation, Mr. Christinson looked things over, and then in the spring of 1910 he with John Miller opened a real-estate office. A year later this partnership was dissolved, and Mr. Christinson took E. M. Hill into the business, the firm operating under the name of the Christinson Land Company. The firm specialize on making loans on farm lands, but also write fire insurance. Mr. Christinson was first located in the frame building now occupied by the Nifty Tailors, and his next office was just across the street from his present one. In 1917 Messrs. Christinson and Hill bought the business of the Johnson Farm Loan Company and moved into their present quarters in the First National Bank Building. For three years the firm handled the Overland car at Glasgow, but otherwise have confined themselves to handling real estate, making loans and writing fire insurance.

Mr. Christinson is naturalized, becoming a citizen of the United States in 1912, and his first presidential vote was cast for William Howard Taft in that year, and he has continued firm in his support of republican principles ever since. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Fraternally he is a Mason and Odd Fellow, belonging to North Star Lodge, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, and to the Consistory and Shrine at Helena, Montana, and to Glasgow Lodge, Independent Order of Odd Fellows. During the late war Mr. Christinson belonged to the Council of Defense, was its chairman, and later was made fuel administrator for Valley County.

In 1910 Mr. Christinson was married to Miss Alma Kennedy, born in Ontario, Canada, in February, 1895, her father being of Irish birth, and she was the only child of her parents, both of whom are now deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Christinson have the following children: Aileen, James, Kenneth, Verne and Dorothy.

In every way Mr. Christinson has proved his worth as a man and a citizen, and set an example for industry and thrift all will do well to emulate. His upward progress has been steady, and made possible through his own exertions. He has been willing to endure much, work hard and save, and when an opportunity came for advancement he was ready to take it. It is such men as he who build up a community and bring about a stability of government, and too much credit cannot be accorded them.

Ort Irons, who has been identified with the community of Harlem since 1910, was born near Linesville, Pennsylvania, July 1, 1886, and his childhood days were spent on a farm. He is descended from an old Pennsylvania Quaker family. His father, George Irons, a grocer of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, is also a native of Pennsylvania, and a son of William Irons, who was numbered among the early pioneers of the old Keystone State. William Irons was born in New Jersey, and about the time of his marriage drove through with a team to Pennsylvania, settling near Linesville, where he was a farmer and later a house mover. He became the father of seven sons and seven daughters.

George Irons married Julia Sutliff, one of a family comprising three sons and four daughters of Chauncy Sutliff, a farmer. The only child of George and Julia Irons is their son Ort, the Harlem business man. In his political faith George Irons is a democrat, but his son does not follow in his political footsteps.

After completing a high school training at Linesville at the age of seventeen Ort Irons entered the business world for himself, spending the first year as a clerk in Hornell, New York, and following that a period in the moving picture business as a traveling showman. At about this juncture, in 1907, he came out to North Dakota and at Carrington in that state was engaged as a tenant farmer for three years. At the close of his three years' residence there, with two good crops and a poor one, his financial circumstances were about as they were when he entered the state. Coming on then to old Chouteau County, Montana, he secured a homestead nine miles northwest of Harlem. The only capital which he brought with him was the team which he drove through, and at first he supported himself by working out, using his team in breaking sod and hauling for homesteaders. His first home was a little shack 12 by 12 feet, where he and his wife spent the first three years of their Montana life, and although a crude affair it proved a reasonably comfortable dwelling. In contrast with the same period spent as a farmer in North Dakota, he found himself financially much better off, and with the profits from the sale of his claim he engaged in contract work, hauling bridge and building materials for the construction of bridges and houses.

In the fall of 1915 Mr. Irons removed to the Town of Harlem, where he has ever since been active in that line of work. He has also added thereto a hay, coal and ice business, and in the spring of 1920 became the owner of one of the livery barns of the town. With the passing years he had developed into a grading contractor, and at the present time is completing a contract for ditch work. He plans to take up the state highway work as a grader when the reclamation matter is submitted for bids.

In Linesville, Pennsylvania, February 23, 1908, Mr. Irons was married to Miss Olive Van Winkle, who was born near that town in February, 1886, a daughter of Samuel and Rachel (Rushmore) Van Winkle. The father of Samuel Van Winkle settled in that region of Pennsylvania when all was new and wild, long before railroad facilities were provided and before the development of public highways, when "going to mill" was done on horseback to the old water mills on the streams. Samuel and Rachel Van Winkle became the parents of four sons and five daughters, of whom Mrs. Irons was one of the younger. Mr. Van Winkle passed away in 1919, but his widow still survives and is a resident of Spartansburg, Pennsylvania.

In his political affiliations Mr. Irons votes for the candidate whom he judges best fitted for office, regardless of party lines, and his first presidential vote was given to Mr. Bryan.

Orrel H. Kronkright. A resident of Montana for a quarter of a century, Orrel H. Kronkright spent a number of years with some of the prominent livestock men and firms, but for the past eight years has been substantially identified with independent farming and ranching in Richland County, near Lambert. He is a former county commissioner, and one of the most widely known citizens of the county.

Mr. Kronkright was born in Keokuk County, Iowa, August 8, 1866. His father, George Kronkright, was born in Vermont in 1822 of North English ancestry. During his youth he acquired a liberal education, and in 1849 went to California by the overland route. He was with a party that had some remarkable experiences in crossing the continent. They followed the old Mormon trail, passing the spot where the Mountain Meadow massacre occurred. Their ox train was made up at Omaha. While crossing the desert through Utah they lost their horses by famine and thirst and after unutterable hardships and adventures they found their way on foot out of the desert and over the mountains to safety on the Pacific side. For a time while in California George Kronkright worked for wages of $16 a day, then became a placer miner, and altogether accumulated a modest fortune of about $5,000 during the three years he was in the West. He returned to the States by way of the Isthmus of Panama, came up the Mississippi River from New Orleans to the mouth of the DesMoines River, thence by boat to the City of DesMoines, and in 1852 became a resident of Keokuk County. He lived there and was a merchant at Centerville, but in 1878 moved to Kearney County, Nebraska. He was in Iowa during the Civil war and a member of the Home Guards when the Talley band of Confederate guerrillas raided that country. In 1895 he came on West to Montana and settled near Forsyth. He was drowned in the Yellowstone River in June, 1903. He never voted any political ticket except the republican. George Kronkright married Eliza Rogers, who was born just south of Indianapolis, Indiana, a daughter of Jud Rogers. She died at Portland, Oregon, in October, 1918, at the age of seventy-nine. Her children were Mrs. Azora Leinhart, of Oniel, Nebraska; Orrel H.; May, wife of Charles Straw, of Portland, Oregon; and Bird, of Rosebud, Montana.

Orrel H. Kronkright was twelve years of age when his parents moved out to Nebraska, and he grew up in the country district of Kearney County and finished a common school education. He took up the burdens of life for himself as a Kearney County farmer, but for two years lived near Camp Clark above Fort Sidney. Then in January, 1895, he came to Montana, his first location being in the Yellowstone Valley just east of Forsyth. For seven years he was employed by several of the big cattle or sheep concerns of that locality. Among his employers were Charles Davis, the old time sheriff of Rosebud County, P. B. Moss of Billings, the "FUF" horse outfit. In 1903 he moved 1,000 head of cattle for A. D. Howard to Oswego, and remained in that locality for six years.

Mr. Kronkright then came over into Richland County, and at Mewlon was engaged in the hotel and livery business from 1909 to 1912. He then took his homestead near Lambert, and for the past eight years has been one of the substantial developers of that locality. It was only when he moved to a homestead that he established a home of his own and lived under his own roof. His half section has become substantially improved with a home, splendid barn and 190 acres have been brought under cultivation. He has put in eight crops, and in two seasons his seed was hardly returned, but others years have struck a favorable balance in his favor. The rotating of crops and summer fallowing the land, planting corn after spring plowing, are methods approved by his experience. Summer fallowing he especially advocates for this semi-arid region. In 1912, after spring breaking, he had a wheat yield of 30 bushels to the acre and 23 bushels of flax. The growing of corn has proved not unsatisfactory. "Less land, better farmed," is the philosophy of agriculture he has derived from his experience, and that rule is applicable to other states as well as to Montana.

As a home builder and farm developer Mr. Kronkright has exercised his chief privileges as a citizen, but not without a keen interest in other local affairs. He has served as a member of the School District Board and in 1914 was elected county commissioner to succeed W. B. Gibbs. His colleagues on the board were Frank Hardy and John Bowden, and the board was chiefly concerned with the routine administration of county affairs. After one term of two years Mr. Kronkright was satisfied to return the responsibilities of office over to his successor. Politically he is a democrat, having first supported Grover Cleveland, voted for Mr. Bryan twice, helped elect Colonel Roosevelt in 1904 and Mr. Taft in 1908 and gave two successive votes to Woodrow Wilson.

August 12, 1887, in Kearney County, Nebraska, Mr. Kronkright married Miss Nettie Hubbard, and they have shared each other's home and fortunes for over thirty years. She was born in Cass County, Nebraska, a daughter of Delos W. and Eva (Todd) Hubbard, her father a native of Pennsylvania and her mother of New York. Delos Hubbard was a Union soldier with a Wisconsin regiment for four years, at first under Grant, and was with Sherman from Atlanta to the Sea. He spent his active career as a farmer and since 1898 has been a resident of Montana, his home being at Poplar. He is a stanch republican, and is a great reader and believer in the teachings of the Bible, though not identified with any church. Delos Hubbard and wife had the following children: Harry, of Circle, Montana; Arthur, of Poplar; Mrs. Kronkright; Leonard, of Richey, Montana; Verner, of Wolf Point; Charles, a garage man of Richey; Edward, a farmer at Richey. Mr. and Mrs. Kronkright have reared a family of children several of whom have gone into homes and occupations of their own. They are: Leona, wife of James Montgomery, of Poplar, Montana; Mabel D., wife of Charles Darling, of Belton; George, a resident of Belton; Edna, wife of Wilfred Bell, of Lambert; Sylvester, of Belton; while Verna, Effie, Nettie and Pearl still live in the parental home.

WILLIAM F. JACOBS. Montana is the state of opportunity for the capable, energetic and industrious man who seeks an outlet for his abilities and is not afraid of hard work. William F. Jacobs is one of the successful men of Harlowton who has secured profitable results from his endeavors, for they have been directed intelligently, and he has saved his money and invested it wisely. At present he is not only conducting a flourishing meat market at Harlowton, but owns and operates a fine ranch one mile from the city limits.

William F. Jacobs was born at Salisbury, Missouri, May 12, 1890, a son of Henry and Barbara Jacobs, the former of whom was born in the Province of Tooning, Denmark. They had two children, namely: Harry R. and William F. The mother died when William F. was ten days of age. Henry Jacobs was a sugar maker by trade, and worked at his calling in London, England, when a young man, but came to the United States and spent some time in the cities of St. Louis, Kansas City and St. Joseph, Missouri, before he located permanently at Salisbury in 1883, engaging in the manufacture of sugar and the production of tobacco. For several terms he has been alderman of his city, and during the great war did his full part in making successful all of the different drives, and is a strong supporter of the administration, although independent in politics.

Losing his mother when he was only ten days old, William F. Jacobs was taken by his father's brother, William F. Jacobs, and grew up in his family. He first attended the parochial schools of the German Lutheran faith in Michigan until he was eight years old, and then became a pupil of the public schools. Subsequently he learned the butchering business with his uncle, and lived with him until 1908, when he came to Montana, locating permanently at Harlowton, where he was in the employ of A. C. Graves, extensively engaged in the cattle and butchering business. After remaining with him for some time Mr. Jacobs then engaged with other butchers, returning at last to Mr. Graves, with whom he remained until May, 1915, when he embarked in a butchering business of his own, and still conducts it, although in 1919 he bought a ranch one mile away from Harlowton, on which he is engaged in farming and cattle raising. Well known as a Mason, he belongs to Musselshell Lodge No. 69, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons; Harlowton Chapter No. 22, Royal Arch Masons; Palestine Commandery No. 18, Knights Templar; and Algeria Temple, Ancient Arabic Order Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, of Helena Montana. He is also a member of Lewiston Lodge No. 456, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. On September 15, 1918, Mr. Jacobs entered the Motor Transport Corps, United States, and was first located at Camp Boulder, Colorado, a training camp, from which he was transferred to Fort Logan, Colorado, where he became an instructor, and he received his honorable discharge on December 1, 1918. In politics Mr. Jacobs is a democrat, and, like his father, is a strong admirer of President Wilson.

As yet a man young in years, Mr. Jacobs is experienced in business life, for he entered at an early age upon the discharge of its responsibilities, and he is well fitted to carry on the work in which he is engaged. His market is one of the best equipped establishments of its kind in the city, and his connection with the cattle business enables him to offer a superior quality at prices more in accordance with present demands than those who are forced to depend entirely upon outside shipments. Occupied as he has been with his personal affairs, he has had little time or inclination for public matters, but when the occasion arises he will not be found lacking in his support of his city or county government, and will give it the same loyal service that he did his country when he felt it his duty to do so.

Charles F. Watkins, M. D. Numbered among the distinguished physicians and surgeons of Southern Montana, Dr. Charles F. Watkins is justly recognized as one of the most desirable citizens of Billings, where he is carrying on a general medical and surgical practice and acting as surgeon for the Great Northern and Burlington railroads, and the Great Western Sugar Company.

Doctor Watkins takes justifiable pride in his American ancestry. The records of the family run back to the very early days of the Colonies, when three Watkins brothers came from Wales. Their descendants in later years became pioneers of Ohio. Doctor Watkins was born at Mount Cory, Ohio, September 28, 1872, a son of Isaac Watkins, also a native of Ohio, having been born in that state in 1831. Until 1878 Isaac Watkins lived at Mount Cory, where he was engaged in farming, but in that year moved to Reed City, Michigan, where he died in 1894. A strong democrat, he received the appointment of postmaster of Ashton, Michigan, and was otherwise prominent in his party. Early converted to the faith of the Methodist Episcopal Church, he continued a zealous member and effective worker of it the remainder of his life. During the Civil war he proved his patriotism by enlisting for service, and was assigned to the Army of the Potomac. Isaac Watkins was united in marriage with Esther Corwin, born in Cayuga County, New York, in 1832, who survived him, dying at Reed City, Michigan, in 1916. Their children were as follows: George, who died at Mount Cory, Ohio, was a farmer and raiser of blooded stock; Alice, who is the wife of Uriah Moyer, a raiser of blooded stock, lives at Mount Cory, Ohio; Lucinda, who died at Ann Arbor, Michigan; John Wesley, a dealer in wholesale and retail meat products, who lives at Pontiac, Michigan; James Adelbert, a dealer in live stock and lumber, lives at Reed City, Michigan; Lillie who died at Reed City, Michigan; Flora, who is the wife of D. L. White, resides in Northern Michigan; and Doctor Watkins.

After attending the common and high schools of Reed City, Michigan, Charles F. Watkins entered the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor, from which he was graduated in 1901 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine, after having received a degree in chemistry in 1898 from the same institution. During his college career he was one of the University of Michigan premier baseball pitchers, and coached the baseball team four years. Doctor Watkins has made it a practice to attend clinics almost every year since his graduation for post graduate work, and in 1917 was made a Fellow of the American College of Surgeons. In 1901 he began practice in the Northern Pacific Hospital at Brainerd, Minnesota, where he remained for two years, specializing in surgery, and was then transferred to Missoula, Montana, continuing in the service of the Northern Pacific Railroad, being one of its first assistant surgeons for fourteen months. In 1904 he came to Billings, where he has since been engaged in practice, his offices being conveniently located in suite No. 217 Electric Building. Doctor Watkins for several years has been senior member of Doctors Watkins & Stripp, his associate being Dr. A. E. Stripp, and recently Dr. Louis W. Allard has been added to the firm.

Doctor Watkins owns his modern residence at 314 North Twenty-ninth Street. For years he has maintained an independent attitude with reference to politics, and during 1917-19 was a member of the City Council of Billings. Well known in Masonry, Doctor Watkins belongs to Ashlar Lodge No. 29, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, Billings Chapter No. 6, Royal Arch Masons, Aldemar Commandery No. 5, Knights Templar, and Zurah Temple, Ancient Arabic Order Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, of Minneapolis, Minnesota. He is also a member of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks Lodge No. 394, of Billings. His social connections are with the Billings Midland Club, the Billings Club, the Billings Golf and Country Club and the Rotary Club. Professionally he belongs to the Yellowstone County Medical Society, the Montana State Medical Society, the American Medical Association, and is valued in all of these organizations as a man of ability and sound training.

On May 8, 1906, Doctor Watkins was united in marriage at Billings to Sophie Bennighoff, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Bennighoff, both of whom are now deceased, and a niece of George Bennighoff, commonly called Uncle George, a prominent citizen of the state and owner of the Grand Hotel of Billings. Mrs. Watkins' father was manager of the Grand Hotel.

Harry S. Whitcomb. Both in spirit and in practice Harry S. Whitcomb has thoroughly identified himself with Montana citizenship and affairs during his fourteen years' residence in the state. He is active in a partnership agency of fire and life insurance at Malta, is a member of the Board of County Commissioners of Phillips County and in various other ways his name has been associated with the affairs of that locality.

Mr. Whitcomb was born at St. Paul, Minnesota, July 2, 1886. His grandfather, Ahia W. Whitcomb, was an early settler in Wisconsin from Pennsylvania, and became extensively interested in the lumber industry of that state, owning timber land and lumber mills at Big Falls. His family consisted of the following children: Timothy S.; Edward, of Arlington, Nebraska; and Charles, who became prominent in Montana, coming to the territory in 1886 and eventually acquiring extensive mining and milling properties at Whitcomb, a town named in his honor. He is now living at Helena.

Timothy S. Whitcomb was born at Edgerton, Wisconsin, and as a young man was employed in railway train service. In later years he came to Montana and conducted a store at Whitcomb, where his brother's mining interests were concentrated, and subsequently ran a stage line between Dodson and Zortman, with his home in Dodson. He died at Malta in January, 1910, at the age of fifty-three. His wife was Catherine L. McGuire, a daughter of Patrick and Belle (Murphy) McGuire. She has in recent years become a homesteader and farmer in Phillips County. Her children were: Harry S.; Charles L., of Phillipsburg, Montana; Grace L., wife of William Trout, of Dallas, Texas; and Grant T., who is associated with his mother on the farm in Phillips County.

Harry S. Whitcomb grew up in Milwaukee, spent one year in high school and a year in business college, and at the age of twenty, in 1906, came out to Montana. For several years he was at Whitcomb in Blaine County, and gained his business training in his uncle's milling properties at Whitcomb and Zortman. For a time he was office man for the Ruby Gulch Mining Company at Whitcomb, in charge of the books, and later had charge of the mills of the Ruby Gulch, the August at Landusky and the Beaver Creek property at Zortman. He continued active with the mining company until 1914, in which year he was elected county commissioner and has since had his home at Malta.

Mr. Whitcomb was elected for a four-year term and was re-elected to succeed himself in 1918 for a term of six years. For three years he was chairman of the board, and with Commissioner C. A. Ross and W. D. Miller constituted the first board of the county, upon which devolved the responsibility of organizing Phillips County, arranging for temporary quarters for the Government. Mr. Whitcomb was also instrumental in securing the location of the Carnegie Library at Malta. As a county official in addition to his private business he took every opportunity to aid the nation at the time of the war, serving as a member of the Council of Defense and was active in the Red Cross. He was on the committee to entertain the county's soldiers in giving them a rousing farewell when they started for the front. He also contributed in proportion to his means to the various financial campaigns.

Charles F. Watkins,
M. D., F. A. C. S.

As an insurance man Mr. Whitcomb is associated with William G. Schneider as district agent for the Guarantee Fund Life Association of Omaha. Their territory comprises the Counties of Richland, Valley, Roosevelt, Sheridan, Phillips and Blaine. During their first year, 1919, they placed about $800,000 worth of insurance. Mr. Whitcomb and Mr. Schneider are also engaged in a joint farm project, being alfalfa raisers in the Milk River Valley and grain farmers on the bench in Phillips County. Mr. Whitcomb is a stockholder in the Phillips County Abstract Company and in the Dodson Townsite Company, and is a member of the Milk River Oil & Gas Company, one of the earliest organizations to undertake leasing and prospecting for oil and gas in this section of the state.

At Fort Benton, Montana, Decembed 28, 1910, Mr. Whitcomb married Miss Florence Morrow. Mrs. Whitcomb is a native daughter of Montana, born at Fort Benton, where her father was an early settler and rancher. She was the fourth among the four sons and four daughters of Malcolm and Mary A. (Travis) Morrow. Her father, a native of Scotland, came to Montana from Denver, Colorado, and is still living at Fort Benton. Mrs. Whitcomb completed her education in the Montana Normal School at Dillon and spent seven years in teaching before her marriage. Mr. and Mrs. Whitcomb have three children: Florence E., Maxine M. and Harry Stewart.

Clarence W. Nelson. No one man of Saco has contributed more toward the development of the city and Phillips County than Clarence W. Nelson, who has been connected with practically every movement of merit in the neighborhood since his arrival here in 1898, and his work has always been of a constructive character. He was born in Waseca County, Minnesota, April 13, 1873, a son of Rezin and grandson of Rezin Nelson, and a member of one of the old established American families of English ancestry.

The elder Rezin Nelson, who was a lawyer, was born in Pennsylvania, and the first name of his wife was Eliza. They had three sons: Rezin, Jr.; Charles, who served in the heavy artillery during the war between the states; and Frank, who was the youngest.

Rezin Nelson, Jr., was born at Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, but was taken when a boy by his widowed mother to Fond du Lac, Wisconsin. When only seventeen years old he volunteered for service in the war between the states in the Thirty-second Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, but was released because of the claim of his mother for his help, and she tried to keep him at home. The lad, fired by patriotism, however, once more eluded her and again volunteered for service as a member of the First Minnesota Infantry from Fort Snelling, Minnesota. This time he was accepted and sent with his regiment to Vicksburg, Mississippi, and took part in that terrible campaign, which tried the souls of all the participants. After the expiration of his first enlistment he took a short furlough, veteranized, reenlisted and completed his career as a soldier as a member of the Army of the Potomac under General Grant. In spite of being in the service more than three years and participating in some of the hardest fighting, he was never wounded or captured, and was discharged as a sergeant. After the organization of the Grand Army of the Republic he identified himself with it.

Upon his return home Rezin Nelson engaged in farming near Waseca, and remained in this line of endeavor during the rest of his useful life. He discharged his share of the obligations of citizenship, and voted the republican ticket in national elections, but had no aspirations toward public honors. He was a Protestant in religious matters, although not a member of any church, and his life was such as to set an example worthy of emulation.

Rezin Nelson was married to Rhoda A. Sutlief, a daughter of Asa G. Sutlief, who went to Texas at a very early day, and was engaged there in the cattle industry. In 1854 Mr. Sutlief decided to move to Minnesota, and his two sons trailed his cattle from Texas to Waseca County, Minnesota, and there Asa G. Sutlief spent the remainder of his days. The family were the first white settlers in that county. Mr. and Mrs. Sutlief had the following children: Delancy, Byron, Milton and Mrs. Nelson. Rezin Nelson died in 1912, but his widow survives him and lives near Waseca, Minnesota. Their children were as follows: Lee B., who identified himself with the mercantile business of Birum-Nelson Company, Incorporated, of Saco, and died there in 1915; Rezin, Jr., who is engaged in a men's clothing business at Appleton, Minnesota; Clarence Walter, whose name heads this review; Roy, who is a farmer and stockman of Saco; Rex, who is a druggist of Forsyth, Montana; Earl, who is a farmer near Waseca, Minnesota; and Nellie B., who is the wife of A. A. Birum, of the firm of Birum-Nelson Company, Incorporated, of Saco, Montana.

Clarence W. Nelson remained in Waseca, Minnesota, until he was twenty-one years old, and acquired a liberal educational training in the public schools at Waseca and Faribault. He engaged in teaching school, developing into an excellent educator through further study at the Central High School of Faribault, Minnesota, and at times would teach a term or two, even after he had practically left the educational field, his last work in this line being done in Valley County, Montana.

Mr. Nelson came into Montana in 1898 and located at Saco, when it was still in Valley County. However, although he did not reach Montana until 1898 he had started out for the state when only seventeen, even buying his ticket, but was dissuaded by his parents, and turned his ticket back into the company. From childhood he had cherished an ambition to follow the example of his grandfather and those uncles of his who had driven the family herd on the long "hike" from the Lone Star State to the Gopher State.

At the time of his arrival at Saco Mr. Nelson found that his services were actually needed in the school, the third one to be established in Valley County, and, although he had other plans, he relinquished them for the moment and assumed charge of the school, of which for a time he was the only teacher. Later, in partnership with William H. Taylor, he bought the stock of merchandise owned by Samuel G. Moore, and the business was conducted under the name of C. W. Nelson & Company. In 1905 Mr. Nelson sold his store interests and organized the First Bank of Saco, in 1906, with a capital of $25,000, but the name was later changed to the Bank of C. W. Nelson & Company. In October, 1913, Mr. Nelson sold the bank to the Davidson-Ross-Heggie banking interests, and the First National Bank of Saco and the Bank of C. W. Nelson & Compnay were consolidated under the name of The First National Bank of Saco. Since this time he has devoted himself to handling real estate, stock and ranching. He proved up a homestead of 160 acres adjoining Saco, and on it his fine residence of the bungalow type is now standing.

Mr. Nelson identified himself with the political party of his father when he voted for William McKinley for the presidency in 1896, and continued to support republican candidates until 1912, when he followed the lead of Theodore Roosevelt into the progressive party, but in 1916 voted for Mr. Hughes. In 1899 Mr. Nelson was appointed postmaster of Saco, and served until relieved by Lee L. Minnick in 1914, a Wilson appointee. Mr. Nelson was an active factor in securing the incorporation of Saco, and has served on the Board of Education since the schools were graded.

He was made a Mason at Helena, Montana, and belongs to Saco Lodge No. 94, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, of which he is master; Helena Consistory, and Algeria Temple, Mystic Shrine, of Helena.

In January, 1904, Mr. Nelson was married at Missoula, Montana, to Miss Maysie L. Taylor, a daughter of William H. Taylor, a sketch of whom appears elsewhere in this work. Mrs. Nelson was born in Waseca County, Minnesota, December 9,, 1883, and educated in the public schools at Missoula, Montana. Mr. and Mrs. Nelson have the following children: Grace L., Earl W. and Clarence Lee.

During the late war Mr. Nelson was a member of the Phillips County Council of Defense, and his office was its headquarters, and in it all of its records were kept. As a member of the various committees he did yeoman service in assisting in putting all of the drives through, and bought most generously of all of the bonds and was one of the men of this locality who invested to the limit in "baby bonds."

The record of a man like Mr. Nelson is not only interesting, but it is instructive and illuminating, for it proves that good blood does tell and that American virtues and sterling traits of character are transmitted from father to son. Having the same environment for generations, it is but natural that men of the ancestry of Mr. Nelson are bound to develop into good, sound and dependable citizens and fine men, alive to the best interests of their community, and imbued with that larger sense of the responsibilities of patriotic duty that marks the American born.

Three Forks Mill and Elevator Company. At Three Forks, in the beautiful Valleys of the Gallatin, Madison and Jefferson Rivers that form the headwaters of the Missouri River, is located the Three Forks Flour Mill. This mill was completed in the year 1916 and was furnished throughout by the well known flour mill builders, The Wolf Company of Chambersburg, Pennsylvania. The milling plant is located on the Milwaukee Railroad and has in connection two large storage elevators for grain.

The Three Forks Valleys are surrounded at a distance by beautiful snow-capped mountains, while lying close in is the wonderful bench land wheat country, where the highest qualities of Marquis Spring and Hard Winter Turkey Wheat are grown. There are thousands of acres of this wheat land, and all within an easy hauling distance of Three Forks, and accessible by good improved highways.

The Three Forks Mill and Elevator Company is owned and operated by the Veach brothers—F. I. Veach and W. B. Veach—who came to Three Forks from Pennsylvania in 1918 to take charge of the milling plant. They have been in the milling business for a number of years, and their father and grandfather before them were also experts in the same line.

Judge J. K. Miller was an early traveler, a participant in pioneer activities and a pioneer lawyer in both California and Montana. For nearly thirty years his home has been in the Flathead Valley, and in recent years he has lived quietly at his home in Columbia Falls.

He was born near the historic Town of Vincennes on the Wabash River in Indiana, a son of John and Mary (Kennedy) Miller. His early opportunities in school were limited, and the sound scholarship of his mature career has been due to a lifelong habit of study, reasoning and observation. When he was four years of age he lost his mother and was reared by an older sister to the age of thirteen. He then left home and wandered far before he came to the beautiful Flathead country. He worked on farms in Michigan, in Michigan lumber woods, rafted timber down the Mississippi, and was a member of the Yellowstone Expedition under General Custer three years before the Custer massacre. In 1874 he was admitted to the bar at Glencoe, Minnesota, practiced law six years in that state, for two years was a lawyer in California, making a specialty of mining law, and next came to Montana and for seven years engaged in mining and law practice at Helena.

Judge Miller came to the Flathead country in 1891 and continued his professional work and other interests until about ten years ago, when he established his family home in beautiful Glacier Park, filing on a homestead and proving up. He and his wife spend the summer months in that beautiful location.

He married Miss Emma C. Wood, who was born at St. Charles, in Winona County, Minnesota, a daughter of J. G. and Millie (Brainerd) Wood. She was educated in the public schools of Minnesota and in the high school at Rockford, Illinois. The only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Miller was Mary Amelia, who was liberally educated in school and at home, was a teacher for two years at Kalispell, and when life was most promising for her soon after her marriage she died.

Judge Miller was once a candidate on the populist ticket for judge in Flathead County. Beyond that he has seldom considered politics as a serious field of his activities. He has been a favorite speaker on many occasions, and has also reduced many of his thoughtful studies to writing. A synopsis and abstract of some of his writings has been published in a small booklet entitled "After the War," and some of his discussions betray a very keen analysis of fundamentals that vitally affect the structure of civilization in America as elsewhere. The wedded life of Judge Miller has been ideal, and to an unusual degree they have been bound together by common sympathies and aims.

Major Fellows D. Pease. Eighty-six years of age, and all but the first twenty spent in the far west, Major Fellows D. Pease of Lodgegrass was at the time of his death probably the only man in Montana who could tell from personal experience and witness the main outline of events connected with the earliest white occupation of the territory. His life since before the Civil war was spent within the confines of Montana. He was on the ground long before either the territories of Idaho or Montana were a matter for serious consideration. Indian fighter, Indian agent, friend and adviser of the red men, steadily through all the years he has endeavored to do justice to the original occupants of the land and promote the welfare of the two races in their relations.

F. D. Peare

Major Pease was born in Tioga County, Pennsylvania, March 16, 1834. His father, Oliver Pease, was descended from an Englishman who with two brothers were followers of Oliver Cromwell, and at the downfall of their leader two were imprisoned. They were released by their sailor brother and brought to America, landing on the Island of Martha's Vineyard. The sailor brother married with the daughter of a chief of a tribe of Indians on the Atlantic coast, and from this union descended Oliver Pease, according to family tradition. Oliver Pease was a farmer, a fanatic Methodist, and widely known as the "praying evangelist farmer." It is not certain where he was born, but he moved from New York State into Pennsylvania when a young man and married Hulda Bowen, daughter of Emma Bowen, a prominent farmer of Tioga County and one of its earliest settlers. The Peases and Bowens were old line whigs in politics. Oliver Pease and wife had seven sons and eight daughters, Major Pease being the eighth child. Three of the sons, Emmer, Ashbel and Laetus, were killed while Union soldiers in the Civil war. Another son, Walter, was also a Union soldier and is now living in Tioga County, Pennsylvania. Benjamin followed his brother Fellows into the West, and in the early '60s piloted a party of hunters and trappers from Minnesota into the Canadian northwest, and finally settled in Eastern Washington, rearing his family and passing away near Ellensburg.

Major Pease grew up in Steuben County, New York, had a rural school education, and at the age of nineteen turned his face toward the West. Reaching Chicago, he went down the old canal to Joliet, thence by train to Rock Island. This was in 1853. Reaching the Mississippi River, he fell in with a party of New Englanders going to the Wisconsin pineries, and he joined them and spent a year or so in the forests of Wisconsin. He helped correct the boundary line between Minnesota and Iowa, and with an outfit of ox teams engaged in hauling and freighting and trafficking with the Sioux Indians. When the Abercrombie party was sent out to meet General Harney he sold his teams to the Government and joined the outfit at Fort Ridgeley. This party intercepted General Harney's command at Fort Pierre after its battle with the Sioux at Ash Hollow. The General had started his expedition from Fort Leavenworth, marching through Nebraska and north to the Canadian line, and had inflicted the first punishment given the Sioux nation by Uncle Sam, starting a war which continued through a period of almost thirty years, ending with the subjugation of the nation and its confinement to various reservations in the Northwest.

Major Pease left the war party while en route and joined the "Scotch Half Breeds" bound for old Fort Union, arriving at the mouth of the Yellowstone at that old fort in September, 1856, fully seven years before the time usually accepted by historians as marking the opening of Montana history. Major Pease soon turned to merchandising on the Missouri River as a member of the "Little Opposition" firm, comprised of eastern men of New York, Chicago and Minnesota besides himself. This firm did business all along the river from Fort Benton to Fort Sully. After a year it joined the Northwest Fur Company, trading with the Indians for robes and pelts and disposing of the goods to steamers coming up with supplies in the spring. The first intimation of Montana region being a gold bearing country came to Major Pease from a party of twenty persons, including one woman, who journeyed down the Yellowstone River in flatboats, carrying some gold dust they had gathered upstream. At a point near old Fort Berthold the boat was grounded and the party were massacred by a band of hostile Sioux, the gold being taken away and a portion of it sold to the American Fur Company. About two years later the fur company was purchased by the Little Opposition Company, and two years later the latter company sold its interests to Peck & Durfee.

During these years the overland expedition for the gold fields of Montana, headed by Bridger, Bozeman and by Captain Fisk later on, began the real search for precious metal. Davidson also brought a party into the region later, and these were the pioneers in uncovering the rich gold finds of Montana.

With the transfer of the Northwest Fur Company to Peck & Durfee, Major Pease gave up trading with the Indians and associated himself with a company supplying the Government with horses for the different expeditions against the Indians. These horses were gathered up in Utah and Colorado. In 1870 Major Pease was appointed agent for the Crow Indians, being the first civil agent for that tribe. It was in that year that the Indian department was transferred from the War Department to the Department of the Interior. Major Pease's agency was established at the mouth of Mission Creek, almost opposite Livingston, on the south side of the Yellowstone River. The Crows owned all that region then, the land having since been taken from them by treaty. He remained in charge of the agency until 1874, when he was superseded. Major Pease acquired the Sioux tongue in the early days of his residence in the Northwest, also gained a fair knowledge of the Crow language, and his acquaintance among Indians generally made him an invaluable representative of the Government.

In the '70s the various military posts which had been established in Wyoming and Utah for the protection of white settlers passing to the Northwest were removed, leaving the country unprotected from the Sioux, who began a reign of terror not only among the emigrant trains but among the Crows who were less numerous than the Sioux. The Crows were driven back into the mountainous region of Park County and the Gallatin Valley, and their presence there saved the whites from extermination, since the Crows acted as a sort of buffer. In the spring of 1875 Major Pease, Paul McCormick of Billings and Z. H. Daniels laid plans to form a colony and establish it on Pease's Bottom on the Yellowstone. With about fifty men they established the colony, the mainstay of which while it lasted was Mr. McCormick and Mr. Daniels. In the meantime Major Pease went East to secure supplies, being absent all winter. The Custer massacre of 1876 had occurred before he returned, and also several attacks of Indians had been made on the colony. A few were killed and the remainder abandoned Fort Pease. The objects of the colony were first to establish a buffer with the Crows between the white settlers farther west, a trading post with the Indians when Major Pease should return with his boat load of supplies, and ultimately using the post as a base for operating the gold fields of Wolf Mountain then known to exist, but which even yet have not been worked.

When General Miles came into Montana after the Custer massacre he established Fort Keogh, and Major Pease, with the arrival of his supplies, moved them to the new post, selling goods as the fort merchant until a regular sutler was provided. At that time Major Pease left the fort and began mining, trading with the Indians and looking after other interests. He was also a miner in Park County.

When Major Pease was made agent of the Crows and established his office at Fort Parker he found no Indians there. The military had occupied the place for a time, and their presence was displeasing to the Crows, who had their main camp up the Big Horn in Wyoming. Major Pease sent word to their leaders to come to the agency to discuss matters of importance with them. They arrived Indian military style, and it was soon evident that many were displeased with the presence of the soldiers, and the Major realized that a more satisfactory conference could be had and with greater promise of results if the soldiers were withdrawn. His appeal to the proper authorities gained this point.

Some of the younger Crow warriors had been persuaded that the only ultimate safety for the Indians of the country depended upon an alliance between the Crows and the Sioux to fight the Government. This belief had been zealously fostered by the leading Sioux chief. However, Blackfoot, the big chief of the Crows, and his wife, a daughter of old Crazy Horse, a Sioux chief, appealed to the patriotism of the young fellows, and they were finally prevailed upon to cast their lot unrestrainedly with the white man. It was this conference that led to the failure of the Sioux to establish the desired alliance, and the peaceable stand taken by the Crows prevented much loss of life and property by a prolonged struggle. The chief instrument in this arrangement was Major Pease, and that act stands out conspicuously as the most important of many services rendered by him to this region and to the Crow Indians. It is not difficult therefore to understand the peculiar affection felt for Major Pease by members of the Crow tribe, and they signalized this long standing affection in a manner constituting the highest possible award of honor when they adopted him a member of the tribe in May, 1920.

As a tribe the Crows have never been hostile toward the whites, have shown fairness in their dealings with white men and the Government, and have observed every provision of their treaties. As a reward for their loyalty the Government in 1868 set aside a reservation of seven million acres to be theirs forever, and in addition appropriated several million dollars to be used in their behalf. It is confidently believed by well informed authorities that not one-fourth of this sum ever reached its real object, because of the conduct of the Indian Department at Washington. The original reservation has been reduced by subsequent purchases from the Crows to about two million acres. Long ago it was discovered that this too would be taken from them unless vigorous measures were taken by the Government to prevent it. A score of years ago Major Pease and his son George, a member of the tribe, undertook to arouse sentiment favoring a division of the remaining tribal lands in severalty, and at this time Congress is considering the final provision of the bill which Senator Myers and Congressman Riddick have been pushing to final passage. This will insure the Crows a measure of tardy justice and to some extent will right the wrongs done all the tribes of Indians in the United States. Major Pease from his long and intimate observation of Indian affairs regarded the Government Indian Department as nothing less than a curse in the administration of Indian affairs. Having known each of the men who have held the office of commissioner of Indian affairs, from Charles Mix, the first, to the present incumbent, he looked upon the entire record as one tinged with incompetence and ignorance, if not actual malfeasance.

Major Pease was always loyal to the political traditions of his ancestors. In 1860 he traveled from the Missouri River back to Pennsylvania in order to cast his vote for Abraham Lincoln for president. He never deviated from this partisan regularity until the national campaign of 1916. Major Pease was made a Mason by special dispensation at Knoxville, Pennsylvania, in 1868, taking the Blue Lodge degrees there. He was affiliated with Livingston Lodge No. 32, with the Scottish Rite bodies and Algeria Temple of the Mystic Shrine at Helena. While living within the limits of Dakota Major Pease was elected a member of the First Territorial Legislature, and attended the sessions of that party at Yankton. He was chosen to prepare the first Constitution of Montana as a delegate from Gallatin County, but that document was not approved.

In 1859, near Berthold, North Dakota, Major Pease married Margaret Wallace, a half breed Crow. Her father, John Wallace, was a noted warrior among the Crows of that day. Of her four children three grew to mature years. Laetus died at Seattle, Washington, leaving no children. Lavantia, married John L. Pearson, now a resident near Absorakee, Montana, and their children are Virgie, Helen, Ethel and Leah. George H., the youngest child, came to manhood on the Crow Reservation, spent his life here, and died at the Pease residence in Lodge Grass, as the result of an automobile accident in 1916. He was educated in the common schools, was a farmer and stockman, and also carried on extensive trading relations with his tribesmen. He married Sarah Walker, who is now living at Lodgegrass. They had a family of nine sons and one daughter. Of the sons four were soldiers, two in the army and two in the navy, one a master blacksmith, during the World war. Six of the sons are farmers near Lodgegrass. The daughter Helen is the youngest of the family.

Of the noted Indian chieftains of the Northwest during the past half century Major Pease by personal acquaintance was able to relate something distinctive and characteristic of nearly every one. He knew intimately the great warrior and statesman of the Sioux, Sitting Bull, and others of that tribe known to him were Red Cloud, Gall, Rain-in-the-Face, Strikes the Ree, Smoky Bear, Medicine Cow and Grass. Among the Crows his personal knowledge extended to Horse Guard, Blackfoot, Two Belly, Iron Bull and Show his Face, while among the Assiniboines he knew old White Hair, Magtram, Jackson and the Fool. His acquaintance among the Grosventres included Crows Breath, Poor Wolf, Bloody Knife or Blue Cloud. He knew many of the Blackfeet, being their special agent for a time, and he knew Medicine Crow, the Santee and leader of the New Ulm massacre in Minnesota in 1862. The death of Major Pease occurred October 20, 1920.

HENRY E. BORRESON. Through his busy career as a contractor and builder Henry E. Borreson has been one of the real constructive factors in the improvement and development of Homestead and the surrounding locality. His name and work are associated in a most substantial manner with that section, not only in commercial lines but also as a farmer.

Mr. Borreson was born in Filmore County, Minnesota, December 14, 1879. His father, Ole Borreson, a farmer's son, was born at Toten, Norway, August 20, 1845, and came to the United States in 1868. For a short time he worked as a lumberjack and river man at LaCrosse, Wisconsin, where he was married, and then removed to Filmore County, Minnesota, buying land and becoming a farmer. Four years later, selling his property, he went on to North Dakota, homesteading in Barnes County. He spent the rest of his life on that place. and had made a farm and improved it substantially before his death in 1915. He went through the process of naturalization soon after coming to this country and was always affiliated with the republican party, and was a Lutheran in religion, the faith also of his widow and his children. July 4, 1872, Ole Borreson married Miss Agnethe Jenson, who was born at Vardahl, Norway, December 12, 1851, daughter of Hjerronemus and Siri (Nelson) Jenson. She left Christiania, Norway, and from Liverpool was carried on a ship of the National Line to New York, being about two weeks on the way. She reached this country in May, 1869, and went on to LaCrosse, Wisconsin, where three years later she was married. The children of Ole Borrenson and wife were: Bertha, wife of Thill Hendrickson, of Nome, North Dakota; Sarah, wife of Henry A. Wilberg, of Nome; Henry, of Homestead, Montana; Selma, wife of Ben Johnson, of Valley City, North Dakota.

Henry E. Borreson acquired a common school education, and later finished most of the studies in the building and contracting course of the International Correspondence School of Scranton. He learned the carpenter's trade in Barnes County, North Dakota, and did his first contracting in that locality. For eight or ten years he operated with a large crew of men, building town homes, and barns and residences in the country.

His first stop in Montana was at Medicine Lake, where for a week or so he served as yardman for E. W. Palutzky, lumber dealer. Mr. Palutzky then sent him to Homestead as manager of the yard in that community, and after a few months he and others organized the Homestead Lumber Company. Mr. Borreson remained as manager of the yard until he resumed contracting and building. The yard subsequently changed hands and is now the Olness Lumber Company.

The first contract he had at Homestead was for the erection of a town hall. Since then he has put up the buildings of the Olness Lumber Company, farm residences of R. G. Tyler, S. K. Bolstad, C. C. Gronlie and E. Strandlund, and Frank French's residence in town, besides other minor buildings; the Nels Sunvold home in Froid, the Noland home, the schoolhouse and J. C. Wigmore residence at Medicine Lake, and the home of John Grayson at Antelope.

Mr. Borreson is also one of the extensive growers of grain and flax, cultivating his own land. The heavy work of farming he accomplishes with a tractor, which he has found both efficient and economical over the old horse power method and expense. He has had three harvests from three plantings, and ten bushels of wheat per acre in the most protracted and disastrous drouth the state ever knew in 1919 is a record that encourages him to believe in the substantial agricultural future of this section of Montana. Practically all his farming has been done in relatively poor seasons, so that hardly anything could dispel his faith in the resources of the soil. Mr. Borreson was one of the original stockholders of the Homestead State Bank, now the Farmers State Bank, and is still one of the bank directors.

At Nome, North Dakota, August 18, 1910, he married Miss Gertrude C. Lockrem, daughter of Edward and Anne (Thompson) Lockrem, the former a native of Goodhue County, Minnesota, and the latter of Skude, Norway. Her mother came to the United States at the age of sixteen and was reared and married in South Dakota, and she and her husband subsequently became homesteaders and farmers there and later lived at Nome, North Dakota, and she died in Day County, South Dakota. Edward Lockrem is now living in Toronto, Canada. Besides Mrs. Borreson there are two other children, Thomas, of Barnes County, North Dakota, who served overseas in the World war, and lost his left hand in one battle; and Sophie, wife of Harold Ellington, of Minneapolis.

Four children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Borreson: Alvan Everard, Howard Gordon, Constance Margaret and Eunice Agnethe.

THOMAS KELLEY. Plentywood as the county seat of Sheridan County is at the center of a rapidly developing agricultural section of Montana, and the entire region is one of the most attractive to the home seekers and home builders of the present generation. It is less than a scant score of years that the big transformations have been effected in this country, and in the growth and development of Plentywood probably no one citizen has contributed more liberally of his personal resources than Thomas Kelley.

Mr. Kelley, who knows this region from the standpoint of a quarter of a century's experience, was born at Flint, Michigan, October 16, 1870. His father, Patrick Kelley, was born in County Clare, Ireland, and married there Martha Carey. Prior to the Civil war Patrick Kelley brought his family to the United States, and spent his active life as a brick and cement contractor at Flint, Michigan, moving to that city from New York State. He died at Flint in 1899, when past sixty years of age. His widow is still living, a resident of Chicago. Patrick Kelley was a democrat in politics. His children were: Sarah, who became the wife of Tom Margison and died at Elkhart, Indiana; Martha, who became the wife of Eugene Henderson, of Tuscola County, Michigan; Thomas; Selma, wife of James Hugan, of Chicago; and Lizzie, Mrs. Jack Cargill.

Thomas Kelley lived at Flint to the age of twenty, attending the city schools and learning the cigarmaker's trade. Leaving Michigan in 1890, he went to Chicago, worked at his trade several months, and successively made cigars at St. Louis, at Piqua, Ohio, at Boston, Massachusetts, Nashua, New Hampshire, and thence north through Montreal and Toronto. Returning to Michigan, he worked at Tecumseh, and his last occupation at rolling cigars was in Minneapolis.

In May, 1895, he came to Montana, where he did his first work as a section hand at Culbertson. This brief employment stiffened his back and hardened his muscles, and during the summer he tended the flock and put up hay for C. N. Smith, a sheep man. His next employment was with Homer Armstrong at "Hardscrabble" on the Missouri River, and later he worked on the ranch of J. S. Day. In those early years as a cowpuncher and sheep tender Mr. Kelley rode up and down the Big Muddy around the present locality of Plentywood, and frequently would see no human being for fifty or sixty miles except a lonely sheep tender here and there. The first settler to establish himself on the townsite of Plentywood was George E. Bolster, to whose initiative and enterprise the early business of the town was due. Mr. Kelley came to Northeastern Montana soon after the buffalo had disappeared, though deer and antelope remained in abundance and almost undisturbed until the occupation of the country by permanent settlers drove them away.

One of his first employers in the Big Muddy country was Jud Matkin, now one of the leading citizens and ranchmen of Sheridan County. Then after an interval of a few years he returned from the Missouri River country and entered the employ of Peter Marren, also another leading character of Sheridan County. For three years he rode the range and tended sheep for this typical Irish neighbor of the old plains country. He then used his capital and experience to engage in the cattle industry on his own account on Beaver Creek. A few years later he identified himself with Plentywood, which at that time was just beginning to take on life as a town. He built one of the first business houses on the townsite, and entered the retail liquor business, which he continued until state wide prohibition became effective.

Mr. Kelley took advantage of the opportunities to acquire a farm by entering public land. His farm was near Archer on the Great Northern Scobey branch. The home for himself and wife was a frame shack of two rooms. There he collected a few horses, planted crops and cultivated them while proving up. After securing title he left the farm as a place of residence, but still owns it, and has made it the nucleus of a generous and well developed ranch of 1,000 acres.

Mr. Kelley has never been a laggard in throwing his energy and resources into the development of Plentywood. He joined in the movement for the telephone system, the Farmers Store, the creamery and the drug store, taking stock in all those enterprises. He has never been active in politics, merely expressing his sentiments in national affairs as a republican. He is affiliated with the Knights of Columbus and his family are communicants of the Catholic Church.

Mr. Kelley found his wife while she was a homesteader in the Plentywood locality. Her maiden name was Johanna Armstrong. Mrs. Kelley was born at Anoka, Minnesota, in 1872, daughter of William T. and Sarah (Farrington) Armstrong, the former still living and at the Kelley home. Mrs. Kelley has one sister, Mrs. Arthur Charlesworth. Mr. and Mrs. Kelley were married at Glasgow, Montana, June 19, 1911. They have an adopted son, Gerald.

Mr. Kelley has contributed to the material growth of Plentywood with the erection of one of the best residences in Sheridan County. It is a two-story, semi-bungalow pattern, with basement, hot water heat and other modern equipment such as electric washer, fan, and a public water supply. For emergency two pumps are provided, and a cistern furnishes soft water for laundry purposes. The house contains six rooms and a glass-enclosed sun parlor on the south. The conspicuous wall decorations of the home are the work of the artist's brush, performed by Mrs. Kelley. She possesses a spontaneous artistic taste, and her study has developed some interesting results both in landscape and china decorating.

Roy Hughes. A man of undoubted business intelligence and ability, and thoroughly familiar with all of the details connected with the mining industry, Roy Hughes, as he always signs his name, which is really Irving Le Roy Hughes, is rendering valuable and appreciative service to the Anaconda Copper Mining Company as superintendent of the Badger State Mine, which is located on the northern part of the company's property. A son of Newton L. Hughes, he was born August 4, 1881, in Fremont, Nebraska, and spent his early life on the home farm.

Born in New York State in 1847, Newton L. Hughes migrated to Nebraska when a young man, being impressed with the many opportunities a newer country offered a young man of energy and industry. Taking up wild land in Fremont, he cleared a good farm, which he is still actively and successfully managing. He is a republican in politics, and an active member of the Baptist Church. He married in Fremont, Nebraska, Clara J. Rarrick, who was born in 1854 at Cedar Falls, Iowa, and of their union two children were born, Irving Le Roy, the subject of this sketch, and Walter Earl, a student in the Creighton Medical College at Omaha, Nebraska, died at the early age of twenty years.

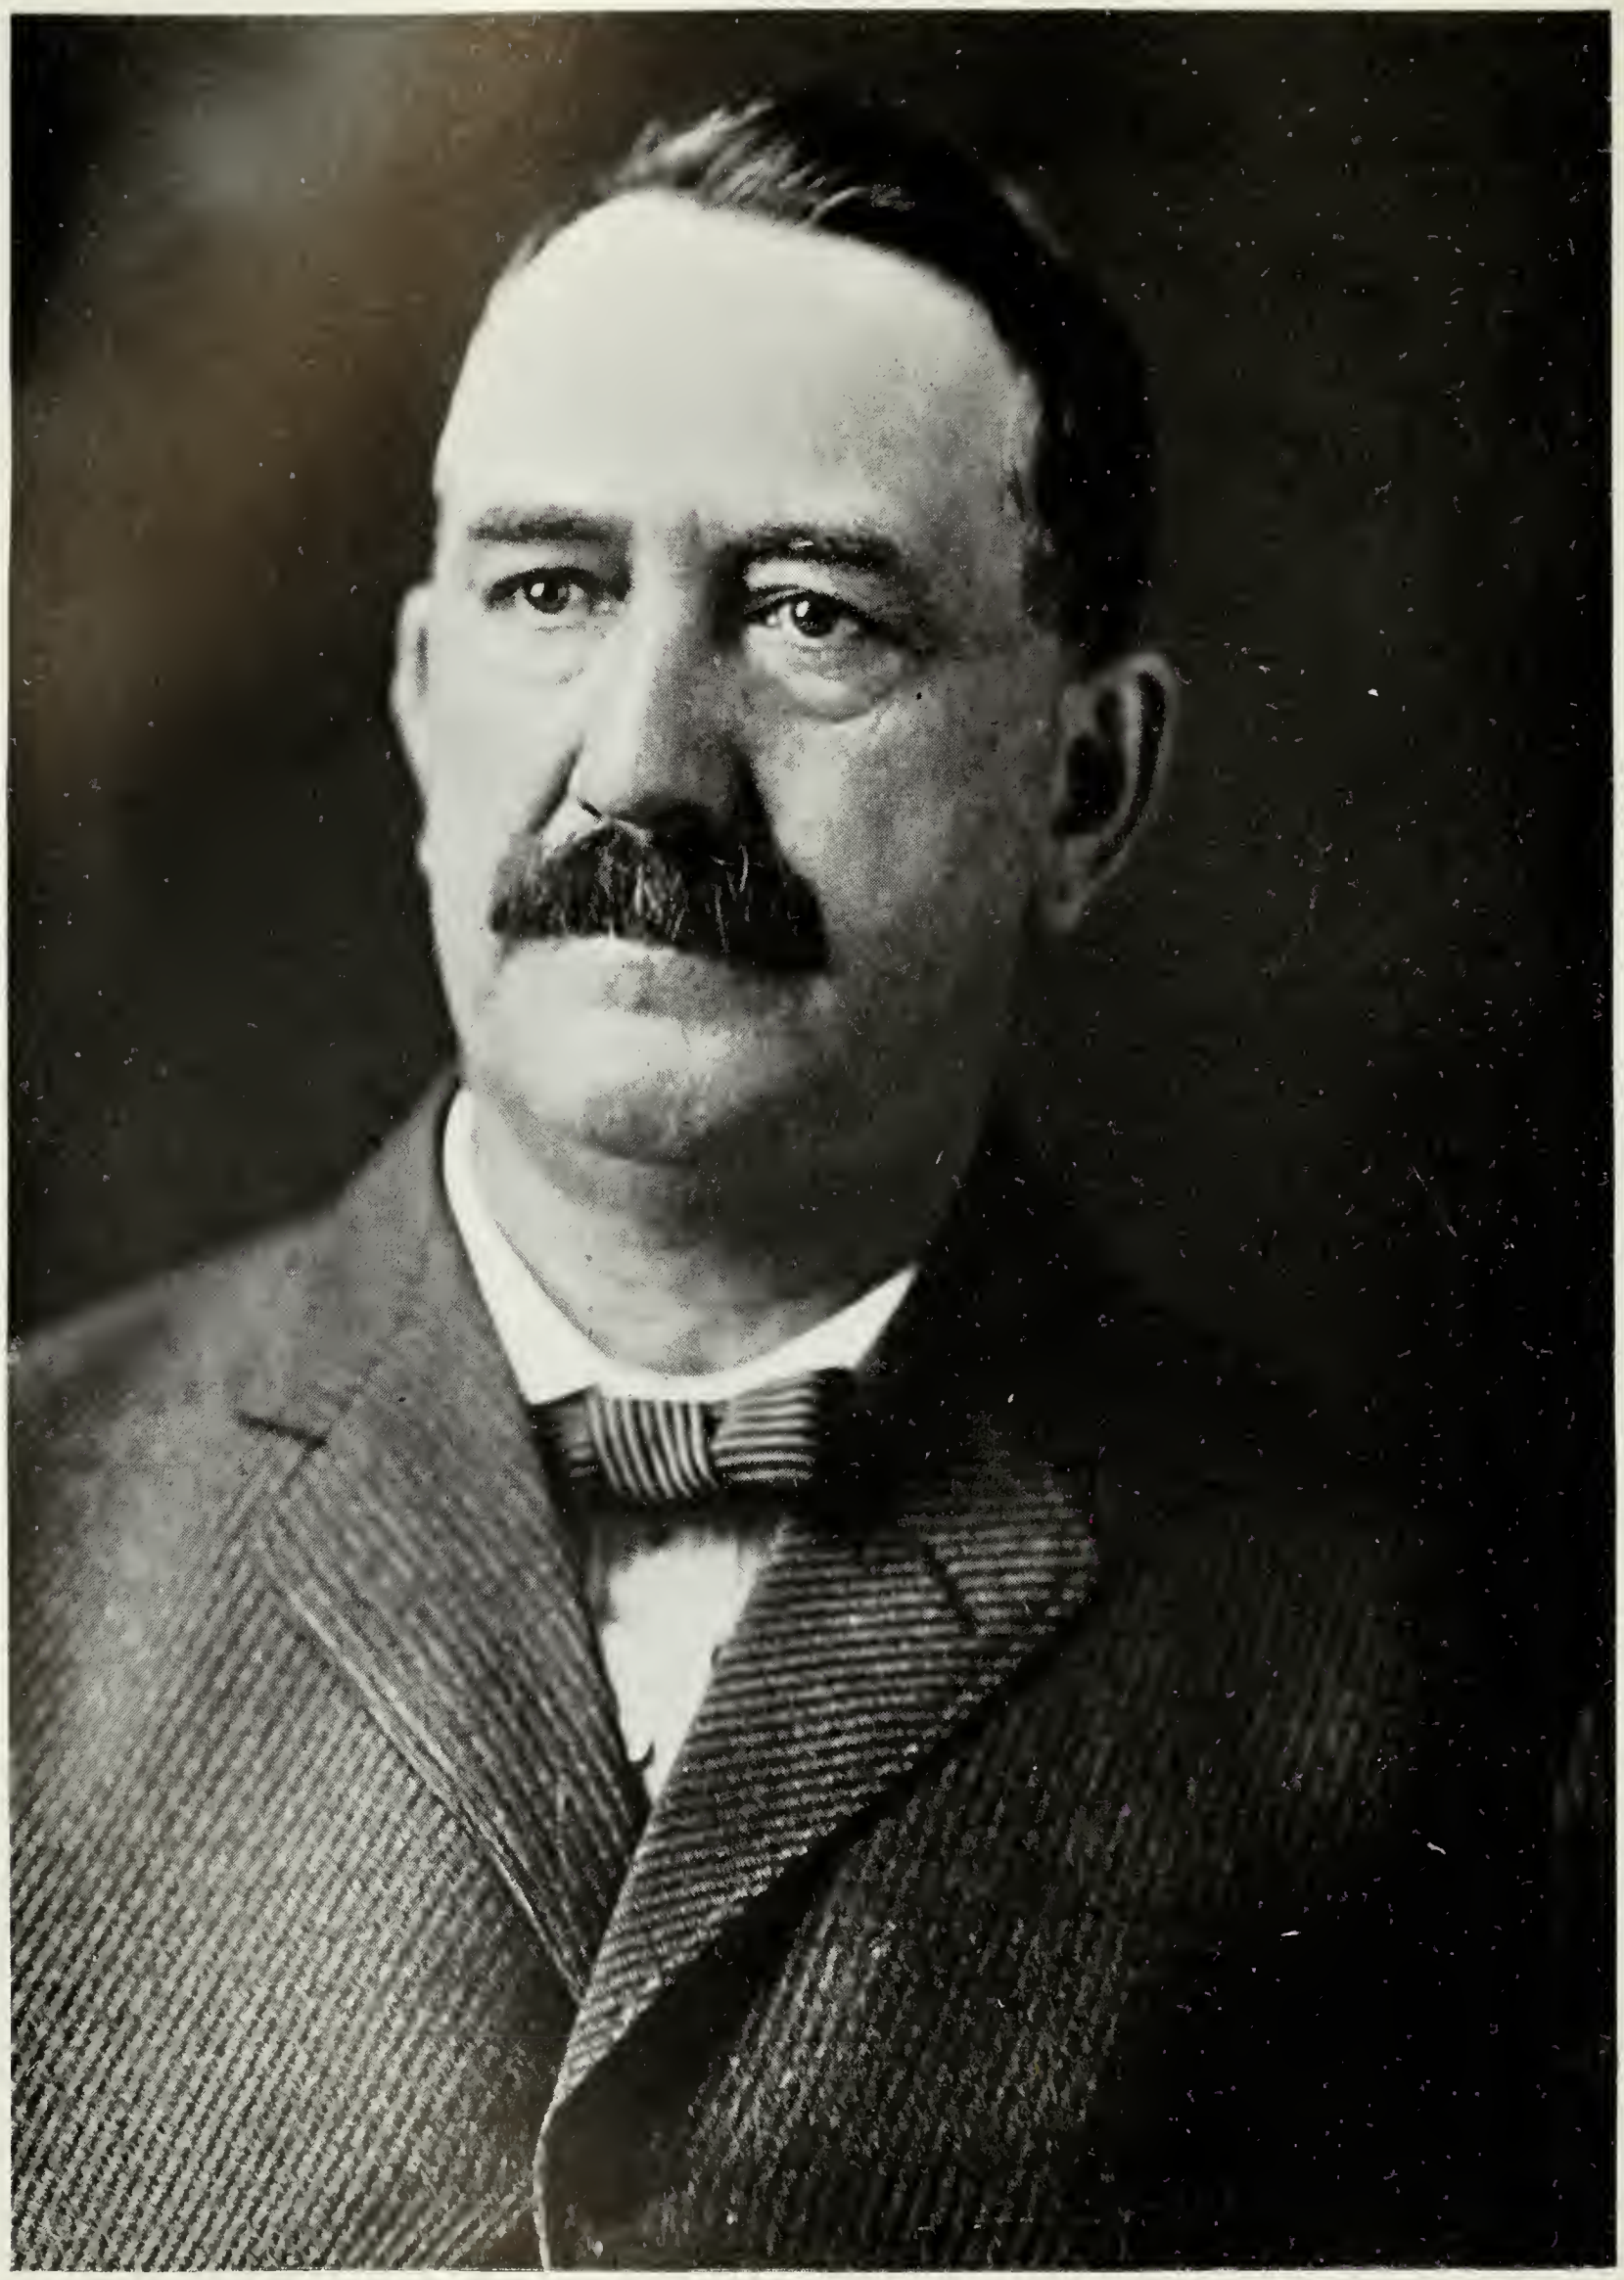
Educated in his native town, Roy Hughes completed the studies of the sophomore year in the Fremont High School, and on the home farm was well trained in agricultural pursuits. Leaving home at the age of seventeen years in search of fame and fortune, he visited Wyoming, Colorado, Arizona, New Mexico and California, working his way from state to state at any respectable job, but found no place in which he desired to make a permanent location until his arrival in Butte, Montana, in February, 1903. Beginning life here as an underground miner, he was for six months in the employ of the Old Parrot Mining Company for six months, receiving $3.50 a day compensation for his labors, and subsequently worked an equal length of time for the Heinze Mining Company. Becoming associated then with the Anaconda Copper Mining Company, Mr. Hughes began work as a common miner, and proved himself so capable that in 1907 he was made shift boss at the Diamond Mine. In 1910 he began work as a miner at the Badger State Mine, and in 1911 was made shift boss at that mine. In 1915 he was advanced to assistant superintendent of the mine, and in August, 1919, was promoted to his present responsible position of superintendent of the mine, an important office which he is ably and faithfully filling, having under his supervision 375 men, his offices being located at the mine.

Mr. Hughes married at Butte, in 1911, Mrs. Clara (Gibbons) Lund. Mrs. Hughes's father, A. J. Gibbons, is proprietor of a hotel at Edina, Missouri, but her mother is not living. Mr. and Mrs. Hughes have no children.

William Elmer Rood. While the greater part of his time since becoming a Montanian has been devoted to ranching, Mr. Rood in 1918 turned his experience and skill as a printer and newspaper man to the editorial management of the Twin Bridges Independent, and is now the responsible director of the affairs of that well known Montana newspaper.

Mr. Rood was born at Faribault, Minnesota, August 29, 1881. His father, Nelson Rood, was born at Christiania, Norway, in 1849, came to the United States when about twenty years of age, and has since lived at Faribault, Minnesota, where he was an early settler. He now lives retired. He is a republican and a member of the Lutheran Church, and before coming to this country served in the Norwegian Army. William Elmer Rood is the only son and the youngest of three children. His sister Agnes lives at home and his sister Elma is a professional nurse with home at Minneapolis and during the late war was an army nurse at Fort Snelling.

William Elmer Rood was educated in the public schools of Faribault and left school at the age of sixteen to learn the printing trade in a local office. For one year he worked as a printer at Tacoma, Washington, for another year was editor of the



R W Lowery II

Oregon Observer at Grant's Pass, and for a year and a half did newspaper work at Park River, North Dakota. He was also editor for one year of the Eveleth News at Eveleth, Minnesota. On coming to Montana in 1913 Mr. Rood took up a homestead on the McHessor Bench, eighteen miles south of Twin Bridges. He still owns his homestead and a quarter section besides, and in the intervals of his duties as a newspaper man gives his active supervision to this property. In 1918 he accepted a proposition from the stockholders of the Twin Bridges. Independent to assume the editorship and business management of that journal. The Independent was established in 1915, is a republican paper, and circulates in Madison and surrounding counties, being issued every Friday. The stockholders of the organization are A. J. Wilcomb, Al Weingard, of Waterloo, J. C. Siedensticker, of Twin Bridges, and J. R. Jones, a Twin Bridges attorney.

Mr. Rood is clerk of School District No. 61. Politically he is a republican voter. He married at Faribault, Minnesota, in 1913, Miss Edith S. Schmidt, daughter of Bernard and Elizabeth Schmidt. Her mother lives at Sauk Center, Minnesota. Her father, deceased, was a Faribault merchant. Mr. and Mrs. Rood have three children: Charlotte, born in June, 1915; William Elmer, Jr., born in November, 1916; and Helen Elizabeth, born in July, 1918.

JOHN D. RYAN. During the first decade of the present century the fame of Montana so far as it rested upon news and newspaper publicity was largely involved in the prolonged and recurrent civil, industrial and political warfare waged between the Amalgamated Copper Mining Company and the interests led by Augustus Heintze. The great "copper war," which divided the State of Montana into hostile camps, is the proper subject for consideration on other pages of this publication. The subject is introduced here only to give credit where credit is due, since it was John D. Ryan whose power and influence in the industrial world, whose tact and diplomacy and great forcefulness, were the instruments chiefly responsible for the settlement of that factional warfare which had done so much to retard the growth and development of the Northwest.

Since then John D. Ryan has been one of the great national figures in finance and industry and makes his home at the heart of the nation's finance and business, New York, but as president of the Anaconda Copper Mining Company he is properly regarded as the head and front of Montana's greatest single industry.

John D. Ryan was born at Hancock, Michigan, October 10, 1864, and his birthplace in a Northern Michigan mining town seemed to point the destiny of his mature career. He came to Butte in 1901, and with his accession to authority in the affairs of the Anaconda Copper Mining Company, bitterness and strife quickly vanished, and he became the mediator in one of the greatest industrial disputes in all history.

He made peace in the Montana copper district, but he made it through the dominant power he exercised through the sheer force of his will and his powerful intellect, which convinced men associated with him that his was the reasonable and effective course. Only a few men have rivaled John D. Ryan as a business organizer. Taking the constituent companies of the Amalgamated, including the Anaconda Company, and scores of subsidiary mining, smelting, railroad, lumber and other industries, he welded them all into a coherent whole until this industrial group today stands second in resources, power and efficiency, only to the United States Steel Corporation.

It was also largely due to Mr. Ryan's genius that the Amalgamated broadened the scope of its efforts into many other fields than mining, and has been responsible for the development of some of the great hydro-electric powers of the state and the irrigation of great bodies of fertile lands.

Mr. Ryan was one of the great American business executives called to the service of the Government during the World war. In April, 1918, President Wilson appointed him director of aircraft production, and he also served as chairman of the Air Craft Board. He was a member of the War Council, of the American National Red Cross.

A few of his official titles in the business and financial world are as follows: President of the Anaconda Copper Mining Company, United Metals Selling Company, Montana Power Company, vice president and director of the Greene-Cananea Copper Company, director of the Mechanics and Metals National Bank, the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company, the American International Corporation, the Inspiration Consolidated Copper Company, and is a trustee of the American Surety Company and the Emigrants' Industrial Savings Bank.

In 1896 Mr. Ryan married Miss Nettie Gardner, and they have one son, John Carlos, born September 26, 1898, at Denver, Colorado.

ROBERT W. LOWERY. One of the representative business men and citizens for a number of years in Great Falls was Robert W. Lowery. Owing to his close application to his business and his honorable methods he won the prosperity that he richly merited, and he enjoyed the friendship and esteem of the people of his community.

Robert W. Lowery was born at Dixon's Corners, Ontario, Canada, March 11, 1856, and his death occurred at Great Falls, Montana, June 22, 1914. He was educated in the public schools of Ontario, but as he was quite young when his father died he was obliged to begin work at a comparatively early age. His first employment was as a clerk in a mercantile establishment in Canada, but somewhat later he removed to St. Vincent, Minnesota, where he was engaged in the mercantile business on his own account for about ten years. In 1888 he came to Helena, Montana, where he became interested in the wholesale fruit and produce business, in which he met with pronounced success. In 1900 he came to Great Falls, where he continued in the same line of business up to the time of his death. His methods were ever progressive, and he was ever quick to adopt new ideas which he believed would prove of practical value in his business. Though an ardent democrat in politics, he never cared for public preferment. Fraternally he was a member of Great Falls Lodge No. 214, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks.

In his early life Mr. Lowery was united in marriage with Margaret LaFlamme, and to this union there was born but one child, Charles R. Mr. Lowery was a public spirited citizen, never withholding his co-operation from movements which were intended to promote public improvement. What he achieved in life proved the force of his character and illustrates his steadfastness of purpose. By his own efforts he advanced to a position of credit and honor in the business circles of this locality.

The only son of this Montana pioneer and business man, Charles R. Lowery, is a native son of the Treasure State, born at Helena, April 12, 1889. He attended first the public schools of Helena and Great Falls, and then became a student in the University of Pennsylvania. With the close of his school life he became interested in business with his father, and after the latter's death he continued the business until February, 1917, when he sold it. He then engaged in the real estate and insurance business, and in the insurance department he sells fire, tornado, automobile and other general lines of insurance, representing some of the best American companies.

On April 14, 1914, Mr. Lowery was married to Helen A. Leslie, a daughter of Judge J. B. Leslie, and to them have been born three children, Helena Margaret, Robert Leslie and Norma Jean. In his political affiliations Mr. Lowery is a democrat. Fraternally he is a member of Cascade Lodge No. 34, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, and Great Falls Lodge No. 214, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks.

JOHN A. COLLINS. In the past thirty years no name was more closely identified with the real welfare and business prosperity and upbuilding of the City of Great Falls than that of John A. Collins, a business man through all these years and twice honored by the people of his city and home county with the office of mayor and that of sheriff. His death occurred on the 5th of April, 1920.

He was born on his father's farm in Bruce County, Ontario, September 11, 1865, a son of William and Mary Ann (Lewis) Collins. His father was born in the north of Ireland in 1834, came to the United States in the early '50s and spent his active life as a farmer in Ontario. He died in 1917, at the age of eighty-three. His wife was born near Ottawa, Ontario, in 1845 and is now living in her seventy-fourth year. They had eleven children, eight still living, John A. being the second in age. The parents were members of the Episcopal Church.

John A. Collins spent his early life on the Canada farm, had only limited opportunities in the common schools, and at the age of nineteen started out to make his own way in the world. He came to Montana in the spring of 1885, and worked as a carpenter in the construction of a flume for the Anaconda Copper Smelting Company, subsequently worked in the smelter, and was in and around Anaconda until the spring of 1887, when he became a wood chopper at Granite. His first employment at Great Falls, where he arrived in the fall of 1887, was as a pipe fitter in the silver smelter. Mr. Collins' business for a great many years was plumbing. Until 1892 he was employed by the pioneer plumbing firm of Great Falls, and then formed a partnership with Frank Goss, continuing until 1896, after which he was in the hardware and plumbing business with Frank Huy, and from 1898 until 1903 the business was conducted by the firm of Collins & Brown under the name Western Hardware Company. In 1903 the partnership was dissolved and Mr. Collins afterward concentrated his time and energies on the plumbing and heating business. He was one of the leading contractors of plumbing work in the state, and some of his larger contracts were in furnishing the plumbing equipment for the Rainbow Hotel, the First National Bank Building, and many other large structures in Great Falls and elsewhere.

Mr. Collins was elected mayor of Great Falls in 1899. He gave that city the business administration which had been the basis of his support as a candidate, and on the record of his first term was afforded a re-election in 1901. He also twice served in the office of sheriff, beginning his first term January 1, 1909, and was re-elected two years later. Mr. Collins was vice president of the Great Falls Dairy Products Company.

He was a republican in politics, and active in fraternal affairs, having been a past master of Euclid Lodge No. 58, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, a member of Algeria Temple of the Mystic Shrine, past grand master of the Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows and a member of Rainbow Lodge No. 28, and was affiliated with Cataract Lodge No. 18, Knights of Pythias.

January 26, 1905, Mr. Collins married Mary Kaina, now deceased. He married for his second wife Helen (Schilling) Johnson.

HENRY HALL JOHNSON, though a resident of Montana only a few years before his death, had achieved distinction as an architect and as a man of the finest qualities of citizenship in Great Falls.

He was born at Dowagiac, Michigan, December 14, 1877, son of Samuel and Sarah (Hall) Johnson. His father, who died March 1, 1915, was for many years president of the Michigan Agricultural College. The mother of Henry Hall Johnson is still living at the old family home built and occupied by the family at Dowagiac since 1860.

Henry Hall Johnson had every opportunity to make the best of his individual talents and capacities. His early training was acquired in the home of his cultured parents until he entered high school, and he pursued his technical studies in the Michigan Agricultural College and in the Chicago Art Institute. When his education as an architect was completed he came to the northwest, and for seven years practiced at Seattle. He then removed to Great Falls, and for a couple of years continued his office at Seattle, after which he gave his entire time to his growing practice in Montana.

Mr. Johnson was president of the Great Falls Rotary Club at the time of his death. He also served as vice president of the Cascade County Good Roads Association, as a director of the Commercial Club, and was keenly interested in every good work in his community. He was a republican voter, a member of the Masonic Lodge and of the Congregational Church. Mr. Johnson exemplified the best traditions of Americanism, and his people on both sides of the house have been in this country from the time of the seventeenth century. His mother was directly related to the distinguished family of Anne Hathaway, wife of Shakespeare.

April 15, 1914, at Lewistown, Montana, Henry Hall Johnson married Helen I. Schilling, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Schilling, pioneer residents of Missoula, who have been in Montana since 1884. Mrs. Johnson is now the widow of Mr. John A. Collins of Great Falls.

RAY LEWIS CAMPBELL. Twenty years a resident of Montana, Ray Lewis Campbell has spent the greater part of that time in what is now Phillips County and has done his part as a pioneer in the development of the region. He was a homesteader, has developed some extensive ranching interests, has had an active part in business, and as a leader in public affairs enjoys his present responsibilities as county treasurer.

His early life was spent in Minnesota. He was born in Hennepin County, March 18, 1882, and is of Scotch ancestry on both sides. His father, Jonathan N., Campbell, who was born near Shubanacadia in Nova Scotia, was trained to farming and the carpenter's trade, was married in his native vicinity and in 1879 moved to the United States and settled near Long Lake, Minnesota, and has been identified with that section as a farmer for the past forty years. After acquiring American citizenship he identified himself with the republican party, and is a member of the Presbyterian Church. His wife was Jennie Logan, a daughter of William Logan, and their children are: James E., of Jamestown, North Dakota; William, of Vancouver, Washington; Ethel, wife of B. F. Joslyn, of Minneapolis; Ray L.; Catherine, wife of Adolph Beck, of Norfolk, Nebraska;

John A. Pallesen

George, of Big Sandy, Montana; and Paul J., a commercial salesman living at Minot, North Dakota.

Ray L. Campbell spent the years of his boyhood and youth on a farm, attended a country school near Long Lake, and remained at home until he was eighteen, when he came out to Montana and earned his first dollar in this state pitching hay on a ranch at Big Sandy. He remained in that locality for several years, and most of the time was employed as clerk in the store of McNamara & Marlow.

Mr. Campbell came to Malta in 1903, and the first year was a ranch hand and cowboy. About that time he filed on a homestead twenty miles north of Malta, and spent all the time in labor necessary to acquire title. His first building was a one-room log cabin, in which he lived as a bachelor, and since his work on the ranch had no immediate returns he made a living handling horses and working at wages for ranchers. He was also a clerk in the Trafton store at Malta. On completing proof of his claim he served four years as assistant postmaster of Malta under F. W. St. Hill. Mr. Campbell then engaged in the stock business with his father-in-law, R. M. Trafton, a noted pioneer in this region of the state and one of its most notable citizens. Mr. Campbell is still actively interested in ranching, and is owner of a valuable property four miles north of Malta. Under irrigation this has become a highly productive farm, its chief crops being alfalfa and blue joint hay.

Mr. Campbell gave practically all his time to the management of the ranch until March, 1919, when he entered the office of county treasurer as successor to Maurice J. Dabney. He was elected in November, 1918, on the republican ticket. He received a nomination at the primaries in the summer of that year against one competitor and in November was chosen by two-thirds of the total vote of the county. He was re-elected to that office on the 2d of November, 1920. Mr. Campbell was reared in a republican home and cast his first vote for Colonel Roosevelt for president. During the war Mr. Campbell served as chief clerk of the local Selective Service Board for Phillips County. Fraternally he is affiliated with the Masonic Order and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

April 27, 1908, at Glasgow, he married Miss Emma Trafton, only child of R. M. and Marian (Knowlton) Trafton. She was born in Minnesota in 1888, and finished her education at Faribault, Minnesota. The three daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Campbell are Jennie Marion, Ethel May and Ray Lois, and their one son is Robert Mackantosh Campbell, born June 23, 1920.

CHARLES M. HANSON came to Wolf Point in November, 1912, had been a newspaper man in North Dakota and followed the same profession in Montana for several years, but for the past five years his chief work has been in the office of postmaster.

Mr. Hanson, who against many adversities has proven his faith in the community and won the confidence of his fellow citizens in himself, was born in Norway, September 16, 1873. He has lived in America since childhood. His father, Jacob L. Hanson, on bringing his family to America located at Fort Worth, Michigan. In Norway he was a fisherman, and spent five years as a miner in the copper regions of Northern Michigan. From there he went to the Red River Valley of North Dakota, and did his first farming in that state. He took up Government land near Grand Forks, and cultivated the soil from 1881 to 1905, when he moved on west to Washington, and is now living at Stanwood in that state. He is sixty-eight years of age, a democrat in politics and was reared a Lutheran. He married Jacobine Anderson, and their children are: Charles M.; Mrs. John Jacobson, of Stanwood, Washington; Hans M., clerk in the postoffice at Bismarck, North Dakota; Mrs. Albert Isaacson, of Wolf Point; Malberz, of Stanwood, Washington; Mrs. Alphie Hickel, of Wolf Point; and Mrs. Gunder Naas, of Stanwood.

Charles M. Hanson grew to manhood in the Red River Valley, and acquired a good education in local schools, also taking a normal course in Grand Forks College. His duties were those of a farm to the age of twenty-three, near Grand Forks, and then for four years he was a country teacher, and for one year taught in the grade schools of Hamilton, North Dakota. When he left teaching he engaged in merchandising at Ray, North Dakota, in 1901, and after selling goods for four years he entered newspaper work. He was editor of the Dakota Tidende, believed to have been the only Scandinavian democratic newspaper in that state. He published the Tidende three years, and later was publisher of the Wheelock Tribune at Wheelock and the Springbrook News at Springbrook, North Dakota. These were all democratic papers and were weekly publications. The last two papers he sold to his brother and then engaged in the real estate and hail insurance business at Ray.

From Ray, North Dakota, Mr. Hanson came to Wolf Point in 1912 and founded the Wolf Point Herald, the first paper in the new town. He continued as its proprietor and publisher until 1917, when he sold the business to the firm of Weist and Marshall. In the meantime, March 2, 1915, he was appointed postmaster, succeeding Sherman T. Cogswell, and was reappointed for another four-year term in August, 1919. Mr. Hanson has studied and worked to make the postoffice service the interests of the community, and has also been gratified to see its business reflect the growth and prosperity of the community. The receipts of the local office in 1914 were only $2,200, while for the year ending December 31, 1919, the receipts were over $12,600. The service has been extended during Mr. Hanson's administration by the opening of three rural routes.

Mr. Hanson was largely instrumental in the organization of the Commercial Club in 1914, and served it as secretary for three years. He was also clerk of the School Board from 1913 to 1918. As noted above, his career has not been altogether silver-lined, and he has tasted the bitterness of adversity as well as the sweets of prosperity. In the destructive fire of 1914 he lost his new office and residence, just completed, and also his household goods and clothing. There was only $500 insurance, and the disaster left him $3,500 in debt. He assured his creditors that he would pay 100 cents on the dollar if they would give him time, and he carried out that promise to the letter. When he rebuilt he erected his residence apart from the office building, and declared that in the future it would take two fires to burn him out instead of one. The building in which the postoffice is kept is a structure Mr. Hanson built for his newspaper office. His residence is a comfortable abode of six rooms.

Mr. Hanson cast his first ballot for Mr. Bryan in 1896, and has been a regular in the democratic party ever since. He was vigorously identified with other local citizens in promoting patriotic causes during the war and helped recruit twenty-four men for the army from Wolf Point. Mrs. Hanson was active in the Red Cross, and the home was the scene of much knitting of war garments. Mr. Hanson was reared as a Lutheran, but is now identified with the Presbyterian Church and was the leader of the movement to organize the congregation of that faith in Wolf Point. For several years he served as trustee and treasurer of the church.

July 4, 1903, Mr. Hanson married Miss Anna K. Ronningen. She was born at Norwegian Grove, Minnesota, March 12, 1874. Her father, Martin Ronningen, a native of Norway and a resident of Norwegian Grove, was the father of nineteen children by two marriages. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Hanson are Agnes Irene, Marguerite Evelyn, Nora Adaline and Charles Anthony.

FRANK L. SHERMAN. With no special advantages of education, wealth or family connections, Frank L. Sherman, of Glasgow, has risen steadily, in a normal manner, to be manager of the Glasgow Flour Mills, one of the important industrial plants of this part of the state. The record of his life and work is not only interesting but is also instructive, for it proves that provided a man works with a definite end in view, is willing to make sacrifices to attain to that end, and is engaged in a line for which his abilities fit him, he can be sure of a fair measure of prosperity.

Frank L. Sherman was born in Columbia County, Wisconsin, July 30, 1865, a son of Heman Sherman, grandson of Amos Sherman, and a member of one of the old families of New York State, of English origin. Amos Sherman was born and reared in the vicinity of Painted Post, New York, and spent his life as a farmer. During the war of 1812 he served his country as a soldier, and was equally faithful in performing his duties as a private citizen. He and his wife had several children, of whom Heman was the eldest.

Heman Sherman was born at Painted Post over 100 years ago, and there he was reared, educated and married. As a young man he began lumbering in New York State, and later came West to Wisconsin, making the trip some years before there was any railroad, and traveling in wagons drawn by oxen. Buying land near Columbus, Wisconsin, he spent many years upon it, but finally retired, located at Columbus, and there died about 1903, aged eighty-seven years, having come of a long lived family, as his father reached the unusual age of ninety-six years. Both he and his wife were strict Presbyterians, and very active in religious work. He was an old-line republican, and frequently refused to vote for a warm personal friend, whose qualities he admired, and whose ability to discharge the duties of the office he did not question, because he was running on the democratic ticket.

Heman Sherman was united in marriage with Laura Loveless, also born at Painted Post, New York, two years later than her husband, and she lived to be eighty-five years of age. They became the parents of the following children: Orlin D., who lives at Columbus, Wisconsin; Elbert R., who lives at Buell, Idaho, is in the office of the sheriff; Lizzie, who is the wife of Charles Oliver, of Winnebago, Minnesota; and Frank L., who is the youngest.

The first seventeen years of his life Frank L. Sherman spent at and about Columbus, Wisconsin, and his only educational advantages were those offered by the country schools, and all the other training he received to fit him for his life's battles was that which came from hard work on his father's farm. He could have remained on the farm, but an agricultural life did not appeal to him, as from childhood he had resolved to enter the business arena, and so at the early age of seventeen he left home and learned telegraphy in the station of the Chicago, Milwaukee & Saint Paul Railroad at Columbus, Wisconsin, and was assigned to a position as an operator of the system in Wisconsin. For the subsequent twelve years he remained with this road as operator in Minnesota and Nebraska, and then was assigned to duty in the station department at Pembina, Wisconsin, as joint agent of the Milwaukee and Soo lines. From them on until 1906 Mr. Sherman was in that service at different points of the Soo Line, principally at competitive points, but in that year abandoned railroad work, which he has only used as a means to the end, and became secretary of the Chamber of Commerce at Minot, North Dakota. He interested himself in the building of commercial centers and farm communities. In the latter connection he rendered a priceless service by encouraging the erection of silos, and the adoption of different methods for the conservation of food and energy. Mr. Sherman was instrumental in inducing the Russell Milling Company to choose Glasgow for the site of its plant, and influenced other business houses to locate in this city, which, because of his efforts, grew from a population of 3,000 to one of 15,000.

Mr. Sherman became too big a man for the position he was holding, and so resigned, although the association urged him to remain, and became interested in the sale of flour for the Minot Flour Mill Company. His efforts in this direction resulted in the creation of a demand for a plant at Glasgow, primarily to take care of local demands, and with customary energy and efficiency Mr. Sherman went to work to promote this project, and as a result the Glasgow Flour Mill Company came into being. The plant has a capacity of 300 barrels per day, and as this is more than the local demand, shipments are made to the Pacific Coast and Minneapolis and New York.

As was but natural, Mr. Sherman identified himself with the Chamber of Commerce at Glasgow immediately upon coming here, and is now one of its directors, although at first he was its president. He is not a man who can remain idle, even in moments of relaxation, and immediately saw the need for an employment bureau, and as secretary of the association established one, the first to be organized in Northern Montana. During the war period the Glasgow Chamber of Commerce, under his direction, took a very active part in all of the campaigns, and infused new life into the people, arousing their patriotism and raising the necessary quotas. He is also one of the members of the executive board of the Milk River Development Association, a unit of the Northern Montana Development Association, the various units of which are responsible for the location and improvement of the Roosevelt Trail through this part of the state.

Frank L. Sherman was married at Paynesville, Minnesota, June 6, 1901, to Miss Marjorie Jones, a daughter of Ronello O. Jones, who was born at Winslow, Maine, in 1849, where he spent his life as a farmer. He and his wife became the parents of one child, Mrs. Sherman, and she came into the world May 7, 1879. She was graduated from the Baptist Seminary at Waterville, Maine, and came to Minnesota in 1899 as a teacher, and it was while she was an educator connected with the city schools of Paynesville that she met and married Mr. Sherman. Mr. and Mrs. Sherman have the following children: Lawrence C., Laura, Leslie O. and Lewis Frank.

In addition to the work he accomplished through the Chamber of Commerce during the war period Mr. Sherman rendered another and very valuable service as chairman of the Valley County Council of Defense. He was made a Mason at Paynesville, Minnesota, and demitted to North Star Lodge, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, of Glasgow.

A man of strong personality and extraordinary abilities, Mr. Sherman has been able to capture and hold the confidence of his associates and become the moving spirit in the various projects with which he has been connected. By nature he is a director of men and affairs, and his presence and association act as a mental tonic and a bracing inspiration.

Samuel and James Howard Hughes. Hughes Brothers conduct one of the best grocery, meat, fruit and hardware stores at Cascade or in Cascade County, and are noted for the quality of their goods and the excellence of their service. The elder brother, Samuel Hughes, was born in Caroline County, Maryland, December 14, 1868, and the younger one, James Howard Hughes, was born in Carroll County, Maryland March 12, 1874, they being sons of James and Mary (Harrington) Hughes, both natives of Delaware. James Hughes died in 1910, aged eighty-four years, and his wife died in 1889, aged forty-four years. They were married in Kent County, Delaware, and seven of their children are living, of whom Samuel was the third and James Howard, the sixth in order of birth. James Hughes was a farmer who raised grain, hay and stock. In politics he was a democrat.

The brothers, Samuel and James Howard Hughes, were educated in the Maryland and Delaware public schools, and spent their boyhood days on their father's farm in Delaware. They came West to Cascade, Cascade County, Montana, Samuel arriving in 1889 and James Howard in 1898. April 10, 1900, they opened a meat market, but in 1904 embarked in a cattle business on a ranch four miles west of Cascade, keeping from 100 to 350 head of cattle and from 400 to 1,000 head of sheep, but sold their sheep in the fall of 1918, and now raise only cattle. The ranch is a large one, comprising as it does 2,000 acres of land. In the fall of 1909 they added to the meat market the handling of groceries, fruits and hardware. Their store is in a first-class, steam-heated brick building, with everything modern and sanitary, their premises and equipment comparing favorably with any establishment of its kind in the large cities.

Samuel Hughes is unmarried. James Howard Hughes was married on January 12, 1910, to Bessie M. Hodson, born in Cascade County, Montana, and they have two children, Howard Wesley and Mary Hortense. Both brothers are democrats. They are alert young business men, thoroughly abreast of the times, who understand the demand of their customers and how to meet it. By their honorable business methods they have built up a large trade and are recognized as reliable and trustworthy merchants and good citizens.

John Edward McCormick, who for the past five years has served as a member of the Railroad and Public Service Commission of the State of Montana, is a man of extensive experience with men and affairs, and has shown exceptional qualifications for handling and solving the many problems that come up before the Railroad and Public Service Commission.

Mr. McCormick, who has spent much of his life in the western states, was born at Madison, Wisconsin, February 28, 1867. Leaving school when about fifteen years of age, he followed various occupations until 1888, when he entered the services of the Northern Pacific Railway Company as ticket agent at Fargo, North Dakota. It was as a railroad man that he first came to Montana. In 1891 he was transferred to Butte as city ticket agent for the Northern Pacific, and he performed the duties of that office until 1900.

On leaving the railroad service Mr. McCormick took over the management of Hunter's Hot Springs resort and operated that well-known institution until 1907. Then after spending 1½ years in California he returned to Montana and, associated with James A. Murray, rebuilt the Boulder Hot Springs resort and remained as its active manager until 1915. Much of the patronage of this resort fell off on account of the war, and Mr. McCormick then busied himself with other private interests and had also entered actively in the campaign of 1914, when he was nominated under the new primary law, defeating a large field of candidates, and was elected for Railroad and Public Service Commissioner. He took over the duties of this office January 1, 1915, and since then has given all of his time to his office at Helena.

Mr. McCormick is a practical man and has been made so by experience. He is affiliated with the democratic party. Mr. McCormick is a widower and has one daughter, Mrs. Joseph Keho, of Portland, Oregon.

Charles R. Brazier. One of the most significant indications of a state's full grown development is the extent and quality of its advertising business. No commodity or institution ever becomes so well known that it does not require publicity, and Montana has now reached that stage where many of its business institutions and the great resources of the state in general must depend upon systematic and state or national advertising as a means of making their goods and merits better known.

Probably the most important business medium of this kind in Montana is the C. R. Brazier Advertising Agency of Helena. Mr. Brazier is a business man and publicity expert of wide and varied experience, and has developed a great business in a few years. He is a native of the West, born at Park City, Utah, July 15, 1879. His father, George Brazier, was born in London, England, in 1835, and came to this country when a young man. He was a pioneer settler in Salt Lake City about 1856. He crossed the plains with a party of emigrants, and most of them had their personal property in hand carts, which they pushed and pulled over the rough trails of that day. George Brazier was an early merchant at Park City, the center of a big silver camp. After many years in business he retired about 1900 to Salt Lake City, where he died in February, 1911. He was an independent in politics. The wife of George Brazier was Susan Godsell, who was born in Birmingham, England, in 1837. They were married in Salt Lake City, where she died in 1893. They were the parents of a large family of ten children: Priscilla, wife of E. S. Crowther, a carpenter and builder at Salt Lake City; George J., a rancher at Roberts, Idaho; Alice, living at Salt Lake City, is the widow of A. B. Young, who died in Peru while in charge of the American and British Cerra de Pasco mines; Liberta, wife of J. H. Mitchell, a mechanic at Salt Lake City; Frank W., formerly a candy manufacturer at Helena and later a salesman, who died at Salt Lake in 1919; Lucy, wife of W. I. Lester, a contractor and builder at Salt Lake City; John J., proprietor of the Colonial Confectionery Shop at Lewistown, Montana; Charles R., the eighth in the family; Albert R., a merchant at Salt Lake City who died in January, 1920; and Ernest E., member of an advertising and selling agency at Salt Lake.

Charles R. Brazier acquired his education in the public schools of Salt Lake, graduated from the business college of that city in 1899, and at the age of sixteen had started as messenger boy in the store of the Siegel Clothing Company. He learned the business thoroughly, was assigned various responsibilities in the wholesale and retail department, and from 1899 to 1902 served the firm as advertising manager. Going to Evanston, Wyoming, in 1902, he served as manager of the men's clothing department for the Blyth and Fargo Company, one of the old and prominent mercantile establishments of the city. A year later he took the post of advertising manager for J. P. Gardner, now the Gardner-Adams Company, one of the leading clothing stores in the western United States. Here he also did some splendid work in the advertising field for three years, and then opened the first advertising agency at Salt Lake City.

Mr. Brazier sold his interests at Salt Lake in 1910 and in January of the following year came to Helena. He established the C. R. Brazier Advertising Company, and while developing his interest was also for four years in the newspaper business as advertising manager of the Helena Independent. His advertising agency rapidly grew and in recent years has commanded all his time and attention. His offices are in the Penwell Block. Mr. Brazier handles advertising for many of the large business houses of Montana, and has facilities for all the service expected of a general advertising and publicity agency. In his office files are some splendid examples of convincing and handsome publicity literature, which has been prepared by his agency for various concerns.

Fortunate is the community or state when a man of Mr. Brazier's character and talent takes as a hobby such an important subject as good roads. Mr. Brazier considers good roads his private and personal gospel, and believes that he has a direct command to debate the subject both in and out of season. He is editor and publisher of Highways and Irrigation, the official publication of the Montana Highway Improvement Association, and is never too busy with his private affairs to lend direct encouragement to the cause of modern highways. He also handles the publicity for the Montana State Fair.

Mr. Brazier is an independent voter. His home is at the Helena Apartments. In 1902, at Salt Lake City, he married Miss Violet Collinson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. S. Collinson. Her mother is deceased. Her father was a business man and later a rancher of Idaho. The two children of Mr. and Mrs. Brazier are: Paul, born October 16, 1903, now a sophomore in the Helena High School; and Lucile, born September 10, 1905, a pupil in the grammar grades at Helena.

Rev. James Francis McNamee. Among the Protestant churches of Montana one of the longest continuous pastorates is that of the First Baptist Church at Helena. Rev. James Francis McNamee has been pastor of that congregation twenty-one continuous years. A prominent churchman, a former president of the Baptist State Convention, Mr. McNamee's influence has been a broadly beneficent one outside of his church. He has interested himself in politics, in behalf of local and state education, and in all those matters that are closely linked with good citizenship and improvement of social conditions.

James Francis McNamee is of old Scotch ancestry and born in County Tyrone, Ireland, October 19, 1863. His father, James McNamee, was also a native of County Tyrone, where he spent most of his life. About 1868 he moved to Manchester, England, where he owned a coal mine and while engaged in its operation was killed by a mine explosion in 1873. He was only a young man at the time of his death. James McNamee married Ella MacGill, of County Tyrone, who died at the old home there in 1910. She was the mother of two sons, James Francis and John, the latter a resident of Liverpool.

James Francis McNamee was educated in the national schools of County Tyrone, spent one year in an academy at Glasgow, Scotland, and for two years was a resident student of Glasgow University. In 1886 he came to the United States, and prepared for his profession in the Crozer Theological (Baptist) Seminary near Philadelphia. Doctor McNamee's services as a minister have all been rendered in the northwestern states, at LeSeuer, Minnesota, at Grace Baptist Church in Minneapolis, and in the Humboldt Park Baptist Church, Chicago.

September 1, 1898, he began his duties at Helena as pastor of the First Baptist Church, and has been the head of that old and prominent congregation ever since. His church was established in 1881 and has a large and progressive membership. The church edifice is at Warren Street and Eighth Avenue, and Doctor McNamee for the past fourteen years has also maintained pastoral offices in the Bailey Block. He is a member of the Baptist State Convention Board, and served as president of the convention two years.

Unlike many churchmen he has been an interested worker in politics and frequently has found an opportunity to exercise an influence for good government in the county and state conventions of the republican party. For eight years he served as chaplain of the State Senate. For the past ten years he has been a member of the Helena School Board, is vice president of the board, is secretary of the board of the Helena Public Library, and for several years past has been president of the State Board of Charities and Reform.

Doctor McNamee is also a prominent Mason, being a past master of King Solomon Lodge No. 9, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, past high priest of Helena Chapter No. 2, Royal Arch Masons, past eminent commander of Helena Commandery No. 2, Knights Templar, is past illustrious master of Helena Council No. 1, Royal and Select Masters, and is also affiliated with Helena Consistory No. 3 of the Scottish Rite, Algeria Temple of the Mystic Shrine at Helena, and is a past patron of Miriam Chapter No. 1 of the Eastern Star and a life member of Helena Lodge No. 193 of the Elks. Other affiliations are with Garnet Camp No. 105, Woodmen of the World, Helena Homestead No. 546, Brotherhood of American Yeomen, and Helena Commercial Club.

Doctor McNamee during his pastorate at Helena has officiated at over 800 funerals and 700 weddings. His home is at the Grandon Hotel. In January, 1890, at LeSeuer, Minnesota, he married Miss Helena L. Doescher, daughter of August R. and Margaret (Plowman) Doescher. Her mother is deceased and her father, a retired business man, lives at Santa Monica, California. Mrs. McNamee is a graduate of the Pillsbury Academy at Owatonna, Minnesota. They have three children. Ruth, who is a graduate of the Minnesota State University at Minneapolis, was married to Dr. William S. Little, a physician and surgeon at Kalispell, Montana, and she died at Santa Monica, California, March 16, 1917. The son Paul was in his freshman year at the Montana State University at Missoula when he died in October, 1915. The only living child is Donald, now pursuing a technical course in the metallurgical department of Leland Stanford University at Palo Alto, California.

JOHN SHIPPAM. Either officially or personally every homesteader and settler in all the region around Scobey knows and appreciates the dignified and useful service of John Shippam, the veteran United States commissioner, who has handled all the land office business contracted for that locality during the past ten years. Seldom is a commissioner so well equipped for all the varied demands made upon his office as Mr. Shippam. He is a well trained lawyer, has had years of official service, is a practical farmer, and has been a stanch friend and valued adviser to the majority of those who have sought homes and opportunities in this section of Northeast Montana.

Mr. Shippam was born September 20, 1858, in Nottinghamshire, England, 100 miles from London, son of James and Mary (Stephenson) Shippam. His father was of original English stock, and his mother was a native of Lincolnshire, of Scotch ancestry, and was confirmed in the Episcopal Church in Lincoln Cathedral. James Shippam was a master mechanic and was foreman in one factory for almost thirty-five years, finally being retired with a pension. The children of these parents were: Mrs. Ann Ball, of Nottinghamshire; James, who had an active service of almost a quarter of a century in the British Army; Mrs. Mary Burgess, of Boston, England; and John.

John Shippam came to the United States with his parents, who were visiting England from Fond du Lac, Wisconsin. He had in the meantime acquired a liberal education, finishing in the Nottingham High School. He started on his journey from Liverpool, crossed the ocean to New York, and on reaching Fond du Lac at the age of eighteen went to farming with his cousins. He had no previous knowledge of farming, but took to the occupation, was industrious, and acquired a great deal of valuable knowledge and experience while in Wisconsin.

Mr. Shippam is a pioneer of North Dakota as well as of Montana. He went to Dakota Territory in 1880 and was a resident of North Dakota for a quarter of a century before coming to Montana. In May, 1880, he located at Wahpeton in Richland County. At that time he was a young married man, and was soon appointed deputy sheriff of the county, and continued in public office for a number of years, being deputy clerk of the District Court, judge of the Probate Court, then clerk of the District Court, and was also president of the Wahpeton School Board. Following this long service he entered the real estate business, and was active in that line at Wahpeton and elsewhere in the state.

As soon as he acquired a familiarity with the national constitution he sought United States citizenship, and took out his first and last papers at Wahpeton. He studied law while serving in public office, continued his studies afterward, and was admitted to the District Court in 1887. In 1900 he appeared before the State Supreme Court of North Dakota, passed the examination and was licensed to practice before that body. Mr. Shippam acquired his early training in land matters and land titles while judge of Probate in North Dakota. While he was serving as clerk of the District Court clients sought out his services as counsel on land matters and other legal work, and he was therefore by no means a stranger to the privileges and duties of homestead laws and other branches of land law when he came to Montana.

Mr. Shippam was one of the early settlers of Western Sheridan County. Practically the only evidence of civilized occupation when he came were a few scattered ranches and occasional farmers. He made the journey to old Scobey by automobile from Plentywood, paying a $30 fee for the ride. After surveying the country for some time he decided to stay and made application for United States commissionership. He was appointed and opened his office at old Scobey and succeeded the late Mr. Daniels, who had in addition to his duties as commissioner been merchant, postmaster, farmer and man of affairs in the locality. Practically all of this region was still public domain except one or two townships when Mr. Shippam became commissioner, and one of his first important acts was to urge through his congressman, Mr. Tom Stout, that the Federal Government should complete the survey and open the way for the reception of filings. Mr. Shippam maintained his office in old Scobey until the construction of the Great Northern Railway, and his office was one of the first business places established in new Scobey.

The Shippam family, including Mr. Shippam and his four sons, all availed themselves of the opportunity to acquire homes by entry, and they all located together sixteen miles northwest of Scobey. Their lands have been enclosed and improved, and that portion of the original plains country has been made productive by the bringing of 900 acres under cultivation.

Mr. Shippam has always been a democrat in politics and he was uniformly successful in every campaign he made for public office and at the end of every term he had the good will of his constituents. He has held all the chairs in Odd Fellowship and his membership is still in the Wahpeton Lodge.

At Fond du Lac, Wisconsin, in April, 1876, Mr. Shippam married Miss Amelia Smith. She was born in Nottinghamshire, England, where her father, William Smith, was a lace manufacturer. She acquired a seminary education and is the only one of her family in the United States. Mr. and Mrs. Shippam are properly proud of their fine family of children. Amy, the oldest, is the wife of Oscar G. Conrad of Great Falls, Montana; George A. is a resident of Helena; Willis, a major in the regular army, was in France during the war and is now an instructor in Northwestern University at Evanston, Illinois; Roy is connected with the Minnesota Loan and Trust Company at Minneapolis; Ethel is the wife of George W. Terry, of Minneapolis; while Harry G., the youngest, is in the oil business at Electra, Texas.

CONRAD KOHRS. At the age of eighty-five, a resident of Helena, Conrad Kohrs is one of a very few survivors of the pioneer epoch of the early '60s in Montana. His name is most closely associated with the cattle industry of the state, and he was long known as the "cattle king of Montana."

He was born in Holstein, Germany, August 5, 1835, and seven months later his father, Carston Kohrs, died. His mother, whose maiden name was Gesche Krause, came to the United States in 1854 and died at Davenport, Iowa, March 17, 1886.

At the age of fifteen Conrad Kohrs went to sea as a sailor, and for several years sailed from New York to South American ports. After locating in Iowa he was in rafting and steamboating on the Mississippi and also in the meat business. In 1856 he went to California by the Panama route, tried farming, and in 1858 went to the Fraser River gold mines. He did well there, but soon returned to California and lost all his money in mining enterprises.

Mr. Kohrs came to Montana, arriving at Deer Lodge, in July 1862. After prospecting and mining in that locality he went to Bannack upon the discovery of gold in that camp, was employed at Ban-nack as a butcher, and in June, 1863, joined in the stampede to Alder Gulch at Helena. He conducted a retail meat business at Alder Gulch until 1865.

Mr. Kohrs in 1863 had a thrilling experience with bandits and road agents, escaping after a six hour ride from two outlaws who were pursuing him for the purpose of robbing him of $5,000 in gold which he carried. He was identified with the Vigilantes and in all efforts to establish law and order in the new country. In 1866 Mr. Kohrs bought the ranch and live stock of John H. Grant near Deer Lodge, and from that time for upwards of half a century his chief business was ranching and livestock. He was the pioneer in the introduction of Shorthorn cattle, purchasing his first herd in Illinois in 1871 and in 1890 he brought some Herefords to Montana. He was a member of the Pioneer Cattle Company, organized in 1885, and his interests grew and expanded until he was easily chief among the great cattle men of the Northwest. Incidental to his ranching he employed some of his resources in mining, and was one of the men who developed the Rock Creek ditch at Deer Lodge. His great ranch in the vicinity of Deer Lodge at one time comprised 30,000 acres.

Mr. Kohrs served as a member of the Constitutional Convention in 1889, was a member of the Fourteenth Montana Territorial Legislature, and has served as a county commissioner. He is a republican and a Mason. February 23, 1868, he married Miss Augusta Kruse, also a native of Holstein. They had four children: Anna, who became the wife of J. M. Boardman; Catherine, who was married to Dr. O. Y. Warren; William, who died in 1901, while attending Columbia College; and John Kohrs.

Sallie M. Adams, county superintendent of schools for Rosebud County, has had a long and successful experience in educational work not only in Montana but in several Eastern states.

She was born in Warren County, Kentucky, and was reared and educated at Bowling Green. Her parents were W. T. and Belle (Williamson) Morris. Her father was a man of more than ordinary education for his time, a successful farmer, a leader in his community, and of high moral standards and a stanch Presbyterian. He was one of the first volunteers to join the Union Army when Lincoln made his call for soldiers, and served through the entire war as a member of the Sixty-second Kentucky Cavalry. Members of the Williamson family were likewise ardent patriots during the Civil war time.

Sallie M. Morris graduated from the grammar and high schools of Bowling Green, and holds a college degree from the State Normal of Kentucky and is also a graduate of the Bowling Green Business University. After four years of teaching experience she took two years of post graduate work. As a teacher her energies have been devoted to the profession for sixteen years and include work in all the grades. She has been a teacher in the States of Kentucky, Missouri, Illinois and Montana, and holds a life certificate in Montana.

In 1897 she became the wife of Rev. C. P. Adams, a minister of the Methodist Church who filled a number of prominent pastorates in Kentucky, Illinois and Oklahoma. They came to Montana in 1911 and Mr. Adams died in this state in 1914. He was born at Mayfield in Eastern Kentucky, and was a graduate of McKendree College in Illinois. Mr. and Mrs. Adams had three children: Argin, born in 1899; Opal, born in 1902; and Morris, born in 1905.

After her husband's death, Mrs. Adams resumed teaching and in 1916 was elected county superintendent of Rosebud County, succeeding Miss Fay Alderson. Besides the heavy routine of her office duties she was a leader in the organization of Boys and Girls Club work during 1917-18, and also organized many junior Red Cross societies in the county.

Fred R. Decker is a member of the firm Decker Brothers, hardware merchants, who were among the first to give commercial life to the new Village of Dooley. The Deckers as a family have had a prominent part in the development of this section, and in addition to merchandising they operate some of the ranches in the community and have gone in for pure-bred livestock on an extensive scale.

Fred R. Decker was born at Austin, Minnesota, April 15, 1891. His grandfather, Jacob S. Decker, is a Minnesota pioneer. He was born in New Jersey ninety-one years ago and has lived on a farm near Austin, Minnesota, since 1855. For more than half a century he has been one of the conspicuous characters in Mower County agriculture, has served as a member of the Agricultural Fair Board, has been unusually successful as a grain raiser and general farmer, and in a private way has turned his influence again and again to the development of his section of the state. He is one of the leading members of the Congregational Church in Mower County and is a pioneer republican. Jacob S. Decker married Mary Ann Smith, and of their five sons and one daughter the third is Chester H. Decker, who is associated with his sons in business at Dooley and is also a land owner in this part of Montana. Chester H. Decker was born in Mower County, Minnesota, in May, 1861, and has spent his active career in that state. Growing up in pioneer times, he had little opportunity to attend school, but has made a success of whatever he has undertaken. From the farm he went to work at the carpenter's bench in Dakota, and was employed by the Great Northern Railway, building depots at Fargo and at other points on the line. In 1887 he engaged in the hardware business at Austin, and is a merchant of more than thirty years' standing in that city. Quite recently he became owner of the Justice Ueland Ranch at Comertown, Montana, and is using his Montana land for the production of grain. The Ueland property is one of the best known ranches in Northeastern Montana, the land having been entered and improved by Mr. Ueland. Chester H. Decker has never been an aspirant for political office, though he served on the School Board of Austin more than twenty years. He is a republican and a member of the Congregational Church, and while a member of fraternities, his chief interest is in his home.

Chester H. Decker married Ada C. Douglas, who was born at Lake Mills, Wisconsin, daughter of James and Rachel (Doolittle) Douglas. Her father, a native of New York State, was a farmer at Lake Mills, Wisconsin, and enlisted there in the Union Army. After the war he went to St. Ansgar, Iowa, continued farming in that state, and later moved to Carthage, South Dakota, where he became postmaster and engaged in the livery business. He retired to Austin, Minnesota, where his daughter lived, and died there some years ago. Chester H. Decker and wife had three children: Leonard R. and Fred R., and Alice D., who died in infancy.

Fred R. Decker and his brother were educated in the public schools of Austin, graduating from high school. Their early business training was under their father in the hardware store, and they have always been associated in their business careers.

Besides their hardware business conducted by them at Dooley, Fred R. Decker is one of the owners of the Farmers Elevator at Dooley, and his home is on the Decker ranch, which contains 640 acres located in sections 2 and 3, township 36, range 56. This ranch has been noted as a breeding place for Red Polled cattle since 1915, and great numbers of this stock have been checked out to the stock farmers in Minnesota, the Dakotas and Montana. The ranch is also doing a good part in establishing the pure-bred hog industry in Montana, its herd consisting of registered Duroc Jersey hogs. About 200 acres of the ranch are in cultivation and most of the grain produced is fed on the farm. Mr. Decker is a thorough believer in diversified farming.

Samuel Rhea Jr

During the war he was local chairman of the Red Cross. He was one of the first School Board members at Dooley, and assisted in securing the first one-room shanty for school purposes.

His brother, Leonard R. Decker, married Blanche M. Christie, and has two children, William R. and Mary Catherine.

At Plentywood, Montana, January 30, 1914, Fred R. Decker married Gladys M. Devine, who was born at Eau Claire, Wisconsin, February 13, 1891, daughter of John and Mary E. (Weidner) Devine. She came West with her mother, Mrs. Mary E. Redmond, and it was while proving up her homestead near Dooley that she met Mr. Decker. Her only brother is Charles E. Devine. Mrs. Decker is a graduate of the Minneapolis High School, and as a teacher performed her last service in the country schools around Dooley. The three children of Mr. and Mrs. Decker are Phyllis C., John D. and Marion E.

Richard E. Gustafson. In addition to the valuable work he performs as the only dental surgeon of Plentywood, Doctor Gustafson has played a spirited part in other community affairs of that locality since he took up his residence in Sheridan County in 1913.

Doctor Gustafson has spent all his life in the Northwest, and was born at Winthrop, Minnesota, June 30, 1887. His grandfather, John Gustafson, brought his family from Sweden and established a pioneer home in Carbon County, Minnesota, later moving to Bernadotte, where he and his wife lived their last years on a farm. In their family of six children Swan Gustafson, father of Doctor Gustafson, was the second child. Swan was born in Sweden in 1848 and spent his early life on a farm both in his native country and in Minnesota. He had little opportunity to acquire a good education. He began life with no capital, and solved some real difficulties in getting a start in the world. From farming he acquired an interest as a merchant at Winthrop, Minnesota, and he lived honored and respected until his death at the age of sixty-seven. Swan Gustafson married Anna Christine Hed, a native of Sweden, who died in 1917, at the age of sixty-six. Their children were: Mrs. John Lundquist, of Minneapolis; Reuben, of Bainville, Montana; Mrs. Selma Pearson, of Winthrop; Charles A. and Arthur W., both of Bainville, Montana; Richard E.; and Mrs. Ellen Iverson, of Lily, South Dakota.

Doctor Gustafson spent his boyhood at Winthrop, completed the high school course there, and took his professional preparation in the University of Minnesota at Minneapolis, graduating from the dental school in 1909. With his diploma he looked to Montana as the best field and the one affording the best opportunities, and in that year established himself in dental practice at Bainville. He remained in Bainville until the spring of 1913, when he moved to the new and promising town of Plentywood. In addition to his busy practice he is a director and stockholder in the Plentywood Pharmacy. During the period of the World war Doctor Gustafson performed a highly necessary and patriotic service as the medical examining member of the Selective Service Board. He also gave his aid and leadership in putting his community over the top in the various drives for funds. Doctor Gustafson was reared in a republican home, but like many progressive young men has exercised a commendable independence, and cast his first presidential vote for Wilson in 1912, and in 1916 supported the republican nominee, Hughes. He took his Masonic degrees at Plentywood, also became an Odd Fellow there, and joined the Elks at Williston, North Dakota, maintaining his membership in Lodge No. 1214 of that city.

In Seattle, Washington, December 23, 1912, Doctor Gustafson married Miss Grace Maloy. She was born in South Dakota, November 17, 1890, and was orphaned when a girl. She spent most of her early life at Williston, North Dakota, in the home of her sister, Miss Bertha Maloy, and finished her education in the convent at Jamestown, North Dakota. The other children of the Maloy family are Mrs. Carrie Goodrich, of Seattle; Mrs. Ellen Bostwick, of San Francisco; Mrs. Edna Lundquist, of Poplar, Montana; and William Maloy, of Jamestown, Minnesota. Doctor and Mrs. Gustafson had two children: William Arthur, who died at the age of four years, and Richard Maloy. The Gustafson home at Plentywood is of the bungalow style, one story, five rooms, full basement, with hot water heat and other modern facilities. During the war period Mrs. Gustafson was active in the local organization of the Red Cross.

Samuel Phillips is a Montana pioneer, for nearly forty years a prominent rancher, sheep and cattle man, and probably has as comprehensive and varied a knowledge of the state and its development as any other living man. His interests during the greater part of his residence in Montana have been concentrated in Fergus County, around Lewistown. He is president of the Empire Bank and Trust Company of Lewistown.

In April, 1880, he started West, traveling by rail to Chicago, Omaha, Salt Lake and Ogden to Red Rock, and thence took the stage to Helena, Montana. At Helena he bought an outfit for shearing sheep, and with that equipment came on up the country to where Lewistown now stands. On the way he met General Rugear and escort, who were seeking a site for a military fort. While traveling to the Arrow Creek Company's headquarters, near a spring at the head of Arrow Creek, Mr. Phillips was in camp one night when two soldiers rode in and spent the night with him. These soldiers were messengers carrying a dispatch to Fort Benton stating that General Rugear had located Fort Maginnis. Mr. Phillips had various experiences during that year, working in the hay fields, spending some time at Fort Benton, and the winter of 1880-81 was spent in Helena. While he was there Helena was incorporated as a city, and he had the privilege of voting for the first mayor, John Keny.

In 1881 Mr. Phillips formed a partnership with T. J. Leard, under the firm name of Phillips & Leard, to engage in the sheep business. They located in Meagher County, three miles from the present site of Lewistown, on Willow Creek. They occupied unsurveyed land, and in the fall of 1881 Mr. Phillips went to Helena to buy a bunch of sheep and drove them out to the ranch. Later he bought Mr. Leard's interests and has been an individual rancher ever since, and for many years has handled from 7,000 to 8,000 head of sheep. Mr. Phillips now owns between 11,000 and 12,000 acres of land in his ranch.

His stock in addition to Merino sheep comprises Durham cattle.

In 1909 Mr. Phillips became one of the organizers of the Empire Bank & Trust Company of Lewistown, was on the first board of directors, and for a number of years has served as president. He is also president of the Winnett State Bank, a director of the Winifred Bank, director of the Banking Corporation of Helena, and a director of the State Life Insurance Company of Great Falls.

Mr. Phillips served one term as mayor of Lewistown, and was a member of the Board of County Commissioners for about ten years. Since early manhood he has been active in Masonry, taking his first degrees in that order in Union Lodge No. 114, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, at Ovid, New York. He is a member of Lewistown Chapter No. 15, Royal Arch Masons; Lewistown Commandery No. 4, Knights Templar, and belongs to the Mystic Shrine at Helena.

September 23, 1883, at Helena, Mr. Phillips married Margaret Page, formerly of Watkins, New York. Eight children were born to their marriage, two of whom died in infancy. The six still living are: John Holmes, superintendent of his father's ranch; May, wife of H. J. Bristoll; Delia; Mary, wife of H. C. Gorham; and Robert James, who married Miss Gery. Mr. Phillips also has six grandchildren.

Rev. John Hennessy. During many years Rev. John Hennessy has been zealously engaged in religious upbuilding and church work in Montana, and since 1912 has been the pastor of St. Joseph's Church in Plentywood. He was almost the forerunner of the church work in this locality, his advent into the region following rather closely upon the arrival of the two priests who were the pioneers of the church here. On reaching his present location he found but little of what constitutes the present Town of Plentywood, the church congregation consisting of but six families, and their meeting place was in what is now the Court House of Sheridan County. His first service was held March 8, 1912, and the congregation continued without a home until the fall of 1913, when the present house of worship was erected. Three years later the priest's house or parsonage was built, and the two buildings comprise the substantial work of material development performed here under the administration of Father Hennessy.

During the first years of his labors here Father Hennessy's parish, in addition to Plentywood, included all the region of old Sheridan County as far south as Bainville, as far west as Scobey, as far north as the international boundary, and east to the Dakota line. As the years passed, however, this vast region has been divided, and much of it is now covered by other priests. The parish under Father Hennessy's charge includes the locality of Sheridan County to White Tail on the west, Westby to the east, Antelope to the south and all intervening territory. Under the old parish limits he erected a church at Medicine Lake, one at Scobey, at Flaxville and at Outlook, while in later years his church building includes houses of worship at Westby and White Tail. His congregation at Plentywood at the present time numbers 250 members, and his outlying parish has increased proportionately in numbers.

The Rev. John Hennessy is a native son of Ireland, born near the City of Limerick, January 6, 1879, a son of Thomas and Mary Ann (Barry) Hennessy, in whose family were ten children. The father, who was a farmer, was a native of the County of Limerick, as were also his ancestors for many generations. Four of the children of Thomas and Mary Ann Hennessy, the Reverend John, the Reverend Thomas of Roundup, Montana, and Sister Elerius and Sister Peter, are the representatives of the family in the United States.

After attending the public schools of his home community Rev. John Hennessy entered the Jesuit College in Limerick and subsequently St. Patrick's College at Thurles, and at the last named institution was ordained to the priesthood on the 17th of June, 1906. Several years before his educational training was completed he had laid his plans to come to the United States, and was one of many student priests who adopted the suggestion of Cardinal Satolli and made their way to the Diocese of Montana to engage in their high church callings.

Father Hennessy sailed from Queenstown on the steamer "Umbria" for New York, making the journey in company with Rev. M. J. Hannan and Rev. Fr. O'Kennedy, the latter rector of the Cathedral in Helena. Father Hennessy came direct to Great Falls, Montana, and there delivered his first sermon in this state. He continued as the assistant pastor of St. Ann's Cathedral at Great Falls for 2½ years, although prior to that time, from March, 1907, he was the builder and pastor of the church at Fort Benton. From Great Falls he was transferred to Culbertson, where he spent two years in faithful and efficient church work, and since that time he has given his life's efforts to his church at Plentywood.

Father Hennessy's connection with community work over this district is well known. He is a firm believer in the future of this region and gives freely of his time and means in any righteous direction for its improvement and development, mentally, morally and otherwise. He made the pioneer address in Plentywood for the Red Cross, delivered speeches to the soldiers who were departing for the front, and took the same personal interest in all war work which has ever characterized his activity in his church and parish. Although he espouses the principles of the democratic party in his political affiliations, his mind is ever open and free for honest convictions and subject to change with the demands of time.

Leonard E. Rue, secretary and treasurer of the Riba Lumber Company of Plentywood, was born in Glenwood, Minnesota, June 23, 1886. His father, Henry N. Rue, whose birth occurred in Pennsylvania, was reared in Minnesota. On September 16, 1861, he entered the service of the North as a corporal at Fort Snelling, and saw active service in the West under Capt. J. R. Bennett and Colonels Lester, Griggs, Andrews and Madison. The regiment was assigned to Mitchell's Brigade, Seventh Corps, Army of the Ohio, and Mr. Rue took part in the campaign around Vicksburg and re-enlisted as a veteran June 25, 1863, re-entering his former company and regiment.

Mr. Rue participated in the battles of Fitzhugh's Woods, Little Rock, Devall's Bluff and numerous other engagements, and during the last eighteen months of his service he was in the Ordnance Department at Devall's Bluff. He was discharged from the service with rank of sergeant. The regiment did duty in Tennessee, took part in the battle of Murfreesboro in December, 1862, and was then sent back to Minnesota to take part in the campaign against the Sioux Indians, fighting at Wood Lake and Yellow Medicine. Mr. Rue received his final discharge from the service August 16, 1865, at Fort Snelling, with the termination of the war.

Following the termination of his military services Henry N. Rue engaged in farming and the nursery business, engaging in the latter at Glenwood, Minnesota, and later at Bigstone, South Dakota. His death occurred at the last named place in March, 1899, when he had reached the age of sixty-one years. In his early life he had married Matilda Movius, whose father was born in Germany, and her death occurred the same year as that of her husband, 1899. In their family were the following children: Essie, the wife of G. D. Riesland, of Spokane, Washington; Ressie, wife of C. J. Diebold, of Balfour, North Dakota; Bessie, who married R. E. McCain, of Motts, North Dakota; Mae, wife of A. Riba, of Plentywood; Roy, whose home is in Lidgerwood, North Dakota; and Leonard, the youngest survivor of the family.

Leonard E. Rue, although born in Minnesota, spent his boyhood and youth in both North and South Dakota, spending his early life amid rural surroundings and in the home of a nurseryman. He received his advanced educational training in the Minneapolis Business College, and thus well prepared to enter business life he began as a stenographer with Wyman, Patridge & Company, of Minneapolis, a few months later becoming an employe of George R. Newell & Company of that city in the same capacity. He remained eight years with the Newell Company, the last three years of his connection therewith having been as a traveling salesman with territory in North Dakota.

In 1909 Mr. Rue came into the locality of Plentywood, Montana, as a settler, and at once became identified with the lumber business in partnership with A. Riba, who established the Riba Company, Unincorporated, and Mr. Rue has since had active charge of the yard. The Riba Company has been engaged in the retail trade exclusively, and they have contributed greatly toward the substantial and permanent improvement in this locality. Mr. Rue established his home adjacent to the townsite, building one of the best homes of the community, and eventually he platted a part of his tract for town lots as the Rue Addition. The public school and Court House have been erected on this tract and many good residences have also been built, and it is now looked upon as one of the beauty spots of Plentywood.

Like other patriotic citizens during the recent World war Mr. Rue devoted his energies as a private in the support of the auxiliary work for raising funds for war purposes. He was reared in the faith of republican principles, which were in harmony with his own convictions as he approached manhood, and his first presidential vote was given to Mr. Taft, and he has ever since continued to give his allegiance to the republican party. His only fraternal affiliations are with the Masonic Order, and he is secretary of the Plentywood Lodge of Masons.

At Balfour, North Dakota, in March, 1912, Mr. Rue was united in marriage with Miss Ethel Maxwell, who was born in Minnesota in May, 1891, the oldest of the four children of Frank Maxwell, who was engaged in the hotel business at Balfour. He was born in Wisconsin, going from there to Appleton, Minnesota, and finally to Balfour, North Dakota. Mrs. Rue was educated in the public schools, and completed a musical training as a pianist at Jamestown, North Dakota. Two sons, Stanley and Roy, have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Rue.

Chester J. Beiseker, the cashier of the Sheridan County State Bank, is associated with one of the leading financial institutions of Montana. The Sheridan County State Bank was established in July, 1914, with T. L. Beiseker president and C. J. Beiseker cashier, and the personnel remains the same at the present time. The bank was incorporated with a capital of $20,000, and the statement of the institution at the close of business December 31, 1919, showed deposits of $534,000 and surplus and undivided profits of $15,000.

Chester J. Beiseker came to Montana from Minnesota, where he was born at Austin, March 14, 1888, a son of one of the early day barrel makers of Minnesota, Charles N. Beiseker, who later sold farm loans or investments and is now living retired. He was born in the City of New York in 1847, of German ancestry, and he grew to mature years in that state and received a limited training in its public schools. When about twenty-two years of age he went to Minnesota and started life at Austin without capital, making his way in the business world with his own unaided efforts. During the Civil war he served with a New York regiment, and his political support has been given to the republican party.

Before leaving New York City Mr. Beiseker married Miss Catherine Riley, a daughter of Thomas Riley, who brought his family to the United States from Ireland when Mrs. Beiseker was three years old. He was a farmer by occupation, and was accidentally killed by a runaway team. Mr. and Mrs. Beiseker became the parents of the following children: Thomas L., whose home is in Fessenden, North Dakota; Mrs. John W. Shelby, of Mitchell, South Dakota; Mrs. William Metzger, of Portal, North Dakota; Henry L., who resides in Minneapolis; Mrs. J. W. Yelland, also of Minneapolis; Arthur N., whose home is in Harvey, North Dakota; Mrs. William N. Roberts, of Sioux Falls, South Dakota; and Chester J., the Plentywood banker.

After completing his high school training at Austin, Minnesota, Chester J. Beiseker secured the position of bookkeeper in the Wells County State Bank at Fessenden, North Dakota. He was subsequently connected with similar institutions in a clerical capacity, finally working his way up to the position of bank cashier, and he was thus engaged at Columbus, North Dakota, when he decided to try his fortunes in Montana. He arrived in Plentywood in May, 1914, and in July of the same year, in company with T. L. Beiseker, he organized the Sheridan County State Bank and became its cashier.

Since locating in Montana Mr. Beiseker has also taken an active interest in its agricultural development, and in 1916, associated with H. T. Martin of Poplar, he engaged in farming some 10,000 acres in Roosevelt County. The proposition is on the Fort Peck Reservation, where they are leasing and buying lands extensively and beginning the work at the grass roots. Their efforts have been directed toward the production of wheat and flax, and since the inauguration of their efforts they have had two fairly good crops. Scientific methods are employed, and it was through the success of their efforts that the Morgan Syndicate started an extensive proposition on the same reservation. The property has been substantially improved, two sets of improvements having been erected, twenty miles of three-wire fence have been built, and an inventory of the property shows an investment of $180,000.

Mr. Beiseker married at Columbus, North Dakota, in February, 1912, Miss Hilda Grina, who was born at Rothsay, Minnesota, in 1889, and they have one son, Norman born in March, 1913.

Rex M. Movius. The roster of the public officials of Sheridan County enrolls the name of Rex M. Movius, the county treasurer. He was born at Big Stone, South Dakota, November 28, 1888, but his boyhood days were spent at Lidgerwood, North Dakota, and he completed his educational training in the Northwestern University of Chicago, where he had two years of literary work, and in the business college at Mankato, Minnesota. He is a son of William R. Movius and a grandson of the founder of the family in America, who came from Germany and established his home in South Dakota, finally removing to Glenwood, Minnesota, where he entered public land. He died in that state and lies buried at Lidgerwood, North Dakota, by the side of his wife, who survived him for several years. The children in this old German family were: Albert, who died at Bowbells, South Dakota; William R., of Santa Barbara, California; Ernest, of Lidgerwood; John R., also of Lidgerwood; Emil, who died at that place; and Mary, the only daughter, is cashier of the First National Bank of Lidgerwood.

William R. Movius was born in Prussia, Germany, and was a youth of sixteen when he accompanied his parents to the United States and located with them on the shores of Big Stone Lake in South Dakota. They were among the early pioneers there, and for a time they conducted a small general store and traded with the Sioux tribe of Indians. The son William entered upon his independent business career at Big Stone, South Dakota, building there a water-power mill on the Minnesota River and followed milling for several years. Going then to Lidgerwood, North Dakota, he built a flour mill there in 1890, which was destroyed by fire a few years later and was replaced by a larger mill. Mr. Movius continued his milling industry there until 1918, when he sold the mill and retired from business. He came then into Montana and located near his three sons in Billings, but later disposed of his home there and for the protection of his health moved to California.

William R. Movius married a native daughter of Minnesota, Marcella J. Murray, whose father was from Nova Scotia. The children born to this union are: Arthur, of Billings, Montana; Winifred, of Santa Barbara, California; Marcella, the wife of Dr. N. J. Shields, of San Luis Obispo, California; Pearl, wife of Arthur J. Rosecranz, of Lidgerwood, North Dakota; Rex M., of Plentywood; Walter R., whose home is also at Billings; Harold E., Hysham, Montana; and Margaret, the wife of Herman J. Warren, of Mobile, Alabama.

Rex M. Movius began his independent business career at St. James, Minnesota, as relief man in a bank there, subsequently became savings teller in the Harris Trust & Savings Bank of Chicago, and then after spending another period as relief man at St. James, he came out to Montana in the fall of 1912. Locating first at Medicine Lake, he secured the position of bookkeeper and teller in the Security State Bank there, later spent a brief period in the First State Bank of Froid, Montana, and was then sent to Plentywood by the newly elected county treasurer to act as his deputy in the treasurer's office. Mr. Movius opened the books and performed the initial work of the office, continuing as the deputy treasurer during Mr. Anderson's administration. He then became an independent candidate for the office in the fall, but meeting defeat continued in the office as deputy for the new treasurer. But again resuming his banking interests, Mr. Movius entered the First National Bank at Plentywood as teller, and remained with that banking house until elected the treasurer of Sheridan County in November, 1916, and two years later was re-elected as the successor to R. C. Stanfield.

On the 10th of June, 1914, at St. James, Minnesota, Mr. Movius was married to Miss Sadie M. Schoffman, who was born in that Minnesota town, a daughter of Frank Schoffman, who gave his industrial life to merchandising and farming. He was born in Wisconsin, and is now a retired business man of St. James. Mrs. Movius after graduating from the high school of her native town spent some time as a student in the Mankato Normal. She was the fourth born of her parents' five children, the others being William, George, Rollie and Rose.

Although reared under the influence of democratic principles, Mr. Movius espoused the cause of the republicans when he reached the age of maturity, voting for Colonel Roosevelt in 1912 and for Mr. Hughes in 1916, and he made the race for the treasurer's office on the republican ticket. He is a member of both the Odd Fellows and Elks at Williston, North Dakota. During the participation of this country in the World war Mr. Movius was chairman of the Thrift Stamp Committee and was otherwise active in war relief work, and Mrs. Movius was an active and efficient worker in the local Red Cross.

Edward S. Powers. As one of the developers of the Town of Medicine Lake, Edward S. Powers has gained a distinctive place in the history of the locality. He came into this community as a settler in May, 1912, and engaged in the banking business, first as assistant cashier and later became cashier of the First State Bank of Medicine Lake, succeeding P. J. Eie in that office.

The First State Bank of Medicine Lake was founded in 1909 by R. P. Bowman, P. J. Eie and Edward Egan, Mr. Bowman becoming its first president. This banking house now has a capital of $20,000, with surplus and undivided profits in 1919 of $35,000.00, and deposits in December, 1919 of $177,000. Mr. Powers became the cashier of the bank in January, 1913.

Edward S. Powers was born at Lake Geneva, Walworth County, Wisconsin, June 20, 1885, and was reared in the locality of his birth. He is a son of Richard Powers, also a native of the Lake Geneva locality of Wisconsin and now a retired farmer there. Although he spent his active life as a farmer, Richard Powers was also identified with banking and with the municipal affairs of Lake Geneva.

Richard Powers was married in his early life to Bridget Cassin, and they became the parents of the following children: Mrs. T. O. Cody, of Chicago, Illinois; May, whose home is at Lake Geneva, Wisconsin; William, of Bainville, Montana; Edward S., the banker of Medicine Lake; and John, a resident of Havana, North Dakota.

After graduating from the Lake Geneva High School at the age of twenty Edward S. Powers entered upon his business career as a clerk. From his native town he came to Montana in 1908 and became one of the prominent early business men of Bainville, where he was associated in the organization of the Farmers Bank. He was made the assistant cashier of that banking house and continued it for three years, coming then to Medicine Lake and becoming the cashier of the First State Bank.

As one of the early developers of the town Mr. Powers became a stockholder in the telephone company, in the farmers' elevator and in the Medicine Lake Flouring Mill. He has also engaged to some extent in farming since he came to this locality, chiefly as a wheat raiser. He has served Medicine Lake as an alderman since its corporation, and for a time was also clerk of its school board, and is the president of the Commercial Club. During the World war he served as chairman of several of the Liberty Loan drives made in Medicine Lake. was chairman of the "Four Minute Men" and of the War Savings drive, and represented his locality in county meetings and in the interests of war matters.

At Milwaukee, Wisconsin, November 22, 1915, Mr. Powers was married to Miss Mary Mulcahy, who was born in Minneapolis, Minnesota, August 27, 1886, a daughter of Thomas Mulcahy, of Irish birth and who served many years in the postoffice at Minneapolis, Minnesota. His death occurred later in that city. Mrs. Powers is one of a large family of children. She received her advanced educational training in the St. Cloud Normal School, of which she is a graduate, and from that time until her marriage she was engaged in teaching. Two sons have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Powers, Richard E., born November 27, 1917, and John Thomas, born August 26, 1919.

WILBERT MOWATT, M. D. The first civilian physician to practice over the locality including Wolf Point was Dr. Wilbert Mowatt. Dr. Mowatt was also the first of the medical profession to make his residence and open an office in the new town, where he began practice in February, 1914.

Dr. Mowatt, who has had nearly a quarter of a century of active professional experience, was born in Pictou County, Nova Scotia, February 16, 1870. His father was a distinguished Presbyterian clergyman, Rev. Andrew Joseph Mowatt, a native of Woodstock, New Brunswick, and of Scotch parentage. Rev. Mr. Mowatt married Louisa J. Annand, who was born at Aberdeen, Scotland, came to America with her parents and grew up in Nova Scotia. She was married at Gays River, where Rev. Mowatt had taught school. The latter graduated in both the liberal arts and theological courses from Dalhousie College in Halifax, and later was given the honorary degree D. D. by McGill University. He was active in the labors of the ministry for forty-three years, dropping dead in his pulpit in Erskine Church, Montreal, in 1900, at the age of seventy-three. His widow returned to Scotland for a visit in 1901, and died of heart failure at Fort William on the banks of Lake Loch Lomond. Rev. Mr. Mowatt and wife had the following family: Doctor Wilbert; Oswald, a druggist at Montreal; Helen Louise, wife of Thomas Sidey, Professor of Classical Languages in Washington State University; Rev. Edward E., a Presbyterian clergyman at Chipman, New Brunswick; Joseph A., who left his duties as a Presbyterian missionary in the British army, served through the World war, coming out with the rank of major, and has since resumed his missionary duties; E. Rae, wife of Rev. George Christie, of Landsdown Station, Nova Scotia; Alice, a trained nurse at Montreal; and Edith, wife of Clarence Christie, a consulting electrical engineer and professor of engineering in McGill University.

Doctor Mowatt spent most of his boyhood and youth at Frederickton, New Brunswick, and in 1891 accompanied the family to Montreal. He was educated in the high school at Frederickton, graduated with the A. B. degree in 1891 from the University of New Brunswick, and took his medical studies in McGill University at Montreal, graduating in 1896. After six months in the Montreal Maternity Hospital he came to the United States and began practice in North Dakota at Grafton, but after a year practiced at Walhalla until he came to Wolf Point in 1914. At Wolf Point his first office was in his residence, but shortly was moved to the upper floors of the old Herald Building, and when that structure was burned in the following July all his office and household effects were destroyed. It was a loss that might well have discouraged him, but he showed his faith in the new town and community and was rewarded by a profitable practice and was also a helpful factor in the development of the community. At the time of the war he enlisted for the medical service, but a defect in his hand caused his rejection, and he had to be content to serve as a member of the Volunteer Service Corps. He made his first declaration of American citizenship at Grafton, taking his final papers at Pembina. His preference in politics is shown by his record of having supported Colonel Roosevelt in 1904, Mr. Taft in 1908, Colonel Roosevelt in 1912, and Mr. Hughes in 1916. He took his first degrees in Masonry at Rolette, North Dakota, is now affiliated with Loyalty Lodge No. 121 at Wolf Point, and is a member of the Helena Scottish Rite Consistory and Algeria Temple of the Mystic Shrine.

At Walhalla, North Dakota, November 17, 1897, Doctor Mowatt married Miss Claire F. Embury, who was born at Sarnia, Ontario, in September, 1875, being one of the family of two sons and three daughters of her parents. Her remote paternal ancestor was Philip Embury, the founder of Methodism in America and the first Methodist Bishop. Her mother's maiden name was Esther Shurtliff, whose forefathers were colonial settlers. Doctor and Mrs. Mowatt have two children, Shirley Embury and Esther Louise. Shirley Embury is a graduate of the Wolf Point High School and now attending the University of Southern California. Esther Louise graduated from Wolf Point eighth grade and is now attending the Los Angeles High School. Doctor Mowatt and family moved to Los Angeles, California, July 22, 1920, and Doctor Mowatt will follow his profession in that city.

JOHN LISTERUD was one of the first business men to give vitality to the new Town of Wolf Point. He has been connected with several phases of commercial enterprise there during the past decade, and his achievements and influence are very likely to be regarded as the pioneer foundation stone of the community in future years.

Mr. Listerud was born at the farm of Listerud, about a dozen miles from Christiania, Norway, August 11, 1863. His father Hans Listerud, was born April 4, 1838, was a Norwegian farmer, and when his son John was five years of age brought his family to the United States and settled in Renville County, Minnesota. He homesteaded and spent the rest of his active life as a farmer in that state. He developed and improved his claim, and sold it some years before leaving Minnesota. He acquired the English language readily, went through the process of naturalization, and became a man of influence in his locality and in the republican party. He was elected and served as treasurer of Renville County for fourteen years, probably the longest incumbency in that office up to the time. When he retired from office he came out to Montana the same year as his son John, and spent the rest of his life at Wolf Point. He died in 1917. He was a member of the Lutheran Church. His wife, Martha Hager, now lives with her daughter at Wolf Point at the age of eighty-three. They had a large family of children, namely: Petra, wife of A. C. Nedrud, of Minot, North Dakota; Clara, wife of David Scholl of Sacred Heart, Minnesota; Peter, of Minneapolis Minnesota; John; Martin, who died at Belleview, Minnesota, leaving two children; Bert, of Sacred Heart, Minnesota; Deoline, Mrs. Henry Urban, of Wolf Point; Oline, wife of Morris Lund, a farmer near Wolf Point; and Henry, of Sawyer, North Dakota.

John Listerud after leaving home went to North Dakota and proved up a homestead eighteen miles south of Minot. He lived in North Dakota about ten years, and first identified himself with the Minot community in 1903. He was interested in the lumber business while there. For three years he was a merchant at Tioga, North Dakota, from there came to Montana, and on June 1, 1910, began his connection with Wolf Point. Old Wolf Point, while it has been a prominent landmark in this section of Montana for a number of years, was left a mile to one side when the Great Northern established a station, and Mr. Listerud was one of the first to recognize in this station an eligible site for business enterprise. He established and became proprietor of the pioneer lumber yard of the town, and conducted it until July, 1913, when he sold it to the Rogers-Templeton Company. In the meantime, in the fall of 1912, he had built an elevator and engaged in the grain business, and in the spring of 1914 he built an electric plant with a flour mill in connection. He sold the elevator in the winter of 1915, and after that concentrated his attention upon the light plant and the flour mill. Mr. Listerud is one of those constructive business men who take pleasure in establishing new enterprises, and after seeing them well started are satisfied to dispose of them when the opportunity presents. In line with this policy he sold his light plant in February, 1920, and at present has only his flour mill, which is one of the live and growing enterprises of the region. He is also a stockholder in the Wolf Point Light Plant and in some other minor enterprises.

Mr. Listerud encouraged the incorporation of Wolf Point and was chosen the second mayor, but resigned before the expiration of his term. He also helped establish the first church in Wolf Point, at first the Union congregation and now used by the Presbyterians as a place of worship. He was the prime mover in starting the first school. Wolf Point was a part of the Glasgow District. Mr. Listerud, W. H. Smith and W. B. Everett furnished the capital for building the first schoolhouse in the town. When the district was properly set off it reimbursed these gentlemen for the cost of the building. Mr. Listerud was appointed the first trustee of the separate school district.

In 1917 Mr. Listerud built at Wolf Point one of the best homes in Roosevelt County, an eight-room stucco house with basement and hot water heat, and with all the appointments of modern comfort. He became an American citizen through the naturalization of his father, and has been steadily identified with the republican party as a voter. He and his family are Lutherans.

In Renville County, Minnesota, Mr. Listerud married Miss Minnie Haug, a native of Minnesota and daughter of John Haug, who came from Norway. Mrs. Listerud died in January, 1905, the mother of the following children: Hjalmer Horatio, a farmer near Wolf Point; Morris, secretary of the Wolf Point Electric Light Company; Edna Geneva, a teacher in Renville County, Minnesota; Eva, a nurse in St. Barnabas Hospital in Minneapolis; and Ruth, a student in the University of Minnesota. In July, 1910, at Minneapolis, Mr. Listerud married for his present wife Miss Hilda Rongerud, who was born in Renville County, September 8, 1877, a daughter of Theodore and Carren (Nelson) Rongerud. Her parents were natives of Norway and her father came to the United States before the Civil war and enlisted from Minnesota in the Union army. The children in the Rongerud family were: Olaf, who died in Minnesota; Mrs. Emma Flaten, of Granite Falls, Minnesota; Minnie, Mrs. Andrew Vold, of Maynard, Minnesota; Juel, of Seattle; Lena, wife of Irvin Lytle, of Burleigh County, North Dakota; Mrs. Listerud; Clara, wife of Herman Wulf, of Minneapolis; and Mrs. Selma Flagstad, who died at Minneapolis.

Mrs. Listerud was educated in a seminary at Wilmer, Minnesota, and in the Northern Illinois College at Dixon, and for more than five years was a teacher in North Dakota and Minnesota. Mr. and Mrs. Listerud have a son and daughter, John Howard and Helen Dorothy.

Mr. Listerud had the satisfaction of seeing two of his sons join the colors during the World war. Hjalmer H. was with the Fifty-eighth Infantry of the Fourth Division. His first baptism of fire was at Chateau Thierry following the Marines. In the Argonne he was wounded by shrapnel October 4, 1918, and was in a hospital when the armistice was signed. He was invalided home and discharged at Camp Logan in the spring of 1919. The son Morris entered the Signal Service, but never reached the other side. After training in Missoula he was sent to Fort Leavenworth, thence to Camp Meade, and at the end of the war was returned to Camp Logan, where he was discharged and reached home in February, 1919. These brothers are members of the American Legion Post at Wolf Point.

James Conlon had made himself an important factor in a large wholesale house at St. Paul before he came to Flathead County, Montana. He arrived in Montana at a peculiarly depressing time, when this state and the entire country were in the throes of the financial panic of 1893. Mr. Conlon took hold of a bankrupt enterprise at Kalispell, rebuilt and recreated it, and for many years enjoyed an almost phenomenal prosperity as a merchant. He is still active in business and is properly regarded as one of the ablest men of affairs in Northern Montana.

He was born at Port Henry, New York, a son of Charles and Agnes Conlon. He attended the public schools of his native town and in 1877 left the East and went to St. Paul, Minnesota. As a boy he clerked in a dry goods store, rapidly acquired a knowledge of the business, and following the impulses of his broad ambition for achievement he eventually became one of the original incorporators of the Powers Dry Goods Company, one of the large wholesale concerns of St. Paul. He was in that business until it was sold.

Then, in the fall of 1893, he reached Kalispell and took over the bankrupt concern of the Kalispell Mercantile Company. During several following years he allowed no interest or diversion to interfere with a strict application to business, and also the strict application of business principles to his work, and before the close of the century he was proprietor of a business whose trade ramified out all over the Flathead country. The business was continued under his own name until January, 1904, when it was incorporated as the Conlon Mercantile Company. In July, 1911, Mr. Conlon sold the merchandise department to the Elliott Brothers Company and has since concerned himself with other business affairs.

Mr. Conlon was president of the Kalispell Board of Trade. He is an Elk and Knight of Pythias and a democrat.

For the past twenty years Mr. and Mrs. Conlon have spent their summers at the head of Lake McDonald at Glacier Park. Their summer home is a unique and attractive one, consisting of a log house, with fireplace, broad verandas, and immediately around are immense pines, while in the background are the snow-capped mountains and in front the waters of Lake McDonald. Mr. Conlon has fenced in an area around his house, and enjoys the culture of beautiful flowers, vegetables and berries. He erected the fence primarily to keep out the bears and deer, which otherwise would destroy all the green vegetation. The Conlon summer home is the chief place for the entertainment of Mr. and Mrs. Conlon's many friends, and an invitation to its hospitality is something greatly prized. Mr. and Mrs. Conlon also have one of the most beautiful homes in the City of Kalispell. The career of Mr. Conlon at Kalispell demonstrates the fact that a man guided by the right business methods and with a sufficient amount of enterprise can always succeed where others have failed. He is not only a thorough business man but throughout his residence at Kalispell has been a public-spirited and a generous worker and contributor to the community. At Sioux City, Iowa, August 9, 1904, he married Miss May Sewell. Mrs. Conlon was born at Fond du Lac, Wisconsin, a daughter of John Sewell, and finished her education in a seminary at Fond du Lac.

Albert A. Birum. Exemplifying the spirit of the great West, Albert A. Birum has developed a prosperous mercantile business at Saco under the caption of the Birum-Nelson Company, but he is not a native of this section of the country, although a resident of Montana since 1900. He came into the world in Redwood County, Minnesota, on August 8, 1879, a son of Ener Birum. As the name indicates, Ener Birum was born in Norway, but from the youthful age of four years lived in the United States, his parents at that time coming to this country and locating in Minnesota, where both later died.

Ener Birum grew up on the farm his parents had acquired, and in addition to farming learned the milling trade and followed it for thirty years. When he first went into that calling the old-time burrs were used to grind the grain for flour and feed, and he was one of the first millers to install the rollers invented to take the place of the burrs.

When war was declared between the two sections of his adopted country Ener Birum showed no hesitancy, but enlisted in a Minnesota infantry regiment, which was later assigned to General Grant's command. From then on until the close of the war he fought bravely and well, and after his honorable discharge he resumed his peaceful occupation of milling. During his military service, although he was in a number of engagements, Ener Birum escaped being wounded or taken prisoner. He identified himself with the Grand Army of the Republic, and continued a member of his local post until his death, which occurred in 1893, as the result of an accident in the yards of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad, when he was struck by a train.

Ener Birum was married to Anna V. Ortt, who was born in the United States, but was of German and French extraction. She survives her husband and lives at Hayfield, Minnesota. The children born to her and her husband were as follows: Herbert L., who is a resident of Great Falls, Montana; Millie, who is the wife of Frank J. Berkheimer, of Milton, Utah; Albert A., whose name heads this review; and Ella, who is Mrs. Harry Baker, of Hayfield, Minnesota.

Albert A. Birum was reared at North Redwood, Minnesota, and attended the public schools of Redwood Falls until he was sixteen years old, at which age he left school and did his first outside work as a farm hand. Subsequently he secured a place in the mill at North Redwood where his father had been employed, and when he left that place he came to Montana.

Mr. Birum was induced to take that step by his brother, who was agent for the Great Northern Railroad at Saco. After joining his brother Albert A. Birum worked about the station and picked up a knowledge of telegraphy so that in a few months was able to hold the position of telegrapher, but when a better position was offered him he took it and became timekeeper for a surfacing gang of the Great Northern Railroad, with headquarters at Havre. Until the spring of 1901 he remained in this work, and then came back to Saco, entering the employ of the C. W. Nelson Company, general merchants, and remained with it until 1906. When C. E. Taylor bought the business in that year he retained the services of Mr. Birum, and then when the business became the Saco Mercantile Company Mr. Birum was still one of the honored employes of the house. In the spring of 1909 Mr. Birum established himself in a business of his own at Dodson, as a branch of the Saco Mercantile Company, but a year later returned to Saco and founded the firm of Birum & Nelson, L. B. Nelson being his partner. Following the death of Mr. Nelson on April 4, 1915, changes were made and in September of that year the present name, the Birum-Nelson Company was adopted. This company handles a general line of merchandise, coal, feed and lumber, entirely at retail. It has a floor space of 55 by 70 feet and a wareroom 25 by 70 feet.

Mr. Birum came to Saco when it belonged to Valley County, and he favored the county division movement which led to the creation of Phillips County. In national matters he is a republican, having cast his first presidential vote for William McKinley, and he has voted for that party's presidential nominee ever since. He is a stockholder and director of the Farmers and Merchants Bank of Saco, and was a stockholder in the company which built the old Windsor Hotel, and of the creamery.

On August 15, 1906, Mr. Birum was married to Miss Nellie D. Nelson, a daughter of Rezin and Rhoda (Sutlieff) Nelson, natives of Pennsylvania and Wisconsin, respectively, and they were married in Minnesota. Mr. Nelson spent his life as a farmer and died at New Richland, Minnesota. During the war between the states he served in the Union army, and was fortunate enough to escape being wounded. Following the war he joined the local Grand Army Post, and was active in it until his death, in May, 1916, when he was over seventy-nine years of age. His widow survives him and lives at New Richland. She is a member of the Congregational Church, and he belonged to it too. Their children were as follows: Lee B., who was a partner of Mr. Birum, died leaving a widow and daughter; Rezin, who lives at Appleton, Minnesota; Clarence W., who lives at Saco; Roy, who is also a resident of Saco; Rex, who lives at Forsyth, Montana; Earl, who is a resident of New Richland, Minnesota; and Mrs. Birum, who was born at New Richland, Minnesota, August 20, 1884. She was graduated from the Waseca High School of Waseca, Minnesota, and came to Montana in 1904 as a teacher. For two years prior to her marriage she was one of the popular educators of Saco.

During the late war Mr. Birum was an active participant in raising funds for all of the war drives. Mrs. Birum belonged to the surgical dressing class of the Saco branch of Malta Chapter of the Red Cross. She belongs to Saco Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, No. 81, and is now its associate conductress.

F. M. Plummer. In the history of one of the thriving smaller towns of Northwestern Montana, Libby, the chief individual factor in business and citizenship has been F. M. Plummer, principal owner and manager of the Kootenai Mercantile Company.

Mr. Plummer came here when the site of Libby was one vast forest. Only a trail had been cut through the timber and all supplies had to be freighted fifty-five miles from the nearest railroad point at Smead's Spur on the Northern Pacific. Such were the difficulties of transportation that it cost $7 per 100 to get goods into the little locality inhabited by a few placer miners. Mr. Plummer had faith then as he does now in the wonderful possibilities of this section, and soon with a partner opened, in a small log cabin store, a modest stock of goods sufficient for the needs of his patrons. It is a matter of great satisfaction that he has always kept his business a little in advance of present needs, and is now proprietor of one of the largest and most completely stocked department stores in Lincoln County.

Mr. Plummer was born in Calumet County, Wisconsin, a son of Josiah Plummer, and was reared and educated at Menasha, Wisconsin. He was still a young man when he came to Montana and found his location at Libby. His partner in business was Jesse Neff. Though a great timber region, not a saw mill had been established, and all lumber was sawed by hand and cost $200 per 1,000. Due to transportation difficulties, sugar was then sold at $25 per 100 pounds.

Not long after the firm had entered business, Miss Sivoli Neff, a sister of Jesse Neff, came from the East to visit her brother, and the visit terminated in a life job in Montana. She was born in Virginia and had been liberally educated in Baker University in Baldwin, Kansas. Her visit to Montana led to her employment for two years as principal of the Libby Schools, and then she became an equal partner with Mr. Plummer in his home and domestic life, and is also given much credit by him for her share in promoting their joint business prosperity. Mr. and Mrs. Plummer are republicans, he is an Odd Fellow and she a Rebekah, and their church is the Methodist. They have been co-workers in every good cause in their community and were liberal and heartfelt in their devotion to local war work. Mr. Plummer served as chairman of the Red Cross Chapter, and they gave the Chapter the use of a steam-heated room for the period of the war. Mrs. Plummer spent much of her time in Red Cross work. Mr. Plummer has served both as a member of the Council and as mayor of the city.

As a pioneer he was on hand to welcome the first railroad and has witnessed every important change in this section of Lincoln County. His labors have brought reward in the prosperity and the business he now enjoys, and he has given much of himself and his means to every important interest in the community.

The Kootenai Mercantile Company now occupies a magnificent store 100 by 127 feet, with basement and with outside warehouses. The store is now divided into four departments, for groceries, hardware, dry goods and men's furnishings, and a competent and skillful manager is in charge of each department. Mr. Plummer personally planned the present store. It is the fourth he has occupied since beginning his business career at Libby. The first was a small log structure, and each successor represented some progressive advancement in his business. The store is a model of perfect system and order, and it stands as a monument to Mr. Plummer's sound business judgment and also the prophecy of his faith in the future of his country.

Mr. Plummer was also one of the organizers of the First National Bank of Libby and has been continuously in the office of vice president.

L. S. Woodbury. Aside from the mines and smelters one of the largest individual industries of Montana is the Great Falls Iron Works, founded thirty years ago by the late L. S. Woodbury. The business is a large and flourishing one today and has the special distinction of having its affairs guided and capably conducted by Miss M. Cerula Woodbury, daughter of its founder and one of Montana's most interesting women.

The late L. S. Woodbury earned a high place in American industries as an iron master, inventor and a genius in mechanical production. He helped to lighten the burdens of the world, and the iron business he established at Great Falls, while so important in the state, was only part of his manifold activities.

His many rare gifts were in part inherited from an ancestry of peculiar intellectual worth, displayed not only in the realm of mechanical invention, but in sound statesmanship. His first American ancestor was John Woodbury, who was one of the most historic characters in the old Dorchester Bay Company of Massachusetts, and was identified with the early history of Salem. The annals of Salem and Lynn, Massachusetts, carry many items relative to the activities of the Woodburys. The family is a numerous one in Essex and other counties in Massachusetts today, and nearly all of them trace their descent either from John Woodbury or his brother William. John Woodbury, who was born in England about 1579 came to America as one of the leaders of the Dorchester Company in 1623. It is said that he brought the first cattle into the New England colonies. About 1626 he moved to the localities afterward known as Salem. In 1627 he returned to England in the interest of the colony, and thus became probably the first envoy or minister from New England to the mother country. One result of his labors while abroad was the colony under which Massachusetts Bay was governed for many years. He held many offices at Salem and in Massachusetts Colony, and was the first and only Lord High Constable ever appointed in this country.

A late distinguished member of the family, Charles J. H. Woodbury, of Lynn, who was a deep student of the annals of the family, wrote the following words: "While the Woodbury descendants have not attained the heights of fame or fallen to depths of notoriety, they have occupied from the earliest days of the colonies through the early times of the republic, and, many I claim, are today in honorable and leading positions in local affairs, and have been frugal and industrious citizens. The early progenitors have not left great mansions nor even portraits, and all which that implies. In the wars with the Indians, French and English the name abounds on the rolls as privates, sergeants, lieutenants and captains, and in latter days one of their number, a graduate of West Point, had a creditable career. In statesmanship the brilliant career of Levi Woodbury was reaching to the assured prospective for the presidency at the time of his untimely death." Levi Woodbury was secretary of the navy, and others have been prominent in the church, in the law, medicine and finance. Two of the name, Joseph Page Woodbury and James Atkins Woodbury, gave to the world the fundamental inventions in working lumber by power, their inventions being the forerunners of all the marvelous wood-working machinery of the present time.

The grandfather of the late L. S. Woodbury was Seth Woodbury, a sea captain, who in the early days commanded many vessels in trade between America and Europe. He lived to be ninety-six. L. S. Woodbury was the only child of Seth Woodbury, Jr., a tanner and currier, who was born in Massachusetts, November 8, 1805, and died March 18, 1858, at the age of fifty-three. At an early day Seth Woodbury settled in New Hampshire and conducted a tanning business. His wife, Mary R. (Batchelor) Woodbury, died in March, 1905, at the age of eighty-eight years. Both parents were natives of Massachusetts.

Lee S. Woodbury

H. Woodbury

L. S. Woodbury was born at Nashua, Hillsborough County, New Hampshire, June 10, 1838, and was graduated from the high school. When he was twelve years of age he walked three miles from home to witness the arrival of the first locomotive of the Boston, Lowell & Nashua Railroad at Nashua. That railroad locomotive supplied him with the mechanical enthusiasm which inspired many of his subsequent years. On leaving school he went to work for the Boston, Lowell & Nashua Railroad in the shops at Nashua. He received a thorough training as a machinist, and his work was occasionally diversified by experience as a fireman and later as a locomotive engineer. He was running one of the locomotive engines of that time when only eighteen years of age. Later he completed an apprenticeship in a factory at Nashua manufacturing tools, lathes and planers. Later he had charge of a machine shop in New Hampshire which made a great variety of horsepower machinery and agricultural implements. From that work he was called to the stern duties of participation in the Civil war, and entering the navy was assigned as a machinist in the North Atlantic Squadron, and afterward was promoted to assistant engineer. After the war he became general foreman of the Hope Iron Works at Providence, manufacturers of engines, boilers and other machinery. About 1872 he became consulting engineer of Sheppard, Morse & Company at Burlington, Vermont, and while there worked out a system for preventing dust from the machines in a lumber dressing mill by means of fans. While at Burlington he became a member of the firm of B. S. Nichols & Company, who manufactured several of Mr. Woodbury's special inventions, one of which was a hydrant for special use in municipal water plants in northern latitudes, with a device that prevented freezing.

After a record of efficiency as an engineer and inventor Mr. Woodbury returned to railroading as master mechanic and superintendent of operation of the Burlington and Lamoille Railroad in Vermont.

In 1879 Mr. Woodbury came West to Michigan and subsequently was made assistant general superintendent of the Calumet and Hecla Mining Company, and later general manager of the Canadian Copper Company's mines in Ontario. As superintendent of machinery for the Calumet and Hecla Company he soon developed efficiency methods that more than doubled the production, and transferred much of the work from manual labor to machinery. It would be a long story to relate all the varied services he rendered the Calumet and Hecla Company during his ten years of employment. While there he designed and dimensioned a locomotive engine for the particular needs of drawing ore cars. This engine was built by the Baldwin Locomotive Works, and that company pronounced it the strongest locomotive ever made up to 1887.

In 1890 Mr. Woodbury resigned his position with the Canadian Copper Company to come to Great Falls, Montana, where he established the Great Falls Iron Works. He began that business with only half a dozen workmen and primarily to supply the needs of local smelters. He established his foundry a mile and a half from the then business center of Great Falls, and it was a matter of the greatest satisfaction to him in after years that his choice was vindicated through the upbuilding and expansion of the city around his plant. Industry was maintained with steadily increasing growth, overcoming the normal adversities of business, and today the industry is one requiring the services of 100 or more employees. It was practically the only iron works in Montana which was assigned an important government contract during the World war.

L. S. Woodbury founded and developed the business, and at the same time helped promote the growth and upbuilding of Great Falls. After several years of feeble health he passed away, November 22, 1918, at the age of eighty years.

He was a notable figure in mining and mechanical industries. He was a member of the American Institute of Mining Engineers and the American Society of Mechanical Engineers. He was a member of the Sons of the American Revolution and was a Royal Arch Mason and Knight Templar Mason, being initiated as a Mason when a very young man in the town of his birth. He was a republican, but he had never taken an active part in political affairs. A public-spirited citizen, energetic and progressive. He numbers a host of friends and was esteemed and respected by all.

Mr. Woodbury was married at Nashua, New Hampshire, May 1, 1861, to Mary Elizabeth Davis, who died September 3, 1867, leaving three children, Frederick Elwell, Mary Cerula and Laurieta Atilda. His second marriage, also at Nashua, was celebrated July 26, 1868. Emma E. Wayne was his second wife. She died May 21, 1920. The two children of this union were Josephine Adele and Florentine Harriet.

The Great Falls Iron Works was practically a Woodbury family institution. Apart from its great productive capacity, its unique distinction rests in the fact that it is one of the few such institutions anywhere of which a woman is directing head. For many years before the death of the founder many of the executive responsibilities had devolved upon his daughter Miss M. Cerula Woodbury. Mr. Woodbury's daughters had taken stock in the business soon after it was incorporated in 1892. Miss Cerula Woodbury was elected a director in 1896, and in 1898 was made secretary-treasurer. In 1907 when her father's health and strength began to fail she gradually assumed the duties which had been wholly delegated to his care, and even during the period when he was nominally president, she was the real executive head. Then on the reorganization following her father's death she was chosen president, and also still holds the office of treasurer.

Miss Woodbury mastered every detail of the industry and was associated with its business management in the times when she and her father had many adversities to contend with. For years she has kept in close touch not only with the business offices but with the machine shops, foundry, structural and blacksmith shop and other departments of the works. She is president of the works because she has earned that right and responsibility, and in the best sense of the word is a business woman of sterling qualities with character beyond reproach and is thoroughly devoted to her work in life and with little time or inclination for society functions. Her hours of recreation are spent outdoors, and walking and mountain climbing are two of her favorite recreations.

Frederick Elwell Woodbury was a mining engineer and metallurgist of national distinction. While his great work was accomplished in the iron and copper districts of Northern Michigan he was financially interested in and at one time vice president of the great Woodbury institution in Montana, the Great Falls Iron Works. His career in part may therefore be claimed to the credit of Montana, and it is appropriate that a record of his life should be preserved here in connection with that of his honored father.

The work of his life has been described in a number of scientific and other publications. He was for ten years a member of the American Institute of Mining Engineers, and it is from the May, 1914, Bulletin of the institute that the following article is largely taken.

Mr. Woodbury, who among other interests at the time of his death was vice president of the Newport Mining Company, was killed by an accident at Ironwood, Michigan, January 21, 1914. He had just reached that period in life when knowledge and capacity were at the peak of development and efficiency. He was born at Nashua, New Hampshire, April 7, 1862, only son of Leander S. and Mary (Davis) Woodbury. In 1870 his family moved to Burlington, Vermont, where he attended the public schools, graduating with honors from the high school in 1880. After a year in the civil service he went to the Lake Superior copper country, where his father was then engaged as superintendent of motive power for the Calumet and Hecla Mining Company.

Mr. Woodbury entered the service of the same company in the civil engineering department, remaining there until 1884. He then spent two years as a special student at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Returning to Calumet he was employed as assistant mining engineer by the Calumet and Hecla for about two years, when he was transferred to their smelting works as chemist, where he remained until 1890. From 1890 to 1892 he was employed by Ferdinand Schlesinger of Milwaukee as mining engineer at the Chapin mine, Iron Mountain, Michigan. He then returned to the Calumet and Hecla, where for about four years he did special work as an expert in milling and concentrating. From 1896 to 1898 he was again associated with Mr. Schlesinger as mine manager at Ironwood. In 1898 he accepted a position as expert in charge of experiments at the Calumet and Hecla Stamp Mills. His work there resulted in greatly modifying and improving milling practice in the Lake Superior copper country. The Woodbury system of concentration was developed during this period; but this system, unlike previous practice and in opposition to the then accepted theories, the mixed sizes of ores are treated, thus largely eliminating the preliminary sizing. For this work he designed the Woodbury slime classifier, middling and bull jigs, now very largely used throughout the country. The Woodbury mortar-discharge jig, an ingenious device for removing large pieces of native copper from the stamp mortars, is among his valuable contributions to the development of the copper industry.

In 1900 Mr. Woodbury finally severed his connection with the Calumet and Hecla and renewed his connection with Mr. Schlesinger, which continued until his death. During these years he was technical adviser in all the various Schlesinger enterprises. He took an active part in the development of the Newport mine. He was an important factor also in the development of the coke-oven plant of the Milwaukee Coke & Gas Company from the time of its inception. Perhaps the most important work which he undertook in this connection was the design and installation of a plant for the preparation and mechanical loading of foundry coke into box cars. The successful solution of the problems met with was specially difficult, due partly to local conditions, and because of Mr. Woodbury's determination to improve upon all plants which up to that time had been in use for the purpose and which, in his opinion, only partly accomplished the desired results. After much experimental work it was clear to him that it would be necessary to abandon practically everything which had been used and to begin anew. The development work covered several years, during which time many unexpected obstacles were encountered which would have spelled failure to a man of less determination. However, in accepting each new, unsatisfactory development in the light of a lesson, success finally attended his efforts, and he gained for himself the reputation of having developed the most complete mechanical arrangement for preparing and loading foundry coke in the United States.

He made careful investigations of many mining properties in this country, Canada, and Mexico, for which work he was especially well fitted. Under his supervision preliminary plans for the development of a coal property in Kentucky had recently been completed.

Mr. Woodbury was married December 29, 1887, to Helen Grant Duncan, daughter of John Duncan, superintendent of the Calumet and Hecla Mining Company, Calumet, Michigan, who survives him.

Mr. Woodbury's personality was well described by one who knew him intimately for many years: "He was as a young man, intellectually keen, with a zest for life, yet generous, considerate, and of a peculiarly clean mind. The passing years with their responsibilities and trials seem to have developed the strong fiber of this man without producing anything of harshness. His character was marked by a most unusual blending of gentleness and strength. The world needs such men and his untimely loss is a great one; still he lived much and well, in the best sense, in his allotted time. He did much more both professionally and personally for his generation than is given to most men to accomplish in many more years. Those who knew him best most fully appreciated his worth."

Other opinions of friends and associates who knew intimately his daily life contained the following significant tribute: "He was a hero whose glory was not diminished by intimate association. His capacity for work was enormous and he worked untiringly. In character and achievement he was one of the great, good, noble men of our time."

Miss M. Cerula Woodbury. In the years not long since folded into the history of the past, woman at the executive head of commercial business was regarded with suspicion as to ability, and criticised as outside the sphere of her sex. Time has changed such things, however, and judgments have softened, while with the advent of woman as a factor in political and public affairs, the critics have retreated, and members of the gentler sex stand upon their merits in the field of business, politics and the professions. This has been made possible because of the type of women who have stepped into the business arena and have so creditably deported themselves as to command respect and win recognition from their coworkers of the sterner sex. It is of this type that Miss M. Cerula Woodbury of Great Falls, Montana, must be classed, for she has, in her position as president-treasurer of the Great Falls Iron Works, proved her peculiar fitness for the trying position and has, through her years of experience in the iron foundry business so intimately informed herself as to its detail that she is recognized through the business Northwest as an expert in her line.

Miss Woodbury may be said to have been born to the business, for the iron works over which she presides and which at capacity employs more than 150 men, was founded by her father, the late L. S. Woodbury, some thirty years ago. She comes not only of a family trained in the manufacturing business, but of sturdy New England stock, having been born among the "Granite Hills" at Nashua, New Hampshire. Her schooling there and at Burlington, Vermont, gave her the educational advantages of that vigorous and patriotic section of the country and moulded her mind along lines of loyalty and ambitious attack that were destined to make her a useful citizen wherever she located. So it happened that when her father determined upon an iron works at Great Falls, she was to be one of his ablest and chiefest lieutenants and his logical successor to carry forward the work to greater limits when he was compelled to lay down the burden and respond to the call of the Great Reaper. Miss Woodbury, in the four years she has been president of the institution, has practically doubled its capacity, although those have been years of unsettlement and uncertainty due to effects of the World war. She is an optimist. Her eyes portray faith in her business and are cast to the future. She believes in the justice of service and maintains the most friendly relations with the employes in her factory. She aims to make her plant a benefit to the community both in its opportunity for those who labor to earn full return for their work and in the output that it sells on the market, being exactly what it is sold to be. Her time is given to her business without division, although when she finds business charts clear, she turns to such recreation as suits her taste and finds flowers and other things of Nature her greatest attraction. Her camera affords her happiest pastime and on hikes and occasional mountain climbing, this stores away for her many pleasant memories on the printed film.

M. Ceruda Woodbury

Her sincere and faithful attention to business and her loyalty to friends has cemented for her a broad circle of friendships and were she inclined to turn her ability to politics, she would find a cordial welcome in that field, as she has frequently been urged to enter the contest for mayoralty honors in her home city where she is so favorably known. She is a liberal giver to worthy charities and a loyal supporter of all civic enterprises, as well as a discriminating supporter of concerns intended to add to the industrial welfare of her state. She is a member of the Congregational Church, the Order of Eastern Star, the White Shrine of Jerusalem, the Business Women's Club, the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's clubs, and the American Mining Congress. Her parents, a sister, and an only brother are deceased. She has two sisters, Mrs. A. I. Jones of Maplewood Avenue, Rochester, New York, and Mrs. Warren S. Blauvelt of Norway Road, Ann Arbor, Michigan.

GUSTAV OIE, who was the first banker at Scobey, represents many of the finest ideals of the business and social service that are more and more coming to be the accepted standards of good banking. His own prosperity is only a very modest reward for all the work he has done, the influences he has thrown out to help the community and the individuals in it, and any locality is fortunate that can count among its citizens such men as Gustav Oie.

Mr. Oie, who was one of the original settlers of the Scobey locality and came here with a banker's experience, was born at Madison, Minnesota, March 15, 1887. His father, Swen E. Oie, born at Trondjem, Norway, in 1857 married at Madison, Minnesota, Serena Gunderson, who was born at Stavanger, Norway, in 1864. At the time of their marriage they were people in very modest circumstances and started life on their homestead at Madison with a limited equipment and practically no capital. They developed a farm, and after selling the homestead moved to Roseau, where he again entered and proved up a homestead. His 200-acre farm there is close to the town, and he still gives his active attention to its grain and other crops. He has taken a lead in building up the creamery industry, and in fact is interested in all matters for general development. Swen Oie is a republican, a member of the Lutheran Church, and has held several local offices in Minnesota. He and his wife had the following children: Lizzie, wife of Olof Hildahl, of Greenbush, Minnesota; Clara, wife of S. T. Holdahl, of Roseau; Evan, of Kalispell, Montana; Gustav; Selmer, who paid the supreme sacrifice as an American soldier during the Argonne campaign in France, and his name is now honored by the Selmer Oie Post of Veterans of Foreign Wars at Scobey; Josie, wife of John Gunderson, of Halstead, Minnesota; Oscar, associated with his brother at Scobey; Elmer, a student in the Fargo Business College at Fargo, North Dakota; and Mollie and Helen, both at home.

Gustav Oie grew up from the age of twelve at Roseau, Minnesota, attended public schools and a business college, and acquired his education beyond that of the common schools by his own work. He left home at the age of fourteen, clerked in a country store at Ross, Minnesota, subsequently was employed as a clerk by his brother-in-law at Greenbush, and at the age of nineteen entered the First National Bank of Roseau as bookkeeper and assistant cashier. He rapidly mastered the principles of banking and distinguished himself by his keen financial judgment, so that he was well qualified to become associated with men of capital in promoting the banking business.

Mr. Oie came to Montana in 1909, and for about a year was looking over various sections of the state in search of an opening for a new bank. At that time his ambition and previous experience constituted his chief capital, and the big success of his life has been a matter of ten years.

He identified himself with what is now Sheridan County in November, 1910, and the following March began his connection as a banker at old Scobey, as member of the firm T. Anderson, Oie & Company, private bankers, who operated with a capital of $10,000. Mr. Oie was the cashier. The firm built their banking home at old Scobey, and subsequently removed it to the new town and it is still sheltering the Citizens State Bank. The institution grew and developed until it had resources of about $60,000. The new Town of Scobey was planted on the railway, and the bank was one of the first concerns to leave the old town and locate at the new, its present location being lot 1, in block 6. Since June, 1916, it has been under a state charter. The Citizens State Bank has a capital of $25,000, surplus and undivided profits of $35,000, and the deposits aggregate $500,000. The bank has paid regular annual dividends notwithstanding severe adversities due to conditions of recent years. The officers are: T. Anderson, president; T. Lundevall, vice president; Gustav Oie, cashier; and E. A. Lund, assistant cashier, these officers comprising also the board of directors.

Mr. Oie helped organize in 1916 and has since been secretary of the Citizens Loan Company of Scobey, employing a capital of $25,000 and total resources of $200,000. The officers are: T. Lundevall, president; Mr. Oie, secretary and treasurer. Another important enterprise in which Mr. Oie is deeply interested is the Citizens Realty Company, which was organized with a capital of $15,000. Mr. Oie is president and Mr. Lundevall secretary. This is a land-holding corporation, and has resources of $50,000. Mr. Oie helped organize the Scobey Drug Company, capitalized at $25,000, with Doctor Collinson as president and Mr. Oie as vice president. This company does the leading retail drug business throughout this section of Sheridan County. Mr. Oie was one of the organizers of the Fifelake Security Company, a private fiduciary institution, intended as a farm loan and general banking concern.

The ownership of the Scobey townsite was vested in Mr. Oie, and he supervised the sale of the lots on easy payments, and handled the matter in a way to promote the most substantial development of the town. Altogether about 8,000 acres around Scobey are under his ownership, and some 3,500 acres are being farmed under lease to tenants. He has exerted his influence directly toward bringing much of this land under cultivation. Recent years have been a real test to the character of a local banker and business man, and it is a matter of community pride that Mr. Oie has so completely exemplified the character of a public spirited and generous citizen. He lent a helping hand toward helping many farmers who out of necessity required some aid in order to stay in the face of adversity, and he showed his faith in these men and also in the substantial resources of the country by many acts of practical helpfulness which will never be recorded except in the hearts of the recipients.

Mr. Oie was honored by election as the first mayor of Scobey, filling that post from 1913 to 1915. He is a director of the local Commercial Club, and during the World war was chairman of the Four-Minute men of the locality, and effectively aided the Liberty Loan drives and was a working member of the County Council of Defense. Personally and as a banker he put the resources of the institution at the service of its customers in handling Liberty Bond purchases and in promoting other drives for funds.

Mr. Oie was reared in a republican home, and cast his first presidential vote for Colonel Roosevelt. His home at Scobey was moved from old Scobey and is one of the modest and comfortable residences of the new town. Mr. Oie has been liberal of his means in the promotion of churches and other enterprises depending upon the general support of the public for their success.

At Marshalltown, Iowa, November 10, 1912, he married Miss Addie Bell, who was born at Marshalltown, a daughter of S. C. Bell. Mrs. Oie died January 4, 1919, leaving two children, Sanford and Gustav, Jr.

C. Earl Varco. Many men enter the mercantile arena, but all do not remain, especially in these strenuous days of fierce competition and changing values. In order for a man to succeed in conducting a large concern which depends upon the good will and patronage of the neighborhood he must possess characteristics which will enable him to form desirable connections with sources of supply so that he can keep up his stocks and offer them at a reasonable figure. He must be able to estimate accurately the demand of his section and meet it promptly and satisfactorily, and he must also have that quality which will induce others to render a whole-hearted return for the remuneration received, for without the latter it is impossible to give a high class service. The successful merchant must also be an excellent judge of men and the motives which govern them so he may extend credit only to the man who is worthy of it and not accumulate a pile of bad debts. In fact, when any man is able to establish and successfully carry on for a definite period a flourishing mercantile concern his ability is pretty conclusively proven beyond any question of doubt. Such a man is C. Earl Varco, managing head of the Yellowstone Mercantile Company of Sidney.

Mr. Varco was born in Mower County, Minnesota, April 16, 1883, a son of Charles R. Varco and grandson of Thomas Varco, a native of England, who came to America and for a number of years lived in Ontario, Canada, where he was engaged in farming. Late in life he came to the United States, and was one of the pioneers of Mower County, Minnesota, and where he rounded out his useful life and is there buried.

Charles R. Varco was born in Ontario, Canada, but was brought to this country by his parents when he was three years of age, and was reared and educated in Minnesota. In young manhood he embarked in a mercantile business at Austin, Minnesota, and for a third of a century was occupied in operating it. He is still residing at Austin, where he is regarded as one of the community's most representative citizens and public spirited men. Voting the republican ticket, he has always given the principles and candidates of his party a conscientious support, and although never permitting the use of his name on the ticket, he has given his time and energies toward forwarding the measures which in his judgment would work out for the good of the majority. Charles R. Varco was married to Miss Isabel Gemmel, a daughter of Andrew Gemmel, a native of Scotland, who married a lady of Canadian birth after coming to America. Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Varco became the parents of the following children: Ray, who lives at Miles City, Montana; C. Earl, whose name heads this review; Lynn, who lives at Fairview, Montana; and Walter, who is associated with his brother in the Yellowstone Mercantile Company.

C. Earl Varco was reared in Austin, Minnesota, where he attended the public schools and high school. Graduating when he was seventeen years old, he went into his father's business and there learned its details thoroughly. In August, 1906, Mr. Varco came to Sidney, Montana, for he realized that he had gone as far at Austin as the limitations of the community would permit. His common sense suggested that in the less congested sections of the country there would be better openings for a young man of ambitious ideas, and subsequent events have proven the wisdom of his decision to locate at Sidney. Immediately upon his arrival here he took steps to secure the establishment of the present large mercantile house he is so ably managing.

Mr. Varco began in a modest manner, housing his concern in a frame structure he now uses as a warehouse. It was one of the early store-rooms built on the main street of Sidney, and it served until 1915, when Mr. Varco erected his present business home, a one-story buff brick building 75 by 108 feet, in which he has one of the leading department stores of Richland County. Mr. Varco associated with him several of the substantial men of the city and incorporated the enterprise under the name of the Yellowstone Mercantile Company, with himself as president and general manager. Believing in encouraging local concerns, Mr. Varco has invested quite heavily in the First National Bank of Sidney. A strong republican, he was elected on the straight party ticket a member of the Sidney City Council, and while serving as a councilman he encouraged and supported the measure providing for the installation of a water plant and a system of sewerage, and lent his vote to the preliminary work of organizing a lighting plant.

On August 4, 1908, C. Earl Varco was united in marriage with Miss Antoinette Griffith Belden at Austin, Minnesota. She is a graduate of the Austin High School and the University of Minnesota, and for a year prior to her marriage was a teacher in the public schools. She is the only child of her parents, and a most charming and cultivated lady, who presides over her beautiful home with delightful efficiency. She and Mr. Varco have three children, namely: Kathryn, Charles B. and Winifred.

During the years Mr. Varco has been in business at Sidney he has seen many changes, not only in his own enterprise, but the community and surrounding district. Montana is one of the younger states. In spite of the fact that it is one of the richest in mineral wealth, and possessing untold possibilities along almost every line, settlers did not flock into its confines as soon as they did in some other parts of the country, so that the past fourteen years have been ones of great development. The state has been spared much of the evils arising out of periods of stagnation coming of too early settlement, and the various projects inaugurated and fostered by its men of initiative and capital have received immediate support and been carried to ultimate completion in record time. Mr. Varco has grown with his community, and also aided very materially in its development. His large and flourishing business is typical of the man and his city, and the people are proud of the fact that they have in their midst a mercantile house which compares very favorably with similar establishments in the great centers of industry both East and West, and give to it a support which is not only remunerative but gratifying as well, for it spells in no uncertain terms a complete confidence which is a rich reward for any man.

Ludvig Horntvedt made no mistake when he selected Northern Montana as his home. He came here from North Dakota, where he spent three years after landing from Norway, in which country he was born, a son of Hanson and Bertha Horntvedt.

As a youth he heard of the opportunities of America, and at the age of twenty determined to cast his lot with this land. He reached New York and then went on to North Dakota, and from there came to the Flathead District and filed on a homestead of 160 acres north of Kalispell. His thrift and industry in those early years had due reward, and at the present time he can look over an estate of 840 acres. He also built a comfortable home on an eminence overlooking a wide stretch of country. He specializes in the Red Polled cattle, having some registered pure-bred sires.

He married Miss Hilda Holst, a native of Chippewa County, Wisconsin, and a daughter of Andrew and Anna Holst. Their two children are Anna and Helen, the former in her third year of the Kalispell High School.

Mr. and Mrs. Horntvedt are members of the Norwegian Lutheran Church, of which he is a trustee. Politically he supports the principles of the republican party. He is regarded as one of the most progressive farmers and stockmen in the Flathead Valley, and his estate is ample proof of his industry and success.

Henry Lowndes Maury is a graduate of the University of Virginia, has been a resident of Butte for a quarter of a century, and during the greater part of that time has enjoyed an enviable standing as a member of the Butte bar.

Mr. Maury was born at Charlottesville, Virginia, November 20, 1875, son of Matthew Fontaine and Lydia Ann (Maury) Maury.

He graduated from the University of Virginia in 1894, and soon afterward came to Butte. For six years he was connected with the law office of Corbett & Wellcome as a clerk and law student, and after his admission to the bar practiced four years with the distinguished Judge W. Y. Pemberton as a partner. During the past twenty years the work of Mr. Maury has been of the very highest merit and has brought him a practice of that volume and character that satisfies the ambitions of a true devotee of the profession.

Mr. Maury served as president of the Silver Bow Bar Association in 1907. In 1911 he was appointed city attorney of Butte. He is a member of the Knights of Pythias, the Silver Bow Club of Butte, the Montana Club of Helena, and is a member of the Episcopal Church. Among his friends he is known as one of the most skillful chess players in the Northwest.

At Charlottesville, Virginia, November 22, 1898, Mr. Maury married Miss Ann Perkins, daughter of George and Lizzie (Watson) Perkins. To their marriage were born seven children: Reuben, on September 2, 1899; George, December 24, 1901; Lesse Lewis, October 23, 1903; Lydia, December 12, 1906; Eliza, October 2, 1908; Henry L., Jr., July 9, 1911; and Josephine, May 7, 1918.

C. P. Cowman is associated with his mother, Mrs. M. J. Cowman, as joint editor and owner of the Flathead Courier, one of the valued and ably edited weekly publications in the Flathead district.

C. P. Cowman was born in Iowa, son of Mr. and Mrs. William P. Cowman. He attended the public schools of his native state and also Drake University at Des Moines. He married Miss Mame Cady. They had one daughter, Clara Josephine, now twelve years of age. Mr. Cowman came to Montana and settled at Polson in 1909, and established the Flathead Courier. Mrs. Cowman is now deceased, and the daughter is a student in the public schools of Polson. Mrs. C. P. Cowman was an earnest, Christian woman and during her residence at Polson had earned the love and respect of the entire community.

Mr. Cowman many years ago when a young man was a soldier, being a member of the Fifty-First Iowa Volunteer Regiment. He was 3½ years in the Philippines and helped put down the insurrection in those islands. Fraternally he is affiliated with the Masons, Independent Order of Odd Fellows and Knights of Pythias, and is a stanch republican in politics.

His mother, Mrs. M. J. Cowman, has a gifted mind and a sincere interest in the people and affairs of her community that have made her an able ally in promoting the success of the Courier. She is a member of the Presbyterian Church, having been one of the charter members of that society, and through her church her duties as a newspaper woman, and in various other organizations has worked unceasingly in a spirit of social helpfulness and charity. She was chairman of the Red Cross Chapter at Polson, which distinguished itself among similar organizations of the state for the great volume of practical work carried out. Mrs. Cowman is also president of the Civic League of Polson, and is a real community mother, a constant source of helpfulness in every direction where help is most needed.

Patrick E. Burke, former editor and publisher of the Scobey Sentinel and later of the Scobey Citizen, and now assistant postmaster of Scobey, spent most of his years in the printing and newspaper business and is also a well known and influential figure in democratic politics in Northeastern Montana.

Mr. Burke was born at Crystal, North Dakota, March 30, 1888. His grandparents were John and Mary Burke, and the former on leaving Ireland settled near Barry, Ontario, where he lost his life accidentally while clearing timber. He was the father of two children, Bridget and Patrick M. His widow later married John Burke's brother and became the mother of the following children: John; James; Catherine, whose first husband was L. J. Dobey and second Dick Moran; Ellen, who became the wife of John Burns; Mary Ann, who married Doctor Nugent; Richard; and Johanna, who married Levi Beetchel.

The father of the Scobey newspaper man was Patrick M. Burke, who was born near Barry, Ontario, in 1855, and as a young man went to North Dakota and took up a homestead near Crystal. He was one of the first settlers in the country, and in order to earn money to enable him to stay on his claim he worked on the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway, then in process of building west from Winnipeg. This road provided many of the pioneers of North Dakota with an opportunity to earn the needed dollars to support them in the crisis of their careers. He remained identified with the farming activity of that locality for many years, developed an extensive stock and grain farm along the north fork of Park River, and lived there until his retirement and removal to Southern California. He took an active interest in local and state affairs, but disliked political fame, as he said, "because of its hypocrisy," though he has voted and supported the democratic party for more than forty years. A feature of his political record is that he three times voted for Mr. Cleveland for president and three times was a supporter of Mr. Bryan. He is a man of keen intelligence, and while never able to acquire a college education himself, he did what he could to afford his children such advantages.

Patrick M. Burke married Sophia C. Stokes. Her father was an aristocratic Irishman, though not a man of wealth, who emigrated from Ireland to Canada and was a farmer and carpenter. He educated his children liberally and Mrs. Sophia Burke was a teacher until her marriage. She was born in Muskoka, Canada, the youngest of nine children. Her own children are: Edward W., an attorney at Minneapolis; Sophia C., wife of J. J. Nys, a lawyer in Oregon; Patrick E.; Mary, wife of George E. Langeland, of Buford, North Dakota; Nellie, wife of Donat Trudel, a wealthy farmer at Pembina, North Dakota; Frances and Florence, twins, the former dying in 1917 and the latter engaged in commercial work at Grand Forks, North Dakota.

Patrick E. Burke spent his boyhood days around Crystal, North Dakota, attended a district school through the eighth grade, and with an ambition at that time for a commercial career entered the University of North Dakota. He soon left college and began setting type in a country newspaper office at Edinburg, North Dakota, and worked for several newspaper offices until he again returned to his home town, and for a year was printer and editor on the Crystal Call. About that time he determined to finish his education, and the next four years he was a diligent student in St. Boniface College at Winnipeg, from which he was graduated with the Bachelor of Arts degree in 1910.

Newspaper work had made a strong hold on his inclination and from college he became a reporter on the Winnipeg Telegram, later on the Free Press of the same city, and in 1911 went West to Seattle. That city he found overrun with printers, and in order to get back home he worked in a freight house. Following that he spent another year with the Winnipeg Telegram, and then identified himself with Montana, establishing the St. Ignatius Post on the Flathead Reservation. He conducted his paper there for a year and then sold out and moved to the Scobey locality in July, 1913. For three years Mr. Burke was publisher and editor of the Scobey Sentinel, and while thus engaged was appointed postmaster of Scobey. A year later he sold his paper, and continued his duties as postmaster until 1916, when he resigned the office in favor of Mrs. Burke, and has since continued as assistant postmaster.

Mr. Burke has acknowledged only one political party affiliation, as a democrat since he reached his majority. He voted for Mr. Wilson in 1912 and 1916, and in 1916 was a delegate to the Democratic National Convention, receiving the second highest vote over the state in the contest for delegate. That fall he was also a candidate for representative of Sheridan County, being defeated in a republican county by only three votes. During 1918 he was a candidate by petition for Congress, but discovering that his petition lacked a sufficient number of signatures, he withdrew in favor of H. B. Mitchell. In 1920 he was again elected as one of Montana's delegates to the Democratic National Convention at San Francisco. Mr. Burke is a Fourth Degree Knight of Columbus, and is affiliated with Williston Lodge of Elks No. 1214.

At Scobey, July 30, 1914, he married Miss Mary Rose Laux. Mrs. Burke, who is a woman of very interesting personality and much business ability, was born at Aurora, Illinois, December 23, 1882. Her father, Jean Laux, a native of Luxemburg, came to the United States about 1880, locating at Chicago, where soon afterward he married a girl whom he had met on the ship crossing the ocean. For a time he was in the grain business at Aurora, and on selling out moved to Phillips, Wisconsin, where he resumed the same business and where he died in 1915. His children comprise Mrs. Mary Rose Burke; Catherine, wife of James Bodoh, of Wakefield, Michigan; Magdalene M., wife of Patrick B. Murphy, of Scobey, Montana; and Eugene and Martin, both in the United States Navy. Mrs. Burke was educated in public schools, graduated from the high school at Phillips, Wisconsin, at the age of sixteen, and the following seven years she was employed in the Phillips Post Office. In 1914 she came to Scobey on a visit to Mrs. Murphy, her sister. Her thorough knowledge of handling the affairs of a postoffice brought about her appointment as assistant postmistress under Mr. Burke. She was assistant postmistress while he had charge of the office, and her own appointment was January 13, 1917. Mr. and Mrs. Burke have three children: John Patrick, born May 26, 1915; Mary Stokes, born April 1, 1917; and Eugenia, born April 2, 1919.

Oliver and Ole G. Frederick. The history of Montana is not a very old one. It is the record of the steady growth of a community planted in the wilderness during the later decades of the nineteenth century, and has reached its magnitude of today without other means than those of agriculture and industry. The people who redeemed its wilderness fastnesses were strong-armed, hardy sons of the soil who hesitated at no difficulty and for whom hardships had little to appal. There was also other work to be done, work of various kinds. Their efficient efforts have been fully appreciated by those who came at a later period and builded on the foundation which they laid so broad and deep. Among the latter class are Oliver and Ole G. Frederick, the genial and popular owners of the Hotel Norden at Kalispell. While their arrival was not as early as some, yet they came in the formative period and have done much toward the general upbuilding of the country which now occupies a proud position among the most progressive and enlightened sections of the great Northwest.

Oliver and Ole G. Frederick are Scandinavians by birth, having been born in Norway, and they are the sons of Gunder and Lena Frederick. In 1870 these parents, with their eight children, immigrated to the United States and settled on a farm in Wisconsin, where the children were reared and where they attended school. Eventually Oliver and Ole G. came to Montana, settling at Helena, where for a number of years they were engaged in business. Later they came to the Flathead Valley and located at Kalispell, where they engaged in business. Their first real estate acquisition was a homestead on which they filed, and they purchased other lands adjoining, so that their fine ranch at the head of Swan Lake now comprises 480 acres of splendid land. They also have other lands in this vicinity, their entire holdings in this state amounting to 720 acres. They also own 20 acres of hay and timber land in Canada. From the beginning of their lives in the Flathead country the Frederick brothers have been characterized by indefatigable industry and sound judgment, so that they have advanced year after year until today they are numbered among the representative men of their section of the state. For about a dozen years they have conducted the Hotel Norden, the well known and popular hotel at Kalispell, and they have made a signal success of this venture. From their ranch at Swan Lake they bring everything in the vegetable line, fresh and of endless variety, besides eggs, cream and milk and other farm products. A first-class chef presides over the culinary department, the quality of which has given the Norden a widespread reputation throughout this part of the country. The hotel can accommodate 150 guests, and it has become a very popular stopping place for those seeking rest amid all the comforts and conveniences of home. The Swan Lake ranch of the Frederick brothers is one of the most attractive spots in the Flathead country. The ranch itself is given a beautiful setting by natural surroundings, Swan River flowing peacefully along within 100 feet of the front of the home, in front of which the land slopes gracefully down to the water's edge. This is an ideal spot for sportsmen, for fishing and hunting are found here at hand and the entertainment at the ranch house is of a royal character. Boats and launches are provided for the convenience of the guests. There are a number of other beautiful residences on Swan Lake which help to make the scene one of appealing beauty.

Both of the Frederick brothers are married. Oliver was married to Marie Johnson, who died within seven months after their marriage. On the 1st of March, 1920, he married for his second wife Gertie Eckle, from North Dakota. Ole was married to Lottie Anderson, of Helena. Politically the brothers are both nominal supporters of the republican party, though they generally assume an independent attitude, preferring to give their support to such men and measures as most nearly meet their approval. Fraternally they are members of the Fraternal Order of Eagles. Their religious belief is that of the Lutheran Church, of which their parents were faithful members. The subjects of this review, whose life history has thus been briefly delineated, are worthy representatives of that class from which the true noblemen of the republic spring; but they have made no effort to be leaders of men, being content to lead honest, industrious and conservative lives, desiring no other title than that of good citizens. Because of their success and their fine personal qualities they enjoy the confidence and esteem of all.

Edon A. Amundson has had a career of striking interest both from the standpoint of experience and achievement. His business service has entered as a factor of value into the history of the new Town of Scobey. He has some distinctive relations with that community. He was on the ground when the new town was formed, built the third house on the townsite, and one of his children is the first native daughter of Scobey.

Mr. Amundson is a comparatively young man for all his varied experiences. He was born November 14, 1875, in Worth County, Iowa. His father, Anton L. Amundson, was born at Christiana, Norway, and in early life his experience was that of an office man and clerk. He married, in Norway, Martha Marie Honsedalen, whose father was a landsman or sheriff of his Norwegian district. On coming to the United States Anton Amundson established his first home at Stoughton, Wisconsin, where he and his wife were employed for a time, later removing to Worth County, Iowa, where he bought land and became a farmer and followed that occupation until his death in 1910, his wife surviving him until 1912. Anton Amundson, who was born in 1842, had a liberal education, acquired naturalization in America as soon as possible, and was a stanch republican. At one time he was honored with the office of county commissioner. He and his wife were Lutherans, and of their children only two survive, Edon A. and Mrs. Thea Smedsrud of St. Ansgar, Iowa.

Edon A. Amundson spent his boyhood days near Lake Mills, Iowa, and pursued his advanced studies in the Luther Academy at Albert Lea, Minnesota, and in Valer College at Decorah, Iowa. His practical business career began at the age of eighteen with an experience in the creamery business at Joyce, Iowa. He was next with the Northwood Banking Company as bookkeeper in their bank at Kensett, Iowa, and the four following years he was bookkeeper and then assistant cashier in the Buffalo State Bank. For some reason the bank management took over the affairs of the local postoffice and he continued as deputy postmaster one year.

About that time Mr. Amundson abandoned Iowa and went in search of adventure and fortune in a country entirely foreign to him. He was led into the Klondike country of Alaska, where he expected to engage in mining. He went out to Seattle, where he embarked on the sailing schooner Swan, which thirty-one days later reached its destination at Port Valdez. He was traveling with a little party of six men and they reached Valdez, a town of a few tents, January 1, 1896. There they made the necessary preparations, each man getting his provisions ready and packed on his own sled, and then started off hauling their sleds toward the Copper River country. It required three weeks to transport themselves and their goods over the Port Valdez Glacier, thirty-six miles wide, with its summit more than 4,200 feet above sea level. They went by Klatina Lake and on to the river of that name, where they sawed down trees and made a scow and dory, by which they passed down the river, shooting its rapids, to Copper River, where now Copper Center is situated at the mouth of the Klatina River. Here they cached their stuff, left a man to watch it and fish during the summer, while the others with a light boat proceeded up Copper River, passing Teslina, Chestatina and Slona Rivers and up the latter to the headwaters of the divide between the Copper and Tenana Rivers. As gold seekers they did their prospecting in that locality, staked out some promising claims and camped about in the snow, killing some of the big game of the region. With the approach of fall they dropped back to their cache, after an absence of almost four months. The man left behind had caught and dried some salmon for food preparatory for another winter, but Mr. Amundson and three others, signifying that they were satisfied with their adventure, pulled back over the great glacier for Port Valdez, reaching that town at the beginning of winter. The steamer Excelsior carried them to Juneau, and they went down the coast to Seattle on the ship Dora. After a brief time looking over the Coast country the party divided and Mr. Amundson and his partner, A. H. Dahl, returned to Iowa.

Once more in his native state, Mr. Amundson resumed his association with the bank at Buffalo Center, taking charge of the farm loan department. The next summer he moved to Minnesota and engaged in the real estate business at Fulton. He was also chief of the Amundson Land Company, selling Red River lands for several years. Incidentally he also promoted some oil companies at Beaumont, Texas. On leaving Fulton he went to Garrison, North Dakota, where he was interested in merchandising. The next important stage in his business career was with headquarters at Dickinson, North Dakota, and he engaged in locating homesteaders on claims and during the next 3½ years found places for more than 800 settlers.

Mr. Amundson came to Montana as early as 1910, and for three years was traveling representative for the Rumely Threshing Machine Company, selling threshing machines, tractors and other heavy farm machinery. His first home was at Plentywood, after which he returned to Williston, North Dakota, and in October, 1913, he came into the vicinity of Scobey for the purpose of locating, having a general knowledge of this community through his previous experiences as a traveling salesman

Mr. Amundson is well remembered as a landlord at Scobey, where he erected the Hotel Tallman, the second hotel in the town, and was its popular proprietor for two years. Since then he has been actively engaged in the farm loan business, a business for which his long training and experience give him undoubted qualifications.

He has made his business a means of promoting the welfare of the community, and in a quiet way has also interested himself in other local affairs. Like his father, he began voting the republican ticket, casting his first presidential ballot for Major McKinley. At the present time he is serving as police magistrate and justice of the peace at Scobey. Mr. Amundson took his early degrees in Masonry at Ada, Minnesota, and retains his affiliation with Norman Lodge No. 154 in that town.

At Fulton, Minnesota, June 14, 1900, he married Miss Nora Caroline Erickson, daughter of John and Anna (Larsen) Erickson, the former a native of Sweden while her mother was reared at Red Wing, Minnesota. Mrs. Amundson is the second in a family of five, the others being Gustav, Edward and Albert, all of Moorhead, Minnesota; and Elna Mae, a nurse at St. Barnabas Hospital, Minneapolis. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Amundson are Carroll, Alice, Elsworth, Eva Marie and Helen. The distinction of being the first native daughter of Scobey belongs to Eva Marie Amundson, who was born in the metropolis of what is now Sheridan County, February 3, 1913.

PATRICK B. MURPHY, who is cashier of the Merchants National Bank of Scobey, had an interesting variety of experience and training as a boy in Minnesota, doing farm work and learning business after he left the farm as an employe of lumber concerns, banks and other enterprises.

Mr. Murphy, who has been a citizen of Scobey since 1914, was born at Wycoff, Minnesota, August 21, 1887. His father, Thomas H. Murphy, was a native of Ireland, came to the United States when about twenty-one years of age, was employed as a laborer and miner in Pennsylvania a few years, and the modest capital he saved there enabled him to come West to Minnesota and acquire a small farm at Wycoff. He continued farming in that locality until 1891, when he settled at Austin, Minnesota, and died there in August, 1913, at the age of sixty-nine. As a result of hard work when a boy and youth he was made prematurely old, and as soon as his sons reached age to bear the burden of the work the management of his farm was left to them. His voting was done as a democrat, and he always took a voter's interest in politics. His own education was limited because he shouldered most of the responsibilities of the home, though his brothers and sisters acquired a good training. His mind was always alert and keen, and he was well informed on the events and issues of the day and had much knowledge valuable to him in the prosecution of his business.

Thomas H. Murphy married at Wycoff, Minnesota, Bridget Cummings, whose father, Patrick Cummings, brought his family from Ireland and became a Minnesota farmer. To the marriage of Thomas H. Murphy and wife were born the following children: Mary, wife of J. H. Sheedy, of Austin, Minnesota; John J., a banker and prominent business man of New England, North Dakota, who is also president of the Merchants National Bank at Scobey; Miss Catherine, of Wolf Point, Montana; Mrs. W. L. Gardner, of New England; Miss Winifred, of Wolf Point; Patrick B.; Miss Alice, of Wolf Point; Sister M. Eunice, who is sister superior of the parochial school of Elsworth, Minnesota; Miss Sylvia, who is pursuing a nurse's training course at Rochester, Minnesota; and Miss Elizabeth, of Austin, Minnesota.

Patrick B. Murphy was four years of age when his parents moved to Austin, and he was reared and educated in that city, attending the Southern Minnesota College and for a year took a commercial course at St. Thomas. By the time he was fifteen years of age the management of the home farm devolved upon him, and he performed its various duties, feeding the stock, disposing of them at the market, and otherwise assuming the duties of a practical agriculturist. At the age of twenty-two he left home and joined his brother John, who at a still earlier age had sought a business career and had become a banker at New England, North Dakota. At New England Patrick Murphy was employed in his brother's lumber yard, then handled the real estate and stock end of the business, and finally became a partner with John Murphy and a brother-in-law in the real estate business.

After disposing of his interests Patrick Murphy came to Montana, and in February, 1914, located at Scobey, which was just beginning its career as a new town. He opened a loan and real estate office with the intention of establishing a bank later. This plan he achieved when the Merchants National Bank was chartered, November 16, 1917, with capital of $25,000. His chief associates were his brother J. J. Murphy, of New England; Thomas F. Clifford, of Scobey, who became vice president; C. L. Merrick, of Minneapolis, also a vice president; and Patrick B. Murphy, cashier. Besides these officers, other directors are H. E. South and H. J. Hellekson, of Scobey, and the officers and directors remain the same as at organization. At the close of 1919 the bank statement showed capitalization of $25,000, surplus of $5,000 and deposits of $150,000. It was largely due to the influence of Patrick B. Murphy that the home of the Merchants National Bank was erected on lot 5, block 6.

Lewis F. Eaton

This institution has been Mr. Murphy's chief interest at Scobey, though during the war he was actively associated with other citizens in promoting patriotic work and was chairman of one of the Liberty Loan drives. Politically he has been a democrat, casting his first vote for Mr. Bryan in 1908. He was once chosen alderman of Scobey but refused to qualify. He was reared a Catholic, is a member of that church, and is affiliated with tne Knights of Columbus, the Foresters and Modern Woodmen of America.

June 4, 1913, at Phillips, Wisconsin, Mr. Murphy married Miss Magdalene Laux, who was born July 22, 1889, daughter of John and Margaret Laux. Her father was a native of Germany and spent his active career as a lumberman. Mrs. Murphy is the sixth of a family of ten children and was educated in the high school at Phillips, Wisconsin. Mr. and Mrs. Murphy have one daughter, Monica, and the family home is a five-room cottage on Oie Street.

Leo C. Lindemann, though a lawyer by education and training, qualified for practice in the bars of North Dakota and Montana, is hardly known at all in the lists of active lawyers in Montana, and during his residence in the state, covering seven years, has been energetically devoted to banking and various business affairs.

Mr. Lindemann, who is an active member of the Westland Oil Company at Scobey, was born at Enderlin, North Dakota, October 26, 1883. His father, Carl Lindemann, was born in Germany and in early life was a farm inspector in his native country, and on coming to the United States established himself as a farmer at Enderlin, where he is now living retired. At Enderlin he married Louise Kieselbach, also a native of Germany, and they have four sons, Leo C., Rex, Lorenz and Bodo, the three younger being residents of Enderlin.

Leo C. Lindemann grew up on a farm, and remained a part and factor in the domestic establishment to the age of twenty. He attended public schools, graduated in 1906 from the Valley City Normal School of North Dakota, and completed his law studies in the law department of the University of Chicago, graduating in the spring of 1909. On returning home he was for two years connected with the Enderlin State Bank, and from there removed to Powers Lake, North Dakota, where he practiced law for two years.

On coming to Montana in 1913 Mr. Lindemann located at Redstone and became one of the original stockholders of the State Bank of Redstone and served it as cashier until April 1, 1918. He helped provide the bank with its business home. He left the bank to enter the oil business at Redstone with Henry Gray, under the name Gray-Lindemann Oil Company. This company established a system of eight service stations along the Soo line, the Scobey branch of the Great Northern and the Great Northern main line. In September, 1919, Mr. Lindemann moved from Redstone to Scobey, at which time the Gray-Lindemann Oil Company was merged into the Westland Oil Company, its owners becoming stockholders and officers in the new organization. This is one of the leading concerns handling wholesale petroleum products in Northern Montana, and besides its main plant operates thirteen branch stations. Mr. Lindemann is secretary and treasurer of the corporation.

He took advantage of the opportunities to get a farm from the free domain around Redstone, proving up a claim on the Fort Peck Indian Reservation. Previously he had entered a forty-acre tract adjoining the Redstone townsite, and both of these properties he still owns. He has always had some farming going on, and has cheerfully shared the mixed fortunes of the farmers in this region. Mr. Lindemann was reared in a republican household, cast his first presidential vote for Colonel Roosevelt, and has held quite closely to republican nominees ever since. In Masonry he is a charter member and a past master of Redstone Lodge and is affiliated with the Royal Arch Chapter at Plentywood.

At Powers Lake, North Dakota, May 24, 1913, Mr. Lindemann married Miss Ermie Whitson, who was born at Valley City, North Dakota, January 22, 1893. She attended the high school of her native town and also the Valley City Normal School, and prior to her marriage was one of the popular teachers in the Powers Lake schools. She was the oldest of her parents' children. Her father was an early settler in North Dakota from Illinois, was a tinner by trade and has become extensively known as a contractor in that line of business in North Dakota. Mr. and Mrs. Lindemann have one son, Rex Carl, born March 24, 1914.

Lewis T. Eaton. A man of vigorous mentality and superior executive ability, Lewis T. Eaton, of Billings, has achieved high distinction in the world of letters, while as educational director of the Billings Polytechnic Institute has won an enviable reputation for his systematic and efficient methods of organization, the institution having been made possible through the combined efforts of himself and his brother, Ernest T. Eaton, who attends to its financial affairs. A son of Thomas O. Eaton, he was born March 26, 1869, in Charleston, Maine, of English ancestry. He is a lineal descendant of one John Eaton, who emigrated from England to Haverhill, Massachusetts, in 1638, and whose grandson, Jonathan Eaton, became founder of the Maine branch of the Eaton family.

Thomas O. Eaton was born on a farm in Sebec, Maine, in 1841, and there grew to manhood. In 1861 he enlisted in the First Maine Artillery and with his regiment guarded Washington during the first two years of the Civil war. He was afterward at the front in various engagements, including those at Spottsylvania and Cold Harbor, and the siege of Petersburg, where he was severely wounded. Returning to Maine at the close of the conflict, he remained in or near Charleston for several years, being engaged in agricultural pursuits. Migrating with his family to Iowa in 1886, he was engaged in the live stock business at Earlville, Delaware County, for twelve years. Retiring from active pursuits in 1898, he lived at Manchester, Iowa, until 1904, when he came to Montana, and having invested in real estate at Deer Lodge resided there four years. In 1908 he bought a ranch in Polytechnic, Montana, and has since been a resident of that place. He is a republican in politics, a member of the Congregational Church, and one of its most liberal supporters, and belongs to the Masonic fraternity. He married Delia Bolster, who was born at Foxcroft, Maine, in 1843, and died at Polytechnic, Montana, in October, 1917, after a happy wedded life of fifty-two years. They were the parents of four children, namely: Lewis T., the special subject of this brief sketch; Ernest T., financial director of the Billings Polytechnic Institute, as noted above; Volney, who died in childhood, and Alice, who came to Montana to be associated with her brother Lewis and died in Deer Lodge at the age of twenty-nine.

Gleaning his early knowledge of books in the public schools of his native town, Lewis T. Eaton further advanced his studies at the academy in Foxcroft, Maine. Removing with the family to Delaware County, Iowa, in 1886, he began teaching in 1887, and for two years continued his pedagogical labors. Subsequently entering Highland Park College at Des Moines, Iowa, he completed the scientific course in two years, after which he served as principal of the Earlville, Iowa, High School two years, and later was for four years county superintendent of the Delaware County schools. Mr. Eaton then returned to his alma mater as one of the faculty, being for four years professor of history and psychology at Highland Park College. Accepting then the position of president of the College of Montana at Deer Lodge, he continued in that capacity from 1904 until 1908. In the latter year, with his brother, Ernest T. Eaton, he organized the Billings Polytechnic Institute, of which they are joint directors, one attending to the educational and the other to the financial department.

In the upbuilding of the institution the Messrs. L. T. and E. T. Eaton have made good use of the generous contributions towards its improvement and equipment. In 1909 they built Science Hall and four dormitories, three for boys and one for girls, all at an expense of $100,000 the entire amount having been the gift of the citizens of Billings. In 1910 a check given by James J. Hill was used in buying the Polytechnic farm, which now consists of 175 acres, free from all incumbrances, the check having been for $25,000. In 1912 Kimball Hall, a dormitory for girls, was erected at a cost of $25,000, that sum having been the contribution of 1,200 different people of New England and New York, Mrs. Kimball, of New Hampshire, having been the largest donor. A shop and manual training building was erected in 1914, and in 1916 Prescott Commons was built at a cost of $20,000, and was named in honor of Amos Prescott, of New York City, who made the most generous contribution. In 1917 the construction of the Losekamp Memorial Building was begun, it being a memorial to Mr. John D. Losekamp, a former citizen of Billings and president of the institute's first board of trustees, and who during his lifetime donated $25,000 to it and left one-third of his estate for the erection of this building, which will cost $70,000. A Young Men's Christian Association Building, to cost $30,000, is in process of construction. Funds are also on hand to build another dormitory for girls, Harwood Hall, to be named for William Harwood, of Uplands, California, he being the principal contributor toward the project.

The Billings Polytechnic Institute is designed to give a practical education to any young person, rich or poor, regardless of their previous advantages, no entrance examinations being required, and the course of study being carried up to the standard of the junior year in college, the Eastern colleges accepting it as such. During its existence the school has educated 1,500 students from Montana and Wyoming, and sent to the World war 126 men, eight of whom were killed in battle. It is located three miles northwest of Billings, and its faculty consists of eighteen members, all efficient instructors.

Lewis T. Eaton married, in 1902, at Lucas, Iowa, Mary E. Johnson, a daughter of the late Robert Johnson, a pioneer farmer of Iowa and a veteran of the Civil war. His widow, whose maiden name was Milly Gary, now makes her home at Polytechnic, Montana. Mr. and Mrs. Eaton have one child, Lewis Thomas Eaton, born February 2, 1916. Politically Mr. Eaton is independent, with republican tendencies. He is a member and trustee of the Congregational Church and belongs to the Midland Empire Club, of Billings.

Richard J. Coughlin. While he came to the Scobey locality eight years ago with only a few hundred dollars in capital, Mr. Coughlin's energetic career has been of a kind to achieve and attract capital and has served in a generous measure to promote and develop local business, so that the little City of Scobey owes a great deal to his business influence.

Mr. Coughlin, who is the active business head of the Westland Oil Company of Scobey, was born in Mower County, Minnesota, July 22, 1886. His father, Dennis Coughlin, was born in Ontario, Canada, in 1845, and first came to the United States at the age of seventeen. Later he returned to Ontario to claim his bride, Ellen Leahy, who was of Irish parentage, a daughter of James Leahy. Dennis Coughlin is now a retired farmer living at Long Beach, California. His children are: Richard J.; Agnes, of Long Beach; and May, a student in the University of Montana.

Richard J. Coughlin was a farmer's son and spent his life on a farm until he came to Montana in 1912. He acquired his early education in country schools, graduated from a business college in Austin, Minnesota, in 1908, and followed that with another period of residence on a Minnesota farm. In 1910 he went to Saskatchewan, was employed as clerk for several implement concerns, and on coming south of the international boundary stopped first at Poplar, Montana. He filed on a claim south of the river, but discovering he had made a wrong filing he did not pursue the subject further. He then prospected over the Scobey locality and after getting his bearings used his capital to start an automobile livery business in 1912.

His was the pioneer garage in this section of the state. His first location was at Old Scobey, and when the new townsite was laid out alongside the tracks of the Great Northern Railway he moved his building and business, and soon afterward he erected the "Motor Inn," which is now owned and operated by the Davis & Shook Company. Mr. Coughlin continued in the garage and automobile sales business for three years, handling the Oakland and Reo cars and a general line of accessories. He sold out in 1916, and since then has devoted practically his entire time to the oil business. In the spring of 1915 he bought out the Pure Oil Company, and with headquarters at his office in the Motor Inn handled a complete retail line of lubricating lines, gas and kerosene. Subsequently he moved his plant to its present location at the railroad yards. Until November 1, 1919, the business was known as the Scobey Oil Company and since then as the Westland Oil Company. This is a corporation chartered by Mr. Coughlin and associates, capitalized at $500,000. The company is a member of the American Petroleum League and does a large retail and jobbing business in petroleum products. Besides the headquarters at Scobey branches are maintained at Flaxville, Redstone, Madoc, Whitetail, Plentywood, Raymond, Baineville, Brockton, Oswego, Frazer, Glentana, West Fork, Froid and Coal Creek, fifteen stations in all. The president of the company is Henry Gray of Redstone; Mr. Coughlin is vice president and general manager; and L. C. Lindemann is secretary and treasurer.

Mr. Coughlin has had to do with other developments at Scobey. In 1914 he built the Scobey Electric Light Plant, and operated it until the spring of 1917. His farming enterprise is noteworthy as a feature of community development. He was responsible in some measure for the breaking up of the sod here and the pioneer efforts at grain growing. When the first council of Scobey was organized Mr. Coughlin was a member and helped prepare the first by-laws and ordinances of the new municipality. Politically he has always supported the democratic national ticket. He is affiliated with the Knights of Columbus, is a member of the Elks Lodge at Williston, North Dakota, and he and his wife are identified with the Catholic Church at Scobey. Their home is a modern seven-room residence on Fourth Avenue and Daniels Street.

At Kellogg, Minnesota, in January, 1917, Mr. Coughlin married Miss Gertrude McNallan, who was born at Kellogg in 1889, one of a large family of children of John and Bridget (Costello) McNallan. Mrs. Coughlin is a graduate of Bethlehem Academy at Faribault, Minnesota, finished her education in the University of Minnesota, and was a successful teacher, doing her last work of that nature north of Scobey. Mr. and Mrs. Coughlin have two children, John Dennis and Helen Gertrude.

William B. Davis, who has played a spirited part in the business and other affairs of Scobey since the spring of 1914, is a master of motor mechanics, was in the automobile business before coming to Scobey and is now of the firm of Davis & Shook Company in a general garage business and authorized Ford agents. He was trained with the aviation section of the army during the World war, the period of his enlistment constituting the only important interruption to his business at Scobey in the past six years.

Mr. Davis was born at Willow City, North Dakota, July 2, 1893. His father, John A. Davis, who is also a resident of Scobey, being prominent as a farmer, rancher, grain dealer and elevator man, was born in Pennsylvania, and acquired a limited education. As a youth he went west to Michigan and enlisted from that state in the Union army. He saw two years of active service, and among other engagements was in the Wilderness. He was mustered out at the close of the war without wounds or record of capture. Immediately after the war he went to Minnesota, entered a timber claim and did farming at various points, and by several stages moved on until he reached Bottineau County, North Dakota. He was there several years as a farmer, and was also elected a republican member of the State Legislature and served three terms. From there he went to Willow City, North Dakota, and next made a move to Kalispell, Montana. He owned ranching interests in Sheridan County, and has been a conspicuous factor in the development of farm lands in this locality. He built a system of elevators along the Great Northern from Plentywood to Scobey, but has sold all of them except the one at Scobey. During his residence in Valley County he was elected a member of the lower branch of the Montana Assembly. His one term showed him a progressive in matters of legislation protecting the independent business man from discrimination by the big corporations or trusts, and his name is identified with the preparation and passage of a bill designed to effect that object. He also made an effort to secure the passage of the herd law but the influence of big stockmen stood in the way.

John A. Davis has been a recognized Grand Army man since the war, and it has afforded him great consolation and entertainment to meet his old comrades periodically to talk over the days of the struggle between the sections. He has been a Master Mason for many years and is identified with the Methodist Church. In Minnesota he married Miss Jennie Bardsley, who was born in Chester, England, and came to the United States with her parents at the age of thirteen. Their family consists of the following children: John, a rancher near Medicine Lake, Montana; Anna, who died in 1907, the wife of Jack Bennett; George, on the old Davis ranch near Outlook, Montana; and William B.

William B. Davis was an infant when his parents moved to Montana and he grew up and received his primary education at Kalispell. After three years in high school he took a year of preparatory work in the North Dakota Agricultural College at Fargo and spent two years in mechanical engineering in the same school. Thus he had more of the technical training than the ordinary automobile mechanic, and when he left school he served as a chauffeur for different parties and was doing that kind of work when he came to Scobey in the spring of 1914. The first year he ran his own car for hire, and that was the basis of his livery business. With Harry Shook he secured the Ford agency, and they established their first office and garage in the small building just behind the First National Bank. At first they had no shop, and their chief sales besides cars were tires and accessories. Their combined capital was chiefly self-confidence, as it is expressed. The sale of Fords brought the firm its quickest profits, and with a growing business they bought in the spring of 1916 the "Motor Inn" property built by R. J. Coughlin, and by subsequent additions this provides them a space of 150 by 50 feet. They also have a shop ample for their needs, with a full complement of modern machinery, and they carry a complete accessory stock of Ford supplies and repairs. The Davis livery business merged into the general business of the firm and was continued until the locality became well supplied with cars. The Davis & Shook Company, which is incorporated, has distributed and sold from this agency about 500 Ford cars.

For about eighteen months Mr. Davis was away from business and sold out his interests in the firm, resuming his place after his discharge. He enlisted at Omaha in September, 1917, was given his primary ground training at the University of California at Berkeley, and twelve weeks later was sent to the flying field at San Diego, where he remained three months. He was then commissioned second lieutenant, Royal Mail Aviation, and his last duties were in the primary instruction at Mather Field, California. He received his discharge there January 3, 1919.

At Glasgow, Montana, July 6, 1914, Mr. Davis married Miss Estella M. Stockman, who was born at Austin, Minnesota, the younger of two daughters, her sister being Mrs. George Alsop of Glasgow. Mrs. Davis accompanied her husband when he went into the army, and spent most of her time at San Francisco. Mr. Davis is affiliated with Scobey Lodge of Masons, and has taken the work of the Consistory at Sacramento, California. He cast his first presidential vote in 1916 for Hughes, and regards his affiliation with the republican party as permanent.

Paul Crum has been one of the busy lawyers of Northeastern Montana for seven years, and has handled a large share of the law business originating in and around the Town of Scobey, where he located in 1913.

Mr. Crum, who before becoming a lawyer achieved an interesting military record, was born at Andover, New York, August 6, 1880. His father, Taylor Crum, represented an old New York State family, was reared and educated there, attended a normal school and also studied law. Moving to Dakota Territory, he first settled at Buffalo, later was a teacher and principal of the Fargo schools, and after admission to the bar became a pioneer lawyer of Fargo and has had an active career in that city for forty years. In early life he was a democrat, an ardent supporter of Bryan, but in later years has become converted to republican policies. Taylor Crum married Helen Bixby, who was born in New York State, a daughter of Simon and Phila (Lake) Bixby. She died at Santa Cruz, California, in 1884, when Paul was only four years of age. Her three sons are: Dr. Colon Crum of Fargo; Paul; and Leon of Zion City, Illinois.

Paul Crum from the age of four years lived in Santa Cruz, California, in the home of his maternal grandparents. He was there three years, later rejoining his father in North Dakota, and finished his education in the Fargo High School.

He was not eighteen years of age when the Spanish-American war broke out in 1898. He endeavored to enlist but was rejected on account of his youth. He was not to be denied the privilege of serving as a soldier, and he beat his way to San Francisco, shipped as a sailor on the bark Andrew Welch, left the ship at Honolulu, where he was taken in by the Provisional Company C of the First Nebraska Infantry recruits, and was carried as a stowaway with them to Manila on the transport Hancock. At the outbreak of the Filipino insurrection February 4, 1899, he was permitted by Captain E. C. Geary to serve as a private in Company B, First North Dakota Volunteer Infantry. He left that company March 28th and was permitted by Lieutenant Sherman A. White to serve as a private with Company E, First Nebraska United States Volunteers, on the north line. He returned with that company to San Francisco August 1, 1899. Mr. Crum was a participant in the engagements from Manila to Marilao, thence to Santa Tomas May 4, 1899, and was on the firing line eight times with the First Nebraska and three times with the North Dakota troops. He went through the campaign without wounds.

In consideration of his voluntary service an act of congress was passed and approved May 22, 1902, found in the records as Private Bill No. 700 entitled: "An Act to Place the Name of Paul Crum on the Muster Rolls of Company B, First Regiment, North Dakota Volunteer Infantry," under the terms of which act he is given credit for service as a private with said North Dakota Company from February 3, 1899, to March 28, 1899; as though he had been regularly enlisted and discharged. This official recognition by the Government places him among the veterans of the Filipino insurrection and entitles him to all the privileges and immunities of veterans or soldiers regularly enlisted in that war. As a result of that service he has been honored with the office of Commander of Selmer Oie Post No. 173, Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States.

On coming to Montana Mr. Crum performed his first legal services for the firm of Daniels & Timmons, at the old Town of Scobey. He opened his law office in the new Town of Scobey in 1913 and has handled a growing general practice and collection work. He took advantage of the opportunity presented for acquiring free homes, entering a claim a few miles west of Scobey. He began with the usual frame shanty, and has kept up his work there until the land is substantially improved. He occupied it for his home for a year after acquiring title. In other ways he has been identified with the movements which have had the good of Scobey in view. He served as secretary and director of the farmers' elevator since 1914, and is chairman of the Board of Trustees of School District No. 1. He cast his first presidential vote for Mr. Bryan, but in 1916 supported Mr. Hughes and has since acted with the republican party. In 1908 he was made a Mason at Minnewaukon, North Dakota, and is a member of the lodge.

December 5, 1908, at Tacoma, Washington, Mr. Crum married Miss Ingrid Kirkeberg. Her parents were Gunder and Gunhild (Wold) Kirkeberg, the former of Norwegian parentage and the latter a native of Norway and now living at Eugene, Oregon. Her father was a merchant at Cummings, North Dakota. Mrs. Crum, who is the second in a family of six children, attended the Fargo High School, the Mayville Normal School in North Dakota, and was successfully identified with teaching in North Dakota and Tacoma and Olympia, Washington, until her marriage. Mr. and Mrs. Crum have four children: Stephen, Irma, Helen and Taylor, Jr.

JUSTICE LINCOLN WILSON. The lives of those about us prove the truth of the old assertion that "the race is not always to the swift," and that there is really no honorable "short cuts" to fortune. The wealthy ranchmen of Montana know this to be true, and many of them who several decades ago were only cowboys at $40 a month have, through the hardest labor and the exercise of sound common sense, acquired their present possessions. One of them, Justice Lincoln Wilson, proprietor of the "W Bar" ranch in Powder River County, five miles up the river from Broadus, the county seat of the newly created county, now owns the lands once the property of a cattle company for which he punched cattle in the pioneer days, and he is probably the last man they would have picked from their employes to achieve the success which has come to him. He has not leaped into prominence, but worked hard for all he possesses, and knows how to increase his production and to turn his attention to the lines for which his ranch and locality are best suited.

Justice Lincoln Wilson was born at Fort Wayne, Indiana, November 22, 1860, a son of John Tolburt and Hannah D. (Jones) Wilson, natives of Indiana, the former coming of Welsh stock and the latter of English. In 1863 the family migrated to Marshall County, Iowa, and became farmers and sheep growers. The father died and is buried at Le Grande, Iowa. The widowed mother took her children to Nebraska in the early '70s, and there they became cattle raisers and farmers. While John T. Wilson was not himself in the service of his country during the war between sections, he had three sons who wore the "blue," and all of them lived to return home, marry and rear families. His children were as follows: Lydia, who married John Yarger, died on Powder River; Charles G., who died at Grand Island, Nebraska; John, who died at Elk City, Oklahoma; Jacob C., who lives in Alberta, Colorado; William, who is a ranchman on Powder River; Harlow, who lives at Hastings, Iowa; Edmund, who died at Hastings, Nebraska; Harriet, who lives at Alberta, Colorado, is the wife of Washington McDonald; Justice Lincoln, whose name heads this review; and Nellie, who married James Duncan, of Thorpe, Washington.

Justice Lincoln. Wilson when he reached his majority found himself possessed of but a very limited education, "hard knocks" having been his chief school of experience, but he is one of those men who possessess native ability and is a good judge of men, so that this lack has not bothered him to any great extent. When he was married he had practically nothing, and he reached Montana the owner of a mule team and a span of colts. He and his wife drove through the Black Hills country, and on July 16, 1882, crossed Powder River. They were accompanied by the old buffalo hunter Bill Knowles, who subsequently became the proprietor of the Chico Hot Springs, and this crossing of the river was made at what later became the site of the Knowles cabin.

After a few days of rest, for the trip had been a long and tiresome one from Hastings, Nebraska to Montana, Mr. Wilson went to work for Frewin Brothers, who were establishing a ranch at the mouth of Bitter Creek on Powder River and opening up in the horse and mule business. This whole region up and down the river was as wild as nature could make it. Buffalo and other big wild game were plentiful, and for some time after the arrival of the Wilsons these animals roamed at will over the prairies and grazed on the hills and in the valleys. In the fall of 1882 Mr. Wilson moved to Miles City for the winter, and assisted in the construction work on the courthouse and poorhouse, hauling with his own team. The following summer he returned to Powder River, and went to work for "Zeke" Newman, owner of the "N Bar" ranch. He took a hay contract on both Powder River and Mizpah Creek, cutting and putting up hay, following this work by employment by the month. That same fall he invested his savings in a few head of cattle, for which he paid less than $20 each.

After another year with the "N Bar" ranch he took his stock to the big spring at the head of the Big Pumpkin Creek, and after squatting there for about twelve years, after the Government survey was made, he found that this was a pre-emption claim. He entered it, proved it up and patented it, and lived upon it until 1893, when he entered his homestead on Powder River and moved to his present ranch. His pioneer Montana home was at the Big Spring, the old home of C. O. Mason, who had come into Montana with him. This was a three-room log house and is still standing. When removal was made to the new home, a one-room cottonwood log cabin was erected, and it has been incorporated in the present commodious ranch house, built later on.

In 1893 Mr. Wilson changed from cattle to sheep, but has of recent years resumed his connection with the cattle industry, and now practically confines himself to the latter. Owing to the closing of the open range and the introduction of barbed wire it was not possible to handle sheep as he had done. During 1882 and 1883 the "N Bar" Company stocked its ranch with some of the best blooded range cattle ever brought to the state, driven in here from Oregon and Washington. This company lost considerably during the severe winter of 1886, and their ranch and all the land to which they held title subsequently fell into the hands of "Link" Wilson. Mr. Wilson began "scripping" land soon after 1900, and has acquired other possessions from time to time until his is one of the large stock concerns along Powder River, and he owns other ranch properties in Powder River County. The ""W Bar" brand is his chief one and the one which is peculiarly his. He began shipping to Omaha and Chicago markets at an early day, and the Burlington, Northern Pacific and the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul roads know him well as one of the heavy stock shippers. His ranch is about ninety miles from any of these roads.

The stock business, however, has not always shown Mr. Wilson its velvet side, for in the fall of 1886, owing to the long protracted drought, he had to move his cattle to Sheridan, Wyoming, in order to save them from perishing and to pass them through the uncertain weather of the coming winter. Feed was plentiful in that part of Wyoming, while in the Powder River country everything was parched and dried. Although he lost heavily, he saved much by that move. The pioneer cattle man had to contend with the extremely low prices which proved a veritable scourge, he in 1893 selling his entire bunch for $16.50 a head. In 1918 he received 16¼ cents a pound for his cattle. The lowest price he received for his wool was 6½ cents per pound, and his highest price for the clip was received in 1917, it then being 54 cents per pound. His ranch is now running more cattle than ever before.

Coming to Montana when it was full of game, Mr. Wilson is proud of the fact that he was never guilty of slaughtering the wild animals for the sport of it. He used to protest to the game warden against the practice of hunters from distant cities coming into the region and killing off the game, but did not appear to be able to stop the practice. As a result of this wholesale killing practically all of the animals are now extinct in Montana, although a very few deer and antelope remain. Until April, 1919, Mr. Wilson's interests were centered in Custer County, but with the setting aside of a portion of that region for the formation of a new county his ranch comes into the new one, and he is now a resident of Powder River County.

On January 28, 1882, Justice Lincoln Wilson was united in marriage near Hastings, Nebraska, to Margaret Duncan, a daughter of Patrick Duncan. Born in Ireland of Scotch parents, Patrick Duncan came to the United States and lived in Illinois at the time of his marriage, and spent some time near Carroll and at Chicago, that state. In the early '70s he migrated to Nebraska, and was one of the first settlers of Adams County, Nebraska, where he died when about ninety years old. His children were as follows: John, who lives at Roseland, Nebraska; Julia, who married John Woods and died on Powder River; William, who lives at Roseland, Nebraska; Mary, who never married, and died at Roseland, Nebraska; Catherine, who married Edward Wilson, a brother of Justice Lincoln Wilson; Ellen, who married James Bovard, and lives at Ayr, Nebraska; Mrs. Wilson, who was born October 26, 1863; Anna, who married Lee Arnold of Roseland, Nebraska; and Eugene, who died at Roseland, Nebraska.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilson became the parents of the following children: Ernest Lee, who was the first white child to be born in this region, is interested with his father in business; Ray, who is also engaged in ranching, married Bernice Ludolph, a daughter of George Ludolph, and has a son, Philip Raymond; Alta, who was married to Herman McCutchen, of Greeley, Colorado, has two daughters, Margaret and Louise; and Helen, who married Melville McCutchen, a soldier of the National Army during the great war. It is interesting to note that Mrs. Wilson was for some time the only white woman in the Powder River country, and her experiences during those early days were varied. It took a woman of unusual character and patience to brave the hardships and discomforts of pioneer life, but she feels repaid for all she underwent when she realizes the success which has come to them and the future this great state provides for her children. Mr. Wilson has been so occupied with his private affairs that he has taken but little part in politics, although always a republican, but his interest has been so aroused by the importance of recent measures and the trend of events that he will enter more actively into public affairs, and probably will develop into as potent a factor in them as he has become in the stock business of this part of the state.

JOHN C. ANDERSON, a ranchman on Otter Creek in the Ashland community, has been identified with the locality for a quarter of a century, but knew Montana many years before by association with it from an adjoining state. He came into the West in 1881 as a youth of sixteen years and began his connection with the cattle business on "the Loup" in Nebraska, where he spent two years with Harris Brothers, well known to that region as ranchmen, his duties including round-up work and riding the range. When he left that locality Mr. Anderson removed to Cheyenne, Wyoming, by train and hired out to the Tillotsons of the "Fiddle Back" outfit on the Cheyenne River. This was sixty miles north of Fort Fetterman, the postoffice of the ranch and Mr. Anderson here did the same work that had engaged his activities therefore and continued to be so employed until 1892.

In 1892 Mr. Anderson came into Montana and went to work for W. W. Terrett on Beaver Creek, Custer County, spending a year with that old-time ranchman. He then went into the service of Captain Howes on the "Circle Bar" ranch on Otter Creek, and was a hand about the place for two summers, spending his winters doing the initial work of proving up his own homestead. His wife began working with him as a housekeeper on the Terrett ranch, and occupied the same position with Captain Howes during the time her husband was working there. For several years after he entered his land Mr. Anderson continued range work for others while his wife took charge of their own new home and looked after their little bunch of cattle. "Kid" Anderson contributed toward the social side of life in the early years along Otter Creek. He handled a banjo well and played "second" to Charley Thex, the violinist, at dances for thirty miles around his home, and the money this little orchestra thus earned added much to the comforts of two Otter Creek ranchmen who have since achieved financial independence.

Mr. Anderson entered a quarter section of land on Otter Creek, and the first home erected for his reception was built on the banks of the creek. It comprised two rooms, now a part of the family residence, and his children were all born under that roof. Mr. Anderson began his career as a stock grower and breeder as a Hereford man, and has been breeding them for twenty-five years. While he has handled this brand for so many years, it has been but recently that he has brought in the first Polled male Hereford with the intention of breeding the Polled Hereford stock. His experience leads him to the conviction that this breed of cattle is better for range purposes than any other with which he has had an experience, and he feels that they develop with less trouble and on less feed than the Durham especially, which is a popular beef animal in the West. His recorded brand is the "Diamond Bar" on the left hip.

Mr. Anderson has been an active factor on the ranch here since he entered his claim except for six years when he was inspector for the Montana Stock Growers' Association. He did inspection work for five years at Sioux City, Iowa, and one season at the Chicago Union Stock Yards and spent a year also on the range as an inspector for the Custer County Protective Association. While he was absent from his ranch Mrs. Anderson took charge of its affairs and looked after all the details as successfully as he would have done himself. From his homestead Mr. Anderson has developed a ranch of 1,320 acres, little of which is farmed save for the purpose of hay and feed. As a county man in old Custer County he was deputy sheriff two terms under Sheriff Le Valley. He is a republican in politics and his first presidential vote was cast in Montana following the admission of the state to the Union.

John C. Anderson is a native of Washington County, Kentucky, born near Springfield, June 2, 1865, and his boyhood environment was the farm. His school days were short and his education came as a result of his experience on the Wyoming range. He studied during the winters while with the "Fiddle Back" outfit, and made up somewhat for the educational loss he had sustained as a boy. He left home as a child, being only fourteen years of age when he went to St. Louis, and became a bootblack on the streets. When he left that he went to Macon County, Illinois, and spent two seasons as a farm hand. While there he decided to come into the West, and enroute he met one of the Harris brothers, before mentioned, and hired to him, thus beginning his western career.

Mr. Anderson's father was Thaddeus Anderson, a native of Washington County, Kentucky, who was a distiller in early life and a farmer later, and a man who lived a private life. He died at about fifty years of age and left a widow, formerly Miss Lucy Badgett, who still survives at Springfield, Kentucky. There were three children in the family: Hardin, who died at Louisville, Kentucky; John C., who because of his stature and youth became known as "Kid;" and Logan, of Springfield, Kentucky.

John C. Anderson was married in Vigo County, Indiana, February 22, 1889, to Miss Martha E. Rice. Mrs. Anderson was born in Washington County, Kentucky, in September, 1872, a daughter of Luther and Martha (Brady) Rice. The Rice's moved into Macon County, Illinois, in the early '70s, and Mrs. Anderson grew up near Decatur, that state, where she secured a liberal education and spent her girlhood largely on the farm. She and Mr. Anderson had the following issue: Claude, who is ranching near his father, spent a year with the colors in France as a member of the Seventy-first Coast Artillery, took part in the Argonne Forest campaign and was honorably discharged from the service in March, 1919; Estella, the wife of Loren Daily, a farmer on the east fork of Otter Creek; Jesse, who is a factor on the ranch of his father; and Lucy, the youngest child, who is still attending school.

CHARLES HOUSTON THEX, a well known and prosperous ranchman on Upper Otter Creek, has been a resident of this state since 1888. Prior to this, however, he had visited Montana, as in 1877 he had come to the then territory as a cowboy with a herd of cattle from Parker County, Texas, with Rapid City, South Dakota, as his destination, and when his work in this connection was ended he prospected Montana along the Little Missouri and the Little Powder rivers almost to the Big Powder for a location. He had been many years on the Texas range and was seeking range work in this northern region, but was too early for the cattle business here. The country was full of game and hunting was good, but he was not looking for that kind of sport, and, seeing the situation, returned to Texas as he had come up, on horseback, finding employment for a few years with the Matador Land and Cattle Company and then going to the Indian Territory looking for like work. He found it with Drum & Snyder on the Cimarron and the Medicine rivers, but in 1888 decided to return to Montana to settle and took the train instead of a broncho, coming from Kiowa, Kansas, to Miles City and arriving in May of the year noted.

Mr. Thex was still seeking ranch work and became employed by a Mr. Wallop on a horse ranch on the head of Otter Creek. The next year he changed to the "Circle Bar," also on Otter Creek, and spent seven summers with this outfit, gathering up a bunch of cattle for himself during this time. When he started his own ranch on Otter Creek he took his homestead here, a quarter section of land where his improvements are located, and later desert land was taken, which increased his holdings to 540 acres. For his improvements Mr. Thex started his own home in his three-room frame house, one of the very few of this character of homes in this country, and this has been added to and developed into his present seven-room home. He was then a married man and his wife has been as important a factor in the development of the Thex ranch as has her husband.

Mr. Thex started in with a bunch of maverick cattle, thirty in number, which Levi and Gus Howe sold him at $11 a head. Such cattle now, in 1919, bring a price of $55 a head. His brand is "ThEX" and he is handling beef cattle and marketing them as a shipper to Omaha. Mr. Thex came into this region and found it without schools. He furnished the money which built the first schoolhouse in District No. 32 and has been one of its trustees. He has never "fooled with politics a little bit," but votes when elections are held and has served on the election board, and when national issues are at stake votes the republican ticket.

Charles Houston Thex was born near Jefferson in Marion County, Texas, September 30, 1860. He grew up there until fourteen years of age, and got his "seven days" school there under the instruction of a one-armed ex-Confederate soldier who was more cruel than considerate with the boys under his charge. Mr. Thex had been fighting on the wharf with other boys as a pastime before entering school, and belonged to the Kelleyite faction in opposition to the "Wharf Rats," and a kid war was carried on between the two factions. When in school and dangling his bare feet with a boy companion from one of the old-fashioned benches the boys were suddenly surprised by the whack of the teacher's hickory across their bare legs. Young Thex immediately bolted and the teacher after him, but he was never overtaken and this incident graduated him from that school. Subsequently, and while a cowboy in the Panhandle region of Texas, he bought books and studied during the winters for several years and acquired thus a good common school education.

Mr. Thex's father was Frank Thex, who went into Texas with his father, Sampson Thex, and settled just north of Jefferson, where they were farmers and stockmen. Sampson Thex lived to be 117 years old and died at Linville in the Lone Star State. He was a soldier of the War of 1812 and in the Mexican war, and also fought against the Seminole Indians. He married a Miss Cutbirth, and their two children were William and Frank. Frank Thex was born in either Kentucky or Tennessee and married Mary Cutbirth, a daughter of Daniel Cutbirth, who married a sister of Daniel Boone. Mr. Thex spent his life in Texas after having settled there, sided with the Union during the Civil war, and refugeed up the Mississippi River, entering the Northern army. When the war ended he returned to his home and died west of Jefferson at the age of seventy-three years, his wife having passed away one year before. Their children were: Martha, who married William Smith and resides in Parker County, Texas; Lizzie, who married Hez Allen and resides near Fort Sill, Oklahoma; Missouri A., who married John Hale and died in Parker County, Texas; Jefferson, residing near Elm Springs, Oklahoma; Charles Houston, of this review; and Mary, who married John Caldwell, of Weston, Texas.

Charles H. Thex was married in old Custer County, Montana, February 15, 1897, to Bertha Hagen, a daughter of Guy Hagen, who resides in Glendale, Norway, a home visited by Mr. and Mrs. Thex in 1906. Mrs. Thex came away from Norway to seek better opportunities for labor and met Mr. Thex while she was employed as a housekeeper for the "OU" Ranch on Otter Creek. Their children are: Guy; Franklin, who died recently; Mary; Calvin; Boone; Annie; Sarah; Francis; and Clifford.

JOSEPH P. DONNELLY was a successful lawyer of San Francisco up to the time of the fire and earthquake in 1906. That disaster brought a crisis in his own affairs, and he started his professional and business career over again in Montana. Mr. Donnelly, whose home is now at Havre, has gained a reputation as one of the ablest criminal lawyers in the state.

He was born on his father's farm in Delaware County, Iowa, January 12, 1874. His father was the late Patrick Donnelly, widely known and esteemed in Delaware County, Iowa, where he died October 1, 1912. He has been a resident of Adams Township in that county nearly half a century. Patrick Donnelly was born in Ireland, County Meath, December 15, 1832, and in early manhood came to America. For several years he resided in New York and Illinois, and was a pioneer farmer in Kane County of the latter state. Later he moved to Delaware County, Iowa, and acquired a tract of Government land at $1.25 an acre. He made good use of this land, and was a pioneer who lived up to his opportunities. At the time of his death his estate comprised upwards of 2,000 acres of rich farm lands both in Iowa and Minnesota. A Delaware county paper spoke of him at the time of his death in the following words: "During the half century and more that he lived in Adams Township he served many terms in its public offices. He was one of the first justices of the peace in the county, some of the famous cases of pioneer days having been tried in a makeshift courtroom beneath the roof of his home. The fairness and justice he displayed in deciding points in the disputes of early days won him the confidence of the rough frontier community, the business and social affairs of the countryside always being submitted to his judgment as well as its legal controversies. He was of the best type of the pioneer, courageous, of a rugged honesty which made him square in all his dealings."

On June 29, 1855, he married Julia Smith, who preceded her husband in death about four years. They were the parents of twelve children, Joseph P. being next to the youngest. Eight of the children are still living.

Joseph P. Donnelly grew up on the home farm and had a share in its work and responsibilities. He attended school in winter time and at the age of sixteen he was entered as a pupil in St. Joseph College at Dubuque, later attending St. Mary's College at St. Mary's Kansas, and in 1897 graduated A. B. from Creighton University at Omaha. He took his law course in Georgetown University in the District of Columbia, where he received his Master of Arts degree in 1898 and graduated from the law course in 1899.

Mr. Donnelly has a very interesting distinction in the fact he was the first American lawyer to open a law office in the Philippine Islands. He went to the Islands in 1899, soon after the American military occupation, and for about 1½ years he served as interpreter and translator in the executive department under William H. Taft, then governor-general of the Philippines. Mr. Donnelly returned from the Far East in 1904 and located at San Francisco, where he quickly established himself in favor and business as a lawyer. The fire and earthquake occurred in the spring of 1906, and having lost all his property by that calamity he located at Butte, Montana. For about nine months he was connected with the Hennessy Mercantile Company, then became cashier and credit man for the A. C. M. Hardware Company, serving that corporation for three years, and was then made state manager for the National Surety Company of New York. He occupied that post of duty at Helena about three years. For four years he served as chief deputy county attorney for Lewis and Clark County, and on April 9, 1917, removed to Havre, Montana, where he has acquired a large general practice. Mr. Donnelly is affiliated with Helena Lodge No. 193 of the Elks. Politically he is a democrat.

July 7, 1904, he married Miss Mary G. Donovan, a native of St. Louis, Missouri. They have four children: Marian J., Charles C., Joseph P., Jr., and Catherine L.

Lon Creighton Stevenson as president of the Auto Warehouse and Service Company of Helena is directing the sale and distribution of the Studebaker cars and parts through the Central Northwest, and is also identified with two other motor concerns in the same territory. He is one of the big men in the automobile business in Montana.

Mr. Stevenson is a seasoned and well rounded business man and has had a most unusual business experience. He was born at Walnut Hill, near Atlanta, Georgia, December 15, 1885. The Stevensons are of Scotch English descent and three brothers of the name came to this country in colonial times, first locating in Pennsylvania, whence one branch removed to Georgia. Through his mother Mr. Stevenson is of Irish ancestry. A. D. Stevenson, his father, was born near Atlanta in 1861, was reared and educated and married there, and was actively engaged in farming until 1898. He is an electrical engineer by profession and for the past twenty-two years has followed that line of work. His present duties require his residence in the Panama Canal Zone. He is a republican in politics and though of the minority party in the South held several local offices in Franklin County, Georgia, including county commissioner. He is a member of the Protestant Union Church. A. D. Stevenson married Frances C. McConnell, who was born in Georgia in 1865 and died in that state in 1911.

Lon Creighton Stevenson spent his early life on a farm in Franklin County, Georgia, attended rural schools and eventually secured the equivalent of a high school education. His first important business experience was one year as stenographer with the Southern Cotton Oil Company at Atlanta. For 2½ years he was secretary to L. F. Green, general freight agent of the Southern Railway Company. Mr. Stevenson accepted the opportunity to go to Panama as an attache of the staff of John F. Stevens, who served as chief engineer of the Panama Canal from 1905 until 1907. Mr. Stevenson remained in the Canal Zone about two years and has an intimate and technical knowledge of many phases of the construction of that great waterway. After returning to Atlanta, Georgia, he removed to Chicago in 1907, and was secretary to L. W. Fargo, vice president of the American Express Company, until the winter of 1908. The following year he spent as city salesman for the Underwood Typewriter Company of New York City, and another year was a stock and life insurance salesman in the East. Mr. Stevenson has great gifts and versatile abilities as a salesman. For 1½ years he was eastern representative for Stark Brothers Orchards of Louisiana, Missouri.

He has been identified with the sales and other departments of the Studebaker Corporation since 1912, when he became secretary to the vice president. He was in that position one year, and for two years was manager of the department of promotion and contracts. In 1915 he was sent to Minneapolis as assistant manager of the Northwest branch. In June, 1916, he bought a half interest in the Auto Warehouse and Service Company, a business organized at Billings, Montana, by James A. Shoemaker. At that time he became manager at Billings, and in October, 1917, bought out Mr. Shoemaker's interests, and in January, 1918, removed to Helena and is now president of the Auto Warehouse and Service Company. The offices and plant are in the Studebaker Building on Fuller Avenue. This is the sole factory distributing representative of the Studebaker corporation for the Central Northwest district, comprising Montana, Northern Wyoming and Western North Dakota. It is a big business in itself, requiring two ground floors, 30,000 square feet of floor space, entirely devoted to the Studebaker automobiles and the Studebaker automobile parts.

Mr. Stevenson is also principal owner of the Cole Motor Company of Montana, handling the factory distribution of the Cole-Aero-Eight motor cars for the same district. He is also principal owner and director of the Northwest Day-Elder Motors Corporation, handling the factory distribution in this territory of the Day-Elder motor trucks.

Mr. Stevenson is an independent in politics, a member of Helena Lodge No. 193, Benevolent Protective Order of Elks, and belongs to the Montana Club and Country Club of Helena. November 22, 1919, at Butte, he married Miss Claire S. Graven, a native of Minneapolis.

Samuel A. Houghlan, one of the highly successful ranchmen on the main Pumpkin Creek, has been identified with this locality since 1909, having come here as a homesteader and entered the tract upon which his improvements and ranch headquarters are standing. He was born in Harrison County, Indiana, August 5, 1880, a son of Frank and Loretta (Sharp) Houghlan. Earlier in life Frank Houghlan was connected with the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad, but three years ago came to Montana, and his ranch is located near that of his son. He and his wife became the parents of the following children: Samuel A., who is the eldest; Corda, who is a trainman in the Northwest; and Myrtle, who is the wife of Robert Chapman, of Litchfield, Nebraska.

When he was still a child Samuel A. Houghlan was taken by his parents to Litchfield, Nebraska, and there he attended school. In 1902 Mr. Houghlan came to Montana and engaged with the Hash Knife Ranch on the line between this state and South Dakota, and was employed for a few years working in and out of Montana and Nebraska. Then he came to Miles City and entered the employ of Kenneth McLean, with whom he remained for five years, when he left him, being in charge of the McLean ranch at Miles City lying along the Yellowstone River.

When he came to Montana Mr. Houghlan's capital was his willingness and ability to work, and he sold his services in the best market he was able to find and not until he realized upon them was he able to go into business for himself. When he left Mr. McLean he entered a claim and began running cattle on the open range and also handled sheep on shares. He adopted the brand "RH" on the right shoulder, but the "7-T" is his main brand. Experiment has convinced Mr. Houghlan that the range cattle of the White Face strain are the best for beef, and he is increasing the number of cattle and horses each year. He began shipping soon after he came to Pumpkin Creek and annually ships many carloads to eastern markets through St. Louis, Missouri. At present Mr. Houghlan controls six sections of land, all of which he owns, and three sections are fenced, and this improvement, as well as others of a substantial nature, have all been made by him. When he located on this land he erected a one-room shack, now doing duty as a bunkhouse, but he later erected a four-room frame cottage. His barn, with sheds, is 50 by 42 feet, with mow room for horse hay.

On September 28, 1903, Mr. Houghlan was married to Miss Maude Ingraham, a daughter of Crawford and Mary Ingraham, at Alliance, Nebraska. The Ingraham family migrated to Fairbury, Nebraska, from New Brunswick, Canada, and there Mr. Ingraham engaged in a jewelry business and became a heavy investor in real estate, and there he died. Mrs. Ingraham died at Lincoln, Nebraska. The Ingraham children were as follows: Clyde, who lives in Nebraska; Mrs. Houghlan, who is second in order of birth; May, who lives at Lincoln, Nebraska; Crawford, who is deceased; and Daniel, who lives at Scottsbluff, Nebraska. Mr. and Mrs. Houghlan have no children.

When national issues are at stake Mr. Houghlan votes the republican ticket, but in local matters prefers to act independently. His business affairs have so claimed his attention that he has never connected himself with any fraternities or social organizations, and he is not a church member. Thoroughly experienced in ranch life, he has been able to bring to bear a wide and varied knowledge to his work and has avoided some of the mistakes oftentimes made by those who seek to operate large properties for themselves. His product is recognized as excellent, and he commands good prices in any market. Having concentrated on developing his property he is naturally interested in his neighborhood and can be depended upon to give it hearty support whenever its well being comes before the public.

Oscar Broaddus. The Broaddus family is one of the oldest in the Powder River locality, and no member of it is held in higher esteem than Oscar Broaddus, whose settlement dates back to November 1, 1885, when he came here from old Mexico, where for three years he had been a cowboy. He made the trip to Miles City by rail from El Paso, Texas, and he came here without any previous acquaintance with the locality or settlers. He first found employment with the Newman Cattle Company, which concern had employed him in Mexico, where it operated on the "N-Bar" ranch, and he was a range rider and hand for twenty years. On leaving this company he engaged in ranching for himself in the same neighborhood, establishing himself on the present site of the new county seat of Powder River County, squatting upon unsurveyed land. Later he disposed of this location to Mr. Troutman, after occupying it for several years, and moved to his present ranch fifteen miles above Broadus and entered his homestead on the south side of Powder River, since which time he has been identified with this neighborhood and its interests. As a shelter for his family Mr. Broaddus erected a log shack of two rooms, which is still utilized as the family residence, although additions have been made to it. He originally had only a few head of cattle, which he ran under the brand "RB," and he still uses it, although his herd is now a large one. To his original entry he has added until he now has a good-sized ranch, 125 acres of which are under cultivation, but as a farmer his experience has been much that of his neighbors, all of whom are glad to gather a good crop now and then. In addition to his house Mr. Broaddus' improvements consist of fencing, a flowing artesian well, sheds and granaries.

Oscar Broaddus was born in Howard County, Missouri, November 4, 1862, a son of John and Bettie (Haston) Broaddus. John Broaddus moved from Louisville, Kentucky, to Howard County, Missouri, where he rounded out his quiet, useful life, dying in 1905, at the age of sixty-six years. His widow, who was the daughter of Jesse Haston, survives him and now at the age of seventy-eight years makes her home with her sons in Montana. John Broaddus was a consistent member of the Christian Church. He and his wife had the following children born to them: Oscar, who is the eldest; Horace, who lives at El Paso, Texas; John, who is a ranchman of the Powder River locality; Julia, who is the wife of James R. Allen, of Howard County, Missouri; Mallie, who is the widow of John Daly, of Powder River County; William, who is also a ranchman along Powder River; and Kate, who married Henry C. Daly, of Powder River County. Oscar Broaddus was reared in his native county and after completing the courses in its rural schools became a student of the Glasgow High School.

He has been twice married, first at Miles City in April, 1892, when he was united with Miss Rhoda Moorehead, a daughter of W. W. Moorehead, who came to Montana from Iowa in the '90s and engaged in ranching along the Powder River. He is now a resident of Arvada, Wyoming. The maiden name of his wife was Annie Stout, and she bore him five children. Mrs. Broaddus at her death left three children, namely: Oscar, Jr., who served during the great war; Ernest C., who was trained for service during the great war at Camp Cody, Deming, New Mexico, is now a ranchman, and married to Georgie O'Connell; and Esther, who is married. Mr. Broaddus was married to Mrs. Laura Bidwell in Powder River County in 1903. She came to Montana from Tennessee and was a widow with four children: Mrs. George Linville, Mrs. Esther Tonnis, George Bidwell, a ranchman on Powder River, and Luther Bidwell, of Arvado, Texas. Mr. and Mrs. Broaddus have the following children: Elizabeth, Horace, Helen and Ray.

Mr. Broaddus always votes the democratic ticket in national matters, although in local affairs he is liable to support the candidate he deems will best fill the office in question. He was instrumental in having the Broadus postoffice established on his farm at the mouth of Baking Powder Creek. He has frequently aided in developing the educational facilities of the county and contributed to the erection of several schoolhouses, and for some years has been a trustee of district No. 81, in which four of his children have been educated.

In reviewing the life of Mr. Broaddus the biographer is impressed by the spirit of determination he has always displayed to attain his ends. Leaving Missouri in 1883 because he could not make what he deemed was a sufficient income, he went to old Mexico, acting upon information that there he would find congenial surroundings and excellent wages. After he reached his destination he discovered that while he could make money the people were not ones with whom he could fraternize, and after three years left Mexico with the firm impression that there is nothing in a Mexican or his civilization that an honest white man could tolerate. While in Mexico he worked for the Newman Cattle Company in the states of Chihuahua and Durango, but his associates were principally the despised Mexicans, hence his dissatisfaction. When he reached Montana he found just what he was looking for, a white man's country, and plenty of opportunity for a hard-working, ambitious young man, and his present success demonstrates that he was not backward in taking advantages of the openings offered him. It is such men as Mr. Broaddus who make up the great backbone of American citizenship and who furnish the country with the brave American soldiers who defeated the enemy and ended the greatest war the world has ever known.

JOHN BROADDUS, who is a ranchman of Powder River and a resident of the Broadus locality, came into Montana in 1887 and dates his residence in Custer County from January of that year, since which time he has developed into one of the worthwhile men of this region. He came from Chariton County, but was reared in Howard County, Missouri, where he was born December 11, 1864. He is a son of John A. Broaddus, and a brother of Oscar Broaddus, in whose biography preceding this is given a history of the Broaddus family.

Growing up on a Missouri farm, John Broaddus attended the local schools and early learned to be self-reliant and industrious. He was later given the advantage of a course at the public schools of Glasgow, Missouri. After attaining his majority the ambitious young man struck out for himself and reached Rapid City, South Dakota, by rail, going thence by state to Spearfish and on to Powderville, Montana, his destination. He joined his brother Oscar and with him worked for the old "N-Bar" ranch until it was closed, and then he went into business for himself.

Homesteading a tract on Powder River, he began making improvements which stand, and as he did this before he left the "N-Bar" ranch, in 1896 he had some place to go. His pioneer residence was a log house of one room, which he expanded to three rooms before he brought home a bride. When he located on his ranch he brought with him about seventy-five head of cattle and ran them under the recorded brand of "K-3," which he now uses as his horse brand, having changed his main cattle brand to "700," and his ranch is referred to by this latter name. Mr. Broaddus now owns 720 acres of land, and some of his lowland is used for raising alfalfa, and this, with the growing of other feed for his stock, comprises the extent of his farming.

On July 22, 1903, Mr. Broaddus was married to Mrs. Clara (Martin) Allison, a daughter of Isaac Martin of Jasper County, Missouri. She was born near Pineville, McDonald County, Missouri, May 5, 1875, and is one of the family of four daughters and three sons born to her parents. Mr. and Mrs. Broaddus have no children, but by her former marriage Mrs. Broaddus has a son, Frank L. Allison, who served during the great war as a first class private in the Ninety-first Division of the Expeditionary Forces in France, participating in the battles of Saint Mihiel and Argonne Forest, and coming out of them without wounds. He was honorably discharged in Wyoming in May, 1919, and is now engaged in ranching.

A man of broad mind and far vision Mr. Broaddus early realized the necessity for furnishing good schools for the children of his locality and erected a schoolhouse in his neighborhood. He has frequently served as a judge of elections. His first presidential vote was cast for Grover Cleveland in 1892, after he came to Montana, and he has remained steadfast in his support of the democratic ticket in national matters ever since. Fraternally he belongs to Miles City Lodge, Benevolent Protective Order of Elks. Mr. Broaddus has risen from cowpuncher to owner of a fine ranch, and so have some of his former associates, but there were many of them who did not have the foresight or determination to branch out for themselves when changing conditions warned them of the impending closing of the open range. These men drifted away from Montana, having never been more than an incident in the history of the state, and therefore all the more credit is due to the men who did remain and through their large industries built up a prestige for the state which places it in a prominent place among the others of the Union. Mr. Broaddus has not contented himself with merely increasing his own material prosperity, but has always sought to develop the resources of his neighborhood and help others to get a start as producers, instead of remaining employes.

FRED A. CARMONY, though a resident of Montana only a few years, has become a prominent factor in Carbon County, where he is president of the Joliet State Bank, mayor of the town and a real progressive leader in community affairs. Mr. Carmony was a banker and business man in Oklahoma for a number of years and came from that state to Montana.

He was born in Wayne County, Iowa, April 1, 1876. His paternal ancestors have been in America for a number of generations, coming originally from Germany. His father, James Carmony, was born in Illinois in 1843, was reared in that state, went to Hamilton County, Iowa, where he was a farmer and where he married, and in 1878 became a pioneer homesteader in Rooks County in Western Kansas. He lived there thirteen years and then early in the history of Oklahoma Territory joined in the rush for homes in that country and has lived there ever since. He is now a retired resident of Seiling, Oklahoma. During the Civil war he was a member of an Illinois regiment of infantry one year. He is a republican and has long been active in the Methodist Church. James Carmony married Phoebe Ann Frakes, who was born in Hamilton County, Iowa, in 1852. The oldest of their children is R. N. Carmony, wife of D. B. Heacock, a farmer at Attica, Kansas; the second is Fred A.; Armittie is the wife of J. H. Smart, a farmer at Seiling, Oklahoma; James R., a farmer and stockman, and William A., a merchant, are both at Seiling.

Fred A. Carmony was about two years old when his parents moved out to the Kansas frontier. He attended the public schools of Harper, Kansas, and finished the sophomore year of Harper College. For two summers he was also in the Anthony Normal School, completing his education at the age of twenty-two. In the meantime he had gone with his father to Oklahoma, and was a farmer in that territory and state near Seiling until 1906. In that year he became assistant cashier of the Cestos State Bank of Cestos, Oklahoma, and since then has followed banking as a regular career. In 1910 he organized the Citizens State Bank at Vici, Oklahoma, and served it as cashier until 1913.

Mr. Carmony on coming to Montana bought an interest in the Joliet State Bank, and served as its vice president until January, 1913, since which date he has been president. The other officers are L. L. Seright, vice president, and E. L. Marvin, cashier. This was established as a state bank in 1907, and has a capital of $25,000 and surplus of $10,000. Mr. Carmony also owns 160 acres of land in Dewey County, Oklahoma, and has a modern home at Joliet.

His fellow citizens at Joliet have shown their confidence in his ability in several ways. For two years he was a member of the city council and was elected mayor in April, 1919. He is a republican, is affiliated with Carbon Lodge No. 65, Ancient Free and Acceped Masons, and with Joliet Lodge No. 77 of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

Mr. Carmony married in Carbon County, Montana, in 1910 Miss Celma C. Celander, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Celander. Her parents are residents of Carbon County, where her father has been a ranch owner for many years. Mr. and Mrs. Carmony have one daughter, born June 24, 1911.

Samuel Edward Hudson, one of the prosperous ranchmen on the upper Mizpah Creek, represents one of the more recent additions to the ranching interests of Montana, for he has only been identified with them since the early years of the present century, but during the years he has been here he has made rapid progress. He was born in Williamson County, Texas, September 23, 1890, and was reared in Oklahoma, the Panhandle of Texas and Montana, his father, Christopher C. Hudson, moving about from place to place in search of a permanent location that suited him. When Samuel Edward Hudson was thirteen years old his father came to Montana and took up a ranch near that of the old pioneer, Michael Gilmore, on Mizpah Creek, embarked in the cattle business and there he died in 1916, aged fifty-six years. He had had a varied experience as a ranchman, leaving Kentucky in boyhood for Texas and for a time lived in Williamson County near Taylor, being engaged in farming upon an extensive scale, the rich, black loam being productive of large crops. From there he went into Indiana Territory, now Oklahoma, near Chickasha, where he was engaged in ranching. Once more he chose Texas, and spent ten years in Liscomb County in the Panhandle, from whence he migrated to Montana.

Upon reaching Montana he recorded the brand "R-W" on the left ribs, and his stock continued under it and his son, Samuel E. Hudson, is using it today. The desert claim he entered on Mizpah Creek constituted his deeded land, and he operated upon a modest scale, only occasionally shipping his stock. He lived quietly and his public service was limited to his casting his vote on election day, which was with the democrats in national affairs. A man of frail constitution, his life was one of suffering and death came as a relief. He was a farmer's son and received but a limited education. His father, Columbus Hudson, was a farmer and distiller, and he and his wife had three sons and a daughter.

The schooling of Samuel E. Hudson was also a limited one as to books, but he was well trained in the details of ranching and when he began business on his own account knew just how to conduct it successfully. When still a child he began riding the range, and the handling of stock is second nature to him. His first business venture was handling and speculating in horses, and he became a shipper and local salesman, and continued in that line for eight years. He then took a claim and developed a small ranch on the Mizpah, which he still regards as his home, but in March, 1916, he purchased the stock and leased the old McAlister ranch, where his chief enterprise is carried on. His brands beside that of his father are "T-3," "EK," "AV" and "FE," and "V Crossbar," which came to him with the McAlister ranch. His cattle are the White Face and Durham strains and as a beef producer his enterprise is a leading factor along Mizpah Creek. Horse ranching is also carried on, the standard bred and thoroughbreds being chief among his stock, and his markets are found in St. Louis, Missouri and the Eastern states. The years of the recent war have given an added stimulus to his industries, and horses have been grown under favorable financial conditions. His horses are run under some of the brands popular and common to his ranch.

On May 25, 1916, Samuel E. Hudson was married to Mildred McAlister, a daughter of William and Epsie (Sanderson) McAlister. The Epsie postoffice was named after Mrs. McAlister. Mr. McAlister came to Montana from Oregon, where Mrs. Hudson was born on February 23, 1898, and she is the only child of her parents. Mr. and Mrs. Hudson have a son, Samuel Thomas, who was born March 22, 1917. Mr. Hudson does not belong to any fraternities. While he is registered he has never voted, as it has happened that his business affairs have prevented his going to the polls. However, he shows an intelligent interest in local matters and will support measures looking to a further development of this region.

John Blatchford Collins for over a third of a century has been a resident of Montana, has gained a prominence in business and public affairs, and as a resident of Miles City was a leader in all patriotic projects launched in that section of the state during the World war.

Mr. Collins was born at Quincy, Illinois, September 7, 1853, though at the time his parents were living in St. Louis, Missouri. His ancestry is of old and prominent New England stock. He is descended from John Collins, a settler in Massachusetts during the seventeenth century. In a later generation the Collins family intermarried with the Morris family, and the record of both those families include soldiers of the American Revolution. Amos Morris Collins, grandfather of the Miles City business man, was for many years in the wholesale dry goods business at Hartford, Connecticut, served as mayor of that city, and his remains are buried there. He married a Miss Lyman, and they were the parents of six children.

The second child was Morris Collins, who was born in Massachusetts but was reared at Hartford, Connecticut. About 1849 he established his home in St. Louis and was a successful manufacturer of lead pipe and sheet lead. His last years were spent at Jacksonville, Illinois, where he died in 1873, but he was laid to rest in St. Louis. During the Civil war

Morris Collins was associated with the Mississippi Valley Sanitary Commission, which in that war did the work performed in recent wars by the Red Cross and other auxiliary organizations. Morris Collins married Martha Wicks Blatchford, a daughter of Rev. Dr. John Blatchford of New York, a prominent Presbyterian minister who was the first ordained minister of that church in Chicago. John Blatchford Collins was the oldest of the seven children of his parents, and the only other one now living is Miss Alice Blatchford Collins of Pasadena, California.

John Blatchford Collins acquired a thorough and liberal education. His parents were strongly Union in their sympathies and just before the Civil war the mother and the children moved out of the uncongenial southern surroundings in St. Louis to Hartford, Connecticut, where John B. Collins attended private boarding school. Later in St. Louis he was a student in the City University, and after the family moved to Jacksonville, Illinois, he attended the high school there. He was also a student in the Riverview Military Academy in Poughkeepsie, New York, and finished his education in Illinois College at Jacksonville.

For a year after leaving school he employed his time in building up his health, and then took his place in the wholesale dry goods house of Dodd, Brown & Company at St. Louis. He served that firm until 1873, when he engaged in independent business as a commission man handling pig iron and iron ore, as member of the firm Spooner & Collins. The firm failed in 1879, and Mr. Collins then sought other associations. For about two years he continued alone in the same business, and then removed to Chicago and conducted a commission business along the same lines.

In 1883 Mr. Collins and his brother, Amos Morris Collins, came out to Montana for the purpose of entering the cattle business. They failed to make the arrangements they desired, and while his brother returned home John Blatchford Collins made the choice which cast his lot permanently with the destiny of Montana. His first connection here at Miles City was as assistant postmaster under Maj. N. Burkhardt. He discharged these duties two or three years and then became manager of the mercantile house of Capt. William Harmon, with which he remained three years. Following that he was clerk to William Courtney in the real estate and insurance business, and in 1892 began his active political service as private secretary to Thomas H. Carter, commissioner of the General Land Office at Washington. With the change in national administration Mr. Carter resigned and took the chairmanship of the National Republican Committee, Mr. Collins then returning to Miles City.

Here he formed a partnership with C. B. Towers in the livestock, real estate and insurance business, under the name Towers & Company, a firm that did an extensive business until 1898. That year Mr. Collins left to accept the office of superintendent of the Federal Forest Reserve in Montana, with headquarters at Missoula. He had the interesting and heavy responsibilities of superintending the Forest Reserve at Missoula until 1901, when he resigned and re-entered the livestock commission business at Helena. In 1903, to benefit his wife's health, he removed to Forsyth. After her death he continued the real estate and insurance business there until 1905, when he once more returned to Miles City and this has been his home for the past fifteen years. Mr. Collins does an extensive business in real estate and fire insurance, is also a notary public, and is United States commissioner for the District of Montana.

For nearly thirty years he has been one of the leading men of influence in the republican party in Montana. He served as secretary of the Republican State Central Committee by selection of the party convention in 1901 for about three years, has been chairman of the Custer County Republican Committee two or more terms, and a frequent delegate to state conventions. In 1914 he was elected to represent Custer County in the Lower House, serving in the fourteenth session, and in 1918 was elected to the Sixteenth Legislature. During the fourteenth session he was on the committees of education, insurance, new counties and divisions, state institutions, public buildings and grounds. That was a democratic Legislature, and his influence therefore was in the minority. During the sixteenth session he was assigned by the republican speaker to the chairmanship of the committee on insurance and as a member of the state institutions, engrossing and Theodore Roosevelt Memorial committees. As chairman of the insurance committee he performed a valuable service to the state in securing the passage of measures beneficial to the public and clarifying the laws upon insurance. He also introduced in conjunction with Representative Fuller a bill providing for the establishment of a State Normal School at Miles City, but this bill failed to secure consideration. Mr. Collins was a member of the reception committee to welcome former President Taft when the latter passed through Helena while touring the country in the interest of the Liberty Loan and the League of Nations. Mr. Collins inherited his politics, being born in the republican State of Illinois and reared in a republican home. However, his party affiliations are matters of strong conviction as well.

During the World war Mr. Collins was chairman of the Custer County Council of Defense, and took a prominent part in the various drives for funds. He was commissioned as one of the four-minute men and at the time of the Victory Loan was chairman of the Speakers Bureau of his county. Mr. Collins is well read, possesses a keen analytical mind, and has been a student of social and political conditions for many years. He enjoys the resources of his private library, filled with works of history, biography and travel. For many years he has been a member of the American Historical Association. He is prominent in the Presbyterian Church, serving as elder and secretary and treasurer for more than twenty years. Fraternally he is affiliated with the Sons of the American Revolution and is a member of the Knights of Pythias and the Pioneers of Eastern Montana.

At St. Louis, December 14, 1874, he married Miss Nellie Davis, daughter of Christopher and Jane (Spottswood) Davis. By this marriage Mr. Collins had two sons: Morris, who died in young manhood; and Charles Blatchford, a resident of St. Louis, who married Helen Klein and has a son, Charles K. The second wife of Mr. Collins was Miss Nellie Thompson, daughter of T. J. and Sarah Thompson, an Ohio family. She died at Forsyth, Montana, June 18, 1903, and had lived in Montana since 1882, when her parents established their home here.

CHARLES AXEL LINDEBERG. As clerk of the District Court at Miles City, Charles Axel Lindeberg is in an office for which long experience has eminently qualified him. For a number of years he was a law clerk and court reporter and has a knowledge of court procedure that would do credit to a lawyer.

Mr. Lindeberg was born August 22, 1881, and was an infant when his parents settled in Custer County, Montana. His father, Nils Lindeberg, was born in Malmo, Sweden, was educated in common schools, and was a farmer's son. At the age of fifteen he entered a training school for cabinet makers and had an apprenticeship of four years. He married Miss Hannah Nelson, and two children were born to them before they started for the United States. They sailed from the vicinity of Malmo, landed at New York, passed through old Castle Garden, and the mother and her children made their first stop at Chicago. Mr. Lindeberg had in the meantime come out to Montana and was in the employ of the Northern Pacific Railway Company. For a time he had worked as a cabinet maker in the Pullman Car Shops at Chicago, and followed his trade with the Northern Pacific while it was in course of construction through Montana. After the road was completed by the joining of the two ends he left the service and took up a homestead near Horton. During the fourteen years he remained there he developed a farm, acquired title to his land, and in 1894 sold his cattle and land and bought another ranch a few miles below Miles City. For about fifteen years he handled sheep on an extensive scale, and was one of the men who helped give Montana its wonderful record in wool production. He still owns one of the splendid stock ranches of the valley, comprising more than 2,600 acres, well improved, with an independent irrigation plant, the cultivated area now being devoted to grain and alfalfa. While the greater part of his life has been devoted to ranching in the Yellowstone Valley, he has recently become associated with his sons in the garage business at Miles City.

The children of Nils Lindeberg and wife are: Oscar, associated with his father in the garage, married Ruth Anderson and has two children, Donald and Jack; Charles A.; Dr. Sadie B., of Miles City; Mrs. Bessie L. Pruett, of Miles City, mother of one son, John; William A., who is a graduate of the Chicago Dental College and practicing his profession at Miles City; Louise A., who served as an army nurse in Paris; Nils, Jr., a rancher at the old homestead; Carl A., also on the ranch; Joseph C., in the train service of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company, and who was, like his brother, the dentist, a soldier during the last months of the war.

Charles A. Lindeberg spent his childhood and youth on the farm and ranch along the Yellowstone. As one of a large family and one of the older children he made a personal sacrifice for the benefit of the younger members of the family, and after finishing the common school course and entering the high school at Miles City he interrupted his work and became a sheep herder for his father. He worked at this two years and then resumed his studies at Miles City and graduated the following year. The earnings he made on the range also enabled him to finish his education in the Northern Indiana Normal School at Valparaiso, where he was graduated in the commercial and normal courses. He specialized in stenography, and this was his technical qualification for court reporting. His first work as a reporter was done for Sidney Sanders, an associate justice of Montana, and after that he was employed in the courthouse at Miles City as deputy clerk and recorder for eight years. Mr. Lindeberg was candidate for the nomination for district clerk against many competitors, and his name was placed on the republican party ticket and he was elected by nearly 900 votes. He succeeded Clerk James G. Ramsay and took office the first Monday of January, 1917. His long previous experience in the courthouse enabled him to take up his duties without special coaching, and he has been most capable and efficient in handling all the work of his office.

Mr. Lindeberg is a popular member of the Knights of Pythias, the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, and served for over nine years as keeper of records and seal in the Knights of Pythias. He was reared in a home of religious atmosphere, and he and his wife are Presbyterians, Mrs. Lindeberg being closely identified with the auxiliary work of the church.

November 11, 1911, Mr. Lindeberg married at Miles City Miss Dixie H. Haynes, daughter of E. C. and Edith (Campbell) Haynes. Her parents came from Iowa and were early settlers in Custer County and for many years the father has been a prosperous farmer there. The Haynes children are Otis C., Robert H. and Mrs. Lindeberg. Mr. and Mrs. Lindeberg were schoolmates in Miles City, and practically grew up as children together. They have two children: Richard H. and Charles Douglass.

Judge Daniel L. O'Hern was judge of the District Court of the Sixteenth Judicial District, and has been a resident of Miles City since he went on the bench in 1915. A thoroughly educated lawyer, a student of public questions, a worker in community affairs, Judge O'Hern well deserves the confidence of his fellow citizens in Montana, where he has been practicing law since September, 1908.

He was born on a farm near Fort Dodge, Webster County, Iowa, in January, 1883. His father, John O'Hern, was a native of County Tipperary, Ireland, and spent his active life as a farmer in Iowa. He married in that state Miss Mary Shehan, a native of County Galway, Ireland. The parents died on their farm near Fort Dodge, and of their children Daniel L. was the only one to take up a profession, all the others still living in that section of Iowa.

Daniel L. O'Hern spent his early life on a farm. His parents went to Iowa as early as 1873. He acquired a literary education in the common schools, attended Tobin College at Fort Dodge, and then entered the Iowa State University, where he took both the literary and law courses and graduated in 1908. He made for himself a reputation as a speaker while in university, and has spoken ably before many audiences in Montana, and has both the poise and ready wit of the natural orator. While in the university he was active in all the debating societies and was a member of the team representing his school in the inter-collegiate debate with the University of Kansas. His team won the first decision for his school in eight years. The subject of the debate was "That private ownership offers the best solution for the traction problem," and the Judge and his colleagues took the affirmative side.

Soon after graduating in law Judge O'Hern came to Montana and located at Missoula, where he practiced his profession alone. He was soon drawn into politics. He has always been a democrat, though reared in a republican state, and cast his first presidential vote in 1904. In 1910 he was elected a member of the Lower House of the Legislature, serving in the Twelfth Session. This was a democratic Legislature, the house being presided over by Speaker McDowell, who gave Judge O'Hern the chairmanship on the committee on development and publicity and made him a member of the judiciary, banks and banking, horticulture and state boards and officers committee. Of chief importance was the amendment to the State Constitution providing for woman suffrage, emanating from the committee on development and publicity. Another measure originating in the same committee and heartily supported by Judge O'Hern was the Donlan White Slave Law, passed the same session. Judge O'Hern also supported the aspirations of Henry L. Meyers for United States senator. Mr. Meyers was chosen after a sixty-day deadlock, and was the last senator chosen by the Legislature. This term completed Judge O'Hern's legislative experience.

He also served as assistant county attorney and in 1913 moved his residence to Glendive, Dawson County, and was assistant county attorney there for two years. Upon the creation of the Sixteenth Judicial District he was appointed judge and then moved his residence to Miles City. His appointment was made March 12, 1915, and he opened his first term of court at Miles City the following day. He was elected for the regular term in November, 1916, by a vote of 1,500 majority. At that time the district contained four counties and is now made up of Custer, Jordan, Powder River, Prairie, Fallon and Carter counties, and there are two judges to handle the work.

Judge O'Hern is an active member of the Elks and Knights of Columbus, having served the latter order as district deputy. He is unmarried.

GEORGE W. CLARK, of Richland County, has a record as a soldier that entitles him to the lasting regard of his nation and particularly of the Northwest, where he was an Indian fighter in the decade of the seventies and helped make it possible for the white men to settle and carry on the work of progress in this state. There are few men still living in Montana who have served their country in the uniform of a soldier for a longer period and none more faithfully than George W. Clark.

He was born at Boston, Massachusetts, April 5, 1846, and when twelve years of age moved with his parents to Wakefield, Massachusetts. He had completed one year in high school, and was fifteen years of age when the Civil war broke out. His eagerness to get into the fighting overcame the handicaps of age, and not long afterward he enlisted and was assigned to Company I of the Twentieth Massachusetts Infantry. He was with that command in Virginia, his first battle being that of Antietam in the fall of 1862. After that he was taken ill, and was sent to a convalescent camp at Alexandria, Virginia, and discharged. On November 22, 1863, he re-enlisted in Company B of the Fourth Massachusetts Cavalry, under Colonel Arnold A. Rand. With the Second Battalion of this regiment he was sent to Florida and did patrol duty at Jacksonville, was in the battle of Gainesville August 17, 1864, at Black Creek September 3rd, in the engagement at Baldwin the next month and remained in Florida until the close of the war. The battalion then joined its regiment at Richmond, where it performed provost duty, and also at Standardsville and Charlottesville. In October, 1865, the regiment was returned to Boston, where Mr. Clark received his discharge as a bugler November 27, 1865. Aside from illness he went through the war without wounds. On April 19, 1870, he was issued a testimonial signed by Governor Claflin of Massachusetts as to his service, accompanied by the thanks of the governor for the duty he had rendered his state and nation so faithfully.

The war over, Mr. Clark became a carpenter, and this trade and building contracting have been his chief vocations through his long civilian career.

About ten years after he left the Union Army he again became a soldier, enlisting at Boston, Massachusetts, in April, 1876, in the regular army. As a recruit he was sent West, traveling by railway as far as Ogden, Utah, and thence going over the trail to Fort Ellis, Montana, where he was assigned to Company L of the Second United States Cavalry, under Captain Randolph Norwood and Colonel Davidson. This battalion was attached to General Gibbons' command, which was under instruction to join the forces of Generals Terry and Custer, and together they proceeded against the Indians then in a hostile mood. The history of Montana gives a prominent part to the following events, during which General Custer, impatient at delay and with an ambition to win all the glory of the Indian campaign, with his fellow officers and their re-enforcements entered the fight with the Sioux on the Little Big Horn, culminating in the historic massacre on the 26th of June, 1876. In the spring of 1877 Mr. Clark's battalion left Fort Ellis for Tongue River to join General Miles' Fifth Infantry. He was in the battle of Muddy Creek May 7, 1877, against the Minnekonge Indians. While at Tongue River General Sherman and party came through on a tour of inspection of the military forts of this region. Mr. Clark's company was detailed to escort the distinguished party to Fort Ellis, Sergeant Clark being detailed as orderly to General Sherman. When they reached Fort Ellis they learned of the outbreak of the Nez Perce under Chief Joseph, who had met General Gibbons' command at Big Hole Basin and defeated the troops. General Sherman immediately ordered Company L to re-enforce Gibbons, for the purpose of bringing in wounded soldiers, and General Gibbons had the company report to General Howard. On the night of its arrival at Howard's headquarters the Nez Perce stampeded General Howard's pack train. Company L was ordered by General Howard to pursue the Indians, and they came upon their camp at ten o'clock the next morning at Camas Creek, attacking with only 60 men strong against 250 Indians. The soldiers were driven back into the bluffs, defending themselves as best they could while awaiting re-enforcements. Of the sixty men thirty were killed or wounded. A relief party failing to appear, the captain asked for volunteers to go to General Howard's headquarters, Sergeant Clark being one of the men who responded to the call and was chosen. After being pursued five miles he succeeded in escaping from the Nez Perces and reached headquarters, when relief was immediately dispatched and released the imperiled troops. General Howard detailed Sergeant Clark to carry dispatches to General Sherman, then in the Yellowstone Park, advising the commander of imminent danger from Chief Joseph's fugitive band. General Sherman gave Sergeant Clark a fresh horse, with dispatches to General Sturges of the Seventh Cavalry. While on this mission he came suddenly upon the Nez Perces at four o'clock in the morning and was captured. He was taken before the Big Chief, who put him in the custody of the squaws until the Indians reached the Big Horn, where they were attacked by Sturges' command, but drove off the troops. Joseph then released Mr. Clark and permitted him to rejoin Sturges. The Nez Perce war ended with the capture of the tribe by General Miles on the Musselshell River. Sergeant Clark then resumed duty with his company at Fort Ellis. In the spring of 1879 Companies H and L were sent to Fort Assinniboine, with Colonel Black of the Eighteenth Infantry in command. Sergeant Clark did his last army duty there on detail as head carpenter over the enlisted men, and remained until the fort was practically completed in 1881. He received an honorable discharge in August of that year.

Thus for five years he was on almost constant duty at the outpost of civilization in Montana and gained an intimate knowledge of this pioneer region which many years later he saw again, when it was beginning to bear the mature fruits of civilization. After leaving the army he returned to Massachusetts, and for many years followed his trade. In 1913 he came out to Montana to visit his daughter at Sidney, and soon afterward entered a homestead at Three Buttes in Richland County. As an old soldier he was able to prove up in a year, when he deeded the place to his daughter and it is in her name. Since then he has made his home during the summers with his daughter, Mrs. Jennie E. Young, in the Mount Pleasant community, ten miles southwest of Sidney, and spends his winters in the East. Through all his mature years, more than half a century, Mr. Clark has given his political support chiefly to the democratic ticket and was a supporter of the Wilson administration.

At Randolph, Dodge County, Wisconsin, December 24, 1868, Mr. Clark married Elizabeth Ann Pendell. She was born in the Catskill Mountains of New York, daughter of William Pendell, who later became an early settler in Wisconsin. Mr. Clark has two living children, Mrs. Jennie E. Young and Louie P., the latter of Rawson, North Dakota.

Mrs. Jennie Young was born in Randolph, Wisconsin, August 22, 1870. She acquired a grammar school education in Dunn County, Wisconsin. She became the wife of Frank L. Young on February 22, 1888. Since the summer of 1906 she has been a factor in the affairs of the Mount Pleasant community of Richland County, where her husband entered a homestead, and with the assistance of their children they have improved a farm and developed a good home. Their living children are: Leslie A.; Mabel E., wife of Adelbert E. Webster, of Three Buttes; Lois A., wife of James E. Boles, of Fairview, Montana; Mary E., wife of Walter E. McChesney, of Mount Pleasant; Silver, wife of G. Ross Mellinger, of Mount Pleasant; and Manley A., who with Leslie assists their father in carrying on the home farm.

Mr. Clark is in his seventy-fifth year, but enjoys fairly good health and bids fair to live to a ripe old age. He has twelve grandchildren and sixteen great-grandchildren, all living.

MRS. VEVA SMITH. The women of Montana are awakening to their responsibilities and beginning to take the places in their communities to which their talents entitle them. One of the most progressive women of Broadwater County, and one who has done much for her section of the state is Mrs. Veva Smith, wife of Dr. Charles W. Smith of Townsend.

Charles W. Smith was born at Cincinnati, Ohio, on December 19, 1876, and was educated in the University of Ohio, and received his degree of Doctor of Medicine from the Ohio Medical College. For eighteen months subsequent to his graduation he was interne in the Cincinnati Hospital, and then established himself in a general practice at Kendall, Montana, where he remained until 1905. While living there he conducted the Kendall Hospital, being in charge of it for three years. In 1908 Doctor Smith came to Townsend and has firmly established himself in the confidence of the people as a specialist in surgery. He is a Fellow of the American College of Surgeons. A republican of considerable influence, he was sent as a representative from Fergus County to the State Legislature as the successful candidate on the ticket of his party. For the past ten years he has been a trustee of the city schools. The Methodist Episcopal Church holds his membership and enjoys the effects of his generosity and efforts in its behalf. Doctor Smith belongs to Valley Lodge No. 21, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, of which he is a past master, and the thirty-second degree of Scottish Rite; also to North Star Lodge No. 19, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, of which he is a past grand.

Doctor Smith was married to Veva Marks, and the children of their marriage are: Vera Alice, who was born March 16, 1903, now a junior in the Broadwater County High School; Mary, always called Bill, was born October 9, 1906, and is attending the public schools; and Alvena Lois, born May 27, 1909, attending the public schools.

Mrs. Veva Smith was born near Townsend, Montana, January 26, 1878, and is a daughter of that Montana pioneer and trail blazer, Rufus Marks, whose sketch follows this. Mrs. Veva Smith is eligible to membership in the Daughters of the American Revolution through ancestors who engaged in that great struggle for freedom. Her own range of interests and activities has been remarkable. She early exhibited intellectual faculties of an unusual order. She first attended the schools of what is now Broadwater County in the days when the Indians were still very plentiful in this region, and later was a pupil in the Butte High School at Butte. Her parents, appreciating her abilities, sent her to a young ladies' seminary at Oakland, California, where she completed her training, and almost immediately after leaving this school in 1902 was married to Doctor Smith.

Having special faculty for organization work, Mrs. Smith formed congenial connections with the Clionian Club, which is federated with the Woman's Club organizations of the country. She also belongs to the Sons and Daughters of the Pioneers of Montana, the Rebekahs, of which she is a past grand, and the Esther Chapter of the Eastern Star, of which she has served as secretary for the past seven years. Mrs. Smith has become very prominent because of her work among the young people in her neighborhood, and is now the leader of the boys' and girls' clubs of Broadwater County under the supervision of the Agricultural College of Bozeman. She possesses the faculty of arousing the interests of her young associates and is accomplishing much in teaching them how to raise stock, grain, hay and other products.

Women like Mrs. Smith are proving that they are capable of rendering an efficient service to their communities and countries, and there is no doubt but that if all of the members of her sex were as capable and had made as good use of their talents, natural and cultivated, as she there would have been but slight delay in granting suffrage to women. She is a republican by inheritance and conviction and naturally is a leader in her party as her father before her, among the women voters, to whom she is an inspiration and educator. In her work among the clubs of the young folks of the county she is simply expanding the boundaries of her home circle, and including with her own little ones their companions. The effect of her sympathetic, many-sided genius, her deep understanding of human nature is so widespread that it cannot be overestimated, and it may be truly said that many of the present generation in years to come will feel that through her influence they were able to lay the foundations of every virtue which multiplies the utility and economy of life. She has the determination, vision and really marvelous ability to overcome obstacles which mark the great leaders, and in every way possible she is contributing generously of her personality and time to the civic undertakings of her community and county.

RUFUS MARKS. One of the chief objects of this publication is to preserve the life records so far as possible of Montana's real pioneers, and among them one of the worthiest and most deserving of such record was the late Rufus Marks, for many years an honored citizen of Townsend, Montana, where he died in 1906. The family is still represented in Montana, his daughter being Mrs. Veva Smith of Townsend.

Rufus Marks was born at Elgin, Illinois, in 1845, and died when a little past sixty years of age. His father, James Marks, was a merchant and farmer of Huntley, Illinois, where he died. James Marks married Harriet Hill.

Rufus Marks was reared in his native city, and fresh from the country schools at Elgin at the age of eighteen, in 1864 he enlisted in Company K of the Ninety-fifth Illinois Infantry as quartermaster's clerk. He joined the regiment at Springfield, thence went to Memphis and to Nashville, then to New Orleans, and finally to Chicago, where he was honorably discharged in October, 1865. Having thus performed his duty as a soldier of the Union, he returned to Elgin, spent the winter attending college, and in April, 1866, outfitted for a commercial venture in Montana, carrying merchandise that would have a ready sale among the miners.

He came by the Bozeman route, and at Fort Laramie the United States troops stopped them until a train could be formed sufficiently large to battle hostile Indians in case of trouble. The Indians in fact soon afterward went on the warpath, but the large party of which Mr. Marks was a member had no trouble on this score, but great losses were sustained as a result of swollen rivers, including several lives and also the entire stock of merchandise being transported by Mr. Marks. Destitute of the resources with which he expected to establish himself in business in the territory, he arrived at Bozeman July 1, 1866. Soon afterwards, at New York Gulch, on the advice of a California expert miner, he traded his horses and gave his note of $1,000 for a placer claim. A week later he discovered that this claim had been "salted," and this was the second adversity he encountered. Then followed several months of unproductive work at mining, but with his return to Diamond City he opened a bakery, and from that time forward luck seemed to favor him. He was an expert in baking as in several other lines of work, and it was claimed that he was able to make a pie in two minutes if necessity required. A great demand was placed upon his products and he did a flourishing business. He also secured an interest in a claim in Confederate Gulch and realized several thousand dollars from that source, and an even larger amount from another claim on Montana Bar. Still another mining enterprise absorbed all his capital, and he had to go back to his bakery and to the surer means of contracting for others.

In 1870 he bought the Lenhardy ranch in the Missouri Valley, and also engaged to a considerable extent in freighting. In 1871 he had six ten-mule teams running from Batten and Corinne to Helena. In 1874 he bought a stage line and took the mail contract, running each way daily between Helena and White Sulphur Springs, a distance of seventy-four miles. The operation of this route required seventy horses. His freighting business he continued until railway competition made it unprofitable. He operated a mail contract between Townsend and White Sulphur Springs until 1899. With the first start of Townsend in 1883 he became a member of the local mercantile firm of Tierney & Company, a firm that also conducted sawmills and erected the Townsend Hotel. Later this firm was succeeded by the Townsend Mercantile Company. By the extending diversity of his enterprises he achieved financial independence, though never became extremely wealthy. At the time of his death he owned eight ranches and had large mining interests. One of his ranches was a 2,000-acre property 7½ miles east of Townsend, a tract which he acquired when he first came into the Missouri Valley and a ranch that is still owned by his daughter, Mrs. Smith, and her brother, James Parberry Marks.

Rufus Marks was a stanch republican, for fourteen years was a member of the City Council of Townsend, and was frequently a delegate to state and national conventions. He gave the best of his abilities to the development of Townsend and Broadwater County, and it is because there were such men as Rufus Marks among the pioneers of the state that Montana has emerged so rapidly from a territorial position into one of the highly productive regions of the West. Such men as he had the courage, broad vision and initiative to make big plans and exert every effort to carry them out, and those who have come after have been forced to measure up to these standards if they wanted to make similar progress. Mr. Marks was long a prominent member of North Star Lodge No. 19, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and also affiliated with the Grand Army of the Republic.

He married Mrs. Mary (Maples) Frost. By her first union she had two children, Mark L., a general workman at Townsend; and Vernie A., who lives at Helena. Rufus marks by his marriage had the following children: Vera, who died at the age of four years; James P., who is manager of his father's estate and lives at Townsend; Mrs. Veva Smith, of whom more is said in the preceding article; Harold, who died at the age of seven years; and Hattie, who died in infancy. Mrs. Marks, the mother of these children, was born in the State of New York in 1841 and died at the Helena Hospital in 1914. Her parents went to Wisconsin from New York in 1845, and thence to Montana, in 1869, so that she shared many of the experiences of pioneering as well as her husband.

J. M. METTLER. One of the most conspicuous figures in the history of the western part of Montana is J. M. Mettler, the well known retired druggist now residing in Kalispell, too well known to the people of his section of the state to need any formal introduction here, a man who for many years was actively identified with the business interests of this section. Strong mental powers, invincible courage and a determined purpose that hesitated at no opposition so entered into his composition as to render him a leader in important enterprises. In a straightforward, conservative manner, he has sought to perform the duties of a progressive citizen while advancing his own interests, and his support has always been depended upon in the furtherance of any laudable movement having for its object the welfare of the general public.

J. M. Mettler was born at Rollo, Missouri, and is the son of P. T. and Alice (Farnsworth) Mettler. His mother was the daughter of a noted lawyer of South Bend, Indiana, and was a schoolmate of the Studebakers of that city, who have in recent years become so famous in the manufacturing world. It is related of the subject's parents that during the troublous days of the Civil war they lived in a section of Missouri where feeling ran high and antagonisms were shown in public encounters. One night soldiers and citizens engaged in a street fight and Mrs. Mettler, fearing that their own home would be attacked, threw her clothing out of the upper window, then ran down into the street with but her night clothes on and with her baby (the subject of this sketch) in her arms. When she reached the street she found that someone had stolen her clothes. She ran away from the building, which they occupied as a hotel, and the latter was soon blow up. When the subject was about five years old the family moved to Minnesota, where he was reared and educated. When twenty years old Mr. Mettler went to California, where he remained for a time, and then moved to Dakota, where he was married. Soon afterward he and his wife went to the State of Washington, locating at Oakesdale, where he engaged in the drug business. In May, 1888, he went to Seattle, establishing a drug store there. Right after the big fire there he moved to Anacortes, Hidalgo Island, where he established a drug store. He became the first health officer of that community, being elected by a vote of 305 votes out of a total of 310. After a time Mr. Mettler moved to Kalispell, Montana, where he built a hotel and rooming house, known as the "Keystone," that being in the early days of that town, before the advent of railroads. Soon afterward he was appointed manager of the old Cummings drug store, and later was manager of Bronson & Lighthall's drug store.

Mr. Mettler was a strong lover of sports and was active in the early days in the promotion of amusements in Kalispell. He opened an amusement hall, containing a bowling alley, billiard and pool room, and it is worthy of note that a pleasant feature of the opening was a reception given by Mrs. C. Conrad of Kalispell. Mr. Mettler was one of the first coroners of Flathead County, and at various times was appointed special sheriff of the county. He was president of the Rifle Club and secretary and treasurer of the Gun Club. He leased the West Hotel, which he conducted for a time, but sold that and bought the Marlow store. After a time he sold that place and entered into a partnership with W. C. Whipps, with whom he opened a wholesale cigar and liquor business. One year later Mr. Mettler bought and operated the bar of the West Hotel for four years, but at the end of that time he sold out and moved to Spokane, Washington, where for three years he was city salesman for the Spokane Drug Company. During the opening of the Flathead Reservation in Montana Mr. Mettler resigned his position and returned to Kalispell. He entered the employ of the Jones Drug Company, but at the end of a year he bought an interest in the Hodge Navigation Company, which operated the steamer "Klondike" on Flathead Lake, and of this company Mr. Mettler became secretary, treasurer and general manager. After conducting the business for four years, in June, 1914, Captain Hodge and Mr. Mettler sold their controlling interest and Mr. Mettler then became branch manager and salesman for the Flathead District for the Montana Oil Company. Three years later he resigned that position to engage in the manufacture of "Super Auto and Furniture Polish," said to be one of the finest polishes in the United States, and to this he is now nominally devoting his time and attention, though he is practically retired from active business affairs.

Mr. Mettler is able to relate some very interesting experiences of the early days in this section of Montana, one of which at least had a few thrills attached. At the time of the celebrated "Two Medicine" hold-up he was deputized along with other Kalispell citizens, including Judge O'Donnell, Harry Chambers and others, to go with Sheriff Gangner in pursuit of the bandits, who had fled to the mountains. The outlaws were Sam Sherman, "Red" Jones and Jack Chapman, the latter being a son of Lord Chapman of Nova Scotia. They had robbed a Northern Pacific train and were at this time planning to hold up another train. The sheriff's posse went up into the mountains after them, through snow two feet deep, and engaged in a running fight with the outlaws, more than 100 shots being exchanged. Chapman was killed and Sherman badly wounded, but Jones escaped capture, having hid in a pile of ties, as was afterwards learned. The next day Mr. Mettler passed the place and it occurred to him that the pile of ties would be a good place in which a man might hide. Approaching the pile, he heard the click of a gun and, not seeing the outlaw but knowing that the latter had a "bead" on him, he slowly turned and walked away. After Jones was captured he told Mettler that his turning away was the only thing that saved his life.

While living in Dakota Mr. Mettler was married to Belle Miller, who was born in Fulton, Illinois, the daughter of David and Nancy Elizabeth (Lamb) Miller. To this union has been born one son, William Maurice. The latter received his elemental education in the public schools of Kalispell, graduating from the high school in 1910, at which time he was president of his class. Then for a year he was a student in the University of Montana at Missoula, leaving there to enter Yale College, where he was graduated in 1915, having majored in chemistry. He then went to Rochester, New York, where he took a course in salesmanship and became a traveling representative for the Rand Visible Index Card Company. Later he became connected with the Goodyear Rubber Company at Akron, Ohio, with which he is still employed, being one of their chief compounders or chemists. He is also treasurer of the Goodyear Relief Fund. He married Harriet Vernon Hotchkiss, and they are the parents of three children, Nancy, William and Jack.

Mr. and Mrs. Mettler have adopted a niece, Sylvia Woods. She too has received a good education, having graduated from the Kalispell High School with the class of 1911, following which she took a course in the Kalispell Business College. She then took a position in the law offices of David Ross, which she resigned some time later to accept a similar position in the law office of Mark Conroy. After a few months she again resigned and became an employe of the Kalispell Chamber of Commerce, where she remained for three years. Resigning that position, she then went to the New Haven Normal Gymnasium, where she took a course in physical culture, followed by a course in domestic science at Milwaukee. She then returned to Kalispell and accepted a position in the law offices of Foote & McDonald, but a year later left there and entered the Conrad National Bank, where she remained until January, 1917. She then went to Detroit, Michigan, where she entered the Thomas Training School and took a course in dietetics, graduating with honors. Miss Woods then went to Nitro, West Virginia, and served as dietician in the Government Base Hospital, established there in connection with the great explosives plant. During the big epidemic of the "flu" she acted as dietician and nurse, and was later promoted to the position of head dietician. On November 9, 1918, she was married to Edward William Findley, who was head accountant for the Government in the plant at Nitro, where they now reside.

Politically Mr. Mettler is an enthusiastic supporter of the republican party, in the success of which he is keenly interested. Religiously Mr. and Mrs. Mettler are members of the Episcopal Church at Kalispell, of which Mr. Mettler is one of the vestrymen. Fraternally he joined the Knights of Pythias at Oakesdale, Washington, in 1888, the Ancient Free and Accepted Masons at Kalispell in 1895, the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks in 1902, and the Woodmen of the World, at Great Falls, in 1896. He is also a member of the Kalispell Club and the Leiderkranz. Mr. Mettler has been successful in business, respected in social life and as a neighbor he has discharged his duties in a manner becoming a liberal minded, intelligent citizen of a state where the essential qualities of manhood have ever been duly recognized and prized at their true value.

NELS K. MARKUSON, of Medicine Lake, and the manager of the Markuson-Epler Garage and Ford Agency, has been identified with the business life of Medicine Lake since May 1, 1919. He was born in Goodhue County, Minnesota, December 14, 1869, a son of a farmer, Knute Markuson. The senior Mr. Markuson came out of Norway to Wisconsin in 1854, and a year or so later moved on to Minnesota, locating in Goodhue County, later moving to Polk County of that state, and he spent the last years of his life on a farm there. He was a man of industry, conducted his business affairs successfully and made his life's efforts count for good. As a voter he espoused the principles of the republican party, and as a churchman was a Lutheran. He married, in Norway, Martha Reppen. His death occurred in the year 1899, when he had attained the age of sixty-seven years, and he is still survived by his widow, whose home is in Minneapolis. Their family comprised fifteen children, eight sons and seven daughters, nine of whom survive, and of this number Nels K. was the eleventh born.

When Nels K. Markuson was a youth of perhaps fourteen the family moved to Fertile, Minnesota, where he completed his common school training. From Fertile he went to Hannaford, North Dakota, where for twenty-two years he was engaged in the grain business as the manager of the elevator for N. J. Olson. In August, 1915, Mr. Markuson arrived in Montana, where he continued the elevator and grain business at Dooley, succeeding Anderson Brothers in that enterprise, but after three years he sold the business to become the manager of the Farmers Elevator at Dooley. At the close of another two years he engaged in an entirely different line, entering at that time the automobile business in association with George C. Epler of Dooley and Ray Lang of Plentywood, Mr. Markuson taking charge of the Medicine Lake business of the firm.

During his residence in Dooley Mr. Markuson was one of the promoters of the Citizens State Bank, becoming one of its original stockholders, and is now serving as vice president of the institution and as a member of its board of directors. In association with Mr. Epler he is also a land owner and farmer at Dooley, and much of their tract has been brought under cultivation and is devoted to the raising of grain. Fencing and other improvements have been added to the land, and the farm is worked by tenants.

Mr. Markuson married, in Hannaford, North Dakota, Miss Anna D. Nelson, and they have become the parents of four children: Willard, who trained in the Navy Training Camp at San Francisco, became an assistant in the Medical Corps and rendered all of his service in the United States. He is now associated with his father at Medicine Lake. Kenneth, the second son, is a student in the Agricultural College at Fargo, North Dakota. The two younger children are in school. Marjorie is attending the Medicine Lake High School and Lucile is a pupil in the grades there.

Mr. Markuson cast his first presidential vote as a republican, when he supported Benjamin Harrison in 1892, and he has ever since upheld the principles of that party. Fraternally he is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America.

FRANKLIN FORREST SPARKS. There are young men of the present day who are conscientiously following a teacher's vocation, whose talents and scholarship fit them for spheres of activity in which the emoluments would be greatly increased. They are men to whom the call of learning has always appealed in their own cases, and they work to help others because they are convinced that education is an essential. To scholarly men like Franklin Forrest Sparks, principal of the Broadwater County High School at Townsend, work in the educational field has always been most congenial. He has had broadening official experience in different sections of the country, and came to his present office in September, 1919.

Franklin Forrest Sparks is a descendant of an old English family that settled in Virginia in colonial times. He was born August 7, 1882, at Advance, in Boone County, Indiana. His parents were Charles M. and Emma (Fishback) Sparks, and his paternal grandfather was George Sparks, who was born in Kentucky and died at New Ross, Indiana, in 1884. Charles M. Sparks was born in Bourbon County, Kentucky, in 1850, and was an infant when his parents moved to Indiana, where he was reared. He was married there to Emma Fishback, who was born in Bourbon County, Kentucky, in 1852. They shortly afterward settled on a farm near Advance in Boone County. His death occurred at Advance, November 3, 1919, his widow still residing there. They were the parents of the following children: Nellie M., who is the wife of Charles M. Ray, who is railroad ticket agent at Hoopston, Illinois; Franklin Forrest; Lillith, who is the wife of Frank Heady, a farmer near Advance, Indiana; Anna Gould, who is the wife of Russell Wynkoop, an insurance broker of Lebanon, Indiana; Chester, who is a chemist by profession, resides at Indianapolis, Indiana; and Maurice, who died in infancy. This family was reared in the Christian Church.

Franklin F. Sparks attended the public schools of Advance, Indiana, being graduated from the high school in 1902, then entered Wabash College, at Crawfordsville, from which institution he was graduated in 1907, with the degree of A. B. In the same year he became principal of the high school at Amo, Indiana, where he remained one year, then entered Harvard University at Cambridge, Massachusetts, where he took post-graduate work in History and Government and remained one year. Upon his return to Advance he became superintendent of the schools of that place, returning then to Harvard, from which university he was graduated in 1911. In the above year he accepted the position of principal of Summerville Academy, Augusta, Georgia, where he presided until 1914, when he came to the West and from 1914 until 1917, was superintendent of schools, Mountain Home, Idaho. In the meanwhile, recognizing the military dangers impending, he tried to enlist in the officers' training camp, at Fremont, California, but before he had succeeded, the armistice was signed and further effort in that direction was unnecessary.

Frank J. Loeb

On January 1, 1919, Mr. Sparks resumed educational work, becoming superintendent of the Perry Township High School, Lebanon, Indiana, and remained until May 16th of that year, in the following September accepting the invitation of Broadwater County, Montana. The new modern high school building is situated on Spruce Street, Townsend, and Professor Sparks has under his supervision seven teachers and sixty-five pupils. Ever since taking charge he has been busy formulating and shaping an educational policy to meet the needs of the students in his charge, and has been able to establish the kindest of personal relations with teachers and pupils alike.

In 1911, at Linden, Massachusetts, Mr. Sparks was united in marriage to Miss Helena Nelson, daughter of Captain William and Lena (Donovan) Nelson, of that place, the father of Mrs. Sparks having followed the sea for years. She was educated in the exclusive Moses Brown School for Young Ladies, at Providence, Rhode Island. Mr. and Mrs. Sparks have children as follows.: Dixie, born September 30, 1912; Blanche, born in October, 1914; Charles, born in September, 1915; and Nancy, born in December, 1917. The family belongs to the Christian Church. Like his father before him, Mr. Sparks is a democrat in politics. He belongs to Advance Lodge, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, Advance, Indiana, and to the Indiana State Teachers' Association.

Frank M. Hebb of Billings is the active vice president of Gagnon & Company, master builders, examples of whose work as contractors can be found in all the notable cities of Montana. The conspicuous features of the State Capitol at Helena are the two wings constructed by Gagnon & Company in 1907. Other examples of their work at Helena are the Wesleyan College, the Young Men's Christian Association and the Scottish Rite Consistory Building. At Billings, the headquarters of the company, the firm built the high school, Young Men's Christian Association, Masonic Temple, Billings Midland Club Building, Yellowstone County Court House, the Northern Hotel, Yellowstone National Bank Building and the Montana National Bank. In other cities and towns of the state are numerous school houses and commercial and private buildings which attest the well deserved reputation of this firm for thoroughness and efficiency.

Frank M. Hebb has followed the building trades for thirty-five years, practically since boyhood. He was born at Bridgewater, Nova Scotia, August 17, 1867. His ancestors came from England in colonial times. His grandfather spent his life as a farmer in Lunenburg County, Nova Scotia. Solomon Hebb, father of Frank M. Hebb, was born at Bridgewater in 1839 and has spent practically all his life there. During his active years he was a mechanic and farmer and is now living retired at Bridgewater. He is a Presbyterian. The maiden name of his wife was Mary Wile, who was born at Bridgewater in 1849 and died in 1909. Frank M. Hebb is the oldest of their children. Bertha, the second child, is the wife of William McKenzie, a college professor in South Africa; Arthur is a physician and surgeon at Chester, Nova Scotia, and Thomas is member of the faculty of a college at British Columbia.

Frank M. Hebb acquired his education in the grammar and high schools at Bridgewater. At the age of seventeen he went to Boston, Massachusetts, and spent several years acquiring a thorough knowledge of the carpenter's trade. He worked as a journeyman in the east until 1894. Mr. Hebb has been a resident of Montana a quarter of a century. He first located in Flathead county, living there eight years, was at Butte five years, and in 1907 came to Billings. He has been a carpenter through all these years, and as vice president of Gagnon & Company has direct supervision over the wood working department of that firm. The head of Gagnon & Company, Mr. E. H. Gagnon, died in May, 1918. J. H. Josephson is secretary of the firm. The plant and offices are located at Second Avenue and Twenty-First Street.

Mr. Hebb is a republican, is affiliated with Ashlar Lodge No. 29, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, Helena Chapter No. 5, Royal Arch Masons, Billings Consistory of the Scottish Rite and Algeria Temple of the Mystic Shrine.

Mr. Hebb's private residence, one of modern proportions and taste, was built in 1909. He married at Rushville, Illinois, in 1901, Miss Jennie Ellis, a native of that state.

Alfred J. Sulier. One of the pioneers of Sanders County who has endured all of the hardships and privations incident to life on the frontier of civilization, and is now enjoying the comforts his industry and thrift have earned for him, is Alfred J. Sulier of Dixon. He was born in Monroe County, Michigan, in 1850, a son of Leon and Susan (Roe) Sulier, the former of whom was of French ancestry. During the war between the North and South Leon Sulier enlisted in the Union army as a member of the Eighteenth Volunteer Infantry from Michigan, and participated in different engagements. He had the misfortune to be taken prisoner and was confined at Andersonville, but later was exchanged. His adventures were not over, for later on when on the "Sultana" transport on the way up the Mississippi River he met with disaster, the boat being blown up. As he could not swim he hung from a rope over the side of the wreck by one arm for several hours until rescued, and the man to take him off proved to be an old neighbor in Michigan. Not long after this peace was declared, and he was discharged and returned home to Michigan. He lived to be eighty-five years of age, and died in South Dakota. The children born to him and his wife were nine in number.

Alfred J. Sulier was reared in Michigan and learned to be a farmer. He was married in his native state to Mary Virginia Wood, who was born in Munroe County, Michigan, in 1857, and they continued to live in Michigan until 1883, when they came as far west as South Dakota, and about 1894 traveled in covered wagons to Montana, passing through Billings, then a typical frontier town, and some historic spots, including the last stand of General Custer, the trip consuming nine weeks. They lived in Montana one year and went on to Lewiston, Idaho. He filed on 160 acres of land on the Nez Perce Reservation and proved it up and made a success of his agricultural activities.

Mr. and Mrs. Sulier became the parents of ten children, eight girls and two boys, one boy and one girl dying when they were young. Emma, the oldest Her children are: Harold, Lester, Lena, Norman, Elmer, Raymond, Richard, Chester, Ruth and Glen. The second daughter is Mrs. Mary Morin, of Ravalli, and her children are: Geneva, Winifred and Marcus. Mrs. Rebecca Morin, of Ravalli, is the third and her children are: Robert, David, Margaret, Ralph and Marion. David Leon, who was the next born, died when he was twelve years old from stepping on a rusty nail. Mr. and Mrs. Sulier have one living son, Vincent, who was married to Miss Grace Toby, and they had two children, Clyde and Walter. Mrs. Vincent Sulier died, and he was married a second time, to Miss Laura Brock, of Kalispell, Montana, and they now live at Fox Lake. Elva, the fifth living child, is Mrs. Charles Buell, of Dixon, Montana, and has one child, Anna Virginia. Agnes, the sixth daughter, is single and clerking in a store at Asotin, Washington, nine miles from Lewiston, Idaho. Anna is next and was married to Lester Gifford, of Lewiston, who was shot and killed by a man who had worked for him and had a fancied grievance. This sad event horrified the people of that whole region. They had one child, Mary Virginia. Cecelia is the youngest and is a stenographer in Spokane.

One of Mr. Sulier's grandsons, Lester Stenger, served during the late war, and was in training in a Texan camp when the armistice was signed. Vincent Sulier volunteered and served during the late war in the Canadian army. Mrs. Sulier's father, David Wood, served in the war between the North and South as a member of the Eighteenth Michigan Volunteer Infantry and died in the service. With two of their ancestors soldiers it is no wonder that the younger generation displayed the same spirit and offered their services during the greatest conflict the world has known.

Mr. and Mrs. Sulier are Roman Catholics. They give their support to the principles of the republican party, and to those measures which have for their object the betterment of existing conditions and the development of their home community.

JOHN BETZ. Within the past score of years great changes have come to the Milk River Valley, as they have to all parts of Montana. Where once great droves of cattle roamed over the open range now are to be found neatly fenced enclosures comprising ranches of greater or less acreage. Many of the men who were in the early days very active in the cattle industry have curtailed their production because of the impossibility to secure enough pasturage for their herds, and this has had its effect upon the cost of living. With meats soaring in price due to the increased cost of production and the demand exceeding the available supply, the fact that Montana does not ship to the markets the amount of beef it did in former years plays a determining factor. To the men who passed through the state's greatest period of beef production the opening of the range seems a calamity, although others feel that in permitting settlers to homestead the region has been developed and made more valuable. From either standpoint the importance of the commonwealth is easily seen and valued accordingly. One of the men who is associated with the earlier history of the state, as well as with its later developments, is John Betz, a ranchman of the Milk River Valley tributary to Vandalia, who came here in June, 1883, from Des Moines, Iowa. He was then unmarried, and while he had farmed he was also a butcher by trade, and for a period after coming to Montana he worked at his trade in Miles City.

Mr. Betz formed a partnership with George Horkan, a well known sheepman, and they located on Little Pumpkin Creek. Later he sold his interests and moved to Big Pumpkin Creek and established himself on the old Comstock or "969" ranch. There he continued in the cattle business until 1902, when he left that region and came to the Milk River Valley country, where he has since remained. His brand was the "9HB," and when he disposed of the ranch and stock the brand went with it. From 1890 until 1893 he issued meat to the soldiers and Indians at Fort Keogh.

Coming to the Milk River country, Mr. Betz bought some work horses and saddle horses, purchased the ranch and stock of L. W. Kenneddy on Bear Creek, and since then his chief interest has been raising cattle. He has dealt in and bred the Hereford cattle, shipping them as range cattle to the markets of St. Paul, Minnesota, and Chicago, Illinois, and in 1909 he shipped the best load of steers that had ever gone out of Glasgow, the cattle averaging 1,421 pounds, and the price was $7.40. In 1911 he practically closed out his cattle and embarked in a mercantile business at Vandalia, continued in that line until 1916. In the latter year he returned to his ranch and is endeavoring to build up his cattle of the same class as he had formerly, running them under the brand "56."

The Betz ranch comprises an area of 1,800 acres, a small portion of which is under cultivation and devoted to the raising of feed for his stock. Aside from his ranch Mr. Betz is one of the owners of the Vandalia Co-operative Store Company and he is serving it as vice president. While he lived at Vandalia he served the city as postmaster, but this is the only experience he has had with official life.

John Betz was born at Des Moines, Iowa, February 23, 1857, and divided his time between that city and the country region surrounding it. His educational training was gained in the public schools and he learned the trade of a butcher. He was familiar with the capital of Iowa when it was still called Fort Des Moines, and he saw it grow from a country village to a city of importance, numbering 60,000 inhabitants. His father, John Betz, had gone to Des Moines in 1852 as an emigrant from New York City, to which city he had come from Wurtemberg, Germany, where he was born. After coming to this country he was employed for a period on the estate of General Wadsworth, father of the present Senator Wadsworth of New York. The elder John Betz was a very highly educated man, a specialist in Latin and botany. He was married at Lafayette, Indiana, and with his bride went to Des Moines. Upon his arrival there he obtained work with Captain Winters, a pork packer, and it was his work to haul the pork over the country and sell it. This was a difficult task for a man of his education and breeding, but he did not complain and worked hard to make a living for his family. When the war broke out between the two sections of the country he desired to enlist in defense of his adopted country, but when he offered his services they were refused, as he was regarded as past military age. Finally he engaged in farming, and died on his farm near Des Moines in 1893, when he was seventy-eight years of age. His wife, who was named Mary Miller before her marriage, was also born in Wurtemberg, Germany, died in 1872, aged forty-seven years. Their children were as follows: Mrs. Louisa Baumann, now in Grimes, Iowa; Christian H., who lives in the same place as Louisa; Paul M., who is a farmer of Grimes, Iowa; and John, whose name heads this review.

John Betz the younger grew up in a household where democratic principles were espoused, and when he came of age he followed his father's example and voted the ticket of that party, casting in 1880 his first ballot, for Gen. Winfield S. Hancock, for president, and he has continued to support the party's national candidates ever since.

In August, 1890, John Betz was married at Miles City, Montana, to Miss Charlotte Davidson, a daughter of Scotch parents. Mrs. Betz died in Glasgow, Montana, in 1905, the mother of the following children: Louise, who is the wife of E. N. Jacobson, a farmer of Tampico, Montana, has the following children: Charles and Charlotte; Lillian, who is one of the teachers of Valley County, having received her educational training in the Montana State Normal School at Dillon, and carries a professional certificate; John F., who is engaged in ranching with his father; and Charlotte, who is attending the Glasgow High School. On December 21, 1912, Mr. Betz was married at Glasgow, Montana, to Mrs. Josephine Anderson. Mrs. Betz was brought to the United States by her father when she was a child. By her first marriage she has two children: Mrs. Howard Brown, of Eighth Point on the Missouri River, Montana, and Mrs. Emma Bergsma, of Vandalia, Montana. Mr. and Mrs. Betz have one son, Paul Harry, who was born February 21, 1915. Mr. Betz is one of the representative men of his part of the state, and deserves much credit for what he has accomplished. Having lived here so long and been in the cattle industry nearly all of this period, he is an authority upon the subject, and if all the original cattlemen had been as willing to adapt themselves to the changed conditions as he, the present situation would be less serious. While he has never cared to enter public life, he has been popular enough to have been elected to any of the local offices had he cared to run, and he holds the warm friendship of many of the leading men of the state.

Willard Frederick Snyder. The history of the development of Montana teems with interest and shows that this feat has been accomplished through the sacrifices and energies of the men and women who dared the hardships of frontier life and came here determined to make this region their permanent home. One of these men who has been more than ordinarily successful as a ranchman and is now enjoying the fruits of a life of strenuous endeavor is Willard Frederick Snyder of Billings. He was born at Kimball, Saint Clare County, Michigan, September 5, 1859. The Snyder family originated in Holland, a representative of it coming thence to the American colonies and locating in Pennsylvania. There in 1817 Joseph Snyder, father of Willard Frederick Willard Snyder, was born, but he later moved further west to Michigan, and died at Midland City of that state in 1899. During his active life he was engaged in farming in Saint Clare County, and he also worked in the lumber woods. In 1883 he retired and moved to Midland City, making his home with his son, Willard F. Snyder until his death. In politics he was a republican. His wife bore the maiden name of Melissa Jeanette Babcock, and was born in Michigan in 1842, dying at Wales, Saint Clare County, Michigan, in 1872. Their children were as follows: Charles, of whom the family now has no definite information; Willard Frederick, whose name heads this review; Rufus, who is overseer and superintendent of a large stock farm at Ammonsburg, Canada; Marilla, who died at Sanilac, Michigan, aged thirty years, had married James Lynch, a farmer, who is also deceased; and Frank, who died in Saint Clare County, Michigan, aged twelve years.

Willard Frederick Snyder was reared on his father's farm until thirteen years of age, and at the same time attended the rural schools of his neighborhood. At that time he left Saint Clare County and went to work in the sawmill of A. W. Wright at Saginaw, Michigan, and remained there for two years. For the subsequent five years he was engaged in general work at Midland City, Michigan, and then took the contract to clear 100 acres of land owned by B. B. Bartlett, which occupied him for two years. With his earnings Mr. Snyder then bought forty acres of land, on which he erected a house, and for the succeeding sixteen years alternated running his farm in the summer with lumbering in the winter. In the meanwhile he bought two other forty-acre tracts, so that he owned 120 acres of land. In order that his children might have the advantages of the schools of Midland City he moved his home to that community, but in 1898 he came West to Billings, Montana. During 1893 he had spent some months on the Hesper ranch, twelve miles from Billings, and now returned to it, and was there employed for two years, when he was joined by his family. After that he spent eighteen months more on the ranch, and then invested in 240 acres of land five miles west of Billings. About this time he sold his farm in Michigan for a price that only netted him $900 for all his hard work in the past, and invested it in part payment on 160 acres nine miles west of Billings. Later he sold his first ranch and moved to Billings and rented the 160-acre tract. Subsequently he bought eighty acres four miles west of Billings, and for the next eight years looked after his property, but continued to reside at Billings. He then moved on his eighty-acre ranch and built up a dairy business under the name of the Valley View Dairy and conducted it for seven years, and then, on November 15, 1917, sold it and also his other ranch, going to Long Beach, California, for the winter. On July 5, 1918, he located at Pony, Montana, where he lived retired until his removal to Billings. Being troubled with asthma, Mr. Snyder deemed it expedient to retire and enjoy the benefit of the climate of Billings, which helps his disorder. In addition to his agricultural activities he has been occupied in other ways, serving as drain commissioner of Yellowstone County for two years, road supervisor for three years and school director for a number of years. He was also a director of the Big Ditch of Yellowstone County for six years, and for two years of this period was its president. For one year he was president of the Farmers Loan Association, and has always been active in promoting the welfare of other organizations calculated to be of benefit to the community, county and state. A member of Billings Star Lodge No. 41, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, Mr. Snyder is past grand of it, and also past chief patriarch of Little Horn Encampment No. 12. He was president of the association of Odd Fellows who built the hall on Twenty-seventh Street, North, Billings.

In 1882 Mr. Snyder was married at Midland City, Michigan, to Miss Mary O'Donnell, born in Cinco County, Ontario, Canada, a daughter of Daniel O'Donnell and sister of I. D. O'Donnell, one of the contributing editors of this work. Mrs. Snyder was educated in the public schools and a sisters' school at Saginaw, Michigan. She belongs to Zilda Lodge No. 14, Rebekahs, and to the Lady Militants, an auxiliary to the Canton of the Odd Fellows. Mr. and Mrs. Snyder have become the parents of the following children: Nellie married J. C. Smith, a ranchman, whose biography appears elsewhere in this work. Mrs. Smith attended the Montana State Normal School at Dillon and before her marriage was engaged in teaching on the Musselshell and at Huntley, Montana. The second child is Melissa, who married William Schanck, cashier of the Bank of Warden, Montana. Mrs. Schanck attended the Montana State Normal School and was also a teacher prior to her marriage. The third child, Edna, died at Billings on November 26, 1905, when seventeen years of age. Bessie, the fourth of the family, married Leo Petrie, a dairyman of Fort Townsend, Washington. Jessie, twin sister of Bessie, is at home. The two youngest girls, like their sisters, attended the Montana State Normal School at Dillon.

Ralph E. Dutch. The handling of merchandise so as to satisfy customers and at the same time make a reasonable profit upon the investment of money and time results in the development of character and the production of good citizenship. One of the men who is conducting a prosperous general merchandise business at Melrose is Ralph E. Dutch. He was born at Farmington, Sangamon county, Illinois, on November 11, 1855, a son of Eben Dutch, born in Augusta, Maine, who died at Richland, Sangamon county, Illinois, in 1856. He was reared at Augusta, Maine, and married at Shoreham, Vermont, Maria L. Moore, a native of Vermont, who died at Farmington, Illinois. After his marriage Eben Dutch moved to Sangamon County, Illinois, where he was one of the pioneer farmers, his farm being located at Richland, four miles from Farmington. He was a republican in principles, and died the year of the organization of that party. The children born to him and his wife were as follows: Florence M., who married M. F. Sheppard, for many years a telegraph operator, lives at Boone, Iowa; Fred R., who is a merchant at Crete, Nebraska; Winthrop, who is a traveling agent, makes Springfield, Illinois, his headquarters; and Ralph E., who was the youngest in the family.

Ralph E. Dutch attended the rural schools of his native county, and remained at home until he was eighteen years of age, and at that time went to Springfield, Illinois, and worked in the Illinois Watch Factory until 1886, when he came to Glendale, Montana. There he worked in the store of his uncle, Henry S. Pond, one of the pioneers of that region, and with him learned the mercantile business. In 1897 he came to Melrose as manager for the store his uncle established there, and in 1912 formed a partnership with J. E. Reid, under the firm name of Reid & Dutch, for the purpose of handling a general line of merchandise. The store, which is one of the leading ones of Silver Bow county, is located on Main street, and its trade comes from a distance of forty-five miles. The firm owns the store building and two warehouses and carry a large stock to meet the demands of the trade they attract. Mr. Dutch also owns a nice modern residence at Melrose. He is a democrat. Since coming to Melrose he has connected himself with Bannock Lodge No. 3, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, of which he is past noble grand.

Mr. Dutch was married first to Miss Effie M. Miller at Butte, Montana. She was born in Indianapolis, Indiana, and died at Melrose in 1913, leaving no children. On January 2, 1918, Mr. Dutch was married to Mrs. Eugenia Mulleur, born in Canada. Both she and Mr. Dutch are very popular at Melrose, and their pleasant home is oftentimes the scene of delightful social gatherings of congenial friends. As a business man Mr. Dutch is recognized as a valuable asset to the village, while personally he stands exceedingly high in public estimation. He is proud of being one of the "real Americans" of the country, his ancestors having come to the American colonies from Holland at a date many years prior to the Revolution and settled in Pennsylvania, from whence removal was later made to different points until now many states have representatives of the family.

George B. Conway has been a prominent figure in Montana business life nearly forty years. For a quarter of a century he was connected with the Hecla Consolidated Mining Company. He is a former state accountant of Montana, and now makes his home and has his business headquarters at Helena, where he is district manager of the Iowa State Livestock Insurance Company.

George Benjamin Conway was born December 17, 1859, his native city of Wheeling being at that time in old Virginia, and four years later became the capital of the new state of West Virginia. In the paternal line he is of Welsh ancestry. His grandfather, Benjamin Conway, was born in Wales. He was an English soldier during the Napoleonic wars, and was at the battle of Waterloo under the Duke of Wellington. Later he came to this country and died in the United States. William B. Conway, father of the Helena business man, was born at Abersuchyn, Wales, in 1837, and lived there to the age of nineteen. About 1856 he came to the United States, living for a time in New York, then in Wheeling, following his trade as an iron worker in both places. In 1871 he became manager of the Capital City Iron Works at Indianapolis, and held that post of responsibility until 1880. For several years after that he was a manufacturer of iron specialties at Youngstown, Ohio, and he also lived in Montana two years, from 1886 to 1888. Here he was interested in mining at Glendale. From Montana he returned east to Buffalo, New York, where he lived until his death in 1900. He was a republican, a very devout Baptist and a regular supporter of the church, and affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. William B. Conway married Leonora Harriet Smith, who was born at Kent, England, in 1840, and died near Oil City, Pennsylvania, in 1870. She was the mother of three children, George B. being the oldest. William is owner of a newspaper at Wilmington, Pennsylvania, and the youngest, Emily, died in infancy.

George Benjamin Conway received most of his schooling in his native city of Wheeling. For a time he also attended high school at Indianapolis. At the age of fourteen he went to work as messenger boy in the Capitol City Iron Works. He was there two years and somewhat later was given employment in the office of the E. C. Atkins Saw Works at Indianapolis, the largest business of its kind in America. He was with that firm from 1879 to 1881, and since the latter year his home and business interests have been almost continuously identified with Montana territory and state.

Mr. Conway located at Glendale April 4, 1881, and became an official of the Hecla Consolidated Mining Company. For twenty-five years he was cashier of that company, and vice president of the Hecla Mercantile and Banking Company, a subsidiary of the corporation. After that for a time business interests required his presence in New York City, and not long after his return to Montana he was appointed, in 1909, by Governor Edwin L. Norris, as state accountant, and during the performance of the duties of that office moved his home to Helena. He was state accountant four years, after which he became secretary and general manager of the Montana Livestock and Casualty Insurance Company. In 1917 the business of this company was sold to the Iowa State Livestock Insurance Company, and Mr. Conway has handled its Montana and other northwestern business as district manager. His offices are at 26 West Sixth Avenue. In 1917 he also became secretary of H. B. Palmer & Company, but the charter of this corporation was not renewed after it expired in November, 1919.

Mr. Conway is a republican voter, is a trustee and deacon of the First Baptist Church at Helena, and in Masonry is affiliated with King Solomon Lodge No. 9, A. F. and A. M., and has attained the thirty-second degree in Scottish Rite, being affiliated with Helena Consistory No. 3.

Mr. Conway and his interesting family reside at 315 Clark street. He married at Indianapolis in 1881, just before coming to Montana, Miss Lillie E. Hunt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Hunt, the latter now deceased. Her father is a retired paper manufacturer of Indianapolis. Mrs. Conway is a graduate of the Indianapolis High School and has been prominent in social life in Montana, being a member of the Woman's Club of Helena and for several terms was regent of the Daughters of the Revolution in Oro Fino Chapter of Helena, and is also a member of the Daughters of 1812. Mr. and Mrs. Conway's children are young people of interesting attainments and achievements. Helen, the oldest, is the wife of William J. Cushing, an attorney at Dillon, Montana, and has one daughter, Josephine, born in 1904, and now a student in the high school at Dillon. The second child, Julia, died at the age of six years. Florence is the wife of A. H. French, a mine operator at Argenta, Montana. Ora and Alice both graduated with the degree Bachelor of Pedagogy from the State Normal College at Dillon, and are teachers in the public schools at Helena. Ruth is the wife of Gustav Bohstedt, who holds a chair in the Department of Agriculture at the State University of Wisconsin in Madison. They have one son, Carl Conway Bohstedt, born in 1919. Walter Lincoln Conway graduated A. B. from the Montana State University and is now superintendent of rural and city schools in the Columbia Falls District of Montana. Eunice, the youngest of the family, graduated from the Helena High School with the class of 1918 and is now employed as a stenographer in the Internal Revenue Office at Helena.

HARRIS J. CHRISTENSON was one of the early homesteaders in northeastern Montana, and has for a number of years been well and favorably known in the real estate and farm loan business at Scobey, his business career having been associated with practically the entire life of the new town.

Mr. Christenson was born at Wistby, Wisconsin, February 4, 1872. His father, Ole Christenson, was born at Barum, Norway, about seven miles from Christiania, acquired a common school education, lived on a farm, and as a young man came to the United States about the beginning of the Civil war. For several years he worked as a laborer in factories, and after his marriage in Wisconsin moved to Minnesota and took up a homestead where he developed the farm on which he reared his children. He died at Milan, Minnesota, at the age of seventy-three. He married in Wisconsin Annie Peterson, a native of Norway and a daughter of Arna Peterson. She died in 1907, the mother of Carl and August, business men in Milan; Mrs. T. Johnson, wife of a farmer at Milan; Harris J.; Albert, of Minot, North Dakota; Hannah, of Montevidio, Minnesota; Mrs. Otto Booth, of Ray, North Dakota; Louis, a farmer at Minot; and Otto, a business man at Milan.

Harris J. Christenson acquired a public school education at Milan and lived in that community from the age of seven until he came to Montana. He was a factor on the home farm until the age of twenty-eight, and then moved to Milan, where, associated with his brother August, he became a member of the hardware and implement firm of Christenson Brothers. With that business his name and energies were identified until 1909, in the fall of which year he left Chippewa County, Minnesota, and began prospecting for a new home in Montana.

His first act here was to acquire a homestead, and he entered his claim about two miles from the new town of Scobey, beginning his residence here in March, 1910. He built a frame house of one room as the first improvement on his land, and while it was small it made a comfortable home for his family during their residence there of four years. At that time crop failures were unknown in this section and he planted and successively harvested three crops. He left his farm not only to accept an opening for a business career, but also for the reason that has caused so many farmers to move to town, to secure better educational advantages for their families. Mr. Christenson had a growing family and accordingly he opened an office in the new town of Scobey and began dealing in real estate and farm loans. That business has been continued with an enlarging character, and his probity and judgment have brought him the confidence of the community, so that he has frequently been selected to administer estates.

Quietly and efficiently he has done his part as a citizen, has served as treasurer in Scobey two years, one year on the Board of Education, and was active in raising funds for war work, being one of the liberal bond buyers. His father became a republican as soon as he had completed his American citizenship, and the son Harris cast his first presidential ballot for McKinley and has supported the nominees of that party regularly. . The Christenson residence at Scobey was built by Mr. Christenson, and is a modern five-room cottage on Daniel Street.

At Milan, Minnesota, March 31, 1902, he married Miss Olive Peterson, who was born at Barum, Norway, in August, 1880, and came to the United States in 1883 with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Peterson. She was reared in Wisconsin, had a public school education, and when a young woman went to Minnesota, where she was soon afterward married. Her two older sisters are Matie, wife of John Peterson, of Montevidio, Minnesota, and Mary, wife of Otto Olson, of Michigan, North Dakota. Mr. and Mrs. Christenson have two living children: Cuyla and Adaline, while their second child, Chester, died when about four years of age.

ARTHUR R. KELSEY. Among the representative men of Powder River County who are profitably engaged in ranching is Arthur R. Kelsey, who is located on Taylor Creek, and has been identified with this locality since 1888. He was born at Paxton, Illinois, March 6, 1867, during the brief period his parents lived at that place. His paternal grandfather was a large slave owner of North Carolina, where his extensive plantation was located. Realizing, as a result of the agitation against slavery, that the institution was wrong, he freed his slaves, and because of this action his neighbors gave him notice to leave the state within the following thirty days, and he consequently, never regretting his act of humanity, took his family to Indiana and located near Bloomington, that state. His death occurred at the home of his son in Franklin County, Kansas and he is buried at Richmond, Kansas. His children were as follows: Boston, who is now a resident of Missouri; Theodore D., who is mentioned below; Fisher, who died in Kansas; Mrs. Latham, who died in Franklin county, Kansas; and John, who also died in Kansas.

Theodore D. Kelsey, father of Arthur R. Kelsey, was born in North Carolina, and was only a child when his parents moved to Indiana, so was reared in the vicinity of Bloomington, Indiana. With his father and three brothers he went to Kansas during the territorial period, and passed through the exciting times incident to the discussion relative to the admission of Kansas as a "free or slave," when the state was a battlefield for the opposing parties. Here he resided until after the close of the war between the states. The Kelseys secured Government land in Franklin County, and there carried on stock and sheep raising upon an extensive scale. In 1874 Theodore D. Kelsey sold his possessions and, going to Iowa, became a farmer of Wayne County, remaining there until 1888. In that year he brought his family to Montana, driving a bunch of cattle, and at once embarked in the cattle business at the head of Taylor Creek, one of the tributaries of Pumpkin Creek, and there he took up a homestead. His pioneer improvements are still standing as a mark of his handiwork, and when he left the ranch he embarked in a mercantile business at Moorehead, and there he passed away in 1912, at the age of seventy-seven years. While living in Kansas he gave his services as a soldier in the Twelfth Kansas Volunteer Infantry for the Union cause, and remained in the army until the end of the war. His brothers Boston and Fisher served in the same regiment, and his younger brother, John, belonged in the Kansas Home Guards. Theodore D. Kelsey belonged to the Grand Army of the Republic at the time of his death. In his political affiliations he was a Republican. In church activities he was a United Presbyterian.

While still living in Indiana Theodore D. Kelsey was united in marriage with Rhoda M. Gray, a daughter of a Kentuckian who moved to Indiana when she was a child. Mrs. Kelsey survives her husband and is now a resident of Los Angeles, California, being at present over eighty-three years of age. Mr. and Mrs. Theodore D. Kelsey became the parents of the following children: William H., who is a resident of Grand Forks, North Dakota; David D., whose present location is not known; Arthur R., whose name heads this review; Samuel W., who is a resident of Red Lodge, Montana; Mary E., who is the wife of Arthur N. Hotchkiss, of Los Angeles, California; and Frank T., who is a merchant of Moorehead, Montana.

From 1869 until 1874, Arthur R. Kelsey lived in Franklin County, Kansas, going then with his parents to Wayne County, and there he completed his minority and education as well, securing the latter in the public schools. When he began his career in Montana as a wage worker on a sheep ranch it was in the employ of R. R. Selway, with whom he remained for two years. Then he and a brother took a band of sheep from the flock of Mr. Selway and located on Beaver Creek, about eight miles above its mouth, and there Arthur R. Kelsey entered his homestead, but his career was materially disturbed by the panic of 1892-3, and the brothers gave up their "share herd" and formed a partnership with two other men, turning their flock over to them and going themselves to work for wages. They were expert sheep shearers and horse breakers and when there was no work in these lines they filled in with ranch work. At the end of the first year they were able to buy out one of their partners, and at the close of the second, that of the other, and then the brother took charge of the flock of sheep, and Arthur R. Kelsey returned to the parental ranch and gave his aid to his father. For twenty years the brothers remained in partnership, and when they severed their connection the brother took the property at Beaver and Arthur R. the parental ranch. In doing so, the latter closed his connection with the wool industry and embarked in cattle raising exclusively. His ranch property comprises 5,800 acres of land lying along the Beaver and Taylor creeks, and in addition to it he owns and maintains a residence at Miles City. The ranch is stocked with range cattle under the brand "2-hanging K" on the left ribs.

Mr. Kelsey was a member of the local Council of Defense during the great war, and as such was active in raising the quotas allotted to his locality. He cast his first presidential vote for Benjamin Harrison in 1892, and has never missed voting at each recurring presidential election, at which times he has always supported the candidates of his party.

On July 20, 1899, Arthur R. Kelsey was married in Custer County, Montana, to Bertha E. Miller, born at Shenandoah, Iowa, May 20, 1878, her father having spent his life in the vicinity. Mrs. Kelsey was graduated from the Shenandoah High School, following which she was a teacher for two years at the Lewiston, Montana, School, from which she went to the one at Sadte, Custer County, Montana. Mr. and Mrs. Kelsey have the following children: Gladys Irene, who is a student of the Chicago University at Chicago, Illinois; Genevieve Ione, who is a student of the Miles City High School; and Mary Alice, who is the youngest. Mr. Kelsey is a typical ranchman and product of the state in which he has spent so many useful years. Broad-minded, alert and public-spirited, he is not afraid to grapple with civic problems, while his experience, sound judgment and common sense enable him to solve them in a manner that will bring about the best results for the majority. He and his wife are the center of a delightful social circle at Miles City, and their hospitable home welcomes many guests, some of state-wide distinction.

William C. McVey, a merchant and ranchman on the "YT" ranch near the head of Mizpah Creek, Powder River County, came into Montana in 1900 and made his first stop at Miles City. His situation was that of a workingman, dependent upon his labor for his living, and his first work at Miles City was as a clerk in the Shore-Newcome store. For two years he sold goods for this concern and then went to Lame Deer, on the Northern Cheyenne Agency, and took charge of the trading store of George Walters, where during the two years that followed he sold goods to the Cheyennes, learned their language, and engaged in raising horses on his own account on a small scale. Returning to the Shore-Newcomé establishment, he continued as bookkeeper for that establishment at Miles City for a few months, and then accepted a position in the office of D. A. McIntosh, who had the contract for the building of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad. When the office at Miles City was closed Mr. McVey sought other employment, and for a time was engaged in the real estate business with J. E. Prindle at Ismay, Montana. He spent a year there without the success his time and efforts warranted, and then returned to Miles City, where he worked for a time as clerk for W. B. Jordon & Sons Company, after leaving whom he established himself in business as a merchant at Beebe. This marked the starting-point of the career which has been so successful and which has steadily advanced him to a leading position among the citizens of his community.

As a settler of Montana Mr. McVey immigrated hither from near Ottawa, Canada, having been born within twenty miles of that city May 11, 1877. His boyhood life was spent on the home farm and his education completed in the high school at Kempville, and as a young man he learned something of merchandising as a clerk in a store at Avonmore, this being the extent of his equipment when he came away from there and sought his fortune and future in the United States without capital. His father was William McVey, born in the township of Goulborn, Ontario, who was a shoemaker by trade, and who as a young man crossed over into the United States and went with a brother to Nevada, where he engaged in mining near Carson City. He dug out ore enough to pay for a farm "back home," improved it and spent the rest of his life there. He was a soldier during the Fenian uprising, and took part in the battle of the Windmill, Prescott, Ontario. He was a conservative in politics, and belonged to no church, but was the husband of a Presbyterian wife. William McVey married Grace Brunton, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Dalgleish) Brunton. The Dalgleishes were Scotch, like the McVeys, and the grandfathers of both of these families came out of Scotland. William McVey died in 1906, at the age of sixty-two years, while his widow survives in Canada, aged seventy years. Their children were: James F., a farmer of Chesterville, Ontario; Agnes E., the wife of Gordon Plant, of Manitoba; Annie, who is married and a resident of Ontario; Sarah, the wife of John A. Carkner, of Williamsburg, Ontario; William C., of the "YT" ranch; Martha, the wife of William Sterns, of Metcalf, Ontario; and John B., who occupies the old McVey home.

When he started in business at Beebe Mr. McVey's capital was small, being represented by what he had gotten together by saving his wages, but while there he found prosperity, for which he worked hard, and made and saved some money. Thus encouraged, after two years he bought the old "YT" ranch of George Horkan, and took possession in 1912. This ranch is one of the oldest in the region, as well as one of the best known, and its history shows it to have been started by a syndicate, its well-known manager being Collin Hunter. Mr. McVey acquired the ranch entire, principally the water and buildings and the old cow trails, plus the script lands which Horkan had acquired. With the additions made by Mr. McVey the ranch embraces about 5,000 acres, fenced and devoted to cattle and horses. His is the "YT" brand and the ranch runs more than 2,000 head of cattle of the Hereford and Shorthorn strains. His market is in Chicago and Omaha, and he has been a shipper ever since he took hold of this ranch. Mr. McVey built a store and engaged in the mercantile business on the ranch in the fall of 1912.

In his citizenship Mr. McVey has encouraged better facilities for travel, for education, for mails, advocating heartily all movements making for good highways, good schools and expeditious postal service. He took out his citizenship papers early and cast his first vote as a Republican. In 1912 he supported the candidacy of Colonel Roosevelt, and in 1916 voted for Charles E. Hughes. As a fraternity man he is an Elk and an Odd Fellow at Miles City.

Mr. McVey was married at Billings, Montana, in October, 1911, to Mrs. Mary S. Hinds, a daughter of John and Jean (Crawford) McDougall. Mr. McDougall emigrated from Scotland to Windsor, Canada, where he was a farmer, and Mrs. McVey was born there, one of a family of eight sons and three daughters, four of the children now residing near Wenatchie, Washington. By her first marriage Mrs. McVey has a daughter, Beatrice, the wife of William Sutter, first sheriff of Powder River County, whose son is William, Jr.

LEWIS M. GRIFFIN. The day of the open range in Montana is past and with it the historic cowboy and the environments so many have for years associated with the west, but there are remaining substantial ranchmen developed from the former cow boys, and their many acres afford abundant pasturage to herds of blooded cattle, the value of which make up for the loss in numbers of former days. These men have brought with them many desirable qualities from the olden days of outdoor life. Their outlook is broader, their judgments more charitable and their lives more sincere than many who have always been denizens of crowded communities. Lewis M. Griffin, a typical ranchman of the Stacey region of Powder River County, belongs to this class of fine citizens, and he has been a resident of Montana since 1882.

The birth of Lewis M. Griffin occurred on July 14, 1859, in DeKalb County, Missouri, and he is a son of John B. Griffin. John B. Griffin was born in North Carolina, and was taken to DeKalb County, Missouri, in boyhood, later being followed by his father, John Griffin, a soldier of the War of 1812. John Griffin spent his life engaged in agricultural pursuits, and died in DeKalb County, Missouri, being buried near Rochester, that county, in the Bethel Cemetery. He had four sons, one of them being John B. Griffin, father of Lewis M. Griffin.

At the time John B. Griffin settled in DeKalb County the land was all open, and as soon as he was old enough he took up Government land, and on the farm thus acquired spent the remainder of his life, which was a quiet and useful one. He voted the democratic ticket, and was equally earnest in his advocacy of the principles and creed of the Methodist Episcopal Church, of which he was a devout member. His death occurred in 1888, when he was seventy-eight years of age, his widow surviving him for three years, passing away when eighty-one years old. She was before her marriage Sarah Tate, a daughter of Judge Tate of Grundy County, Missouri, where Mrs. Griffin was born. Mr. and Mrs. John B. Griffin had the following children: John, who spent his life in DeKalb County, Missouri; Enoch, who lives in the Big Horn River country of Montana; Carey A., who lives at Topeka, Kansas; Lewis M., whose name heads this review; Annie, who married James Grady, died in DeKalb County, Missouri; Lizzie, who is married and lives at Auburn, Nebraska; and Mary, who is married and lives at Kansas City, Missouri.

When he was twenty-two years old Lewis M. Griffin left DeKalb County, Missouri, coming by boat up the Missouri River to Fort Pierre, and there joined a "bull team" outfit bound for Montana with piling for the construction work on the Northern Pacific Railroad. Mr. Griffin drove nine yoke of oxen hitched to three train wagons, and was, as he himself says, "a bullwhacker" at that time. With him were his brother and F. S. Whitney. The little party went on to Billings, when that now prosperous community was represented by a single tent, and engaged in freighting between Billings and Bozeman until the following spring. Mr. Griffin saw the first train cross the new bridge built over the Yellowstone River at Billings.

In the spring of 1883 Lewis M. Griffin came to Custer County as a cowboy for Judge C. H. Loud's cattle, working for him on the old "S L" ranch for eight years. During that period he gradually accumulated cattle of his own, so that when he left the "S L" ranch he was able to move on the Little Pumpkin Creek and begin operating as a cattle man. He homesteaded 160 acres, the nucleus of his present ranch, through which Little Pumpkin Creek meanders, located four miles south of Stacey. His original residence was a log house of three rooms, which was floored. Over the walls poles were placed and they were covered with dirt. This primitive place served him as a home until his present comfortable modern residence was built.

Mr. Griffin started into the stock business with common range cattle, and he shipped to Chicago, ultimately developing a few hundred head under the brand of "G. L." on the left side. With the introduction into this region of blooded males he was able to improve his grade of cattle, and continued in that line of business until with the closing of the range he was forced to reduce his stock, after twenty-seven years of continued operation. During all of these years he shipped cattle to the Chicago market, and during the earlier period used to receive $28 per head for four year old steers. In 1918 for the same aged steers he received $150 per head, although it must be remembered that the scarcity of food because of the great war had raised the price of beef very materially, as well as of all commodities.

Mr. Griffin did not confine his land investments to the acquisition of a homestead, but when he saw that the settlement of the country meant the curtailment of his range privileges he began to buy land from the Northern Pacific Railroad on their long time payment plan, and now has 870 acres in his ranch. In 1918 he definitely closed his stock business and since then has been devoting his ranch to growing feed for the cattle he is raising within his own acreage. As a citizen Mr. Griffin has rendered valuable service as a member of the school board of district No. 29 for a number of years. For thirty-five years he was a resident of Custer County, but the creation of the new county of Powder River places his ranch without the confines of Custer. In his political fealty Mr. Griffin is a democrat, and cast his first presidential vote for Grover Cleveland in 1892, but aside from doing his duty in exercising his right of franchise he takes no part in public life.

On December 6, 1889, Lewis M. Griffin was married at Miles City to Miss Anna Daly, a daughter of Charles Daly, who early came into the west from Illinois, settling in Nebraska, where he spent the remainder of his life. Mrs. Griffin was born in Nebraska on March 4, 1869. Mr. and Mrs. Griffin have the following children: Eva, who is the wife of John Gold, of the Stacey locality, has the following children, Annie, Eva, Jessie, John H. and Agnes May; Roy, who is a farmer and ranchman of Wyoming; Maud, who is the wife of Robert McAdams, of Custer, Montana, has two children; Charles, who was in the training camp at Camp Lewis, Washington, as a member of the National Army, was not sent to France owing to the signing of the armistice, and upon his honorable discharge he returned to the Stacey locality and is now engaged in ranching; and Agnes, Enoch and Melvin, all of whom are at home.

It would be difficult to find a finer or more thoroughly American family than this one, and its members are a credit to their communities. During the great war they all rendered patriotic service in different capacities, and in the reconstruction days which are following the cessation of hostilities they are meeting and trying to solve the grave problems of the day in the same self-sacrificing spirit which animated them when this was a warring instead of a peaceful country.

Daniel M. Gaskill is a ranchman of experience and prosperity, and his valuable property of 3,360 acres of land is in the Stacey locality and astride the Big Pumpkin. During his residence in Montana he has passed through the varying experiences which have come to cattlemen, and out of them he has emerged a heavy property owner and successful stockman and farmer. He was born in Butler County, Nebraska, September 12, 1873, a son of Joseph Gaskill. The birth of Joseph Gaskill occurred in Knox County, Ohio, but he later went to Nebraska, and finally joined his children in Montana in 1904. After reaching Montana he had the misfortune to lose his wife, who bore the maiden name of Mary Hurley, she dying in 1916, aged seventy-three years. She was a daughter of David Hurley, and was born in County Kerry, Ireland. Joseph Gaskill and his wife became the parents of the following children: Emma, who is the wife of J. T. Hamilton, of Miles City; Lizzie, who is the wife of Jerry Kerwin, of Boyd County, Nebraska; Nora, who is the wife of William Flannery, of Stacey, Montana; Mrs. Maggie Jarvis, of Stacey, Montana; Daniel M., whose name heads this review; Lula, who married Millard D. Shy, a ranchman of the Stacey locality; and Leo, who is a ranchman at the head of Mizpah Creek.

When Mr. Gaskill rode into Montana from Nebraska in 1893 he brought with him an experience as a ranch hand and cow boy, and found immediate employment on the ranch of Charles Daly on the Little Pumpkin, but remained there only two years, and then became a cattle man on his own account with twenty head. He squatted on the public domain adjacent to Stacey, and the spot occupied by his pioneer log cabin is now the property of Alexander Campbell. For three or four years he remained there, and he took his first shipment of cattle to Chicago himself. He used a combination of the letters W and G on his cattle, which have been of the Hereford or Durham strain, or both. He used the open range until it was closed, and then being already the owner of some property of his own, turned his attention to farming, and on his five and a quarter sections of land raises sufficient grain and other farm products for his family and stock. His ranch is one of the best in this locality, and he has carried on his operations intelligently and profitably.

Since he has settled here schools have been established within three and one-half miles of his ranch, one of them bearing his name, and he has been on its school board since the district was organized. In his political views Mr. Gaskill affiliates with the democratic party on national matters, although locally he is liable to vote independently, preferring to use his own judgment with reference to the fitness of the candidates. He and his family are consistent members of the Roman Catholic Church.

On December 10, 1896, Mr. Gaskill was married at Shadron, Nebraska, to Miss Ellen Hassey, a daughter of William Hassey, who died in Missouri, following which his widow, Mrs. Grace (Young) Hassey, took their children to Nebraska. Mrs. Gaskill was born at Ironton, Ohio, June 8, 1872. The others of the family are as follows: Thomas, who lives at Sheridan, Wyoming, where the aged mother also resides; Jennie, who is the wife of John Bowman, of Sheridan, Wyoming; and Andrew and William, both of whom are also residents of Sheridan, Wyoming. Mr. and Mrs. Gaskill have the following children: Joseph, who is the eldest, is conducting a ranch near his father's homestead, and he married Hazel Munson, of Ashby, Minnesota, Thomas H., Daniel M., Jr., Andrew, John L., Charley F. and William.

Charles Franklin Kline. After numerous experiences in developing land in Montana Charles Franklin Kline is now conveniently located on a rural property adjoining Miles City; where he is engaged in ranching. He was born at Canton, Ohio, on February 15, 1855, a son of George P. Kline, born near Berlin, Germany, who was brought to the United States by his father, Philip Kline. Philip Kline located between Canton and Robertsville, Ohio, and there spent the remainder of his life. Among his children were three sons, William, George and Philip, and two daughters, Mrs. Pelo and Mrs. Ropy. George P. Kline married Nancy Shuckhart, a daughter of George Shuckhart, who has also come to the United States from the vicinity of Berlin, Germany. After their marriage George P. Kline and his wife settled in Richland County, Wisconsin, and there spent the remainder of their lives. Their children were as follows: Charles F., who was the eldest; Lewis P., who is a farmer of Richland County and a minister of the Christian Church; and Elizabeth C., who died in childhood.

Charles F. Kline was reared in Richland County, and for three months attended school, that being the extent of his educational advantages. On May 2, 1882, he reached Montana, having come here in search of better opportunities to advance himself. He entered a pre-emption claim on Tongue River, which he later relinquished, and it was subsequently entered and proved up by Harvey Corbin. Entirely without capital Mr. Kline spent his first three years in Montana as a wage earner on a farm, with the exception of the time he put on his first claim, and then after the disastrous winter of 1886-7 he went to the Black Hills country and hired out for farm work on False Bottom between Spearfish and Deadwood, and there spent the summer. In the fall he returned to Miles City, which he had come to consider his home, and entered a claim on the Yellowstone River six miles below Miles City, and on it began farming and stockraising. This he proved up, improved and to it added a section of railroad land, making it a cattle and hay ranch. For about nine years Mr. Kline was engaged in operating this ranch, but then leased it and took his stock to the Little Sheep Mountains of Dawson County and spent seven years in that region. The shorting of the range by settlement caused him to abandon Dawson County, and he sold his stock and returned to his ranch. After raising another crop on this ranch he sold it to M. E. Bailey. In exchange of deeds Mr. Bailey passed to Mr. Kline the small tract he now owns, and there his residence has since been maintained.

The first work on the Yellowstone and Tongue rivers irrigation project was done by Mr. Kline, who had charge of a crew of men and continued to supervise them until the system was completed. He is the owner of some improved property in Miles City and is a stockholder in the Equity Store of this same city.

On April 3, 1889, Mr. Kline was married in Custer County, Montana, to Miss Sarah Elizabeth Butts, a daughter of Israel and Nancy (Dickinson) Butts. Israel Butts was born and reared in Southeastern Missouri, and during the war between the states was forced against his inclinations and convictions into the Confederate service, and was shot at and killed from ambush about two years following the termination of the war. Mrs. Butts survived him for a number of years and died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Kline, at Miles City, and she was interred in the cemetery of that place. Mr. and Mrs. Butts had three children to reach maturity, namely: Mrs. Minerva C. Earnest, who is deceased and was buried at Miles City; Mrs. Kline, who was born October 14, 1854; and Annie, who married John Douthit, of Yates, Montana. Mrs. Kline was born in Jasper County, Missouri, and owing to the early death of her father had but few opportunities for attending school. Mr. and Mrs. Kline have no children of their own, but by a former marriage Mr. Kline has a daughter, Bessie, who is now the wife of Mahlon Witherow, of Richland County, Wisconsin.

In his fraternal connections Mr. Kline maintains membership with the Woodmen of the World, the Eagles and the Homesteaders. When he cast his first presidential vote for Rutherford B. Hayes, Mr. Kline began his support of the republican party, which continued through the administration of President Roosevelt, but in 1912 and 1916 he voted for Woodrow Wilson for president. Both he and Mrs. Kline are members of the Methodist Church, and he is serving that body at Miles City as steward. A man of high moral convictions, he has tried to live up to them and do his full duty as he has seen it. Although hampered by a lack of proper educational training, he has made his own way in the world and holds an enviable position among the sound, trustworthy and dependable men of his neighborhood.

Jasper S. Rue. Since 1900 Jasper S. Rue, of Powder River County, has been an independent ranchman, but his experiences in Montana date back to 1891, when he came into the state and began working for the old "SH" ranch. During the period which has since elapsed not only has he been able to branch out and become a man of consequence in his neighborhood, but many of the old cowboys associated with him on the "SH" ranch have done likewise. Mr. Rue was born in Greene County, Iowa, August 17, 1871, a son of Lewis Rue, who built the first complete wagon ever set up in Iowa. A wheelwright by trade, he worked at it in Greene County, to which he had moved from Minnesota, his birthplace. During the war between the states he enlisted in Company C, Third Minnesota Volunteer Infantry, which was captured by the Confederates and returned to Minnesota under parole. The Federal Government then sent the command against the Indians to put down the Sioux uprising. Leaving Iowa, Lewis Rue went to Vermilion, South Dakota, and operated a wagonshop for some years, when he was attracted by an opening at Fort Pierre, South Dakota, to which place he went by steamboat. Once more he changed his place of residence, going to Spearfish, the same state, and there he died, having been retired for some time, in 1898, aged fifty-six years. He married Elizabeth Huntington, whose paternal great-grandfather was one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, and her father, Zebulon Huntington, was born in New England. For a time he resided in Canada and was engaged in buying cattle, continuing that business when he moved to Iowa. There he was killed by a tornado. His son James Huntington enlisted for service in the war between the states from Iowa. Mrs. Lewis Rue was born in Canada in 1843, and she and her husband had the following children: Lillie, who is Mrs. P. D. Green, of Greenleaf, Idaho; Jasper S., whose name heads this review; Fred W., who is a ranchman on Little Powder River; George H., who is located near his brother Jasper; Alfred, who is a ranchman near Broadus, Montana; Walter J., who is an automobile dealer of Seattle, Washington; and Birdie, who is the wife of Frank Stratton, of Caldwell, Idaho.

Jasper S. Rue came to Montana from Custer City, South Dakota, a boy of nineteen years, making the trip on horseback. Prior to that he had been a farm boy, growing up in the vicinity of Fort Pierre, South Dakota, and his experience was limited to that afforded by the farm. He had herded cattle to some extent and was put to work on the "SH" ranch "nighthawking," one of his associates being Tom Doyle, who is still identified with ranching in this locality. He remained with the "SH" outfit until it went out of business, when he bought a few cows and commenced ranching for himself in 1892 in partnership with George McDonald and S. H. Cook at the mouth of East Fork. They fenced a small patch and erected some pioneer buildings, but in the following year Mr. Rue sold his interest and came to his claim on Little Powder, on which he had been a squatter five years before, Mr. McDonald being then associated with him. Until his marriage Mr. Rue lived in a little log shack. Not long afterward he was joined by his brother George, and they had 140 head of yearlings and two-year-old heifers running under the brand "RUE" on the left ribs. After two years of partnership the brothers dissolved their connection and entered the sheep business separately. For the subsequent six years Jasper S. Rue ran sheep along the Little Powder with only fair success and then disposed of his flocks and concentrated upon cattle and horses. For a time he was very active as a breeder and raiser of horses, but with the advent of automobiles and other mechanical substitutes he curtailed his operations very considerably. His ranch is known as the "Q Heart" and comprises a section of land lying on both sides of the river, twenty-five miles above its mouth.

On May 17, 1903, Jasper S. Rue was married at Belle Fourche, South Dakota, to Miss Eunice Grout, a daughter of Hiram and Mary (Fewell) Grout, she being his second wife and the mother of the following children: Norine, who is the wife of Frank Clem, of Carter County, Montana; Mrs. Rue, who was born on February 22, 1888 in Clayton County, Montana, to which locality her father had come from Iowa; and Hiram C., who was the youngest. By a former marriage Mr. Grout had two children, Nelson and Clayton. Mrs. Rue has spent her life on a ranch. She began riding when a girl and developed an expertness in handling stock possessed by few women. Having been very actively engaged in handling the stock on their home ranch she decided to enter the contest at Belle Fourche in 1919, conducted as the "Tri-State Roundup," and won second class in the "Ladies Relay" for Powder River girls only; first money in the nightgown race two days in succession; and in the lady cow pony race she took both second and third money; and on the final day she took third money in the nightgown race. Mr. and Mrs. Rue have three children, namely: Lewis S., Alta and Edna.

Mr. Rue cast his first vote in Montana and his first presidential vote was given to William Jennings Bryan in 1894. Since then he has shown no particular preference, generally voting independently. At nearly all of the elections he has been on the election board, and together with William P. Flynn he located and laid out the road down the Little Powder from the Wyoming line across the Mizpah and then down S. L. Creek to Big Pumpkin Creek before a wagon track had covered any of this region. During the late war Mr. Rue was very patriotic and both he and Mrs. Rue took the limit in baby bonds and otherwise assisted in war work in their district. Mr. Rue has been connected with all of the improvements in this locality, was the first road supervisor appointed in this district and was clerk of the school board when the school district was organized. Since the organization of the district modern schoolhouses have been erected, but prior to that the school sessions were held in abandoned log shacks or in the homes of the settlers. Having been so active in the past there is no doubt but that Mr. Rue will be equally public spirited in the future and that he will never lose his deep interest in the progress of the community in which all of his married life has been spent, and in all of his efforts he is sure of the effective co-operation of his wife.

THOMAS GOOD. Starting as a car pusher in the coal fields of Pennsylvania at the age of eleven years, Thomas Good has advanced steadily through the various occupations connected with the mining of coal, and today occupies the position of superintendent of the Anaconda Copper Mining Company at Washoe, Montana. His career throughout has been one of self-made manhood, for he entered life with poor educational equipment and no other advantages, and each step in his upward climb has come only after the most earnest and persistent effort. Such a career should furnish something of encouragement to the youths of our land who are starting life with the belief that they are hopelessly handicapped by the lack of finances or assisting influences. It evidences the fact that a man can make himself what he wishes to be provided he has the ambition, persistence and determination, and the power to develop his inherent abilities.

Mr. Good was born near Glasgow, Scotland, April 7, 1864, a son of John Good. His father was born in 1822 in England, but as a child was taken to Ireland, where he was married and engaged in farming in County Down. About 1854 he went to Scotland, where he secured employment in the coal mines near Glasgow, and in 1878 immigrated to the United States and settled in Pennsylvania, where he continued in the same vocation until his retirement in 1894. He died at McIntyre, Lycoming County, that state, in 1904. Mr. Good was a republican. He married Mary Heselip, who was born in 1832 in County Down, Ireland, and reared there, and died at McIntyre, Pennsylvania, in 1894. They became the parents of the following children: John, who is employed in the round house of the Northern Pacific Railway at Laurel, Montana; Alexander, a coal miner of Pennsylvania; William, the proprietor of a meat market at Ralston, Pennsylvania; and Thomas, of this review.

Thomas Good secured but a little public schooling in Scotland, and none whatever in this country, but has acquired knowledge through reading, observing and experience, and is today a well educated man in the essential and important things of life. He was but a youth when he came to the United States, and immediately upon his arrival secured employment in the coal mines at McIntyre, Pennsylvania, in the humblest capacity, that of coal pusher. As soon as he was large and strong enough he was advanced to the post of coal digger, a vocation which he followed in the Pennsylvania fields until 1886, in which year he came west to Colorado, and was employed at coal digging in the mines at Walsenburgh. His industry in his work and his ability to handle men soon gained him promotion to driving boss, but he left the Colorado fields for those of Montana, and when he started work at Belt it was at driving horses on the night shift. Again his ability and energy were recognized by promotion to driving boss, and from this position he advanced to mine foreman, a responsible post which he held until 1904, in which year he went to Cokedale as superintendent for the Anaconda Copper Mining Company. After two years there he went to Bridger, Montana, as superintendent of the Bridger Coal and Improvement Company, but one year later, in 1907, the Anaconda Copper Mining Company decided to open a coal mine in the Bear Creek coal field at Washoe, and Mr. Good was secured to open the mines and act in the capacity of superintendent, an office which he holds at this time. The capacity of this mine is 800 tons of high grade lignite coal daily, and Mr. Good has complete charge of operations, with 180 men under his superintendency. He is considered one of the most capable men in his line to be found in the state, and has the full confidence of his superiors, whose headquarters are located at Butte. Mr. Good is a member of the Montana Society of Engineers, and is an enthusiastic fraternalist, affiliating with Golden Fleece Lodge No. 66, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, of Bridger, and Red Lodge Chapter, Royal Arch Masons, and is an ex-member of the Knights of Pythias. He is a stanch democrat.

Thos Wood

In December, 1892, at Walsenburgh, Colorado, Mr. Good married Miss Henrietta Gillespie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Gillespie, the latter of whom is deceased, while the former, a retired pioneer stockman of Colorado, makes his home with his daughter and son-in-law. Five children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Good, namely: Stella, who is the wife of Thad Pound, of Washoe, manager of the Washoe Trading Company; Henrietta, who died unmarried at the age of twenty-two years; Vera, who married Clarence Pfeil, of Washoe, who died in 1919 of the epidemic of Spanish influenza which was prevalent at that time; Thomas, who is a student in the public high school at Washoe; and Elizabeth, who is a pupil in the graded school.

FRED W. RUE, one of the men who has attained to more than local distinction as a prosperous ranchman of the Little Powder River District, belongs to the well known Rue family, several members of which have borne well their part in the development of this part of the state. He is the owner and operator of the Little Powder River Stock Farm, twelve miles above the mouth of the river after which it is named, and he has been identified with it since October, 1899, at which time he erected his pioneer log shack, now used as a bunkhouse, and from then on his interests have been entwined with those of this neighborhood.

Fred W. Rue was born November 3, 1874, a son of Lewis and Elizabeth (Huntington) Rue, a sketch of whom is found elsewhere in this work. He is a native of Vermilion, South Dakota, and was reared there and at Fort Pierre and Custer, that state, and common schools gave him his education. As soon as he was old enough he began working as a farm hand, and his experience on a dairy farm prior to coming to Montanna was valuable to him in handling stock. He was nineteen years old when in the spring of 1894 he rode on horseback into Montana from South Dakota, his horse, saddle and about $10 in money being his entire capital, aside from his abounding good health and willingness to work hard to attain his honest ends. Employment was readily secured with the "SH" outfit at the mouth of the Little Powder River as mail carrier for that and the "Cross" ranch at Powderville. Between his regular trips on horseback for the mail he punched cattle, and received a wage of $35 per month. He remained with this outfit for two years, leaving it for the "Cross" ranch, where he was a horse wrangler. Still later he became kitchen man for the "Cross" and "TJ" ranches, and did the cooking for them during the subsequent five years. In the meanwhile he had taken up a claim on Little Powder River, and began his career as a cattleman with one cow and her calf at the time he was with his first outfit. The produce from this one cow gave him his start when he began ranching for himself, and in order to gain a little ready money it was his custom for several seasons to winter calves, bulls or other cattle for the larger outfits at about $3 per head. He adopted as his brand "NHR," and this he stamped upon his first cow and calf. Later he sold this brand and now uses the one "RUE" that he has since used. His work has all been directed toward the production of stock cattle, and he markets his produce at Omaha, Nebraska, through his own shipments.

Mr. Rue's improvements have come gradually, his six-room ranch house being the development of some years. His ample barn 30 by 60 feet was built in 1918 and his machinery house for storing all his farm appliances came about the same time. The water comes from four flowing wells distributed over his ranch, the flow averaging from three to fourteen gallons per minute, and the wells are from 200 to 600 feet in depth. All of these improvements have been made according to a definite system and are permanent, and excellent judgment has been shown in their development. Mr. Rue now has 2,000 acres of land, ten miles of fencing, which encloses the most of his ranch. His lowlands are given over to hay growing and about 100 acres are devoted to small grain growing.

On November 3, 1905, Mr. Rue was married at Custer, South Dakota, to Miss Erva Bower, a daughter of Israel and Maria (Riddle) Bower, early settlers of Dakota. Mr. Bower was extensively interested in farming and stockraising, and died at Custer, South Dakota. Mrs. Rue is one of the three children of her parents, and was born in December, 1875. She was graduated from the Custer High School and was engaged in school teaching for fourteen terms prior to her marriage. Mr. and Mrs. Rue have no children.

In addition to his other interests Mr. Rue is one of the four men who own the $20,000 hotel at Broadus, Montana, is a stockholder in the Powder River National Bank of Broadus, and is serving it as vice president. When Powder River County was formed he was one of the men engaged in promoting and carrying the project to a successful completion, but aside from that has not been active in public affairs, his duties on the ranch absorbing all of his time. He cast his first presidential vote for William McKinley in 1896, and has continued a firm adherent of republican principles ever since.

Mr. Rue is one of the men of Montana who has worked his way up from the bottom and his success is self-earned. When the movement was started for the organization for district No. 8 it met with his approval and support, and Mrs. Rue is now one of its trustees. During the great war Mr. Rue was chairman of the Council of Defense of his district and led nine drives for war relief, all of them being over-subscribed. Both he and Mrs. Rue went the limit in baby bonds, and he subscribed heavily to all of the issues of Liberty Bonds. There are few people in this part of the state who stand any higher in public esteem than do Mr. and Mrs. Rue, and they are deservedly numbered among the thoroughly representative people of the great State of Montana.

WILLIAM THURSTON WAITE, a ranchman at the mouth of the East Fork of Little Powder River, has been a resident of Montana since 1902, when he, his brother Charles W. and his father, Charles B. Waite, crossed into the state from Wyoming, where for two years they had been engaged in the horse and cattle industry with the idea of locating there permanently, but not being exactly satisfied with the land open for settlement they came to the Little Powder region, and here found what they had been looking for, plenty of land and an open range on which to let run the small bunch of cattle they brought with them. To this original herd more cattle were soon added, all being under the brand "MB," and for seventeen years they shipped to Omaha markets. The partnership being dissolved, Charles W. Waite took the homestead and William T. Waite moved to his present location, while the father retired to Long Beach, California, where he and his wife are now living in comfort. A sketch of Charles B. Waite is given in the sketch of his son Charles W. Waite found elsewhere in this work.

William T. Waite was born at Council Bluffs, Iowa, December 3, 1878, and his education was secured in the schools of that city and in a business college of the same place. After leaving school he went to Wheeler County, Nebraska, and was engaged in ranching until 1900, when he went into Wyoming, as above stated.

The property now owned and operated by Mr. Waite is recorded as the East Fork Stock Ranch and comprises 2,000 acres, and here he raises cattle for beef purposes and a considerable number of horses, his brand being "Lazy UG" on the left shoulder. This ranch lies on both sides of the East Fork, and his improvements include a log ranchhouse of five rooms, commodious and comfortable, which succeeded the usual pioneer log shack; a galvanized iron barn of recent construction, 60 by 64 feet; and an irrigation project developed with water from East Fork, his ditches watering an area of 300 acres which he is devoting to sweet clover and alfalfa, grain growing having received but little attention from him. Four flowing wells furnish the ranch with an abundant water supply, their capacity being from two and one-half to twelve gallons every minute. In addition to his ranch interests Mr. Waite is a stockholder in the First National Bank. Like his father and brother he is a stanch republican. Fraternally he belongs to Miles City Lodge, Benevolent Protective Order of Elks.

On August 20, 1908, Mr. Waite was married to Nellie Bergul, a daughter of Chris Burgul and Katie (Satorius) Burgul. Mrs. Waite was one of a family of five sons and five daughters and was born in Nebraska July 27, 1887. After completing the courses in the public schools of Miles City, Montana, Mrs. Waite became a student of the Miles City Business College, where she was taught the fundamentals of commercial life so that she was able to secure a position with J. E. Farnum, a leading real estate broker of Miles City, and was so employed until her marriage. Mr. and Mrs. Waite have a daughter, Ruth Gertrude. The record of the Waites in this neighborhood is of such a high character that the stock from the ranches of either brother command favorable attention in any market, and personally both men enjoy the highest respect and unlimited confidence of all with whom they are brought in contact.

Z. T. Cox. The merchant of Birney, Rosebud County, and a ranchman near this point, Z. T. Cox belongs to the settlers of the year 1886 and is a contribution from the citizenship of Texas to this state. He is a native of Giles County, Tennessee, born September 29, 1848, and his boyhood was spent largely at Pulaski, that state, his education being obtained in the public schools and as a student in Cumberland University at Lebanon, plus a business course at Nashville, Tennessee. He became an accountant, a business which he followed until his arrival in Montana, and which was his status when he went to Texas in 1870 as a young man and single. In the Lone Star State he located first at Brennan, and remained a short time as a farmer, and then went to Cleburne, where he took care of the books and accounts of J. T. Williams, remaining in his employ until he abandoned Texas to come north in search of a better climate and to become an agency farmer. He came accompanying Robert L. Upshaw, who was the appointee of President Grover Cleveland as agent of the Cheyenne Indians, and himself took the position of farmer at the agency. He was connected with that work four years and introduced the Cheyennes to the elementary work of agriculture and its principles.

On leaving the Indian service Mr. Cox began ranching, entered a homestead on Hangingwoman Creek, and established his home there, and so maintained it until 1913. He handled cattle for beef purposes and ran his stock under the "ZC" brand, and developed a ranch of 560 acres of deeded land. He shipped out of the country to Omaha and Chicago markets, and his contribution to the food products of this locality during many years was considerable. Mr. Cox engaged in merchandising at Birney in 1913 as the successor of W. P. Smith, and his is the only trading emporium within twenty-five miles of Birney. When he left the agency it was the last of politics with him, save as he has voted at elections since. He came into this country as a democrat, and has maintained the same party faith to the present time.

Mr. Cox's father, Jack Cox, was one of the first settlers of Tennessee, and went into that state from North Carolina. He was a planter most of his life, was past the age for military service during the war between the states, although he furnished three sons for the Confederate service during that struggle, and in his early politics was a whig and later a democrat, but was without political aspirations or career. He lived to the age of seventy years and died during the period of the Civil war. Jack Cox married a Miss Matthews from Georgia, who died soon after the birth of her son Zeb T. She was the mother of ten children, nine of whom grew to mature years. The sons who served under the Confederate flag were Jack P., Edwin J. and Jess B., and the latter, now a resident of Dyersburg, Tennessee, still survives, as does a sister, Mrs. Mary Record, of Paris, Texas, and Zeb T., of Birney, Montana, these three being the only children living.

Z. T. Cox was united in marriage at Mississippi City, Mississippi, October 17, 1887, to Miss Mary P. Roberts, a daughter of Calvin Roberts. Mr. Roberts was a successful practicing lawyer, and was a major in the Confederate army during the war between the states, having entered the army in Mississippi on the day the state seceded from the Union. His last days were passed in Montana at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Cox, and his death occurred in 1890. He was a native of Mississippi and was born August 7, 1835. His father, a native of Connecticut, was Dr. H. A. G. Roberts, who was a wealthy sugar planter whose plantation was located on Bayou Beouf, Louisiana. He passed away in Mississippi City, but was laid to rest at Jackson, Mississippi. Doctor Roberts married Emily E., a daughter of Judge Obediah Jones, one of the able jurists of Alabama who was named the first judge of Alabama when it became a territory. Calvin Roberts married Sarah Frances Taliaferro, a daughter of Peachey Ridgeway Taliaferro, who was a large Mississippi planter. Mrs. Roberts died in 1915, at the age of seventy-four years, having been born June 15, 1842. Mrs. Cox is one of four children of her parents: Hiram T., of Havana, Cuba; Mrs. Cox, who was born February 5, 1865; Emma Elizabeth, who died as Mrs. L. A. Alderson, of Sheridan, Wyoming, leaving three sons, Floyd T., Allen Roberts and Irving N., the two eldest being soldiers during the World war; and Sarah A., the wife of James Hackley, of El Paso, Texas.

Mrs. Cox came to Montana soon after the arrival in this state of her future husband, on a visit to her cousin, Captain Brown of the "Three Circle" ranch. She entered the United States Government service in 1887 as a teacher at the Lame Deer Agency, and there met the young agency farmer, to whom she was married soon afterward. Mr. and Mrs. Cox are the parents of four children: Percy Roberts, a ranchman on the family place, who married Daisy Belle Currie and has a daughter, Helen Percy; Richard Taylor, who is also a ranchman here and unmarried; and Edwin Allen and Taliaferro. Mr. and Mrs. Cox are Methodists, both having come from Methodist families and being reared in that faith, and the first Methodist Episcopal services held in the Birney locality were solemnized in the Cox log shack on the ranch. Mr. Cox joined the Independent Order of Odd Fellows after coming to Montana, and at this time is a member and past master of Birney Lodge of this order.

Charles Field, of Ashland, a ranchman of the Otter Creek Valley, came into this region and into Montana at the same time. He landed as a cowboy with a trail herd, crossing into the state from the Black Hills region and crossing the state line from Moorecroft, Wyoming. He joined the trail herd at Hat Creek, at the foot of the Black Hills, and came into the Circle Bar Ranch with it, and on that ranch began a career in Montana that has been a definitely successful one.

It was as a range hand for wages that Mr. Field opened his account with Montana, and as such he remained until 1898, working for the Circle Bar, for the Howes, Bryan and Brandenburg cattle pool, for the "SH" outfit on Powder River, under John Burgess, foreman, and then resigned as a ranch hand and came to Otter Creek to settle down to business for himself. He had filed on his claim here in 1893, and this constituted the nucleus of the ranch he has since developed. His first residence and first Montana home which he called his own was built at the instance of Mr. Field and was a two-room log shanty which he utilized as bachelor's quarters until he married, and then better accommodations came along by the addition of rooms until his home now comprises seven rooms. Barns and sheds and other conveniences have come with the passage of time, and all have contributed toward the substantial improvement of his community.

Mr. Field's first stock investment was in fourteen head of cattle, with the acquirement of which he began raising cattle. Some of the great-grandchildren of his first bunch are still with his herd. He adopted first the brand "HV," but his recorded brand is "WC" on the left side. When in the zenith of his industry he ran some 350 head on the range here and a half section comprised his acreage of land. When Mr. Field came into the Otter Creek Valley there were three ranches on the creek and but three children in the community, those of Captain Howes. He became interested in the establishment of a school and the defining of a home district as early as the population justified such a move, and has served this district, No. 4, as a trustee.

Mr. Field was born in Burnett County, Texas, April 18, 1863, and grew up in that neighborhood. He was educated in the country and left school when about nineteen years of age and entered the range service as a trail boy. After one month he left the trail and in 1882 removed to Cheyenne, Wyoming, by rail, where he secured employment from Dan Ullman at punching cows. From this service he went to Hat Creek and worked at its mouth for the American Cattle Company, and from their employ came into Montana, as above noted.

Mr. Field is a son of Dr. Marcus A. Field, a native of Nashville, Tennessee, who practiced medicine until advanced age forced his retirement, he at this time being a veteran citizen of Burnett, Texas, aged eighty-seven years. He is a graduate of a medical school and gave the active years of his life to the service of his community in professional and civic ways, and is politically a democrat. Doctor Field married Malinda Boyce, a sister of Henry, Al, Pope and "Bub" Boyce, well known cattle men and early settlers of Central Texas. It was with Al Boyce that Charley Field left home about the time he came North. Mrs. Field died in 1879, at the age of forty years, and was the mother of eight children, namely: James H., a resident of Sheridan, Wyoming; Andrew, of Burnett, Texas; Anna, deceased, who was the wife of James Branch, of Burnett County, Texas; Marcy, who married Lee Spears, of Oklahoma City, Oklahoma; Charles, of this notice; Lee, who is the "rolling stone" of the family and is a Texas man; Mary, who married James Hodge and resides at Brownwood, Texas; and Sam, of Burnett, Texas. A half-brother of these children, Homer, resides about Burnett, Texas.

Charley Field was married at Sheridan, Wyoming, October 20, 1904, to Mrs. Marie Halstead, who was born in Norway and as a girl came to the United States, where she was first married at Lewiston, Idaho. By her first union she has the following children: Jeanette, a popular and efficient teacher in the public schools; Helen, who is a clerk in the War Risk and Insurance Department of the United States Government at Washington, District of Columbia, and was a teacher in Custer County, Montana, prior to accepting this post; and Charles Beebe, a successful young ranchman of Otter Creek, who served as a mechanic in the Aviation Corps and spent four months in England during the World war.

Mr. Field is a popular and valued member of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, belonging to Sheridan Lodge, in which he has numerous sincere friends. In political affairs he supports the candidates and principles of the democratic party, having cast his first ballot in favor of the candidacy of Grover Cleveland for the presidency in 1892, but has not himself been a seeker for political honors or office. He and the members of his family belong to the Methodist Church, and are generous supporters of all good movements started in their community.

August C. Stohr, Indian trader at Lame Deer on the Northern Cheyenne Indian Reservation, became identified with the reservation in 1899 as agency farmer and stock man. For eight years he served with Maj. J. C. Clifford, agent, and during that period noticeable advancement was made by the Indian as a farmer. Mr. Stohr came to them when they had no stock, the boarding school was not established, when the reservation lay open and when a sprinkling of whites, numbering thirty-two, were still on the reservation, although these subsequently bought off. The plan followed by Mr. Stohr was to induce the Indian to engage in the stock business, the Government stocking the reservation with breeds of cattle and heading the herds with blooded White Faces, and the Indian made good progress with the stock. In the matter of plowing he urged the plowing of gardens and the sowing of wheat, but for some time the Cheyenne took little interest in that. Road building was taken up on the reservation and the Indian displayed some interest in that direction and even went so far as to build some roads without pay. With the coming of the sawmill the wards of the Government cut logs and provided lumber for the erection of the Indian school, as well as a few log houses variously placed, and when Mr. Stohr left the service there was a decided improvement in the ways of the Indian, in his dropping into and adopting the ways of civilization.

Leaving the position of farmer, Mr. Stohr became Indian trader as the successor of George Walters, and has filled this want among the Cheyennes since 1907. In addition to this he has occupied the office of postmaster at Lame Deer and has served as a notary public in the execution of official and legal papers and documents.

August C. Stohr came to Montana in the spring of 1888 and worked first for a horse ranch owned by the Beasleys, at the mouth of Rosebud Creek. He remained there 3½ years and then purchased a quarter interest in the ranch and stock of A. D. Howard & Company, handling cattle, horses and sheep under the brand "20." He was so associated until 1895, and then sold out his interest and worked for Charley Davis, ten miles above the mouth of the Rosebud, for two years, then becoming the head of the Cold Springs outfit, one mile west of Forsyth, for Tom Barry. He came to the Cheyenne Agency from that ranch as a farmer, as above noted.

Mr. Stohr is a native of Wisconsin, born in Racine County, July 26, 1868. His childhood was passed on the farm and nothing but the district schools gave him his knowledge of books. He was not yet twenty years old when he left the parental roof and identified himself with Montana, coming by rail to the mouth of the Rosebud with just his farm experience to recommend him, and immediately entering upon his career in the West. His father was Christian Stohr, born in Mecklenburg-Strelitz, who came to the United States about the opening of our Civil war. He settled in Racine County, Wisconsin, and spent his remaining years there as a farmer, dying at the age of about forty-six. He married Caroline Hauker, who survived him many years and died in November, 1915, at seventy-two years of age, and their children were: Fred, of Burlington, Wisconsin; Matilda, who died as Mrs. Will Young, at Milwaukee, Wisconsin; Emma, who married George Beasley, of Glendive, Montana; August C., of this review; Andrew, of Twin Lakes, Wisconsin; and Ida who, became Mrs. John Haas, of Burlington, Wisconsin.

August C. Stohr was married in Rosebud County, Montana, November 26, 1891, to Miss Fannie Pierce, who came into this region from Richmond, Quebec, Canada, where she was born. She has a brother, Mahlon, in Sonoma, California, and another brother, Henry, in the same state. Mr. Stohr cast his first presidential vote for the republican candidate in 1892, and has participated in politics only as a voter since.

WILLIAM E. BARNARD. The merchant of Powderville and one of the early settlers of this region is William E. Barnard, known all over Custer and Powder River counties for his business integrity and no less for his splendid qualities of citizenship. He dates his residence in Montana from August, 1888, where he sought the locality where he now resides for mercantile purposes and the stock business, coming with his brother Fred B. Barnard, with whom he was associated under the firm style of Barnard Brothers. From that time to the present Mr. Barnard has steadily increased his interests and added to his influence and strength of position, with the result that today he is one of the leading citizens of his community and a man universally respected and esteemed.

William E. Barnard was born near Savein Rock, Connecticut, March 10, 1858, and as a lad was taken by his parents to Westchester County, New York, where he grew up from boyhood. His education came to him from the country schools, and farming was what he knew when he attained his majority. His father was Thomas Barnard, who came from England as a young man and settled in Connecticut, but in 1864 went to New York City, where he was engaged in business for about twenty years as a jeweler and gold and silver refiner. He left the city for his farm in Westchester County, where his death occurred in 1893, when he was about seventy-eight years old. He was a democratic voter but paid little attention to politics, while by training and sympathy he was an Episcopalian, his wife belonging to that denomination. She bore the maiden name of Rebecca Helm, and was born at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and died in June, 1888, when about sixty-eight years of age. Their children numbered five sons and two daughters: Thomas B., who met a soldier's death while wearing the Union blue on the battlefield of Gettysburg; Fred B., who was a volunteer soldier of the Union during the Civil war, spent an active business career at Powderville and New York City, and died at the latter place in 1896; Rebecca, who married Dr. Charles Betts and passed away at Mount Kisco, New York; Frank, who died at Kansas City, Missouri; Charles, who died at Mount Kisco, New York; Sarah, the wife of Thomas Armstrong, of Armonk New York,; and William E., of this notice.

In 1883 Mr. Barnard and his brother engaged in the cattle business at Sweetwater, New Mexico, and later drove a bunch of sheep to Kansas and then came to Powder River, where he and his brother bought out the business of Ben Mason here, owned then by W. B. Jordan. The interests acquired by the transaction included the store and some thirty head of cattle, and the brothers each homesteaded near Powderville and by purchases developed a ranch which was used as a ranching proposition. They dwelt in and shipped stock and built up an extensive business in that way as well as in their merchandising enterprise, and were early also among those who experimented with farming. While the country was generally thought by stockmen to be unfitted for successful farming, much of it has since been brought under cultivation and some splendid crops have been harvested and gathered. The partnership of the brothers continued until 1896, then being succeeded by W. E. Barnard & Company, the company being Thomas Barnard, a son of Fred B. Barnard. The latter firm continues today and is identified with about the same enterprises but upon a more extensive scale than the old firm. Of their 5,000-acre holdings in this locality 3,500 acres along the Powder River flats have been improved and made into farm propositions, buildings erected, artesian water developed, and an irrigation project constructed in which water is supplied by pumps from the Powder River.

Mr. Barnard has been postmaster of Powderville more than thirty-one years and for a number of years has been the notary public of this locality. In politics he has served the republican party of his district as committeeman. Mr. Barnard took an active part in the various drives for war work funds, and one of the County Council of Defense was his nephew, Thomas Barnard, a member of the firm. The career of Mr. Barnard here covering a period of more than thirty-one years was void of untoward incident until October 22, 1896, when a bandit entered his store about six o'clock in the evening and covered the company present, Mr. Barnard and his nephew, and ordered the safe opened. Mr. Barnard had just bought a new safe and made the excuse that he could not open the combination to the safe without his keys and they were at his residence. At Mr. Barnard's suggestion to go to the residence the bandit marched them over to the house for the combination and all entered the bedroom. About this time a hired man made his appearance in the kitchen and the bandit rushed back and covered him with his gun and brought him to the others. During his absence Mr. Barnard had secured a small pistol, and both he and the bandit fired at the same instant, the bandit's ball entering Mr. Barnard's face just below the eye, while the latter's bullet entered the bandit's body, causing him to flee, and he was never again seen. An X-ray of Mr. Barnard's head shows the bullet, a .44 or .45 calibre missile, just at the base of the skull and near the spine. The result of this shot was to blind him in his left eye and deafen him in his left ear, and to incapacitate him for business for two years.

Mr. Barnard's marriage occurred in Custer County, although the wedding place is now in Powder River County, his wife being Mrs. Regina, widow of Henry deGrey Warter, of London, England. Their daughter by adoption, Dorothy Arline Barnard, is a product of Montana. Mr. Barnard is a member of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, is a member of Miles City Club and a stockholder of the "56" Company, which was one of the first wells to be brought in in the state.

Louis P. Lanouette has been an active factor in the banking business in Eastern Montana for the past thirteen years, and is now cashier of the Bank of Fairview. His career from boyhood has been in commercial lines, and chiefly as a banker, a business he followed in North Dakota for a number of years.

He was born at Batiscan, Quebec, Canada, March 25, 1862, son of Gaspard and Delphine (Duval) Lanouette. His grandfather was a native of France and was the founder of the family in North America. Gaspard Lanouette, who died at Batiscan in 1888, at the age of sixty-six, was a native of that locality, and served as secretary and treasurer of the township for several years. His wife died in 1891, aged sixty-six. They had three sons and two daughters: John, of North Dakota; Philip, of Batiscan; Mrs. Louise St. Cyr, of Batiscan; Mrs. Lumina Valentine, of Montreal; and Louis P.

Louis P. Lanouette grew up in a country village in Canada, acquired a good education though he never attended college, and began life with such advantages as the popular schools could afford. His working career began as bookkeeper in a store in his home town, and when he left there he moved into the Red River Valley of North Dakota, and at Fargo spent fourteen years in the Red River Valley National Bank as a bookkeeper. In 1907 Mr. Lanouette moved to Montana and became cashier in the bank of Delaney Brothers, the First National Bank of Fairview, and left that institution to become cashier of the Bank of Fairview, which he has served since May, 1919. This is one of the leading financial institutions of Richland County.

Mr. Lanouette has also served as treasurer of Yellowstone School District No. 14. He applied for citizenship at Fargo, North Dakota, receiving his final papers at Williston in 1904. He has never been active in politics, and has cast his vote for republican candidates, beginning with his first presidential vote for McKinley in 1900. He is a member of the Ancient Order of United Workmen and was secretary of the Catholic Foresters while living in the Red River Valley. He has contributed one of the best homes to Fairview, an eight-room, large and commodious house with modern equipment and conveniences.

At Montreal, Canada, May 21, 1888, Mr. Lanouette married Miss Virginia Arcand, daughter of Sam and Olia (Brunelle) Arcand, both parents of French ancestry. Mrs. Lanouette was the second in a family of eight children. Mr. and Mrs. Lanouette besides their own children have several grandchildren. Their children were: Horace, Arthur, James L., Alice, Henry, Cecile, Walter and Louis, Jr. Horace, who died of influenza in the fall of 1918, married Miss Sadie Olstadt, who survives him. The son Arthur, a resident of Fairview, married Emma Hilger, and has two children, Kenneth and Cecile May. James L., of Casper, Wyoming, married Elizabeth Belanger and has a son, Gordon Dewey. Alice is the wife of Frost W. Wilder, of Fairview, and has a son, Warren Louis. Henry, of Casper, Wyoming, was employed in the Tacoma shipyards during the World war.

Frank M. Schaefer. Active, enterprising and energetic, fully alive to the needs of a growing city, Frank M. Schaefer, of Fairview, has been prominently identified with many of the leading interests of the place since 1907, and in the advancement of its financial prosperity has been an important factor. A son of the late Frank M. Schaefer, Sr., he was born October 8, 1878, in Mankato, Minnesota, where his early life was spent.

The youngest child of George and Mary Schaefer, and the only boy in a family of eight children, Frank M. Schaefer, Sr., came with his parents from Baden, Germany, to Mankato, Minnesota, where he assisted his father in the pioneer task of clearing and improving the farm on which he spent his remaining years, dying in April, 1910, at the age of sixty-five years. He married Mary B. Kern, who was born in Mankato, a daughter of John A. Kern, and is still a resident of that city. Nine children blessed their union, as follows: Mrs. Philip Borgmeier, whose husband is engaged in farming near Mankato; William F., engaged in agricultural pursuits near Mankato; Mrs. Eldo Willman, of Tacoma, Washington; Mrs. H. K. Barber, of Wenatchee, Washington; Mrs. George Hagan, of Mankato; Mrs. John T. Naughtin, of Keewatin, Minnesota; Mrs. H. W. Ricke, of Livingston, Montana; Cyril, of Mankato, Minnesota; and Frank M.

After his graduation from the Mankato High School Frank M. Schaefer completed a course in a commercial school of that city. Thus equipped for a business career, he became a bookkeeper in a bank at Heron Lake, Minnesota, and was subsequently made assistant cashier of the institution. Going then to North Dakota, he entered the employ of large line banking company, being extra man, and changing positions every few months. Coming to Fairview, Montana, in the summer of 1907, Mr. Schaefer organized with the assistance of other citizens the Bank of Fairview, which opened for business on August 16th of that year, its first home having been in a small frame building on State Street. Capitalized at $6,500, its first president was Thomas C. Gardner, of Sidney, its first vice president W. K. Adams, also of Sidney, and its first cashier was Mr. Schaefer. The bank did a successful business as a private concern until September, 1911, when it was chartered under the same name as a state bank, its capital being increased to $20,000, while Charles J. Hardy of Fairview was made president, A. M. Gardner becoming vice president and Mr. Schaefer retaining his position as cashier. In April, 1919, Mr. Schaefer retired from the bank, his private interests demanding his entire time and attention. Subsequently disposing of his banking interests, he is now devoting his efforts to the buying and selling of real estate.

Mr. Schaefer exercised his homestead right in the Yellowstone Valley, selecting his claim in August, 1906, and making it his home for seven years, the claim shack which he erected for his first home in Montana having been a two-room log cabin, dirt covered, floored, and made comfortable for occupancy. Doing his farming by proxy, he raised excellent crops of flax, oats and wheat during the first three years, but he himself attended to his duties in the near-by town. Mr. Schaefer still owns his original claim, and has acquired title to several other valley ranches, all of which are under cultivation and are yielding good crops of food and forage.

In the work of advancing the interests of Fairview Mr. Schaefer is associated with Lewis E. Newlon, the special aim of these gentlemen being to promote immigration as rapidly as possible, and thus aid in the development of the valley farms. This enterprising firm, joining other real estate dealers of Richland County, organized in December, 1919, at Sidney the Richland County Real Estate Dealers Association, of which Mr. Newlon was made chairman, the purpose of the organization being to promote harmony among the real estate men and to concentrate their advertising efforts. Mr. Schaefer was one of the original owners of the Fairview townsite, and the firm with which he was associated presented the Great Northern Railroad Company with lands which it agreed to use for roundhouse and other purposes, the company promising to make Fairview a railroad division point. Mr. Schaefer encouraged the incorporation of Fairview, and his service to the community has been as a useful and progressive citizen.

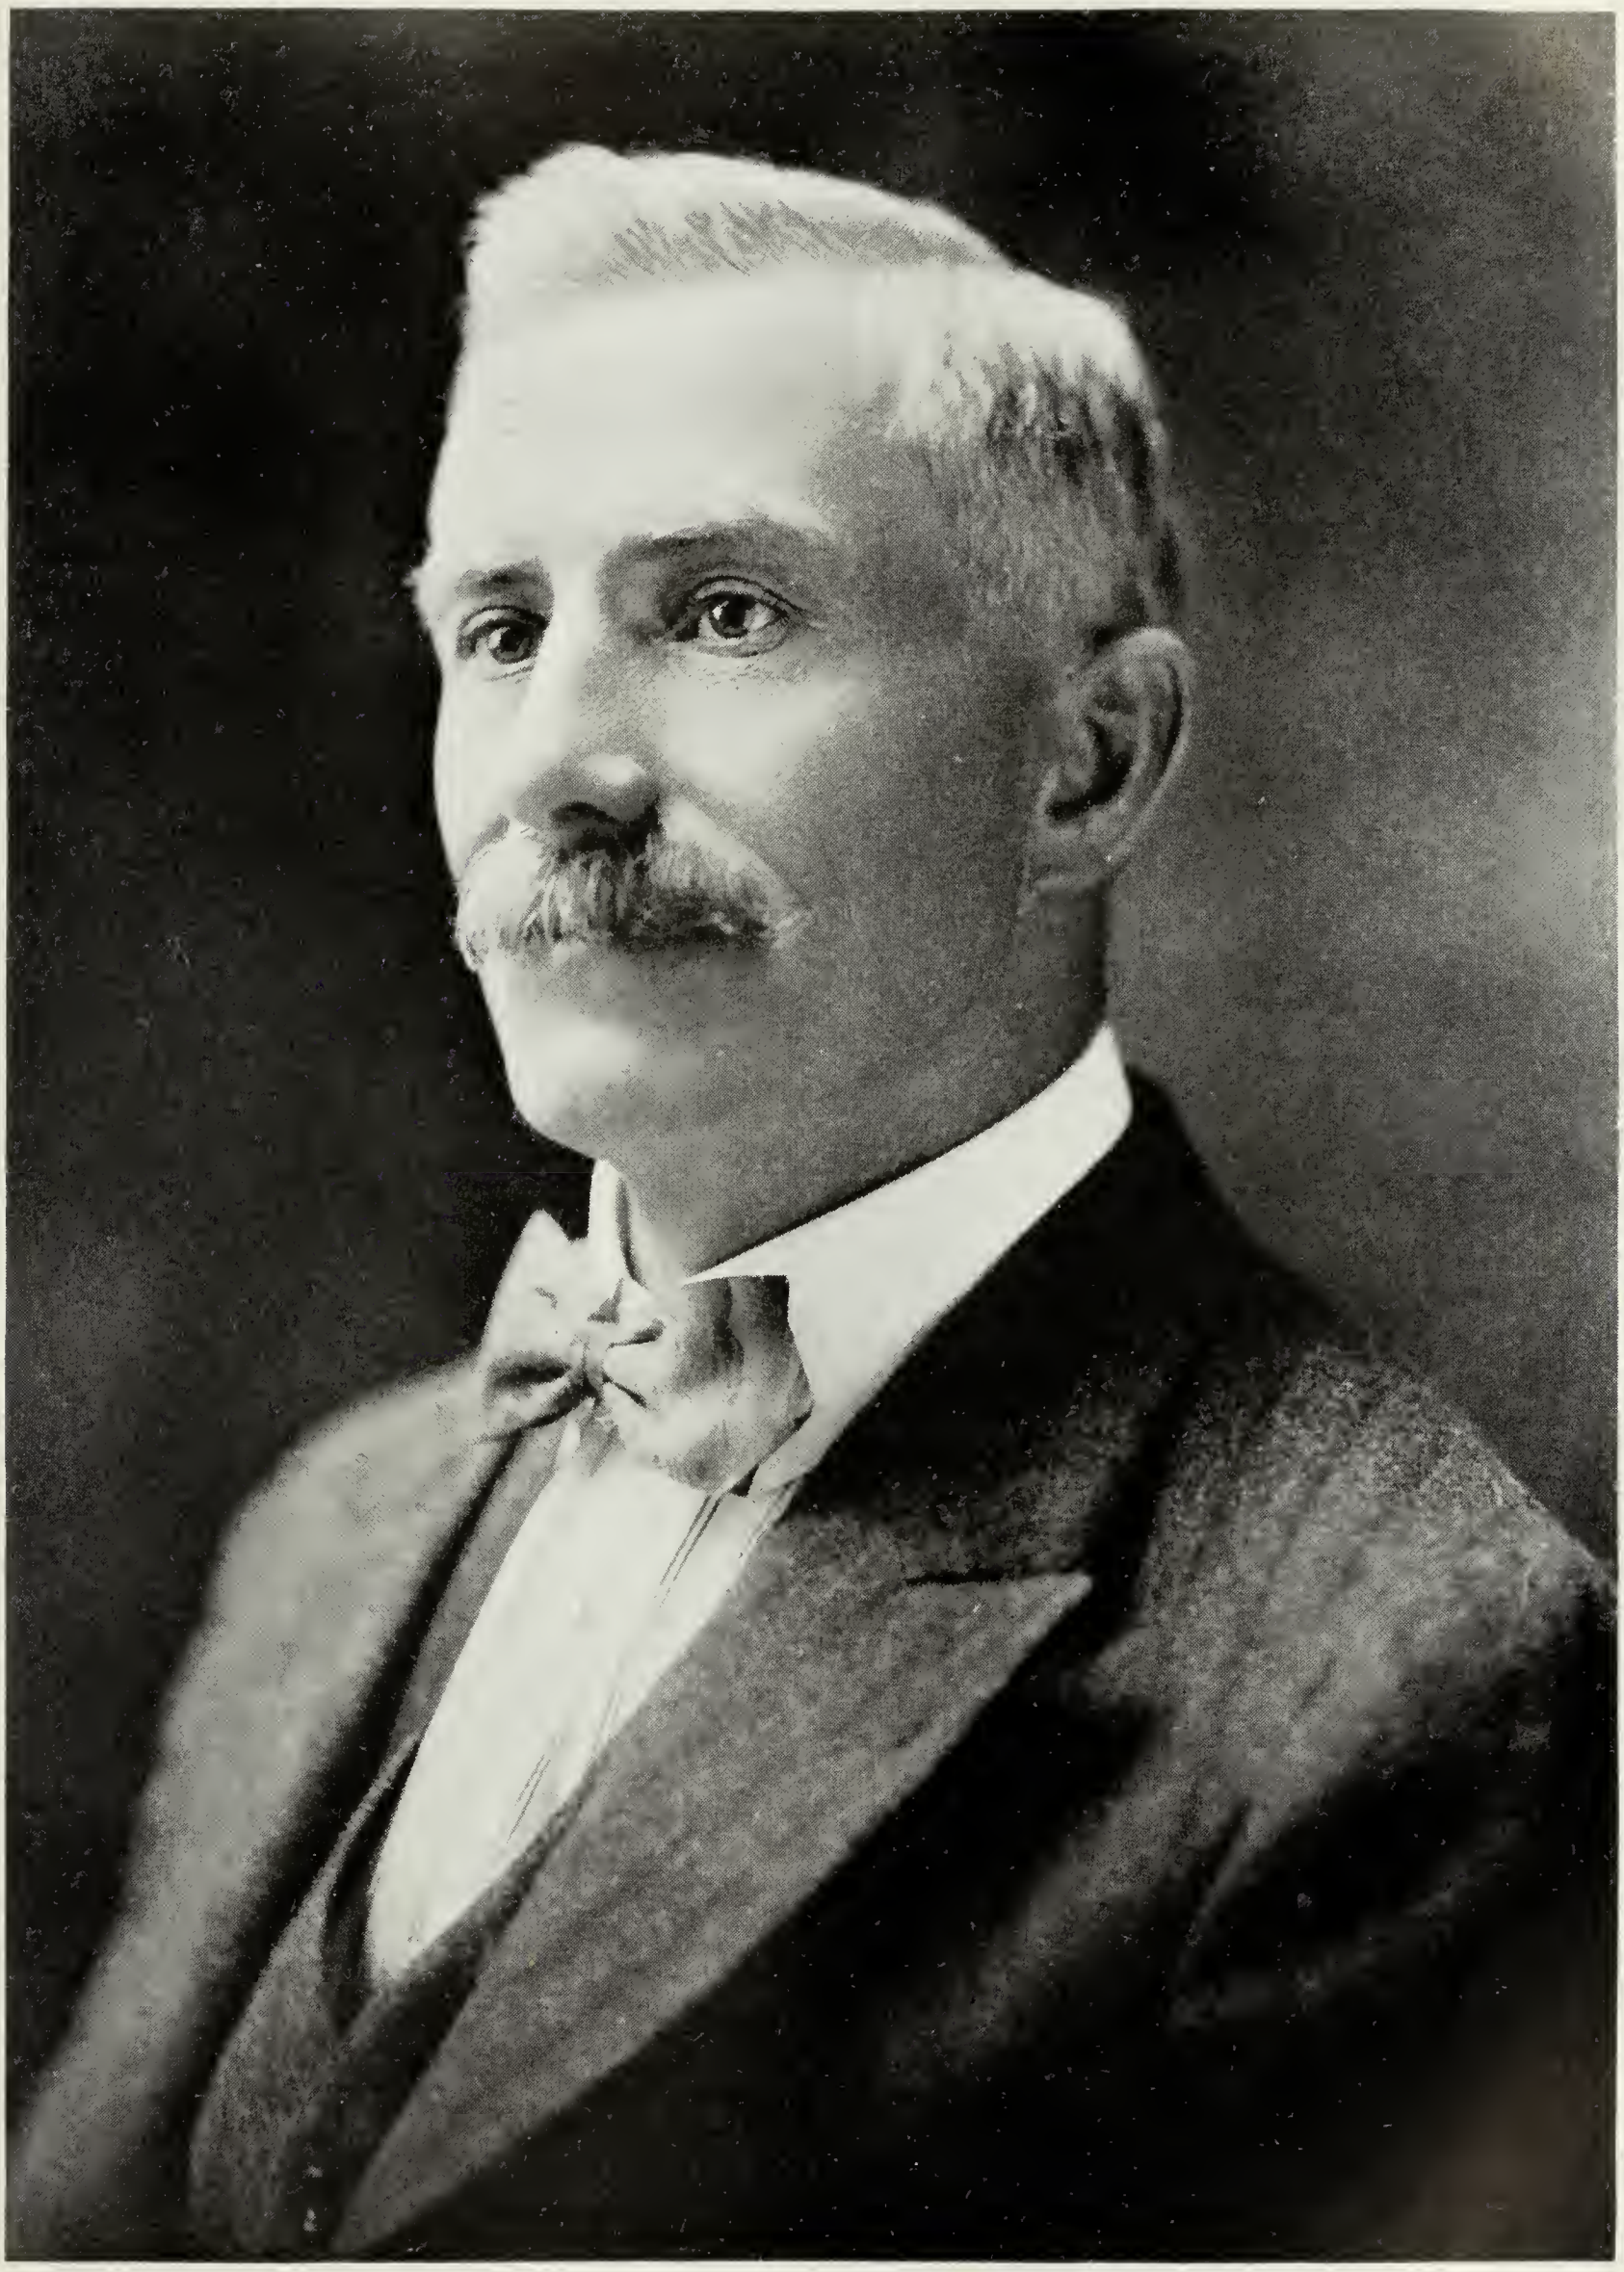
He married, December 7, 1909, in Williston, North Dakota, Miss Annie D. Harper, a resident of McKenzie County, that state. She was born in St. Charles Parish, Louisiana, January 17, 1889, a daughter of the late William Harper. He died several years ago, and his widow, whose maiden name was Mary V. Doxey, married for her second husband William Portwood. Mr. and Mrs. Schaefer have two children, Burns, born in 1912, and James C., born in 1915. A republican in politics, Mr. Schaefer cast his first presidential vote in 1900 for William McKinley. He is a member of the Ancient Order of United Workmen and of the Knights of Columbus. During the World war he belonged to the Richland County Council of Defense and ably assisted in putting the county "over the top" in every drive for war funds.

Michael F. Purcell is commissioner, secretary and treasurer of the Montana Coal Operators Association, with headquarters at Billings. Mr. Purcell has long been prominent in the coal mining industry of the West. He has earned his living in the coal mining and steel and iron industries since he was a small boy. Without opportunity to gain an education, his sheer force of will and determination have put him well toward the front among men of affairs.

It is logically fitting that Mr. Purcell should come from one of the greatest centers of the coal industry of the East—Scranton, Pennsylvania, where he was born May 23, 1867, and where his father, Patrick Purcell, still resides. The latter was born in County Mayo, Ireland, in 1839, and is now living in comfortable retirement at the age of eighty. When a young man he left his home in Ireland and came to the United States, living at Scranton, where he became an ironworker. He was one of the old fashioned puddlers in the iron and steel works. He is a democrat and a Catholic. Patrick Purcell married Catherine Kelly, who was born in County Mayo in 1841, and died in Scranton, Pennsylvania, in 1905. Of their family of six children, Michael is the second. The oldest, John, was a steel worker at Buffalo, New York, and died a victim of the influenza epidemic October 29, 1918. James, the third son, is a government worker in the shipyards at Hoboken, New Jersey. Mary is unmarried, and lives with her father at Scranton. William is a paper cutter and lives at Hoboken, New Jersey, while Agnes, the youngest, is a sister in a convent in Williamsport, Pennsylvania.

Michael F. Purcell did not attend school much after he was eight years old. The fact that he is regarded as a man of superior education, intelligence and judgment is due to a rigid course of self training and experience. When only eight years old he went to work as a slate picker at the coal mines at Scranton. He was thus employed for five years, and later for four years he worked as a puddler in the iron mills of Scranton, and acquired a thorough knowledge of the iron and steel business. For a time he was in a steel mill making ganister for the vessels and cupolas. In 1888 he went into the mines of Pennsylvania for two years and in 1891 was employed at Quintard's Shipyards, working on the engines of the noted cruiser Maine. Following that for two years he was a steel heater in the steel works of Sparrow Point, Maryland, then worked in the mines and telephone business in Scranton for a year. Mr. Purcell came out to Montana in 1895 and for four years was in the coal mines at Belt. He was then transferred to Stockett, Montana, running a drilling machine. He was an influential and popular man among the employes and in 1903 was chosen as the first president of the Mine Workers Association of Wyoming and Montana, being president of District Twenty-two of the United Mine Workers of America. After one year in that office he returned to his regular occupation in the mines for a year, and then was elected a member of the International Board of the United Mine Workers, taking a prominent part in the deliberations of that board until 1912. In the latter year he came to Billings as commissioner and secretary and treasurer of the Montana Coal Operators Association. His offices are in the Securities Building. Mr. Purcell is also director of the Vandor Mining Company.

Politically he is independent, is a member of the Catholic Church, is a third degree Knight of Columbus, being affiliated with Billings Council No. 1259, and is a member of the Loyal Order of Moose,



M. F. Purcell

Ancient Order of United Workmen, and Degree of Honor at Billings.

In 1892, at Kingston, Pennsylvania, he married Miss Annie May, daughter of James and Mary (Comerford) May, both now deceased. Her father was a Pennsylvania miner. Mr. and Mrs. Purcell are proud of their family of seven children, named as follows: James, a student in the University of Montana at Missoula; Michael F., who is member of the Hospital Corps Unit in France; William, connected with the Northern Pacific Railway at Billings; Thomas and John, both employed in a local grocery store; Leo, who attends the Billings High School; and Marie.

Roy J. Cowles. A talented, able and influential member of the Montana bar, Roy J. Cowles has achieved his splendid success by a systematic application of his abilities to the profession of his choice, a profession demanding a large measure of veritable talent and a vast amount of genuine hard work. He was born October 17, 1885, near West Concord, Minnesota, a son of Eddy J. Cowles, and is of pioneer descent, his paternal grandfather, Demarcus L. Cowles, having been one of the very early settlers of Minnesota.

Demarcus L. Cowles was born in the State of New York, a son of Rev. LeRoy J. Cowles, a Free Will Baptist minister of Jamestown, New York. Migrating to Minnesota in early life, he engaged in farming in Dodge County, and while working at the carpenter's trade erected some of the first houses in Mentorville. Eminently patriotic, he was a veteran of the Civil war, and though he invariabiy voted the republican ticket took but little interest in politics. He married Mary Brown, a woman of culture, whose family contained numerous preachers and educators, and into their home the following named children were born: Mrs. W. H. Kellogg, of Flandreau, South Dakota; Eddy J., father of the subject of this sketch; Fred J., a well known nursery man of West Concord, Minnesota; W. E., engaged in farming in Dodge County, Minnesota; and Mrs. Chauncey Ingram, of Woodward, North Dakota.

Born in Minnesota, Eddy J. Cowles received but limited educational advantages, but under his father's instructions became well trained in agricultural pursuits. Beginning life for himself as a farmer, he subsequently took up a homestead claim in Moody County, South Dakota, where he spent seven years, being employed as a farmer and butcher. Returning with his family to Minnesota, he again took up his home at West Concord, and added to his farming enterprises the business of raising pure blooded stock, first breeding Durham and Holstein cattle, but later making a specialty of raising Poland China hogs. He has likewise extensive holdings of land in Montana, a part of which is being developed under the supervision of his son Roy under the irrigation project that is reclaiming much of the land in the vicinity of Fairview.

Eddy J. Cowles married Cora Vanderhyde, a daughter of John and Nellie (Van Horn) Vanderhyde, both of whom were born in Holland. Five children were born of their marriage, as follows: Roy J., the subject of this brief sketch; Nellie, wife of Albert Theda, manager of the Co-operative Elevator at Roundup, Montana; Harry and Harold, twins, engaged in farming near West Concord, Minnesota, the former being on the old home farm and the latter near by; and Margaret, a talented artist and musician of West Concord.

After his graduation from the West Concord High School in 1903 Roy J. Cowles taught school for a year in South Dakota and a year in Minnesota. Subsequently entering Hamline University at St. Paul, Minnesota, he continued his studies in the classical department for a year, and then worked his way through the law department of the University of Minnesota, being variously employed in St. Paul. He was first a clothing salesman for the Plymouth Clothing Company, was afterward clerk for the J. I. Case Threshing Company until the panic of 1907 threw him out of a job, then served as collection clerk for the law firm of Deutsch, Allen & Brading, and completing his law course he opened a collection and real estate office in Minneapolis, in the Security Bank Building.

Although there were no attorneys in the Cowles family, Roy J. Cowles was, mayhap, directed toward the law as a profession through the influence of his grandfather Vanderhyde, who was a wide reader, well informed on politics and history, and was gifted as a talker and debater, while at his home he was encouraged to select a profession, his wish to become a lawyer there meeting with no opposition. Being graduated from the law department of the University of Minnesota in June, 1909, Mr. Cowles was admitted to the Minnesota bar upon his diploma. On January 23, 1913, after a successful experience of four years as a lawyer, he opened the first law office in Fairview, Montana, establishing himself in the office of the Fairview Times, his admission to the Montana bar having been accomplished by recommendations and proof of qualifications.

Although Fairview was then in its infancy, it was a very promising field for the young attorney, and he has since been busily employed. The first court case of Mr. Cowles was one for damages against the Great Northern Railway Company, which had acquired possession to a piece of the right-of-way under the "right of eminent domain." The land involved laid in North Dakota, and comprised seven acres of the proposed yards of the railroad company at Fairview. Mr. Cowles and his associates won the case in the trial court, and it was again won in the Supreme Court of North Dakota.

Among the matters of first importance to the community with which Mr. Cowles has been identified was the county division fight, which was staged in the spring following his arrival. He was one of the formidable opposers of the proposition to divide Dawson County, but the battle was lost and Richland County was formed. He drew up the incorporation papers transforming the Village of Fairview into a city, and served as the first city attorney. As secretary of the local Commercial Club in 1913 he took a prominent part in the adjustment of the differences between the Government and the farmers. He also drew up the papers for the chartering of the Fairview Brick Company, the Albert Hotel Company and the Alling Mercantile Company, and has served as attorney for the Bank of Fairview and for the Security State Bank.

While a student in the University of Minnesota Mr. Cowles formed the acquaintance of Miss Lillian Bennett, whose father, B. E. Bennett, a Norwegian by birth, married Anna Enemark, a native of Denmark, and their marriage was solemnized November 14, 1912. Mrs. Cowles was graduated from the University of Minnesota, where she specialized in history and economics, winning the Bryn Mawr scholarship for that university. During the time she was taking her university work she taught in the Duluth schools, and was principal of the Bellview schools. After her graduation she spent two years in the work of the Associated Charities in Minneapolis. Mr. and Mrs. Cowles have three children: Roderick J., Logan Bennett and William Eddy. During the World war Mr. Cowles was one of the three members of the Legal Advisory Board of the county, and one of the "four minute" speakers. Both Mr. and Mrs. Cowles were active in the battle waged for state-wide prohibition, working in the cause until Montana became a white spot on the map of the United States.

P. E. L. Ludtke. Vigilant, active and sagacious, P. E. Ludtke, of Fairview, is prominently identified with the banking interests of this part of Richland County as president of the Security State Bank, and the sound financial basis that it now rests upon is largely due to his business tact and executive ability. A son of the late August Ludtke, he was born March 14, 1882, at Fairmont, Minnesota, and acquired his early education in the public schools of that city.

Born and reared in Germany, August Ludtke spent his earlier years in his native land. Immigrating with his wife to the United States in 1880, he located in Minnesota, and as a cattle and sheep raiser occupied the range tributary to Fairmont. With the shortening of the range he turned his attention to agricultural pursuits, and on the farm which he cleared and improved both he and his wife spent their remaining years. He married in Germany a Miss Stone, and they became the parents of five sons and three daughters, all of whom survive, P. E., the subject of this sketch, being the youngest child.

Obtaining a practical knowledge of agriculture on his father's farm, P. E. Ludtke, foreseeing the wonderful development of the far West, took up a homestead claim in Douglas County, Washington, erected a shack, broke the necessary land, and selling his crops to good advantage there made his first $1,000, a veritable fortune to him at that time. Receiving his patent in 1904, he sold his ranch and migrated to Alberta, Canada, locating at Pincher Creek, where he opened a clothing store, purchasing his stock with the money he obtained from his Washington efforts. Although Mr. Ludtke's only mercantile experience had been as a clerk in a hardware establishment in Washington, his clothing venture was a winner, and he added a stock of general merchandise. In 1909 he chartered the Bow Island Trading Company Bank, and did his mercantile business under that name, as well as banking. Mr. Ludtke subsequently sold his banking interests to the Bank of British North America, and later, having disposed of his store and stock, crossed the line into the United States. Locating in November, 1914, in Lambert, Montana, he organized the Farmers State Bank of Lambert, which was chartered November 25, 1914, being capitalized at $20,000, and was chosen president of the institution. During the brief period that he was connected with that bank the business was encouraging, its deposits during the first fifteen days of its existence having been $35,000, while a good healthy condition prevailed in all business circles.

Locating in Fairview in June, 1915, Mr. Ludtke purchased the controlling interest in the Security State Bank, a concern that had been founded May 24, 1913, by C. E. Glasspoole, with a capitalization of $20,000. When the institution was turned over to Mr. Ludtke by its founder the deposits were but $12,500, and instead of a surplus and undivided profits the capital stock itself was impaired. Nothing daunted, Mr. Ludtke paid up the bank's obligations and breathed new life into the concern. During the first year of his efficient management as president the bank instead of making an assessment of 20 per cent to pay losses earned 25 per cent profits, and $5,000 was placed in the surplus fund, a showing that bespeaks most forcibly of Mr. Ludtke's financial and executive ability. The officers of the bank are as follows: President, P. E. Ludtke; vice president, R. W. Putnam; second vice president, A. D. Morrill; cashier, H. F. Dundas; assistant cashier, Cora Simons. The directors are Messrs. P. E. Ludtke, R. W. Putnam, A. D. Morrill, H. F. Dundas and W. E. Robb, men of high standing in the business world. Mr. Ludtke is also connected with the First National Bank of Nashua, Montana, as a director, and is a director and vice president of the Citizens State Bank of Arnegard, North Dakota.

Mr. Ludtke married at Pincher Creek, Alberta, March 3, 1908, Miss Mary Gabert, who was born in Walkerton, Ontario, December 31, 1888, a daughter of Charles Gabert. Mr. and Mrs. Ludtke have three children, Charles, Billie and Dorothy. While in Canada Mr. Ludtke retained his American citizenship, and on his return to the United States became identified with the republican party. He has ever been a stanch supporter of American institutions, and during the World war was a willing buyer of bonds. In every drive for war funds his bank took the lead, exhibiting a patriotism worthy of emulation.

Lewis L. Maxson. Endowed with much business intelligence and ability, Lewis L. Maxson has acquired a leading position among the successful merchants of Fairview, and as a member of the City Council advocates and works for those propositions that will be of lasting good to the community. A son of Joseph Edward Maxson, he was born August 19, 1885, in Eldora, Hardin County, Iowa, coming, it is believed, of English ancestry.

His paternal grandfather, Joseph Maxson, was born, reared and educated in Pennsylvania, and during the Civil war served as a soldier in the Union army. A farmer by occupation, he left his native state in early manhood, and after living for a time in Wisconsin moved with his family to Iowa, where he continued his agricultural labors. Subsequently settling in Kansas, he spent the later years of his life in Phillipsburg, where at his death his body was laid to rest. To him and his wife three children were born, as follows: Joseph Edward; Mary, who died unmarried in Kansas; and Dwian S., of Grand Junction, Colorado.

A native of Wisconsin, Joseph Edward Maxson acquired a practical common school education, and was there initiated into the mysteries of farming. He was born in 1851, and not many years after attaining his majority migrated to Hardin County, Iowa, where he bought land and improved a farm. Preferring a business career, he moved with his family to Minneapolis, Minnesota, where he was actively and successfully engaged in mercantile pursuits until his death in 1910. He was a faithful republican in politics, but was never a "joiner," having united with neither church or fraternity. He married in Iowa Miss Mattie West, who was born in that state, a daughter of Walter West, a farmer, and to them two children were born: Warren I., of Glendive, Montana, and Lewis L., the subject of this sketch.

Brought up and educated in Minneapolis, Minnesota, Lewis L. Maxson gained his first knowledge of mercantile transactions in his father's grocery, with which he was identified a number of years. Coming to Montana in search of a favorable location, he settled in Fairview in 1908, and for nearly four years thereafter was employed as a clerk in the Yellowstone Mercantile Company. Establishing himself in business on his own account, Mr. Maxson succeeded to the ownership of the Lougheed Mercantile Company, changing the name of the firm to the Lewis L. Maxson Mercantile Company. Subsequently admitting his brother to partnership, the business was carried on under the name of the Maxson Mercantile Company, which, though the brother has retired from the firm, it still retains. The leading mercantile house of Fairview, the store carries a fine line of general merchandise and is one of the best patronized in this section of Richland County. An excellent manager, upright and honorable in all of his dealings, Mr. Maxson has seen his original business develop into one of comparatively great magnitude, its demands for more commodious quarters having forced him to make three changes of location. The store was situated on State Street, facing the Montana-Dakota line, and the changes have placed it in its present home in the Glasspoole Block.

Exercising his right of homestead, Mr. Maxson proved up a claim in the country just west of Fairview, patented it, and put such improvements upon it as to make it valuable for farming purposes. Representing the Third Ward of Fairview in the City Council, he is now serving his first term in that body, in which the matter of chief importance at this time, outside of the usual routine work, has been the building of much needed sidewalks.

During the epidemic of the Spanish influenza in the fall and winter of 1918-1919 Mrs. Maxson had charge of the emergency hospital established at that time, and by her careful management saved the lives of many of Fairview's citizens who were in the institution as patients. The religious beliefs of Mr. and Mrs. Maxson coincide with those of the Baptist faith. Mrs. Maxson is a member of the Knights and Ladies of the Maccabees, and takes great interest in the order. The Maxson home, a six-room bungalow located on Montana Avenue, was built after plans originated by its owners, and is very conveniently arranged.

JOHN MOHRHERR is enrolled among the early settlers of Fairview who became identified with the community as homesteaders. He came to the locality July 10, 1905, at which time he brought in his family by wagon and arranged to locate them on the relinquishment he purchased of a soldier's widow, Mrs. Wamsley. The family moved into the cabin on the claim, a one-room log house, and this primitive dwelling still stands and marks Mr. Mohrherr's first permanent home in Montana.

He had learned the trade of blacksmith previously, and he brought with him his herd of cattle accumulated during his few years' residence on the Indian Reservation at Poplar. His plans were to prepare for farming and to engage in the stock business here, and his time was given to this work for a year and a half before he again established himself in his trade in the village of Fairview.

Mr. Mohrherr is a native son of Germany, born in the Province of Bavaria, near the Town of Fiissen, the historic treaty-making city closing the Seven Years war. His natal day was the 25th of April, 1867, and he grew up in his native city and served his time in the German army in the artillery. His father was Sebastian Mohrherr, a farmer and a cheese maker, and also a native of Bavaria. It is an original German family, and the ancestry runs back into the early history of that German state.

Sebastian Mohrherr married Barbara Holzmann, a daughter of Augustine Holzmann. This family was also of German stock and indigenous to the locality where John Mohrherr was born. The children of Sebastian and Barbara Mohrherr were five sons and two daughters, and those of them to leave the Fatherland and make their home in the United States were August, who settled in the Thousand Islands, New York, and died there, and John, who became a resident of Fairview, Montana.

John Mohrherr had decided to leave the country of his birth before he entered upon his army service to Bavaria, and he began this duty two years before reaching legal age in order that he could reach America without loss of time. He served his three years in the barracks in Munich, but had no actual war experience with the exception of what he received in the maneuvers, although in 1886 the army was prepared for invasion into Russia to satisfy some political grievance. He was discharged at Munich in the fall of 1888, and he embarked at Hamburg for the United States before the following new year. His voyage to America was made on the ship Amalfy, and twenty-six days were required to reach port at New York. He passed through old Castle Garden and went on to his destination at Germania, Pennsylvania, where a brother lived. He began work there the day after his arrival, first helping to make ice, and during the three months he remained there was occupied at various things, blacksmithing forming a part of his work. He had learned the trade at his native home by serving an apprenticeship from the age of thirteen. From Germania he went to Harrison Valley, Pennsylvania, where he worked a short time in a tan yard, and then went to New York and worked in the Fuller House at Corning, hoping to learn the English language there, for he could not speak or understand a word of the English language when he reached American shores.

While at Corning Mr. Mohrherr had a short experience in a bottling works and then returned to his brother at Germania, Pennsylvania, where he worked as a blacksmith for almost a year, then secured a place as blacksmith in the Atlas Car Shops at Buffalo, New York, and after visiting Niagara Falls started West. Stopping first in Michigan, he hired out as a smith in the swamps in the woods some distance from Saginaw, but disliking this work walked to Sibbewing, wearing out the soles of his shoes on the tramp, spent a couple of weeks working for a farmer, and afterward was employed for two months as a blacksmith in the town. Going on to Chicago, he found work at his trade on South Indiana Avenue, but after a few months went on to Wisconsin and worked at his trade at Sherry one year, next journeyed to Park Falls, and from there went to Cascade Falls, Washington, and spent the winter shoveling snow for the Great Northern Company, which was then building its road west, but for some reason never received his pay for this work. Continuing his wanderings to Seattle, Mr. Mohrherr there met his first misfortune, becoming ill and being without funds, and but for the paying of some outstanding debts in Wisconsin he would have suffered disaster.

After recovering from this misfortune he assisted in building a logging road on the Nocquamme River, and with the completion of that work retraced his steps eastward and for a second time worked at Sherry, Wisconsin, while later he was employed at Butternut, Chippewa Falls and St. Paul, enlisting from the latter place in the regular army. Mr. Mohrherr became a member of Company D, Sixth Cavalry, under Captain Scott, and was sent to Yellowstone Park. He was a blacksmith in addition to his military duties, and served in the Park during his term of enlistment of three years, then took a three months' furlough and received his discharge in Wisconsin.

Having at the close of this period completed nine years' residence in the United States, Mr. Mohrherr returned to Germany for a visit to his former home, but after two months he was back in Wisconsin, where he worked for a time at Ashland and then again took up the westward journey, this time making his first stop at Oneida, South Dakota, where he applied for and received his final citizenship papers. About this time also Mr. Mohrherr felt able to provide for a wife, and having found the lady of his choice in Wisconsin returned there and claimed her. They were married at Chili on November 7, 1898, and he then entered the Indian Service as a general mechanic at the Shoshone Agency, Nevada, began work at the Pyramid Agency of that state, remaining as general mechanic there for 2½ years, and was then transferred to the Poplar Indian Agency of Montana, and spent four years there. On leaving there he located at Fairview and identified himself with the work of civic improvement in this agricultural region.

As a citizen and developer of this locality Mr. Mohrherr built a substantial eight-room residence to succeed his original log cabin, and also erected his barns and made the other necessary improvements to place him on the list of real developers of the county. In the meantime his blacksmith shop has also been a busy place, and he has not failed to respond to the night demands made upon him in the busy seasons. He has sown his land heavily to alfalfa, and his crops are those of the grains raised successfully in this region.

Mr. Mohrherr was one of the first school trustees of Fairview, and was instrumental in the building of the first school and was president of the board for a time. He was also made a member of the first City Council of Fairview, and served with Mayor Newlon in the work of launching the municipal and urban business of the village. The other members of the board during his administration were Mr. Richardson, Len Varco, Robert Donaldson and Jack Nelson. Mr. Mohrherr cast his first vote in 1892, in 1900 he voted for Mr. Bryan, and in 1912 supported Mr. Wilson for presidential election. For many years he has been an active and influential worker in local politics and has served his party as a committeeman.

Mr. Mohrherr married Miss Hilda E. Russell, who was born in Waupun, Wisconsin, February 22, 1870, a daughter of John H. and Mary A. (Reinfsnider) Russell. The father was born in Canada but was reared in the State of New York, and the mother was a native daughter of the Empire State. During his early life Mr. Russell was a railroad engineer, and as a young man was sent to Wisconsin, where he was married. After giving up railroad work he became a stationary engineer in Milwaukee, later moved to the vicinity of Marshfield and engaged in farming, and finally came out to Montana, where his daughter was located, secured a claim and proved it up. There in March, 1915, his wife died, and in the following November he was also called to his final reward.

Eight children have been born to the union of Mr. and Mrs. Mohrherr, namely: Nevada Maebelle, who won a prize as an essayist in the state contest in Montana in 1918, being one of the eight best in the state; Esther, who is an efficient high school student of Fairview; and Lillian, Lowell, Rosemary, Marguerite, Roderick and Joy.

James R. Perkins, M. D., began his Montana career at Fairview in April, 1913. He came to this locality with a knowledge of his profession gained in college, in hospital work and three years of actual practice in North Dakota, and was therefore amply qualified to assume his professional duties in this then new and undeveloped region. Fairview was at that time a village of but a few buildings and the Great Northern Railroad had just been built to this point and he was made its first local surgeon here.

Doctor Perkins is a member of an old New York family. There his grandfather, James H. Perkins, was born, and there he spent his life and passed to his final reward. In his family were two sons, Fred L. and Robert A. Robert A. Perkins served his country as a Union soldier during the war between the North and South, a member of the Third Minnesota Infantry, and was attached to Grant's army. He was several times wounded, and as a result of these injuries he passed away during the residence of the family in Alabama.

Fred L. Perkins was born in the State of New York, devoted his life to agricultural pursuits, and died at Long Prairie, Minnesota, in 1906, at the age of fifty-six. He married at Farmington, Minnesota, Mattie L. Harrison, and she passed away February 12, 1889, leaving two children, a son and daughter, but the latter, Lila A., died in 1899, when but twenty years of age.

The only surviving member of this family, James R. Perkins, was born in Decatur, Alabama, August 24, 1884, but his childhood's earliest recollections are of Minnesota. He was but six years of age when his parents moved North and established their home at Glencoe in that state, where the mother died, and the remainder of the family later moved to Farmington, Minnesota, and ultimately settled at Long Prairie. It was at the last named place that the son grew from boyhood into man's estate. He acquired his higher educational training in Hamline University, where he completed two years of literary work, and then took up the study of medicine in Marquette University at Milwaukee, completing his course in the spring of 1910. But before entering college for professional work he had studied with Doctor Christie of Long Prairie, and he worked his way through medical school. For two years during vacation periods he had charge of the Soldiers' Home Hospital at Minneapolis, and while in college served as an interne at Trinity Hospital, so that when he took up the regular practice of his profession he had established a solid foundation for a future successful career.

Doctor Perkins married at Long Prairie, Minnesota, in October, 1912, Miss Blanche Barber, who was born in that city July 4, 1891, a daughter of William M. and Margaret (Cooper) Barber, who also claimed Minnesota as the state of their nativity. The father is engaged in the abstract business in Long Prairie. A son has been born to the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Perkins, Robert Dean, who was born July 14, 1913. The Perkins home is of their planning and construction and is a bungalow of six rooms. Mrs. Perkins was interested in woman's war work movements and in club work, and has served as a delegate to the state meeting of the Women's Federation.

In the line of his profession Doctor Perkins is a member of the Northwestern Medical Association of North Dakota, of the Montana State Medical Association and of the American Medical Association. He has served two terms as the physician of Richland County and for a similar period as county health officer, being the incumbent of the latter office at the present time. He was the selective service auxiliary examiner for Richland County during the period of the World war, has served three years as a member of the School Board of Fairview, and is now serving his first term as mayor of the town. During his tenure in office sidewalk building has been the matter of chief concern before the Council. His political allegiance is given to the democratic party, and his first presidential vote was cast for Bryan in 1908. He has been a member of the State Central Committee for Richland County since its organization. In his fraternal relations Doctor Perkins is a Master Mason, is a past master of the Ancient Order of United Workmen and is a member of the Elk's Lodge at Williston.

During the recent epidemic of the influenza Doctor Perkins presided over the destinies of the people tributary to Fairview, managed the campaign and ministered to the many hundreds who succumbed to its visitation and lay prostate victims of its attack until his medical skill intervened. The initial cases of the epidemic appeared at Fairview in October, and seem to have emanated from Scobey. The rapidity with which the disease spread early indicated to Doctor Perkins that every home tributary to Fairview might be visited, and in that case the old method of making a personal call to patients as often as medical attention would be needed would be impossible. Accordingly he organized a staff of assistants and nurses, took over a large part of the Albert Hotel, the largest and most available building in the town, and converted it into a hospital for the treatment of all the afflicted within reach. Ambulances were improvised by sand-bagging automobile trucks, and with the report of a case in or out of town the afflicted ones were brought in upon these improvised ambulances and deposited in a good bed in a sanitary room and given "first aid" treatment until Doctor Perkins could minister to them. Mrs. Maxson was placed in charge of the hospital, and her experience and former training rendered her even superior to the demands upon her, and a large part of the success attained in the management and conduct of the temporary infirmary is due to her.

When patients were discharged and cured they were directed to the office of the hospital, where they settled the charges for their treatment with cash or by note, and when the epidemic had passed, the hospital closed and the business finally wound up, the unpaid notes were taken over by the county commissioners as county obligations in case default in payment of any of the notes is made. This method of handling the situation throughout the epidemic saved the lives of hundreds of Richland County people and provided against a heavy expense account against the county. Much credit is given Doctor Perkins for the wonderful work he performed during this period.

Willard A. Leo is serving Fairview as its postmaster, and he has been identified with the life and interests of Montana since 1905. He traces descent to Germany, where his father, Adolphus Leo, was born in the Province of Wurtemberg, and was a youth of seventeen when he severed allegiance with the Fatherland to become a resident of the United States. His first home in this country was in Crawford County, Pennsylvania, which subsequently became the birthplace of his son Willard, and he spent his life as a quiet and industrious farmer, loyally espoused the interests of the country he had adopted as his home, and passed to his final reward on the 27th of April, 1917, at the ripe old age of eighty-one. He gave his political support to democratic principles and was a Baptist in religious affiliations. In Crawford County he was united in marriage with Hester A. Maloney, whose parents had come from Ireland, sailing from County Cork to the United States, and the farm in Pennsylvania on which both Mrs. Leo and her son Willard was born in Crawford County was cleared by Mr. Maloney. Mrs. Leo Died in February, 1899, after becoming the mother of four children, namely: Margaret, whose home is still in Crawford County; Willard A., the postmaster of Fairview; Mrs. Myrtle Chase, whose home is in Meadville, Pennsylvania; and Conrad C., also a resident of Meadville.

The birth of Willard A. Leo occurred September 13, 1877, and on the farm in Crawford County, Pennsylvania, where he was born he spent his boyhood days, attending the nearby district schools and the township high school, and on the 23d of June, 1898, graduated from the Edinboro, Pennsylvania, Normal School. With this excellent training as a foundation for his future life work he became a teacher in the public schools of Pennsylvania, and in May, 1901, left the state of his birth to enter upon a larger career in the new Northwest.

Making his way to South Dakota, he was for two years thereafter the principal of the Mound City schools, and a similar period was then devoted to homesteading as well as teaching. In September, 1905, Mr. Leo arrived in Montana, at the now Town of Poplar, and became principal of the public schools there and continued in that position during the years 1905-6-7. In June of the latter year he came to Fairview and became an employe in the mail service, and on the 10th of August, 1907, was appointed postmaster as the successor of Frank M. Robinson. He has served in that office through three presidential administrations, his first appointment coming from Colonel Roosevelt, and his last two from President Wilson. Since assuming charge of the office Mr. Leo has witnessed a wonderful development in the service and in the growth of the mail, and in that time two rural routes have been established.

Mr. Leo met and married Miss Julia Quartermass near Fairview, and their wedding occurred on the 8th of September, 1914. She was born in Oshkosh, Wisconsin, May 19, 1886, a daughter of George and Dolly S. (Smith) Quartermass. The Quartermass family trace descent to England, and the American founder first located in Erie County, Pennsylvania. The name was subsequently carried into Wisconsin, and in that state George H. Quartermass passed his life as a farmer and died there. In his family were one son and a daughter, the former being Harry Quartermass of Miami, Florida. Mrs. Leo received a high school education in Oshkosh, and came to Montana in company with her mother and brother. They became homesteaders near Girard, Montana. A daughter, Margaret Dollie, and a son, Quentin, have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Leo.

Carlos P. Collins, the manager and a partner in the Alling Mercantile Company of Fairview, and also known as a banker, was born in the Green Mountain State of Vermont and is a son of a Vermont farmer, Amos P. Collins. The latter was born in 1823, and died in San Jose, California, in 1910. He married in his early life Lucinda Sawyer, who was also born in Vermont, a daughter of Plant Sawyer, a farmer there. Mrs. Collins passed away at Waverly, Iowa. The children in their family were: Carlos P., the Fairview business man; Evelyn A., who married Moses Littlefield, of San Jose, California; Oscar A., of Merced, California; Charles F., of Visalia, California; and Ira D., of Waterloo, Iowa.

Carlos P. Collins, born on the 16th of August, 1851, spent his early life amid rural environments, obtained a common school training, supplemented by one term in an academy, and was twenty-four years of age when he left the parental home to engage in farming for himself in Iowa, the family having in the meantime migrated from their eastern home to Wisconsin and finally to Bremer County, Iowa. After five years as a farmer Mr. Collins began work for a lumber and farm machinery firm, first as salesman and afterward as manager of the business. But the lure of the great Northwest settled upon him and he made his way to Grand Forks, North Dakota, spending six years as a dealer in machinery on his own account there.

It was about twenty years ago, through the influence of his son Roy, that Carlos P. Collins first became attracted to the Yellowstone Valley, and on the 12th of May, 1901, he added his citizenship to Montana and entered upon his western career, a career that has proved successful and numbered him among the leading citizens and business men of his community. He came into the country as a stockman and established his headquarters five miles southwest of Fairview. This country at that time was a veritable wilderness of grass, unoccupied and uncultivated. Becoming the successor of George Hoover in a cattle and horse ranch, Mr. Collins associated himself with his son Roy D., then just attaining to manhood's estate, and the two conducted business under the name of C. P. Collins and Son. Their stock in the beginning comprised some sixty head of calves and forty head of horses, running under the brand "H triangle H," but the band was subsequently increased to several hundred head. Their first improvements comprised the pioneer log shack and shelter for their stock, but after a time a $3,000 residence superseded the log shack, a splendid barn was erected, miles of fencing were built, and when the valley was thrown open to settlement three quarter sections were entered by the partners. Additions have since been made to this acreage from time to time and title acquired until they now own 1,800 acres in one body. Eleven years were devoted by the senior Mr. Collins to the culmination of this undertaking. He then left the property in the charge of his son Roy, who had become widely known over this part of the state as a stock man. The partnership has since been dissolved. The ranch was inaugurated with native cattle and horses, Herefords and Percherons, both of which they eventually bred up into high strains and in time a small bunch of pure bred Herefords were acquired, and the feature of the ranch changed somewhat more toward a breeding place for fine Herefords than a beef producing proposition as in the former days.

With the advent of the settlers the Collinses, father and son, were forced to engage in farming and ultimately developed one of the extensive farms of the region. Three hundred acres are now under cultivation, and wheat, oats, barley, alfalfa and sweet clover have been tried and found to yield well with favorable seasons. The ranch has also become one of the shipping points of the valley, the horses going largely to Western North Dakota and the cattle to Chicago.

When C. P. Collins left the ranch in 1913 he became a partner and the manager of the Alling Mercantile and Lumber Company at Fairview. That was the date also of the establishment of the enterprise, and at that time all the ground in front of their office was a flax field, the railroad had just been built into the town, and Fairview in all particulars was indeed an embryo town. The Alling Company has handled building material and machinery, and as a lumber concern it has contribtued greatly toward the upbuilding of a wide scope of country.

Mr. Collins has also been identified with banking at Fairview, becoming connected with the Bank of Fairview as a stockholder and is now serving as its vice president. He took an active part in the county division movement, espousing the cause of Richland County, was elected one of the county commissioners when the division question was submitted to a vote, and had as colleagues on the Board W. B. Gibbs and John Bowden. With the expiration of his term of service Mr. Collins retired from the office. He has never been an active worker in political matters, although his political convictions are pronounced. It was in the year of 1872 that he cast his first presidential vote, supporting Ulysses S. Grant, and national republican candidates have ever since received his support and endorsement.

At Horton, Iowa, on the 6th of March, 1873, Carlos P. Collins married Miss Susan A. Dyer, who was reared in Racine, Wisconsin, her native state, and she was one of the family of four children of William Dyer. She received a liberal educational training, including a college course, and became a public school teacher and was following that vocation at the time of her marriage. A large family of children has blessed the union of Mr. and Mrs. Collins, including: William A., who is engaged in the laundry business at Grand Forks, North Dakota; Etta May, the wife of Melvin Edwards, of Crawford, Nebraska; Roy D., who for many years was his father's business associate and is now superintending his own ranch interests near Fairview; and Arthur H., also engaged in farming near Fairview. Roy D. Collins married Lillian Boyes, and they have three children, Mildred, Edith and Carlos. Arthur H. Collins, who married Anna Harrison, is an active and extensive farmer just west of Fairview. He grew up under the wise tutelage of his father and brother Roy, and thus equipped himself for the responsibilities he now carries.

Roswell L. Branson, the proprietor of the Hotel Nashua, is numbered among Montana's early day cowboys and permanent settlers. He is strictly a man of the West, born at Walla Walla, Washington, August 8, 1864, and he was reared as a farmer lad there, where the family home had been established in 1858. His father, Thomas Branson, was a native of Illinois, and crossed the plains to the Pacific Coast country with his parents. None of the incidents of that early westward journey are now available.

Thomas Branson led a company of volunteers at the Willow Creek fight at the time of the Nez Perce outbreak, and the wound which he received at that time caused his death four years later. During the days of pack freighting into that country he was a packer, freighting goods from the Dalles, Oregon, across the country to Walla Walla and other inland points. When he finally settled down to a permanent livelihood it was as a farmer, and his home was ten miles south of Walla Walla. He entered land there and prospered as a ranchman, and at the time of his death owned 4,400 acres, numerous cattle and large bands of horses, and his success made him one of the conspicuous ranchmen of that region.

Thomas Branson married Amanda Church, who was born in County Clare, Ireland, a daughter of Andrew Church. She was brought to the United States when a child of twelve years, and the family crossed the plains and settled in the Willamette Valley of Oregon. Mrs. Branson was reared there on a farm, and she survived her husband many years. Her children were as follows: Otis P., of Lewiston, Idaho, Roswell L., whose home is in Nashua, Montana; Alfred M., of Kalispell, Montana; Fannie, who became the wife of Almon Jones, and died in Umatilla County, Oregon; Ella, who married John Gratz and died in Arizona; Mazina died as Mrs. Bird at Baker City, Oregon; Alta married a Mr. Musgrove, of Walla Walla Valley; Charles E., of Glacier Park, Montana. Mrs. Branson married for her second husband Charles Lewis, and her final home was at Lewiston, Idaho.

Roswell L. Branson was a pupil in the district schools near the Branson home in Walla Walla Valley until he entered Huntsville, Washington, College, and he pursued a business course at Helena after he came to Montana. Leaving home with his brother Alfred, they started out on horseback with little knowledge of their destination, knowing only that they were on their way somewhere. At Malhuren, Oregon, they overtook Charley Flowers with his band of horses, and they hired out to Mr. Flowers to help drive the stock through to Bozeman. After reaching Bozeman the Branson brothers hired to Charkes Ancny, of the firm of Cruse and Ancny, to handle stock on the company's ranch on Prairie Elk, near Bozeman, spending three years there. They then crossed over to Lewiston, where Alfred Branson entered the service of McNamara, of Roswell, and became connected with the Diamond outfit, belonging to Henry Sieben. The Diamond Company was later consolidated with the Pioneer Cattle Company, owned by Davis, Houser, Stewart and Conrad Kohrs, and during a period of six years Roswell L. Branson worked under the orders of Mr. Kohrs on their Malta ranch.

While associated with that famous cattle company Mr. Branson came into intimate contact with numerous young men doing duty as cow punchers from every point of the compass. Among the more noted ones may be mentioned Puck Powell, who has since given many years of his life to the office of sheriff of Valley County. Another was Kid Curry, who ended his notorious career as a train robber, and S. C. Small, who served as an official of Valley County for many years and finally became identified with the Milk River Valley Bank as its cashier. Johnny Edward, who finally became a power in republican politics in Montana, was another of the men of that day who slept on the ground and fed at the "chuck" wagon with the boys. He was a Texas man and came into Montana about the time the Branson brothers became cowboys in this state.

When Roswell Branson left the employ of Conrad Kohrs he began clerking and tending bar in the Coleman Hotel at Glasgow. Following this business experience he began ranching for himself at Whatley Siding east of Glasgow, in partnership with Sky C. Small, and they ran their stock under the brand "MU" for two years, when Mr. Branson bought his partner's interest and continued ranching until 1908. At that time he disposed of his ranching interests and entered the hotel business in Nashua.

This new venture made him the proprietor of the Nashua Hotel, a building 20 by 32 feet, and a two-story structure 120 by 32 feet has taken the place of the original building. Mr. Branson has taken an active part in the development of Nashua from a mere hamlet to an incorporated town, has also assisted in the work of opening roads through the Fort Peck reservation, and in making the region of Valley County passable for tourists and local travelers. In his political affiliations he supports the democratic party, voting for Mr. Cleveland for his first presidential candidate. Fraternally he is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Knights of Pythias.

Mr. Branson was married while in Glasgow, Montana, July 20, 1897, to Miss Rosa Stiler, who was born in Minnesota in December, 1876. A son, Earl Otis, has been born to bless their union, and he is a pupil in the Nashua schools.

OLE N. OLSON. When he left school the first employment to which Ole N. Olson turned his hand was in a lumber yard in Minnesota, and while he has had some other experiences the lumber business may be regarded as his permanent occupation and vocation. He is now proprietor of the Olson and Nelson Lumber Company of Oswego, Montana, and has been a resident of this state for a decade.

He was born in Freeborn County, Minnesota, October 16, 1876. His father, Nels Olson, was a native of Hadeland, Norway, a farmer's son, acquired a fair education, and came to the United States alone at the age of eighteen. After working for wages as a farm hand for a time in Freeborn County he bought a tract of undeveloped land, made it into a good farm with substantial improvements, and still occupies it as a home. He is now past seventy-two years of age. He had not been in America long when he declared his intentions of citizenship, and began voting as a republican before his final papers were issued. His life and conduct have proved him as earnest and loyal as a native born American. He is a member of the Lutheran Church, in which he was reared. His wife, Henrietta Peterson, was born at Janesville, Wisconsin, a daughter of Hendrick Peterson. To their marriage were born the following children: Ole N.; Annie, wife of Albert Knutson, of Zahl, North Dakota; Ida, wife of Otto Prignitz, of Clear Lake, Iowa; Mary, Mrs. Arne Sandvig, of Hartland, Minnesota; and William, on the home farm in Minnesota.

Ole N. Olson lived on his father's farm to the age of about seventeen. He had a high school education, also attended Luther Academy at Albert Lea, Minnesota, and in the following two years gained a practical and detailed knowledge of the lumber business with the Standard Lumber Company of Hartland, beginning his service as second trick man. After some further experience in a hardware store at Hartland he went out to North Dakota and took up a homestead thirty miles north of Williston. He was then unmarried, and his life on the plains was a lonesome one. His home was a shack 10 by 14 feet, and while doing the necessary work of development on the land he supported himself with provisions by employment in a store. He still owns his claim, though he has not occupied it since he secured the title. For over two years he was in the employ of the Bovey-Shute Lumber Company at Williston, and then entered the service of the Grogan-Robinson Company of that city. This company had a chain of yards, and on March 1, 1910, Mr. Olson came to Montana and took charge of the yard at Culbertson. He remained there several years, and left the company when he entered business for himself as a partner with Samuel S. Nelson of Brockton, Montana, who died there. September 1, 1914, the Olson and Nelson Lumber Company was established at Oswego, and Mr. Olson has been in charge of the business and is now proprietor. He also is a partner in the Olson and Nelson Lumber Company at Frazer, Montana.

At Culbertson November 2, 1913, he married Miss Anna Kalberg. She was born in Norway September 6, 1884, and came to the United States with her parents at the age of eight years. The Kalberg family first located at Grand Forks, North Dakota, where her father followed his trade as a painter, but since 1909 has lived on a homestead in McKenzie County, North Dakota. Mrs. Olson was the third in a family of three sons and three daughters and she acquired a good public school education and met her husband while a telephone operator at Culbertson. Mr. and Mrs. Olson have a daughter, Orpha Annabel, born June 14, 1918.

Carl L. Brattin is a well known practicing lawyer and has the distinction of being the second lawyer to locate in what is now Richland County. His pioneer office was located in the townsite building, and when the Farmers State Bank, now the Yellowstone Valley Bank and Trust Company, was built he moved across the street and occupied rooms in the new building, where he has since been located. He graduated from the Nashville, Michigan, High School in 1905 and from the law department of the University of Michigan before coming West in 1910.

In beginning his practice here Mr. Brattin's early attention and interests were focused upon the claims of the settlers to a large area of the lands claimed by the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, the settlers claiming the lands under entry from the Government. They arranged with Mr. Brattin to represent their interests in their contest with the railroad company, and through litigation he finally secured Government titles to their entries. After the settlement of this important matter he took up the general practice of law, and has advised and counseled in many important matters of public as well as private concerns. He was associated in the movement to incorporate the Town of Sidney, and served in a similar capacity in the creating of Richland County. His practice has won him a large clientele in probate work and as counsel in litigation over claims in the Federal Court.

Mr. Brattin is further identified with Sidney's interests as a member of its City Council, which body he helped to incorporate. He served as the first public administrator of the County of Richland, was later made the county attorney, and in many other ways has officiated in official capacities for the upbuilding and improvement of Sidney and Richland County. He is a stockholder and director in the Sidney National Bank and the Pioneer Loan and Realty Company, and is attorney for both the Sidney National Bank and the Yellowstone Valley Bank and Trust Company. He is a director in the Security Abstract Company and of the Sidney Feed and Transfer Company, and aided materially in the development of the Water Users Electric Company. He was serving as a director of the last named corporation when it was sold to the Mountain States Telephone and Telegraph Company. Mr. Brattin was one of the directors of the Sidney Light and Power Company before it was sold to the Eastern Montana Light and Power Company. He is the secretary and treasurer of the Sidney Deaconess Hospital Association, and is also a member of its board of trustees.

Mr. Brattin has been identified with the life and interests of Montana throughout the entire period of his professional career. But he was born in the State of Michigan, at Hastings, March 16, 1887, a son of Frank J. Brattin, a lumber merchant at Shepherd, Michigan, where he is associated in business with a son. He was born September 11, 1861, and in June he was admitted to the practice of law. In March, 1911, he came out to Montana, fitted with the code practice, which enabled him to follow the profession in the western states, and he had been persuaded to make Montana his professional fighting ground for the future through relatives who had resided in the state, although the young lawyer settled among strangers in Sidney. The town at that time contained perhaps 250 people, and, as above noted, he was the second lawyer to engage in practice in Richland County.

It was at Glendive, Montana, that Mr. Brattin met the lady who afterward became his wife, Miss Mertie Redding, although their wedding occurred at Bloomingdale, Michigan, June 27, 1912. Mrs. Brattin was born in VanBuren County, Michigan, September 27, 1887, a daughter of Edman S. and Clara (Baughman) Redding, in whose family were four children, the three sons being Harley T., Allen C. and Max A. Redding, all of Sidney. Mrs. Brattin is a graduate of the Gobles, Michigan, High School, and she taught music before her marriage. Mr. Brattin was the first candidate to take the third degree in Masonry in the Lower Yellowstone Valley Lodge, and is a charter member of that lodge. He also belongs to Yellowstone Chapter No. 5, Royal Arch Masons, and to Damascus Commandery No. 4, Knights Templar, both at Glendive, and to Algeria Temple of the Mystic Shrine at Helena. Mr. and Mrs. Brattin are both members of the Eastern Star, of which she is the secretary of the Sidney Chapter. She was the youngest noble grand of the Rebekah degree of Odd Fellows in the entire State of Michigan. Mr. Brattin's chief connection with war auxiliary work was as chairman of the Speakers Bureau of the Ninth Federal Reserve District of Richland County. He was also field examiner and inspector for the War Risk Bureau of the Treasury Department for Richland County, was United States Government appeal agent for the county, was chairman of the Legal Advisory Board for the county, and was in charge of one of the Young Men's Christian Association drives for Richland County.

Joseph Brooks. It is not difficult to identify Joseph Brooks in the citizenship of Livingston. At least half a dozen important relationships might be recalled to indicate his usefulness as a member of the community, and the list doubtless could be greatly extended by those most intimately acquainted with his career.

And at that Mr. Brooks is still a very young man. He was born August 4, 1880, less than forty years ago, in Lancashire, England. His father, Thomas Brooks, now living at Livingston at the age of seventy-two, was born at Manchester, England, in 1847. He was an English coal miner, and first came to the United States in 1886, spending some time in a coal mining district in Iowa. He then went back to England and brought over his family and soon afterward went to the coal mining district of Timberline, in Gallatin County, Montana. He came to Park County in 1896 and for the past fifteen years has been employed in the Northern Pacific Railway shops at Livingston. He is a republican, is affiliated with Bozeman Lodge, Knights of Pythias, and a member of the International Association of Machinists. In Lancashire, England, in February, 1870, Thomas Brooks married Elizabeth Taylor. She was born in Lancashire in 1849. Elizabeth, the oldest of their children, is the wife of J. W. Labertew, a telegraph operator at Bozeman; Nathan is connected with the DuPont Powder Company at Ramsey, Montana; Joseph is the third in age, while May, the youngest, is the wife of R. V. Pfiel, an architect at Minneapolis.

Joseph Brooks

Joseph Brooks received his first common school privileges in Gallatin County, and later attended school in Park County, including the county high school through the junior year. He left school in 1897 and the following nine years was learning and working at the jeweler's trade at Livingston. In the meantime he had become interested in politics, and had built up a large acquaintance and following. In 1906, when twenty-six years of age, he was elected county treasurer of Park County, and by re-election in 1908 served two terms. In 1910 he was chosen police magistrate of Livingston and filled that office for two years, 1911-13. While he has filled other public positions since, Mr. Brooks, since retiring from the magistrate's office, has been busily engaged in the real estate business, and the Brooks Realty Company is now one of the most important in its line in Southern Montana, handling city and ranch properties, loans and writing insurance for about fifteen standard companies. The offices of the Brooks Realty Company are in the Strand Theater Building. Mr. Brooks also owns a modern home at 112 South Third Street and other local real estate.

Mr. Brooks is unmarried and has been able to devote the best energies and talents of his accumulated experience and wisdom to business and public affairs. He served three years as secretary of the Park County Agricultural Association, from 1914 to 1917. He has also been president of the Municipal Ownership League, devoted to the task of acquiring waterworks for the city of Livingston. He is a member of the Park County Chamber of Commerce. In 1915 he was also appointed United States land commissioner at Livingston, and in that office as well as in other capacities he has done much to advertise and promote the best interests of Southern Montana agriculture.

As a republican he was elected a member of the Legislature in 1916 and reelected in 1918 and 1920, serving in the 15th, 16th and 17th sessions. In the former session he was a member of the committee on appropriations, fish and game, and in the 16th and 17th sessions was chairman of the fish and game committee. He was responsible for the legislation which gave Park County a state hatchery. Perhaps the most interesting part of his legislative record, and the one which establishes his reputation for independence when the best interests of the state are at stake, was his voting with two other fellow republican members to sustain the veto of Governor Stewart of House Bill No. 47 creating a permanent tax commission. One of the grounds for the veto was that the members of the commission were named in the bill instead of being subject to appointment by the Governor. Mr. Brooks gave his reason for sustaining this veto as follows: "I voted with the democrats because as a good republican I advocate sensible legislation which will promote the best interests and welfare of the state. Passage of such measures which seek to rob the Governor of his appointive power would create a dangerous precedent. Such a precedent might be followed when democrats had control of the Legislature if a republican was elected governor."

Mr. Brooks is a talented musician, and for the past twelve years has been director of the Gateway City Band. His individual instrument is the cornet. He is a member of the American Federation of Musicians. He is active in Masonry, being affiliated with Livingston Lodge No. 32 Ancient Free and Accepted Order of Masons; a member of Livingston Consistory No. 1 of the Scottish Rite and has served as master of Livingston Lodge of Perfection and as master of the Rose Croix. He is also affiliated with Algeria Temple of the Mystic Shrine at Helena, and is past exalted ruler of Livingston Lodge No. 246, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. His church membership is Episcopal.

James J. Michels. While for several years past Mr. Michels has been owner of a general mercantile establishment at Archer, his most constructive efforts in Sheridan County have been put forth as a farmer and rancher. His experiences should be described not only for the credit they reflect on Mr. Michels, but also for the encouraging lessons they yield for the farming interests of that locality.

Mr. Michels, who came into this region of Montana ten years ago, was born in Morton County, North Dakota, July 18, 1873. Both his father and grandfather were named James. Grandfather James was of Scotch parentage, was a grain merchant at Elmira, New York, and was accidentally killed while loading grain aboard a boat. James Michels, Sr., married Miss O'Hare, and they were the parents of two children, James and Libbie, the latter Mrs. George Gibson of Utica, New York.

James Michels, Jr., father of the Archer rancher and business man, was born October 3, 1844, in Corning, New York, and is now a retired farmer of Benson County, North Dakota. He gave about twenty years to the service of the Government as a soldier, first as a volunteer in the Union army during the Civil war. He was a member of the Twenty-second New York Artillery during the last three years of the war. He was in some of the big battles, including Chancellorsville and the Wilderness, and was at Appomattox when Lee's army surrendered. After the war he re-enlisted at Hart's Island, New York Harbor, and went with his company to Havana, Cuba, then to Galveston and to Fort Van Houston, Texas, for a time was stationed at Fort Worth, and, still in the army, came north to Fort Rice, North Dakota, and was at different posts in that region until 1882, when he received his honorable discharge at Fort Totten.

On leaving the army James Michels entered a homestead, on which he has lived for nearly forty years. He also entered heartily into the spirit of community life, was elected one of the first Board of County Commissioners of Benson County, was twice elected as a republican to the House of the North Dakota Legislature, served twenty years as a member of the school board and eight years as township assessor. These facts serve to measure the true worth and value of his citizenship and character. He is affiliated with the Masons and Odd Fellows and religiously leans towards the Presbyterian denomination. While in Virginia as a Union soldier he met Miss Ellen Riley, a Pennsylvania lady, and they were married after the war. She was born at Belfast, Ireland, daughter of Hugh Riley, a native of the same city. She died January 9, 1901, and was the mother of the following children: James J.; Edward V., of Oyon, Alberta, Canada; Violet H., wife of W. H. Mummery, of Utica, Michigan; and Charles Arthur, who is county agent at Shelby, Montana.

James J. Michels acquired his early education in the public schools of a country district in Benson County, North Dakota, later attended a school for traction engineers at Fargo, and remained at home helping his father on the farm until he was twenty-three. He then took up farming for himself, and when the field work did not require his presence he operated tractors and stationary engines.

Mr. Michels left North Dakota and came to Montana March 27, 1910. He had made some progress toward material prosperity, and brought with him to the new country four small horses, a plow, a wagon and about $200 of borrowed money. After proving up his claim he owned twelve head of horses, had his farm and improvements, twenty-three head of cattle and was in debt less than $400.

He settled in section 6, township 23, range 53, his location being near Archer, one of the villages on the Scobey branch of the Great Northern Railroad. He did the work of improvement and development through three years necessary to acquire title. His experience as a grain raiser while on the claim encouraged him to believe in the reliability of this region of the Northwest as an agricultural country. His home on the claim was a modest frame building of three rooms, subsequently enlarged to four, and he also put up a barn and other stock shelter. He also ran horses and cattle on the range under the brand "A six bar."

When Mr. Michels left his homestead he moved to Archer and entered general merchandising on October 3, 1913. He was the active and personal head of the business until 1917, and still owns the store, though its management is in other hands. Mr. Michels for the past three years has resumed farming, operating on the Fort Peck Reservation, where he leased two sections of raw land. He prepared it for occupancy by the erection of a 1½ story residence 16 by 24 feet, with barns and cattle sheds, granary and blacksmith shop, investing about $3,000 in lumber and material for these improvements. During the past three years he has broken up 1,080 acres and has devoted the land to flax and wheat. The results obtained make a commendable and progressive showing, indicating what is possible in both good and bad years. The first year he had 600 acres in cultivation and threshed 1,960 bushels of flax. The second, 960 acres were divided among three crops, and he obtained 2,600 bushels of flax, 5,700 bushels of wheat, 576 bushels of oats. In 1919, the great drought year, when so many farmers failed utterly in their crops, Mr. Michels threshed 4,224 bushels of flax, 3,600 bushels of wheat and 530 bushels of oats off the same area of land he had before. In addition he had 2,500 bushels of unthreshed oats. These figures, considering the high prices for grain and flax in 1919-20, may be allowed to speak for themselves. Mr. Michels has also entered vigorously into the cattle business, and plans to concentrate his attention upon the breeding of pedigreed Durhams. He raises horses for farm use, the heavy draft and Percheron strain.

Mr. Michels came to Montana from Minnewaukan, North Dakota. His only fraternal connection is with the Odd Fellows Lodge at that point. He began voting as a republican, first supporting Major McKinley, and has been affiliated with that party ever since. He was interested in the war program of the nation, and responded in proportion to his means to the various calls for funds.

In North Dakota, December 27, 1901, Mr. Michels married Miss Anna C. Fugle, who was born in Becker County, Minnesota, September 10, 1879, daughter of John and Mary (Olson) Fugle. Her father, a native of the Mohawk Valley of New York State and of German ancestry, came out to North Dakota in 1892 and is a farmer at Devil's Lake. Mrs. Michels was educated in the common schools, the Devil's Lake High School, and taught a term in the country before her marriage. She is the oldest of eight children, and her own family number ten, Vernon J., Lloyd J., Leah A., Roy E., Andrew L., Frederick E., Charles F., Clair Albert, Joseph M. and Elsie A.

Roger Louis Strobel, who for a number of years was one of the officials of the American Smelting and Refining Company at Helena, in 1920 organized and is actively associated with the Barnett-Strobel Company, one of the important industrial concerns of the capital city.

Mr. Strobel is a highly trained technical man, and has spent many years in the mining and smelting districts of the West. He was born at Cincinnati, Ohio, June 5, 1885. His father, A. C. Strobel, was born in the same city in 1850, spent part of his youth at Chicago, where he attended school, and after his marriage lived at Cincinnati, where he was secretary and treasurer of the Rudolph Wurlitzer Company, a nationally known house of musical instrument makers. In 1902 he moved his family to Salt Lake City, where he managed a retail musical merchandise business. He died while on a trip to New York City in 1906. He was a republican in politics. His wife was Marguerite Farny, who was born in December, 1854, at Warren, Warren County, Pennsylvania, and is now living at Cincinnati. She is the mother of two sons, Landon F. and Roger L. The former, who attended the Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute at Troy, New York, is a civil engineer practicing his profession in New York City.

Roger Louis Strobel attended the public schools of Cincinnati, graduating from the Cincinnati Technical School in 1900. Then followed a period of illness, and on recovering he went to Chicago in 1901 and for a time was in the employ of Sears, Roebuck and Company. In June, 1902, on removing to Salt Lake City, he found an opening in the Murray plant of the American Smelting and Refining Company. He began work there in the ranks, and later qualified for the technical post of chemist. After several years of practical experience he resigned in August, 1906, and entered Columbia University at New York City, from which he was graduated with the degree Engineer in Mines in 1911. He is a member of the Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity of Columbia University. From July, 1911, until September, 1912, Mr. Strobel was again with the Murray plant at Salt Lake City as chemist. September 15, 1912, the American Smelting and Refining Company sent him to the East Helena plant as chief chemist, and he was one of the officials of that industry for over seven years. In the spring of 1915 he was promoted to assistant superintendent and in 1916 to superintendent of the plant. He resigned this post February 1, 1920.

Mr. Strobel acquired an interest in the Helena Machinery and Wrecking Company, and it was this business which he reorganized as the Barnett-Strobel Company, with plant and offices at 1530 National Avenue. Mr. Strobel is a member of the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers. He is affiliated with the Montana Club of Helena, is an independent republican, is a member of Helena Lodge No. 3, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, Helena Consistory No. 3 of the Scottish Rite, and Algeria Temple of the Mystic Shrine.

His home is at 625 Holter Street. July 28, 1915, at Helena, he married Mrs. Emma (Gamer) Holter, daughter of Fred and Emma (Fink) Gamer. Her mother is still living at Helena. Her father was a Butte merchant and was killed at Anaconda in a street car accident. He was one of the early Montanans, having driven an ox team from Salt Lake City. Mr. and Mrs. Strobel have two children:

Suzanne, born April 17, 1917; and Margaret, born November 10, 1918.

JOSEPH J. GUNTHER. To Joseph J. Gunther belongs the honor of being one of the builders of Sheridan County, the pioneer lawyer of Plentywood, the third mayor of the city, and the first attorney to locate for the practice of law in what is now Sheridan County. What now constitutes the present Town of Plentywood was but a wheat field when Mr. Gunther arrived in this community in March, 1909, and some months elapsed before the present townsite was platted. Some months after his arrival, in November, 1909, he purchased some lots in the town, and a part of his present office building was the third structure to be erected on the townsite. In 1910 he established himself regularly in the practice of law, and with the passing years he has won a prominent place among the legal practitioners of the community.

Joseph J. Gunther is a native son of Grant County, Wisconsin, born July 20, 1877. He is a grandson of the founder of the Gunther family in America, William Gunther, who crossed the Atlantic about 1852 and established his home in Wisconsin, and in that state his son Theodore was born. The family subsequently removed to Missouri, and there Theodore Gunther received his meager educational training in Nodaway County. In Wisconsin he married Miss Mary Buech, and both still survive, living on the Nodaway County farm in Missouri which was purchased by William Gunther about 1868. The children born to their marriage are: Joseph J., of Plentywood; Chris, whose death occurred near Culbertson, Montana, in August, 1918; Charles, who died at Stewart, Minnesota, in November following the death of his brother, both being victims of influenza; William G., who served as a soldier overseas during the recent World war, and he is now located at International Falls, Minnesota; Margaret, the wife of Henry Meyer, of Parnell, Missouri; Veronica, the wife of Frank Meyer, also of Parnell; Josephine, who married Alois Henkler, of Clyde, Missouri; and Frowin, whose home is in Conception, Missouri.

Joseph J. Gunther lived the life of his childhood on a farm, and followed the plow for his parents until he reached the age of twenty years. The family had located in Nodaway County, Missouri, in 1883, and in the Town of Conception the lad completed his educational training in Stanbury Normal, graduating from that institution in both the teachers' and scientific courses. He at once began teaching in the Town of Fawcett, and the second school which he taught was at Willowbunch, located about fifteen miles south of St. Joseph. Shortly afterward Mr. Gunther began the study of law, and subsequently finished his law course in the University of Missouri in June, 1906, and at once began practice in Maryville. But after a few months spent in law practice there he went to South Dakota to be near the opening of the Tripp County public lands. He reached Pierre without surplus funds, and while awaiting the opening and the date for bar examinations he donned overalls and went to work in the sewer ditch then being constructed in Pierre. When the time came for the opening, however, he was established as a member of the law firm of Ink and Gunther, having thrown aside his working clothes long enough to take the bar examination, and their office was located in Gregory.

Mr. Gunther first saw Montana in 1905, for in that year he came out to the opening of the Crow Indian Reservation and spent a few months in Billings, returning to Missouri at the close of that period to complete his educational training. It was not until 1907 that he again came to Montana, spending a few months prospecting about Culbertson, and deciding to locate permanently in the Northwest he moved from Missouri to South Dakota, practicing law for a year at Gregory, and from that point came to Plentywood to establish his home and law practice. His introduction to Plentywood was through the influence of Professor Dale, principal of the Culbertson school and a member of the board of examiners of Valley County. Professor Dale examined and licensed the young lawyer-teacher and sent him into this region to teach the first school established in Plentywood, while at the same time he was equipped with a certificate as a lawyer. He taught the first two terms of school held in the town, and then established himself in a modest office and made ready for any legal business which might come his way. Within the period of those early formative days to the present time Mr. Gunther has gradually built up a large legal practice and has won a high place in the legal fraternity of Sheridan County.

He also embraced the opportunity of claiming land from the public domain, entering his claim five miles southwest of Plentywood, where he built the customary shack of lumber, earning the price of the material as an employe in the lumber yard at Plentywood. He received 25 cents an hour for his services, and he employed his time in this manner when not occupied with his law business. His shack was 14 by 16 feet in dimensions, and this served him as his bachelor home during the time he was proving up his land. He still owns this farm.

Mr. Gunther cast his first presidential vote in 1900, supporting Major McKinley, although he had been reared in a democratic home and his father was a staunch supporter of democratic principles. In 1908, however, the son supported Mr. Bryan for the presidency, while two years later, in 1910, he attended the republican convention at Glasgow, Montana, as an alternate delegate. When Sheridan County was organized he was an independent candidate for the office of county attorney, and in 1914 was a candidate at the primaries for the republican nomination for that office, but was not successful. In 1916 he was the democratic candidate for the office of district judge, also losing the nomination, and in 1918 became the republican candidate for county attorney, receiving the endorsement of the League and was elected to the office as the successor of L. J. Onstad. H is now completing his first term in that office.

On the 17th of December, 1917, at Glasgow, Montana, Mr. Gunther was married to Anna J. Rasmussen, who was born in Minnesota in October, 1879. Her father was by birth a Dane, but in time he became a resident of Outlook, Montana.

JAMES DEEGAN is one of the few men living in Montana whose identification with the commonwealth began before the year 1880. In September of 1877 he crossed the international boundary line into the state and into the United States from the Cypress Hills country near the Alberta and Saskatchewan boundary, where he had lived for several years as a freighter, Cypress Hills being his headquarters for his freighting between Winnipeg, the most accessible railroad point, to places along the route west to Cypress Hills. He was engaged in hunting buffalo at the same time, and the eight years which he followed the dual business were years profitably spent. His difficulties with the Indians were few and not more serious than the loss of his horses when he was occasionally "set afoot," as he expresses it.

Mr. Deegan came to the United States during the Nez Perce Indian outbreak under Chief Joseph, the excitement of the outbreak attracting him as well as the favorable news of the region itself. He stopped first at Fort Benton, which is directly south of Cypress Hills about 150 miles, and remained about the fort without engaging in any vocation for a year or so. Returning then to Cypress Hills, he began trading with the Sitting Bull band of Indians who had fled into that country after the Custer massacre, Mr. Deegan continuing that occupation for a few years and then worked in the trading store of Kendall and Smith at Wood Mountain. This firm were Indian traders who had forts all along the Missouri River, but they subsequently sold out to Leighton and Jordan, and Mr. Deegan continued with the successors until 1884, when he went to Dakota and entered a homestead in Rolette County, remaining on the claim until he secured title to it. In 1887, when the Great Northern Railroad was being built up the Missouri and Milk rivers, he located at Hinsdale, where he was engaged in the cattle business and ranching until 1910 under the brand "D Diamond" on the left ribs on the cattle and on the left shoulder on his horses, and he also owned the "T 4" brand of cattle. In 1910 Mr. Deegan disposed of his ranch and stock, and coming down to Frazer entered into another line of business, engaging in merchandising.

One incident of his early life in Montana which stands out clearly was his participation in the burial of soldiers killed in General Miles' army in the engagement with Chief Joseph and his band in October, 1877. Although the General had captured the Chief and his outfit, he had had time to only temporarily bury his dead before winter came on. He covered the bodies with sod, and they lay there until Mr. Deegan's party came on the mission of burial, he having charge of that little party of four. The bodies had not been disturbed, and the burial squad under Mr. Deegan dug a trench fifty-five feet long, working at night to avoid the Sioux and Assiniboine Indians, still on the war path. They did the work in six days and then returned without injury. During the day time they kept themselves hid in deep coulees, where parties of Indians occasionally passed along seeking merchandise, which they had concealed after stealing it from the Cow Island boat landing.

Mr. Deegan was born in Quebec, Canada, October 7, 1852, a son of Daniel Deegan, who was born in Queens County, Ireland. The father immigrated to America in young manhood and located in Quebec, where he engaged in the brewing business. He lived out his life in that city and died in 1870, at the age of fifty-two. He married Elizabeth Kelley, born in Kings County, Ireland. She came to Canada in her early life, and passed away in Quebec some years after the death of her husband. Of their four children James was the third in order of birth, and he is the only one who sought a home in the United States. All the other members of the family have passed away.

It was about ten years ago that James Deegan located at Frazer and opened a store in partnership with Daniel Knapp, and he also owned an interest in the store of Knapp and Deegan at Oswego. The Knapp and Deegan partnership has since been dissolved, Mr. Knapp taking the business of the firm at Oswego and Mr. Deegan the store at Frazer. He has also been identified with many other business interests of Valley County, and is a stockholder and director of the First National Bank of Glasgow.

Mr. Deegan became an American citizen while proving up his claim in North Dakota, and when the time came to cast his first presidential ballot it went to support Grover Cleveland and he has ever since supported the principles of the democratic party. He was appointed the first sheriff of Valley County in 1893, continuing in the office until the first election. That includes his official work save when he served as deputy sheriff under Sheriff Kyle for two years. His own incumbency of the office covered a period when "rustling" was indulged in, and he was the means of ending the careers of several of such undesirable residents of his county by sending them to prison. All of his official service occurred while he was a resident of Hinsdale, but he did not permit it to interfere with his business of ranching. His only fraternal connection is with the Knights of Pythias Lodge at Glasgow, of which he is one of the charter members.

Mr. Deegan married in the Milk River country in January, 1882, Margaret St. Dennis, who was born in Canada, a daughter of Michael St. Dennis. The following children have been born to this union: Margaret, the wife of Hugo A. Hansen, of Hinsdale, Montana; Emily, who married W. W. Jaycox, a ranchman near Hinsdale; Danuel D., a homesteader in Saskatchewan, Canada, married Faith Hill; John, whose home is in Frazer, Montana; Thomas, also a resident of Frazer; Julia, the wife of William Hill, of Frazer; Mary, who married Albert M. Weasa, who served as color sergeant with the Ninety-first Division in France during the World war, was sent back to the United States soon after the signing of the armistice, and returned to Frazer; Georgia, the wife of J. L. Hawley, of Frazer; and May and Allen J., who are the youngest of the ten children. The son John was sent overseas in the air service during the war, going over with the Expeditionary Forces, and spent two years in the war zone. He was never injured or captured, went with the Army of Occupation to Germany, was stationed at Coblenz, and returned to the United States in July, 1919. He married Josie Volling. The son Thomas spent two years as a soldier in Europe, a member of the Thirty-eighth United States Infantry, Third Division, and took part in some of the famous engagements of the war, including the battle of the Marne. He went with the Army of Occupation and was stationed within twenty miles of his brother. He also escaped injury in the service.

PHILIP BURTON WILCOX. There is no doubt but that there are many arguments in favor, especially in this age of demand for experts, of a man devoting himself to one line of endeavor and perfecting himself, and one of the men who has followed this policy to his own advantage and the expansion of the business houses with which he has been connected is Philip Burton Wilcox, a former manager of the Shilton Lumber Company of Gilman and now advertising manager of the Rovig Lumber Company of Seattle, Washington.

Philip Burton Wilcox was born in the Kenne Valley, Essex County, New York, on September 27, 1888, a son of Rev. William C. Wilcox. The Wilcox family originated in England, the American ancestor coming thence to Massachusetts on the historic Mayflower. Philip Burton Wilcox can trace his ancestry back to the same family as that of Daniel Webster, and the great-grandmother on the maternal side was a great-great-granddaughter of the sister of Benjamin Franklin. The grandfather of the mother of Rev. William C. Wilcox was a soldier in the American Revolution.

Rev. William C. Wilcox was born in Ohio in 1850, and was there reared and educated. He was graduated from Oberlin College with the degrees of Bachelor of Arts and Master of Arts, and then took the regular course at the Oberlin Theological Seminary, from which he was graduated with the degree of Bachelor of Divinity, and became a missionary of the Congregational Church. In the meanwhile, when only eighteen years old, William C. Wilcox had come West to Deer Lodge, Montana, where he joined his brother, the late Judge J. B. Wilcox, and from 1868 until 1870 was in business with him. During one summer he was employed by Conrad Kohrs, a pioneer business man of Deer Lodge, who is now living at Helena, Montana, and was occupied in punching cattle for him in the Sun Valley, being a genuine cowboy. He cast his first vote for Claggett as representative in Congress. Having earned sufficient funds to carry on his studies William C. Wilcox returned to Oberlin and took his collegiate and seminary courses.

After leaving the seminary Reverend Wilcox was sent to South Africa as a missionary for six years, at the close of that period returned to the United States for four years, when he went back to South Africa. In 1899 he was returned to the United States for another rest, and in 1901 resumed his duties in South Africa. In order to complete his translation of the Bible into the Zulu language Reverend Wilcox once more came back to his native land, and for this remarkable work had the degree of Master of Arts conferred on him by Oberlin College. In 1911 he went back to South Africa as an independent missionary for the Tremont Baptist Church of Pasadena, California, and remained there until 1918, in which year he returned to the United States, spent a year at Detroit, Michigan, and then, in 1919, came West to Los Angeles, California where he is now residing. He married Ida Belle Clary, born at Northfield, Minnesota, in 1858. The children born to Rev. W. C. Wilcox and his wife were as follows: Anna, who married Charles M. Smith, a contractor and builder of Youngstown, Ohio; Mark F., who is professor of English in the high school of Bakersfield, California; Stella, who died in infancy; Philip Burton, who was fourth in order of birth; William, who died at the age of nine years; Gladstone, who enlisted in the English army in 1915, served overseas, was seriously wounded and gassed, and is still in England; Murray, who is attending Oberlin College; and Thomas, who is a business man of Youngstown, Ohio.

Philip Burton Wilcox attended the public schools of Stanger, Natal, South Africa, until he was through the fifth grade, and then continued his studies in the United States, being graduated from the Oberlin High School in 1906. Later he went through the junior year of Pomona College, Claremont, Southern California, and then began to be self-supporting as an employe of the Alta Planing Mill Company of Los Angeles, California, where he remained until 1916, leaving this concern as a salesman having charge of a very productive territory, including Pasadena and its vicinity. In 1916 Mr. Wilcox went with the Hallack and Howard Lumber Company of Denver, Colorado, as advertising manager. While with this company he originated a monthly house organ called The Habit, which dealt with lumber and building supplies, covering these subjects from the logging camp to the finished material. This periodical is still published by the Hallack and Howard Lumber Company, although Mr. Wilcox left them in June, 1918, to come to Gilman as manager of the Rogers Templeton Lumber Company, which, in May, 1919, sold to the Shilton Lumber Company, Mr. Wilcox remaining with the new organization as manager. He left Gilman in April, 1919, to become advertising manager of the Rovig Lumber Company of Seattle, Washington, where he is located at present.

Mr. Wilcox is a democrat. He is a member of the Baptist Church but attended the Presbyterian Church at Gilman and was superintendent of its Sunday school. He is an ex-master workman of the Gilman Lodge No. 45, Ancient Order of United Workmen, and is an ex-president and ex-secretary of the Gilman Commercial Club.

In 1912 Mr. Wilcox was married at Pasadena, California, to Miss Ethel Jackson, a daughter of George F. and Florence (Dear) Jackson, residents of Altadena, a suburb of Pasadena, he being manager of the estate of Mrs. Sidney Harris, a granddaughter of John Deere the famous plow manufacturer. Mrs. Wilcox attended the Jackson Park High School of Chicago, Illinois. Mr. and Mrs. Wilcox have one son, Jackson Burton, who was born on June 16, 1918.

S. B. Fox. There is scarcely a community in this country that is not yet honored by having in its midst one of the veterans of the great conflict between the North and the South, and Kalispell is no exception to this rule, some of its most representative citizens belonging to this desirable class, and one of them is S. B. Fox. He was born near Buffalo, New York, September 10, 1838, a son of Philander and Cynthia (Brigham) Fox, and the fifth of their ten children. In 1859 he came as far west as Iowa, and had not much more than become settled when the war cloud that had been gathering over his beloved country for many years burst in all its fury. Although he was married and had a young wife and two children he left them to enlist in his country's service at Manchester, Iowa, in Company H, Twenty-First Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and was sent first to Saint Louis, Missouri, and later to the Ozark Mountains, and took part in the forced march to reinforce the troops near Springfield, Missouri, meeting the enemy at Hartsville, that state. Mr. Fox fired the last shot of that engagement. From there the regiment went to Mississippi and took part in the siege of Vicksburg, was present at the bombardment of Grand Gulf, and was made corporal. Mr. Fox took part in the battle of Fort Gibson, which began at midnight and lasted until morning, in which time the Union troops drove the Confederate troops back for three miles. Subsequently Mr. Fox was in the engagement at Champion Hill, camping at Edwards Station. The next morning they marched to Black River and charged the works, but although victorious, the colonel of the brigade, Colonel Samuel Merrill, was wounded. A portion of the command pursued the enemy up to Vicksburg. After the surrender on July 4, 1863, of Vicksburg, Mr. Fox's command had the honor of being permitted by General Grant to visit the city and see what they had assisted in accomplishing. Mr. Fox was wounded in the charge of May 2 by a piece of shell which struck his arm, but refused to go to the hospital and kept on fighting. He took part in every skirmish and battle of this compaign in which his command was engaged. Following the termination of the Vicksburg campaign Mr. Fox's command was sent to New Orleans, Louisiana, and transferred to the Ninteenth Corps, and from that city were sent to Vermilion Bay, which they crossed on boats to Saint Joseph's Island, and then came back by land that same day. A big fort on Mattagorda Bay was captured during the campaign of 1863-4. Those winter months were wet and cold. The command recrossed the bay to the main land and remained there until January 1, 1864, when it went up the bay to Powder Horn, and in an engagement there repulsed the enemy. In the spring the greater number of the troops of this command went with General Bank up the Red River, but two regiments were left to guard the place already captured, one of them being the one in which Mr. Fox belonged. Later the captured fort was blown up, and the troops returned to New Orleans. For a time this command was then quartered on the Mississippi River, and later was sent up the White River to Duvall's Bluff, Arkansas, but the troops had scarcely completed the erection of permanent cabins when they were ordered back down the river. Mr. Fox was then given an opportunity to vote, and gladly cast his ballot for Abraham Lincoln for the presidency. The command then went up to Memphis, Tennessee, and on toward La Grange. On January 1, 1865, the troops boarded boats for New Orleans and went to Mobile Bay, landing on Dolphin Island. The subsequent engagement at Spanish Fort was led by the Ninety-ninth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, General Slack commanding, and Mr. Fox's regiment was on the extreme right and continued in action until two o'clock in the morning, when it was relieved by the Forty-seventh Indiana Volunteer Infantry. Mr. Fox was ordered to Blakeley and was serving on fatigue duty for a period of twenty-four hours when Spanish Fort surrendered April 9, 1865. The war now having been terminated by the surrender of General Lee, Mr. Fox's command was marched back to Mobile, and on May 26, took boat up the Red River to receive the surrender of Generals Richard Taylor and Kirby Smith. Mr. Fox was on duty as sergeant of the commissary stores, and had charge of $1,300,000 in Confederate currency, then worth practically nothing. From there the command went to Baton Rouge, Louisiana, and the troops were mustered out July 15, 1865, following which, on July 16, they took boat at Cairo, Illinois, to Clinton, Illinois, where the soldiers were entertained by the ladies with an outdoor banquet. There they were discharged July 28, 1865, and Mr. Fox returned home.

Following his re-entry into peaceful occupations he was engaged at farming in the vicinity of Algona, Iowa, and lived there until in the fall of 1906, when he came to Montana and located permanently at Kalispell. He is a member of J. B. McPherson Post, G. A. R., and is enthusiastic about its reunions and those of national importance. In 1918 he attended the encampment at Portland, Oregon. Mrs. Fox, who passed away December 11, 1919, was an active member of the Woman's Relief Corps of Kalispell. Mr. Fox had two brothers and three brothers-in-law in the war. Since coming to Montana he has seen many improvements, and feels that his good judgment in selecting this state as a place of residence has been fully proven.

The first wife of Mr. Fox was Matilda Barnum, and she bore him two children, Horace Eugene and Francis. In the fall of 1870 he was married to Mrs. Jennie Ware, and they had six children, namely: Clarence S., Lewis W., Harry, Leonard, Fred and Artie Bell.

Clarence S. Fox, who died April 3, 1919, was an engineer and carpenter of Kalispell. He married Ella O'Connell, who died when their daughter, Jennie Marie, was born, and he lost this daughter sixteen months later.

Lewis W. Fox married Mattie Bonney, of South Dakota, and their children are as follows: George, who is a veteran of the World war, having served in the Twentieth Engineers, Art, Milo, Sylvanus, William, Cary and Harry.

Harry Fox was married to Alice C. Hall, a daughter of Samuel W. and Mary Elizabeth (Curtiss) Hall. Mr. Hall was a veteran of the war between the North and the South, serving in the First Wisconsin Cavalry, and had the misfortune to be taken prisoner and confined for sixteen months in Andersonville prison and for eight months in Libby prison. Harry Fox and his wife have one son, Charles. Both as a general merchant and postmaster of Meek, Nebraska, Harry Fox is a representative citizen.

Leonard Fox married Esther Harson, and their children are as follows: Josephine, who is married, LeRoy and Elma. LeRoy enlisted at Sioux City, Iowa, and is a veteran of the Rainbow Division. He saw severe service overseas, participating in the Argonne campaign and the final engagements which preceded the signing of the Armistice. Josephine Fox married Ralph W. Sellew, who served overseas in the Seventeenth Artillery, to which he was transferred from the Second Montana National Guards, and was in the Army of Occupation in Germany. His period of service extended over eighteen months and he participated in the decisive battles of the great war.

Artie Bell Fox married James Eastwood and has four children, Pearl, Earl, Jennie and LeRoy.

In reviewing the life history of a man like Mr. Fox the biographer is struck by the close resemblance between him and his grandsons. Like him, the younger men did not hesitate when their country had need of their service, but patriotically responded and wrote another page of the Fox history and wrote it in letters of fire, the fire of unsullied bravery and fearless gallantry, for the breed of true Americans does not change with the passing of the years, but shows up true blue in each generation. Mr. Fox set the example, his grandsons followed it, and in the years to come if there is like need for such service their offspring will not be found lacking or their places vacant in the ranks of their country's defenders.

JAMES W. BUTLER, of Sidney, has spent his active life as a ranchman, and he has been identified with Montana and its interests since a lad of eight years, when he accompanied his parents to this state and located three miles west of Glendive.

He was born on a farm near Faribault, Minnesota, April 10, 1874, a son of James Butler, and a brother of the Glendive postmaster, John F. Butler, who is mentioned on other pages of this publication. After completing his educational training in the public schools of Glendive James W. became a cow puncher for wages, and since that early age of thirteen he has been self-supporting and also contributed some of his earnings to his parents and the family support. Thirteen years were spent on the range in the employ of ranchmen among his employers being the famous "XIT" Cattle Company, the "SD," "Hatchet" and the "N bar N" Companies. During those thirteen years on the plains he saved his wages and invested in stock, in time becoming a ranchman himself. In 1900 he located on Red Water, and there established his first enterprise. He was a squatter on the public domain, and his first independent home was the customary "shack" of that time and place. But after three years there he moved to Burns Creek, where his active work has since been performed and where his interests are still maintained.

Mr. Butler entered his homestead twelve miles south of Lambert, there developing a large cow ranch and farm, and his stock, the best type of range cattle, ran under the brand "AJ." During all these years his enterprise had been conducted in partnership with his brother Ed, and when the interests of the Butler Brothers were at their height their cattle numbered a thousand head, they having shipped their beef to the Chicago market and always followed the cattle business for the purpose of producing food. The brothers were gradually pushed out of the business by the encroachment of the settlers, and in 1915 they retired from the cattle business altogether. An important adjunct to their cattle industry was the running of horses, and they still breed the grade Percherons, and their market for these animals is found at home. Their horses also ran under the grand "AJ" and came to be classed as heavy draft animals. Butler Brothers have added to their landed possessions until a domain of 2,000 acres are now in their name, all of which is under fence and cross-fenced. They have also developed a farm of 1,500 acres, which has been devoted to small grain, with also paying yields of flax, wheat and oats. The best flax yield was twenty-two bushels, the best wheat yield thirty-five bushels, while the best oats yield has been forty bushels to the acre. As they were growing these crops by the hundreds of acress they could not devote as much care to each crop as can the smaller farmer, and hence the yields were not so heavy.

Mr. Butler organized or was the community spirit in the organization of School District No. 22, and served it as a director. After his children reached high school age he established a home in Sidney, where he spends each school year. He began voting as a republican, casting his first presidential vote in 1896 for Major McKinley, but his partner-brother took the opposite political road and gave his allegiance to the democratic party.

At Glendive, Montana, on the 18th of February, 1899, James W. Butler was united in marriage to Miss Eliza Banber, who was born in Westmoreland County, Pennsylvania, January 18, 1874, and she was only six years of age when her father established his home in Montana. She is a daughter of one of the early mine operators and settlers of Glendive, John Banber, who also served his country faithfully and well as a soldier in the Civil war as a Pennsylvania volunteer. He was born in England in 1841. By his marriage to Mary Jane Ralph he became the father of six children, of whom Mrs. Butler is the third child in age. Two children have been born to bless the union of Mr. and Mrs. Butler, James Howard, a member of the class of 1920 in the Sidney High School, and Mary, an eighth grade pupil at the present time.

George Handley Bell, clerk of the Fourteenth Judicial District Court, with home and office at White Sulphur Springs, is an engineer by profession, and came to Montana as a member of the engineering force of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway system.

Mr. Bell was born at the town of Carroll in Carroll County, Indiana, August 24, 1880, son of Joseph and Mary E. (Wyatt) Bell. His father was born in Ohio in 1851, was educated in that state, learned the trade of blacksmith, and as a young man moved to Indiana, where he married. Their home for several years was at Carroll, but in 1885 they moved to Kansas and homesteaded near Pratt. In 1890 they returned to Indiana, and Joseph Bell resumed his work as a blacksmith at Flora, but since 1914 has been retired. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, Independent Order of Odd Fellows and Knights of Pythias, a republican and a Methodist. His wife was born in Indiana in 1856. Of their five living children George H. is the second.

George H. Bell was educated in public schools, attended high school at Flora, Indiana, the Indiana State Normal School at Terre Haute, and graduated as a mechanical engineer from Purdue University with the class of 1906. For a time his technical services were engaged with the Kokomo, Marion and Western Traction Company, later he was superintendent of the manual training department in the Dunn County School of Agriculture at Menomonie, Wisconsin, for a year, and then went with E. P. Burch, consulting electrical engineer at Minneapolis, doing hydro-electric construction work. In 1907 he joined the mechanical department of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company, and was in its service at different points in Montana until 1917. In that year he was elected clerk of the Fourteenth Judicial District for Meagher County, and has since given all his time to his office duties.

Mr. Bell is affiliated with Diamond City Lodge No. 7, Ancient, Free and Accepted Masons, Harlowton Chapter No. 22, Royal Arch Masons, Palestine Commandery No. 18, Knights Templar, Bagdad Temple of the Mystic Shrine at Butte, and is also a member of the Knights of Pythias. In politics he is a republican. June 27, 1911, Mr. Bell married Miss Nellie Irene Harden, daughter of T. J. and Elizabeth Harden, of Montezuma, Iowa, where they still reside. Mr. and Mrs. Bell have one daughter, Mary Elizabeth.

Herbert A. Hover. The name of Herbert A. Hover is known throughout Montana as a land developer and farm producer, for the Hover effort at farm culture leads all others in the Sidney locality, and may well prove an object lesson for the seeker after first-hand knowledge on irrigation farming in this section of the country.

Mr. Hover came from Spokane, Washington, to the commonwealth of Montana in January, 1912, and at once became interested in farming and ranch development. In 1913 he formed the Montana Ranches Company, of which he was made the president, the purpose of the corporation being the buying, selling and development of lands with the ultimate object to the promotion of immigration. Mr. Hover's first work was done from Helena, at and around which point a tract of 16,000 acres were purchased, which he divided and disposed of in ranches from a quarter to a section in a tract, and he is still heavily interested in that project. He has since spread his investments for the company over the state, buying about seven million dollars worth of property in Lewis and Clark, Broad Water, Jefferson, Powell, Granite, Hill and Chouteau counties, and in 1917 he purchased for himself 2,300 acres three miles south of Sidney from John P. Meadors. He has since increased this domain to 7,000 acres in a solid farm and ranch.

Mr. Hover began the development of his Sidney ranch in April of 1919, and to use the county agent's language: "He has done in one summer what, under ordinary circumstances, takes ten years to accomplish." In 1919 he raised a bumper crop of corn under irrigation, his own private system, and accomplishing this result in spite of the fact that Montana is not yet regarded seriously as a corn state, while at the same time his other efforts have demonstrated the wisdom of his investment and effort at farm making. His corn took first prize at the State Fair at Helena in 1919 and in the Eastern Montana Corn Show at Miles City, and his corn exhibit also won for him a prize at the International Live Stock Show at Chicago in the same year. He sold this farm after the crop was harvested for $240,000 cash and has made heavy investments in the new Montana oil industry and is preparing to drill immediately several wells in Fergus County, Montana.

Mr. Hover was born in Madison County, Ohio, at Madisonville, a suburb of Cincinnati, March 9, 1868, a son of Aaron S. and Amanda (Hollenbeck) Hover, the father born at Germantown, New York, and the mother at Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. They were married in Madisonville, Ohio, and became the parents of five children, four of whom are still living, namely: Herbert, the well known Montana farmer, real estate and oil man; Aaron H., whose home is in Prosser, Washington; Alvin W., of Los Angeles, California; and Howard Raymond, of Portland, Oregon. Aaron S. Hover, the father, finally left his Ohio home for Lawrence, Kansas, where he lived till 1887. He then went to San Diego, California, where he lived until his death in 1918.

Herbert A. Hover was but a young lad of nine years when he began working for a living. His parents were in poor circumstances owing to the ill health of his father, and he assisted in the support of the family until he was sixteen, when he left the parental roof and started out entirely for himself. He was twelve years of age when the family removed to Lawrence, Kansas, and it was from that western city that he set out to battle for a name and place in the world. In the meantime he had attended school to the eighth grade, and then becoming a youthful commercial salesman he continued in that work until he reached the age of nineteen, covering Kansas and the states west and also California. He then enlisted from California in the regular army, becoming a member of Company I, Fourteenth Infantry, and served at the Vancouver Barracks, Washington, and at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas. He was at the opening of Oklahoma when the grand race was made for lands, but was doing duty as a soldier at Guthrie at the time. Receiving his discharge at Leavenworth in April, 1890, he returned to the commercial salesman's life.

About thirty years ago, in 1890, Mr. Hover identified himself with the far West, going into the State of Washington as a representative of the New York Life Insurance Company and establishing his headquarters at Tacoma. His district covered a third of the state, and his connection with the life insurance business covered the period until 1902, when he entered the field of speculation in lands and the development of farms. He was particularly interested in Central Washington, about Kennewick, and was the purchaser of a majority of the townsite of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company and began the building of a town on the land. Most of the large business houses were constructed at his instigation, and he also bought a large portion of the lands irrigated by the Kennewick Canal and developed a number of farms devoted to fruit and alfalfa. He set out one of the largest orchards in that region, also the largest field of alfalfa, having taken the initiative in testing the soil and climate there for those products. His alfalfa ranch continued in existence until its site was demanded for an urban community, and the tract was platted and the Town of Hover was built upon it. It was Mr. Hover's original purpose to promote immigration into the region and sell the land in tracts for fruit and alfalfa. Within the space of seven years he had accomplished his task, and today the locality blossoms in fruit and alfalfa and the market-gardener's products, and has developed into the greatest early fruit, vegetable and asparagus district in the entire Northwest. Mr. Hover built in the town the Kennewick and two other hotels, the Hover Block and in many other ways promoted the town's advancement, and although he now maintains his residence in and has transferred his active work to the Montana field his interests are still great in that community.

The Hover ranch and farm in Montana yielded its first fruits under Mr. Hover's methods in 1919. The management contemplates a campaign of mixed farming and stock raising, and its undulating grazing lands are now stocked with White Face cattle. As a profit yielding property from the standpoint of dry farming the ranch's history invokes no enthusiasm. A scientific method of irrigation and cultivation was inaugurated which revolutionized crop growing, and abundant streams of revenue have replaced a stream of outlay. The waters of the Yellowstone as they pass into the ditches from the big pump cover an acre two inches deep every forty-six minutes, and under this life-giving impetus wheat, oats, corn and alfalfa have produced yields which make scientific farming worth while. Six hundred acres respond to the husbandman's magic touch on this model farm and prove the value of irrigation farming. The improvements of the ranch were very largely increased in 1919, twenty-two new buildings on concrete foundations were erected, converting the landscape into a veritable hamlet itself. Both horsepower and tractors are employed on the ranch, and the implements used convey the impression that a big enterprise is being carried on by a management used to big things.

At San Francisco, California, in December, 1894, Mr. Hover was married to Mata C. Purviance, who was born in Oswego, Kansas, a daughter of Nathan and Emma B. (McPherson) Purviance. The father, who was an attorney, died at Parkville, Missouri. In the family of Mr. and Mrs. Purviance were five children, all of whom are still living, namely: Walter C., a former missionary of Corea, is a practicing physician at Beatrice, Nebraska; Lula M. resides in Los Angeles, California; Mata C., the wife of Mr. Hover; Nathan, an optometrist of Lewiston, Idaho; and Alice the wife of Walter J. Spaul, whose home is in Chicago, Illinois. Mr. and Mrs. Hover reared one son, Harry D., who died at the age of twenty-three years, while in the service of the American Railway Express Company between Minot and Havre on the Great Northern. His death occurred on the 7th of December, 1918.

Mr. Hover is a member of the Blue Lodge, Chapter and Commandery and is also a thirty-second degree Scottish Rite Mason, belonging to State Lodge No. 68 at Tacoma, to the Chapter at Spokane, to the Commandery at Walla Walla, to the Consistory at Spokane and to El Kaiif Shrine at Spokane.

B. M. Harris is one of the younger men in the financial life of Montana, but his abilities are of first rank and he is widely known outside of his home town of Park City, where he is president of the Park City State Bank. Mr. Harris is president of Group No. 7 of the Montana Bankers Association and vice president of the state bank section of the American Bankers Association.

He was born in Ripon, Wisconsin, June 26, 1885. His paternal ancestors came from Ireland and were early settlers in Wisconsin, where his father was born in 1854. His father, Richard Harris, grew up and married in Wisconsin, spent his early life on a farm, and in 1887 moved to Denver, Colorado, where he was active in business affairs until 1915, when he retired and is now living at Imperial Beach, California. He is a republican. He married Dora E. Meyer, who was born at Ripon, Wisconsin, in 1864. B. M. Harris is the oldest of their children. Irma H. is the wife of William C. Eck, who served with the American Expeditionary Forces in France and when at home is credit man for a large dry goods house at Denver. Ernest R. is sales manager for the Denver Fire Clay Company at Denver. Bertha B. is the wife of Frank A. Hartong, secretary of the B. F. Robinson Printing Company at Denver.

B. M. Harris was about two years old when his parents moved to Denver, and he was educated in that city, graduating from high school in 1902. On leaving school his first employment was as a messenger boy in the Denver offices of the Union Pacific Railway Company. He was promoted to night clerk and then to assistant cashier in the freight office. He left Denver in 1906 and coming to Montana was for a year bookkeeper with the Meyer-Chapman Bank at Red Lodge. He was then delegated with the responsibility of opening the Park City State Bank in 1907, and served as its cashier until he was elected president in 1919. The vice president is W. D. Story and the cashier H. A. Searls. This is one of the sound and prosperous banking institutions in Stillwater County, and has a capital of $40,000 and surplus and undivided profits of $5,000.

Mr. Harris is also president of the Park City Milling Company, which he established in 1914. These flour mills, with a rated capacity of fifty barrels per day, furnish a local market for much of the wheat grown in the vicinity. Mr. Harris is also a director in the Boyd State Bank and a director of the Park City Water Company. He is a republican, a member of the Presbyterian Church, and is affiliated with Carbon Lodge No. 65, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, with the Scottish Rite Consistory and Algeria Temple of the Mystic Shrine at Helena, and is a member of Billings Lodge No. 394, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, and the Billings Midland Empire Club.

April 18, 1909, at Joliet, Montana, he married Miss Bernice Crismas, daughter of W. J. and Lola M. (Pickering) Crismas. Her parents reside at Joliet, where her father is a farmer. Mrs. Harris is a graduate of the Carbon County High School. They have one son, B. M. Harris, Jr., born March 4, 1910.

Frank J. Stiehl. A man identified with the magnificent Missouri Valley for a quarter of a century, and for many years successfully occupied with large ranching interests, Frank J. Stiehl was essentially typical of this important region. His death occurred on May 23, 1920. He was born in Sauk City, Wisconsin, near Madison, on December 7, 1856, a son of John D. Stiehl, who settled in that locality a year before the birth of his son, having come to the United States from Germany. John Stiehl was born at Hartzhausen, Germany, and was the son of a farmer. He left his native land in young manhood, and was married after reaching the United States, his wife, Christina Nagel, being also a German. In 1884 they came West to Mondak, Montana, where he died in 1912 and she in 1916. They had the following children: Frank, who was the eldest born; Dan, who died near Snowden, Montana, while engaged in ranching, leaving his widow, Mrs. Nancy (Hall) Stiehl, and five daughters; and Nora, who married A. V. Rodger and died at Princeton, Kentucky.

On February 22, 1884, Frank J. Stiehl was married at Witt, Illinois, to Miss Lillie Tratt, who was born at Whitewater, Wisconsin, on January 19, 1862, a daughter of John and Sarah (Hooper) Tratt, natives of Somersetshire and Cornwall, England, respectively. They were farming people, and Mr. Tratt died at Decatur, Illinois, and Mrs. Tratt, at Litchfield, Illinois. Of their six children the survivors are as follows: Mrs. Stiehl, Mrs. Jennie Paisley, of Decatur, Illinois, and Mrs. Stella Pullen, of Upper Alton, Illinois. Mr. and Mrs. Stiehl had a son, Leroy, who was born on February 12, 1908.

Immediately following his marriage Mr. Stiehl came West with his bride, shipping native cattle from Wisconsin and Minnesota and running them under the brand "ST" on the left hip, and their range was over a wide territory, which has since been all settled and is now devoted to mixed farming. Mr. Stiehl was a beefmaker of the Little Missouri country, shipping his product to the Chicago and Saint Paul markets. Among his neighbors of those early days were Hans Christiensen, Dan Manning, Conley Brothers, Richard Jeffries, Byron Tripp, Marquis DeMores and Theodore Roosevelt. Mr. Stiehl became very well acquainted with the future president and great American, who made friendships among the men of the grass-country which endured as long as he lived.

Mr. Stiehl remained in North Dakota until the influx of settlers interfered with his range and he was compelled to seek more open country for his operations, and he then came into the land tributary to the mouth of the Yellowstone River. His Dakota ranch was converted into a stock company, so that he started anew when he came to Montana.

It was in 1896 that he unloaded his stock at Culbertson, and he adopted a new brand, the "reverse 2" on the ribs for the cattle and the same brand on the thigh for the horses. The soldiers had abandoned the military reservation at Fort Buford and he drove his stock into it. As his neighbors during the early days he had the Seibens, Arnetts, Hedrick Brothers, and a lot of others who made the history of those times. These cattlemen had access to the range clear to the Canadian border. Mr. Stiehl always made stockraising his chief interest and was eminently successful at it, although of course with changing conditions he altered his methods to conform with them.

His ranch comprises almost 1,800 acres, and perhaps 150 acres of it are devoted to farming and hay raising, alfalfa coming in for a good share of this cultivated land. He entered his homestead where he lived. It was a desert entry, and his first home here was built of logs and ties and comprised four rooms. A remnant of the logs composing this pioneer home remains. A new frame house replaced the original one, and it is constructed of material hauled from Williston, North Dakota. He and his neighbor Sweetman pooled their interests to some extent, Mr. Sweetman furnishing the plow which broke the sod for both of them. A few potatoes and a little "squaw" corn comprised the crops of both of them for some time. The family table was supplied with beef from the herd, game killed from the prairie, and on a whole living conditions were excellent.

Mr. Stiehl had other interests outside his ranch, being a stockholder of the First State Bank of Buford, North Dakota, and its vice president, a stockholder of one of the banks of Williston, North Dakota, and was interested in mining and oil projects in Montana and Wyoming and Jackson, Wisconsin.

Mr. Stiehl lived in three counties in Montana without changing his place of location. When he first came here this region was included in Valley County, but that part of it containing his farm was cut off and made into Sheridan County, and finally when Sheridan County became too large in population the new County of Roosevelt was created, and Mr. Stiehl was proud to be a resident of it because it bears the name of his old friend. He was active in public matters and assisted in organizing the Springdale school district, and was a member of its board. The schoolhouse of this district was for years the popular meeting place for the region. Later the Mondak School was organized, and he served it as a school director until his death. A strong democrat, he was the delegate of his party to the state conventions at Helena upon more than one occasion. In late years Mr. Stiehl devoted serious attention to Galloway cattle, and his ranch acquired considerable reputation as a breeding place for this strain, and in this way he contributed toward raising the grade of cattle in his territory.

Mr. Stiehl was made a Mason at Culbertson, Montana, and demitted to the lodge at Mondak. He also belonged to Algeria Temple at Helena, Montana. An Odd Fellow, he passed all of the chairs in the local lodge and was a delegate to the Grand Lodge at Wappleton, North Dakota. Sturdy, self-reliant and enterprising, he succeeded where other men failed. When the open range was taken away from the cattlemen by the opening up of this region to settlers a number of them went out of business, feeling so discouraged they were not able to rise to the occasion, but not so Mr. Stiehl. He simply made other arrangements, and through a little management and foresight succeeded in altering his manner of handling his cattle and made just as much money, if not more, than he did in the old days. This was not accomplished through luck, but hard work, keen insight into existing conditions and a willingness to grasp opportunities offered instead of wasting time lamenting over those which had passed. In every way Mr. Stiehl measured up to the highest standards of western citizenship, and was thoroughly typical of its best interests.

JOHN JAMES MACDONALD. Trained in the hard school of work and early self support, John James Macdonald, the present sheriff of Broadwater County, presents an example of self made man whose history is well worth considering because of its illustration of the value of industry, courage, self reliance and sterling basic character.

John James Macdonald was born August 1, 1858, in Ontario, Dominion of Canada, where his Scotch grandfather settled, developed a pioneer farm and reared a family of sturdy children. One son of many he named John James when he was born in 1814. The latter grew up on his father's farm and devoted himself to general agriculture and lumbering until 1861, in which year he came into the United States with his family, locating in Copper Harbor, Michigan. For three years he worked in lumber camps and at copper mining with the Calumet and Hecla Company, moving then to Lake Linden, where he was engaged during the rest of his life in hauling wood for the mills under contract. His death occurred at Lake Linden in 1902. In Michigan he identified himself with the democratic party in politics, but never held any public office. He was a faithful member of the Roman Catholic Church. He married Christie Macdonald, of the same name as his own but of another branch of the old Scottish clan. She was born in Ontario, Canada, in 1825 and died at Lake Linden, Michigan, in 1910. Of their four children John James was the youngest born, the others being as follows: Kate, who is the widow of Duncan MacKeller, of Superior, Wisconsin, formerly a lumber and timber contractor; Duncan, who resides at West Superior, is a dredging machinist on tug or steamboats; and Margaret, who died at Hubbell, Michigan, in 1912, was the wife of D. K. Macdonald, a hardware merchant of Hubbell.

From childhood, almost, Mr. Macdonald provided for his own needs, and when he left home at the age of sixteen to carve out his own fortune his entire school attendance summed up less than a year all told. He was well informed, however, as he was fond of reading and was of observing mind. He made his way to the Black Hills, South Dakota, where he secured stable work with the Homestake Mining Company and proved so reliable that he was given charge of the stables and remained four years. He then bought a team and went out seeking employment at Brownsville in the Black Hills, and afterward, for a year, under contract, hauled wood and timber to the Pierre and Black Hills Railroad. Mr. Macdonald then returned to the Homestake Mining Company and for the next three years worked in their sawmill, going from there to Lead City, South Dakota, where he drove the company's team trucking and hauling around the mines. He remained with the company two years and then worked at draying and hauling freight from the railroad to Lead City for himself up to 1891, when he came to Townsend, Montana.

Here he secured the contract to haul ore, with his own outfit, from the Iron Mask mine to the Bedford depot, and continued at this laborious task for one year. Mr. Macdonald was now thirty-four years old and had worked harder and more continuously than many men of his acquaintance, and as he had married he desired the quiet and comfort of a settled home. Therefore, in 1892, when the opportunity was presented for purchasing an established business at Townsend, he took it under consideration and ultimately, in partnership with James Jobb, bought the stock of the pioneer livery stable and leased the property from Ficklin and McCormick. The above partnership continued four years at the old stand, when the firm leased the building that is now known as the Central Garage, and here the livery business was carried on two years longer, when Mr. Jobb was elected sheriff of Meagher County. He sold his interest in the stable to Scott Dewell, and the new firm continued two years, when Mr. Macdonald sold his interest to Mr. Dewell.

In the meanwhile, Mr. Macdonald had become quite prominent in republican politics, and under President Taft served 4½ years as postmaster of Townsend. During this period he gave his entire attention to the duties of his office, but when he retired from his official responsibilities he formed a partnership with W. L. Cronk, a stock company was organized and a hardware store was established on Broadway, which is one of the two largest enterprises of its kind in Broadwater County. The business is carried on under the style of the O. K. Hardware Company, of which Mr. Macdonald has ever since been president. He has always been a safe and cautious business man, but all who ever have had dealings with him from boyhood to the present day will testify that every transaction in which he has taken part has been honest, fair and above board. Perfect reliability, with other qualities, have made him acceptable to his fellow citizens in numerous positions of responsibility. He has been active in city affairs and has served three terms as alderman of his ward. In 1918 he was elected sheriff of Broadwater County, and entered upon his duties on January 1, 1919, since then proving entirely competent to handle the unusual problems arising from the ending of the World war and the general unrest prevailing over the country.

At Lead City, South Dakota, in 1889, Mr. Macdonald was married to Miss Annie Frances Cassidy, who was born at Guelph, Ontario, Canada. They have no children. Sheriff Macdonald owns his handsome modern residence on Pine Street and has other real estate at Townsend. Both he and wife are members of th Roman Catholic Church. Fraternally he is an Odd Fellow, belonging to North Star Lodge No. 19, of which he is past grand, and he belongs also to the Townsend Commercial Club, in which he is a valued factor.

MILTON S. GUNN. One of the more accomplished and distinguished members of the Montana bar, Milton S. Gunn, of Helena, has achieved success through a systematic application of his energies and ability to his chosen profession, which, as the price of success, invariably demands veritable talent, distinctive individuality and a vast amount of genuine hard work. The senior member of the prominent law firm of Gunn, Rasch and Hall, he has gained an honored position in legal circles and won an extensive and lucrative practice. A son of Samuel J. Gunn, he was born February 19, 1868, in Allegan County, Michigan, of English ancestry.

Of New England birth and breeding, Samuel J. Gunn was born in Connecticut, where as a young man he learned the carpenter's trade. Full of life, fond of adventure, and thoroughly aroused by the glowing accounts given of the discovery of gold at Sutter's Mill, he joined the historic group of people that opened up the wealth of California, the real forty-niners, going with them to the Pacific Coast in 1849. Returning eastward in 1856, he located in Allegan County, Michigan, where he spent the remainder of his life, his death occurring there in 1881. His wife, whose maiden name was Cordelia Truax, survives him and is now living in Helena, Montana. Three sons were born of their marriage, as follows: Shelton J., engaged in the lumber business on the west coast of Florida; Milton S., with whom this brief sketch is principally concerned; and Clinton, who died in Allegan County, Michigan, when but twelve years old.

Having laid an excellent foundation for his future education in the rural schools of Allegan County, Michigan, and in the Wayland High School of that county, Milton S. Gunn entered the law department of the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor in 1887, and graduated with the class of 1889, receiving the degree of Bachelor of Laws. He was at once admitted to the Michigan bar, and in July of that year came to Montana, which had then just put on the garb of statehood. Locating in Helena, Mr. Gunn was for a time associated with the Helena Journal, later becoming a clerk in the law office of McConnell, Carter and Clayberg. Faithful to his duties in that capacity, and proving himself eminently capable in the handling of legal matters, Mr. Gunn was subsequently admitted to the firm, from which Senator Carter had retired.

Politically Mr. Gunn is a steadfast republican, ever devoted to the highest interests not only of his party but of city, county and state. A true Christian man, broad and liberal in his religious views, he is an active member of the Unitarian Church. Fraternally he is a member of Helena Lodge No. 193, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. Socially he belongs to the Montana Club of Helena, the Silver Bow Club of Butte and to the Rocky Mountain Club, New York City. He is division counsel for the Northern Pacific Railway Company for the State of Montana. Mr. Gunn has acquired considerable property, owning a modern residence at 433 Clark Street, and ranches in McCone, Cascade and Lewis and Clark counties.

Mr. Gunn married in 1892 Miss Lena Curtis, who was born in Kansas, and was educated at Oberlin College in Oberlin, Ohio. Her father was an early pioneer of Montana, settling in the territory in 1863. Mr. and Mrs. Gunn have two children, Milton C. and Mabelle. Milton C. Gunn, born in 1894, recently graduated from the law department of Leland Stanford, Jr., University at Palo Alto, California. He served for twenty-nine months in the World war, being in France fourteen months, and as first lieutenant of his company was in the drives at Chateau-Thierry, at Argonne and at Saint Mihiel. Mabelle Gunn, born in 1898, is a brilliant student, having been graduated not only from Castellega Seminary at Palo Alto, California, but from Pine Manor, a school for home efficiency at Wellesley, Massachusetts, an institution of note.

LEWIS D. GLENN, one of the efficient and public-spirited attorneys of Wheatland County, has served in various official positions under the state, county and city government, and has the distinction of being the first of his profession to locate permanently at Harlowton. Mr. Glenn was born on his father's farm in Ward Township, Hocking County, Ohio, September 26, 1875, a son of Luther H. and Harriet (Walker) Glenn.

Luther H. Glenn was born September 15, 1843, in Athens County, Ohio, and his wife was born September 7, 1843. They had six children, all of whom are now living, and of them all Lewis D. Glenn was the third in order of birth. Luther H. Glenn engaged in farming in his native state, and was so occupied at the outbreak of the war between the North and South. He enlisted for service in the Union army on May 2, 1864, as a member of Company A, One Hundred and Sixtieth Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and participated in the engagements at Harper's Ferry, Martinsburg and Winchester, Virginia, receiving his honorable discharge September 10, 1864.

In November, 1876, Luther H. Glenn moved from Ohio to Vernon County, Wisconsin, where he was one of the pioneer farmers and stockraisers, being occupied with conducting his farm there until 1898, when he located at Viroqua, Wisconsin. This remained his home until 1908, when he came to Montana and homesteaded 160 acres of land one mile northeast of Harlowton, which was then in Meagher County, but after proving up on his farm he returned to Viroqua, Wisconsin, and subsequently was appointed commissioner for the Vernon County Soldiers Relief, and still holds that office. In November, 1900, he was made commissioner of the poor of Vernon County, but retired from that office when he made his plans to go to Montana. Since his initial connection with the Grand Army of the Republic he has been very enthusiastic relative to its work, and enjoys meeting his old comrades, and fully believes that the influence exerted by this association has been a constructive one. Fraternally he is a member of the Odd Fellows, and his wife was a member of the Rebekahs. In politics Mr. Glenn is a strong republican, and has always supported the candidates of that party.

Lewis D. Glenn attended the grade and high schools of Viroqua, Wisconsin, the Dillon Normal School of Montana, and the legal department of the University of Michigan, being graduated from the latter in 1907. In order to secure the necessary funds to take him through college Mr. Glenn taught school, and was an instructor of the schools in Vernon County, Wisconsin, when he was only twenty years old, and in 1898 was engaged as an instructor by the first high school at Rosedale, Park County, Montana. Still later he taught school in Livingston, Montana, and he was then principal of the schools of Aldridge, Montana, until 1904, in which year he took up the study of law. In September, 1907, he located at Harlowton, and on October 1 of that year was admitted to the bar of the State of Montana, and on October 3, 1907, was admitted to practice in the Federal courts. Mr. Glenn has been local attorney for the Chicago, Milwaukee and Saint Paul Railway at Harlowton for a number of years. In 1917 he was appointed deputy county attorney of Meagher County, and held the office until the organization of Wheatland County, when he became county attorney of the new county, and held that office until January, 1919. In 1912 he was elected on the republican ticket to the thirteenth session of the State Legislative Assembly and served one term, representing Meagher County. For two years he served Harlowton as city attorney, and in 1917 was appointed as government appeal agent by Governor S. V. Stewart, and served as such until there was no further need of his efforts on account of the close of the great war. Fraternally Mr. Glenn belongs to Musselshell Lodge No. 69, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons; Harlowton Lodge No. 60, Knights of Pythias; and Lewistown Lodge No. 456, Benevolent Protective Order of Elks. As a member of the executive committee of the Wheatland County Liberty Loan drives and the Red Cross organization of the same county, Mr. Glenn rendered his country loyal service and received an honorable discharge from Provost Marshal, General Crowder.

On February 28, 1911, Mr. Glenn was married to Edna Regene Caine, a daughter of Michael I. and Mamie (Howe) Caine, both natives of Wisconsin, who had six children, five of whom survive, Mrs. Glenn being the second in order of birth. Mr. Caine is now living at Harlowton, Montana, being in the employ of the Chicago, Milwaukee and Saint Paul Railroad. Mrs. Caine died when Mrs. Glenn was eight years old. Mr. and Mrs. Glenn became the parents of four children, namely: Lewis Raymond, William Ross, Edwin Caine and Theodore Caine. The last two were twins, but Edwin Caine died in infancy, and the other three children are living.

JOSEPH T. BERTHELOTE, who was born in Montant when it was a territory, has spent his life here as a successful ranch operator and a public spirited citizen, and has been prominent in public affairs since the organization of Powell County. He has been continuously a member of the Board of County Commissioners since the organization of the county.

Mr. Berthelote was born in the Prickly Pear Valley in Montana Territory October 8, 1869, son of Louis and Helena (Reasman) Berthelote. He is of French ancestry. His father was born at the old French settlement in Southeastern Michigan, in Monroe County, in 1840. His mother was born in Austria in 1845. Louis Berthelote left Michigan in 1864 and by overland journey crossed the plains to Colorado, thence to Salt Lake and on to Virginia City. He was one of the early settlers of Helena, and subsequently located in the Prickly Pear Valley, where he engaged in the cattle and sheep business the rest of his life. He died in 1883, at the age of forty-three. His widow survived him until 1918, being seventy-three at the time of her death. Their six children are all living, Joseph T. being the oldest.

Joseph T. Berthelote as a boy attended school at Augusta and Helena and when not in school he worked on the range as a practical cowboy. At the age of nineteen he began learning the profession of surveyor, and in subsequent years he did a great deal of contract work as a surveyor. His ranching operations were chiefly centered in the Sweet Grass Hills at the northern border of Montana near Gold Butte. Mr. Berthelote has been successful both in cattle and sheep, handling the standard bred cattle and the French draft horses. He sold out most of his holdings in cattle in the spring of 1919. At his ranch home for many years he kept a record of the rainfall and weather conditions. He had one of the automatic devices employed by the weather bureau, which records and registers rainfall and other weather conditions.

Hill County was organized in 1912, and Mr. Berthelote was honored with election as a member of its first Board of County Commissioners. He has held that office for six years. He gave much time and study to assisting the architect in planning and constructing the fine courthouse at Havre, which was completed in 1915. For many years he has also been on the school board and since he was twenty-one years of age has taken an active part in road building and has served as a member of the State Highway Commission since 1917. Mr. Berthelote is a thoroughly progressive citizen, alive to the needs of Montana and his community, and seeking in every possible way to carry out effective and well considered plans. Politically he is a republican and is affiliated with Havre Lodge No. 55, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, Havre Chapter, Royal Arch Masons, Havre Lodge No. 1201 of the Elks, and Lodge No. 22 of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows at Augusta.

In 1903, at Buffalo, New York, Mr. Berthelote married Miss Mary Lambrech, a native of Buffalo. They have one son, Theodore.

JOHN M. SEVENICH. Actively employed in one of the best patronized industries not only of Butte but of the state, John M. Sevenich, proprietor of the Standard Carriage Works, is kept busy as a blacksmith and as a carriage and auto repairer, the automobiles, however, requiring far more of his attention than the carriages and other vehicles of a like nature. A son of the late Joseph Sevenich, he was born April 1, 1879, in Calumet County, Wisconsin, of German ancestry.

Born in Germany in 1841, Joseph Sevenich was educated in his native land, and there as a youth served in the German army. Immigrating to this country at the age of nineteen years, he settled permanently in Calumet County, Wisconsin, and for a number of years was there employed in the copper regions. Accumulating some money, he bought land, and with true pioneer courage cleared and improved a valuable farm, on which he resided until his death in 1908. A man of integrity and worth, he became prominent in civic and political affairs, being identified with the republican party, and held various local offices. Religiously he was a devoted member of the Roman Catholic Church, and reared his family in the same faith.

Joseph Sevenich married Annie Gable, who was born near the Rhine, Germany, in 1841, and is now residing on the home farm in Calumet County, Wisconsin. Seven children were born of their marriage, as follows: Joseph, of Milwaukee, Wisconsin, is a stockholder and an official member of the Excelsior Publishing Company of that city;

Mary, unmarried, lives with her widowed mother on the home farm; Annie, wife of J. D. Levy, a well known business man of Oshkosh, Wisconsin; John M., the special subject of this brief sketch; Matt, owning and occupying a farm adjoining the parental homestead, is extensively and successfully engaged in farming, dairying and stock raising; Antoine, residing with his mother on the home farm; and Paul, of Virginia, Minnesota, is agent for the Studebaker cars.

Obtaining a practical education in the rural schools of Calumet County, Wisconsin, John M. Sevenich at the age of fifteen years went to Stockbridge, Wisconsin, where he served an apprenticeship of three years at the blacksmith's trade. He subsequently followed his trade as a journeyman blacksmith in Dodge County, Wisconsin, until 1899, becoming quite proficient. Coming to Montana in that year, he located at Helena, and after following his trade in that city for six years embarked in business there on his own account, continuing it until 1907, when he sold out. Establishing himself then in Butte, he worked for Joseph Leland, proprietor of the Standard Carriage Works, for two years, and then went back to Helena, and there opened another shop. Not satisfied, however, Mr. Sevenich returned to Butte the following year, in 1910, and in partnership with J. C. Obrem opened a shop under the firm name of the Union Carriage Works. The partnership being dissolved in 1912, Mr. Sevenich established the Standard Carriage Works, situated at 404 South Wyoming Street, and has since built up an extensive and profitable blacksmithing and carriage and auto repairing business, his skillful and durable work having won him a large patronage. He owns his entire plant, and also his pleasant home at 516 South Wyoming Street, his property being quite valuable.

At Helena in 1902 Mr. Sevenich was united in marriage with Miss Anna Evans, a daughter of John and Armilda Evans, neither of whom are now living, and into their home one child has been born, Saddona, whose birth occurred October 12, 1908. Politically Mr. Sevenich, following in the footsteps of his father, is a true blue republican, and fraternally he is a member of Enterprise Lodge No. 40, Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

Edgar Easic Belanski found his first Montana home at Plentywood, has been a successful farmer and rancher in that locality for ten years, and more recently has found his time and abilities taxed by many official responsibilities, including the duties of United States commissioner.

Mr. Belanski was born in Cerro Gordo County, Iowa, August 4, 1862. His father, Charles Belanski, was born in the City of Warsaw, Poland, was liberally educated, prepared for the Catholic priesthood, but abandoned that profession and came to this country when about twenty-four years of age. He brought with him enough capital to engage in an itinerant mercantile business, organizing a few peddling wagons or outfits and sending them through the country selling such articles as tinware, hosiery and other small and useable articles. Out of that he earned the capital which enabled him to engage in the furniture business at Sheffield, Iowa, but after three years his health failed and he has not since been a positive factor in any enterprise. His first home on coming to this country was Dubuque, Iowa, and prior to the Civil war he moved to Cerro Gordo County. He became a Union soldier from Iowa, serving as private in one of the regiments of that state, was wounded in battle, and for a number of years has been a pensioner of the Government he helped to save. At Dubuque, Iowa, Charles Belanski married Miss Etta May Pitts, a daughter of Easic Pitts, a native of Illinois and of blue-blooded Yankee stock. Her father was a farmer and afterwards a cooper, and was still making barrels at Nora Springs, Iowa, when he died. Mrs. Charles Belanski was born at Dubuque and died at Nora Springs in 1901. She was the mother of two children, Edgar E. and Hanover Herbert, the latter a resident of Mason City, Iowa.

Edgar E. Belanski attended public school at Nora Springs, Iowa, took a seminary course at Cedar Falls, and clerked in a store at Nora Springs until the inside confinement impaired his health. He then learned the painting trade, and on leaving Iowa went West to Pomona, California, where he remained about eighteen months.

Mr. Belanski unlike most Montana settlers came here from the West rather than from the East. In April, 1909, he brought his family and established his home at Plentywood. Here he resumed his trade as a house painter, and followed it in seasons for a few years. His chief interests, however, were in a ranch he purchased on Big Muddy, 2½ miles southwest of Plentywood, and to its management he still gives such of his time that is spared from his official duties.

Mr. Belanski was appointed United States commissioner in 1916 as the successor of Albert Chapman. Besides representing the Federal Government in that capacity he is also justice of the peace, police magistrate, city clerk, county or public administrator of Sheridan County, and chief probation officer for the county.

His father after acquiring American citizenship voted as a republican, and Mr. Belanski was similarly minded when he reached his majority, supporting Benjamin Harrison for president in 1892. For a number of years he remained steadily in the ranks of the republican party, but in recent years, like many other strong-minded men, has become neutral so far as the two great parties are concerned and casts his vote where he thinks it will do most good. He was made a Mason at Nora Springs, Iowa, has attained the Royal Arch degree, also became affiliated with the Knights of Pythias and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows at Nora Springs, and was a charter member of the first camp of the Modern Woodmen of America there.

At Nora Springs in November, 1893, Mr. Belanski married Mrs. Etta May Dean. She was born in Michigan August 7, 1866, oldest of four children of John Fizzell, three of whom are still living. Her sister, Mrs. Hattie Lenhart, still lives at Nora Springs and her brother, Del Fizzell, is a resident of St. Joseph, Missouri. Mrs. Belanski was reared and educated at Nora Springs, Iowa. By her first marriage she has a son, Blaine Dean, a farmer in the Plentywood locality, who married Miss Anna King. The only child of Mr. and Mrs. Belanski was a son who died in infancy.

Joseph F. Dolin. No American community regards itself as completely constituted until it has a medium of publicity, a local newspaper. There are half a dozen or more towns in Northeastern Montana that owe the institution of the press to the enterprise of Joseph F. Dolin, a practical newspaper man, who learned to set type in his father's office in North Dakota. Mr. Dolin has in addition to the journalistic gift an executive ability that has enabled him to establish and conduct other enterprises under his supervision. Added to this distinction of his career in Montana should also be noted his work as a practical homesteader, resulting in the development of a large grain farm.

Mr. Dolin, whose home is at Plentywood, where he is editor and proprietor of the Pioneer Press, was born in St. Paul, Minnesota, November 24, 1885. His father is John H. Dolin, a veteran printer and newspaper man, who recently acquired the Medicine Lake Wave, one of the papers established by his son in Northeastern Montana. John H. Dolin was born at LeSeuer, Minnesota, in 1861, and was an only child and was left an orphan when a boy. He acquired a liberal education, partly in the university of a print shop, learned the printing trade at Henderson, Minnesota, and has given all his life to printing and publication work. At the time of the birth of his son Joseph he was foreman in the makeup department of the St. Paul Pioneer Press. Leaving that he went to Devil's Lake, Norh Dakota, acquired an interest in the Free Press, and after nine years removed to York, North Dakota, and established the Ledger. Then in 1913 he came to Montana and engaged in the newspaper business with his son and in 1920 bought the Medicine Lake Wave from his son. He is a republican in politics. At St. Paul John H. Dolin married Miss Mary A. Doheney. Her father, Dennis Doheney, was one of the pioneers of Minnesota and in the early days conducted a mill and general store at some cross-roads near St. Paul. Later he drove the mail coach from Larimore to Fort Totten, North Dakota, and spent his last days on a farm near Devil's Lake. The children of John H. Dolin and wife are: Alice, wife of Samuel Rettinger, of Long Lake, Minnesota, a merchant; Rose, wife of O. C. Bottger, a farmer and stockman of Ollie, Iowa; and Joseph F.

Joseph F. Dolin learned the newspaper business under his father, completed his education at York, North Dakota, and also attended a business college at Devil's Lake and the Stickney Business College of St. Paul. He had gone to York, North Dakota, in 1898, when a schoolboy, and when he left that town to come to Montana he was publishing the York Ledger, which had been established by his father.

Mr. Dolin arrived in Montana in March, 1908, and his first location was at Medicine Lake, where he founded the Medicine Lake Wave. The first issue appeared May 20, 1908, and the paper lived up to its policy of being a family paper and devoted to the interests of the community. It was published weekly and was republican in politics. From Medicine Lake Mr. Dolin established papers at other points as towns sprang up along the Scobey branch of the Great Northern and Soo line. These papers were the Progressive Pioneer at Homestead, the Antelope Argus, the Dagmar Record, the Coalridge Call, the Outlook Promoter, the Dooley Sun and the Flaxville Democrat. He conducted these various publications for a time, disposing of them chiefly to men whom he had given the local management. All of them except the Antelope Independent, which he established later, were sold. The Independent is the third paper published in that village. This and the Pioneer Press of Plentywood now comprise Mr. Dolin's interests in the Montana newspaper field.

He bought the Pioneer Press in February, 1918, from George Weatherhead, its founder. The records show the paper was established June 9, 1916, and has been in continuous publication. Mr. Dolin has made it the official paper of the county and he has had the county work for five years, at first doing it under contract at Medicine Lake.

Medicine Lake when Mr. Dolin first saw it was a hamlet consisting of a postoffice, a store, livery and restaurant, and was thirty miles from a railroad. He was there when the Great Northern was built in and gave the station the name "Flandrem." There was no public domain for entry and the occupants of the country were squatters. At a point ten miles east of the lake Mr. Dolin exercised his privileges under the homestead laws. He proved up and acquired title, and the claim is still a part of his property possessions. While proving up he had a shack 10 by 12 feet, which became the nucleus of subsequent additions until he now has substantial building improvements. He also prepared a "soddy" to shelter his stock. Mr. Dolin as equipment for his claim shipped in a car containing four horses, a cow and some feed, and he used the horses while working his land. When he left the homestead he turned its management over to tenants, and has since acquired a section of land, now largely developed as a grain proposition. He has also raised some flax, and his efforts as a farmer have been rewarded with fairly satisfactory results.

During America's participation in the World war Mr. Dolin's newspapers were made the vehicle for the gospel of patriotism, and in proportion to his means he individually accepted such burdens as involved the purchase of bonds. Mr. Dolin is affiliated with the Williston Lodge of Elks and also the Knights of Columbus at that city.

At Bainville, Montana, January 2, 1912, he married Miss Elizabeth Quinlan. She was born at Berthold, North Dakota, March 20, 1889, and was reared in the home of an uncle, Rev. Father McNulty, at St. Paul. She finished her education in the University of Minnesota and was a successful teacher after graduating. For two terms she taught in North Dakota, and did her last work in the schoolroom at Medicine Lake, Montana. Mr. and Mrs. Dolin have two children: Francis and Rosemary.

Irvin L. Shippee, who became a resident of Montana territory in 1884, has for twenty years been actively identified with the ranch and farm enterprise of Sheridan County in the vicinity of Plentywood, and was one of the earliest permanent settlers in that community.

He was born at Providence, Rhode Island, April 2, 1868, and the Shippee family has been a numerous one in that state, represented in its citizenship since colonial times. His father, Lemuel Shippee, spent all his life in Rhode Island as a farmer and died at the age of fifty-six. He married Martha Aldridge, a daughter of Anon Aldridge, a native of Rhode Island and a carpenter. Mrs. Shippee died in 1878, six years before her husband. A brief account of their children is as follows: Orrin, who died as a resident of Eustace, Florida; Benedict, who died at Providence; Edwin, who died at Foster, Rhode Island; Irvin L., of Plentywood; Izura, who became the wife of William Smith and died in Rhode Island; Juliette, who married J. B. Oatley and died in Rhode Island; Ella, wife of Adin Sherman, of Foster, Rhode Island; and Lillis, who died at Los Angeles, the wife of J. B. Morrison.

Irvin L. Shippee spent the first fifteen years of his life on his father's farm, a quarter section of the rich and fertile soil of Providence County. He had little opportunity to attend school, and even before leaving home he worked out two years for wages of six dollars a month. He and his sister Lillis started west together, crossing the entire continent to Ventura, California. At Ventura the sister found employment in a hotel, while he went to work on a grain and horse ranch. His wages were $30 a month, as much money as he could earn in half a year back home. He remained there about three months and then decided to accompany Alex Peters to Montana. Young Peters knew something of Montana, and Irvin Shippee had just about enough money to pay his expenses to Great Falls. The two young men remained together and worked as ranch hands for two years on the Sage Creek Sheep Company's ranch. The pay was $35 a month, and Mr. Shippee continued to give his time to various ranch outfits at the prevailing wages until his marriage. While working hands were paid better here than in the east, even the high wage of the west offered a slow and tedious route to prosperity. Mr. Shippee proved his thrift and earnestness by putting his capital to good use, either loaning it or investing it in stock, and so after some fifteen years of steady work he could estimate his accumulations in property and money to the value of about $6,000. About that time he changed his status from an employe, and leaving the locality of Stamford brought his nucleus of stock into eastern Montana. At that time, in 1900, Plentywood was not a name in local geography and the entire region was known as the Culbertson Country. The first winter Mr. Shippee spent east of the site of Plentywood, merely looking after his stock and the following year moved to the Muddy and erected a pioneer house of logs, which is still doing duty as part of his residence. He hauled the logs for his cabin from the Missouri River at Culbertson, and also brought enough for shed timbers for his horses and cattle shelters. He had sufficient horse power to perform such heavy hauling, and had had considerable experience as a freighter in the Great Falls country, bringing along his outfit for this service.

Mr. Shippee continued the stock business, handling both horses and cattle, and raised only a few oats on his farm for horse feed until the country began to be closed up by settlement. His ranch brand for cattle was "lazy AH" on the right ribs, and for horses "T lazy 5" on the left hip. He had one decided advantage in that his ranch property lay near the Fort Peck Indian Reservation, into which no settlers could enter, though he did not find it difficult to make friends with the Indians and secure grazing privileges. By 1913 it seemed to Mr. Shippee that the entire government domain was alive with homesteaders, and since then his stock enterprise has gradually been curtailed and farming has become a substantial industry.

Mr. Shippee entered a half section after he had it pretty well improved, and that tract is now the center of his rather extensive ranch domain. He has developed by fencing and building a ranch of 2,186 acres, about 400 acres constituting his farm. Of a dozen crops planted since he began farming in earnest he has harvested something every year but two, the year 1919 registering his first complete failure.

Mr. Shippee is a director of the First National Bank of Plentywood and is vice president of the Citizens State Bank of Antelope. He has never courted the responsibilities and honors of politics, and has been satisfied to vote at elections as a republican, his first presidential ballot going to Benjamin Harrison in 1892. Both he and his wife were modest factors in promoting the success of their country during the war, and Mrs. Shippee for a number of months plied her knitting needles in making garments allotted to her by the Red Cross Chapter.

January 7, 1901, at Utica, Montana, Mr. Shippee married Miss Elizabeth Jackson, who was born in the Province of Ontario, Canada, July 4, 1865, daughter of W. J. and Jennie (Dagliesh) Jackson. Her brothers and sisters are: William Jackson, of Fergus County, Montana; Peter, of Utica; Grace, wife of William D. Dooley, of Dooley, Montana; Howard, of Hermiston, Oregon; Mary, wife of Ed Morse, of Big Sandy, Montana; Ed and Clinton, of Hermiston, Oregon; and Lucy, wife of Milton Lehner, of Wallace, Idaho.

Louis A. Mangan, M. D. As a capable physician and surgeon Doctor Mangan has performed the work of a pioneer professional man in the Outlook community of Montana, where he located July 18, 1914. For over a year he was absent in army duty both in this country and abroad, but in 1919 rejoined his old friends at Outlook and resumed the work that has brought him such enviable reputation among the medical fraternity of Northeastern Montana.

Doctor Mangan was born in Pembina County, North Dakota, April 28, 1886, and grew up in a farmer's home. His father, Patrick Mangan, a native of County Wicklow, Ireland, came to America at the age of fourteen. He lived for several years at Toronto and elsewhere in Ontario, and eventually became foreman in lumber mills. There he met his wife, then a boarding house keeper. His early life was destitute of formal educational opportunities, but he was a man of intelligence and by persistent labor achieved a substantial success. On coming to the United States he settled in the Red River Valley of the North, added other land to his homestead by purchase, and left the well equipped estate where his widow now lives. He died on his farm in 1918, at the age of ninety-one. Patrick Mangan married Jane Cooper, who was born in the north of Ireland and was left an orphan at the age of eight years. She came to New York at the age of sixteen and was living at Bracebridge, Ontario, when she met the vigorous young Irishman whom she married. Their children were: Robert, who died on the home farm; Mary, wife of Patrick O'Toole; John and Elizabeth, both at the old homestead; Helen, wife of George Morton, of Manning, North Dakota; Fred, a farmer at home; Susan, wife of Thomas O'Toole, of Crystal, North Dakota; and Dr. Louis A.

Dr. Louis A. Mangan left the farm at the age of eighteen, and from that time forward depended upon his own exertions to achieve the goal of his ambition, a liberal education and a professional career. He did his first college work at Notre Dame University in Indiana, where he waited on table and did laboratory work as a means of meeting expenses. He was a student in the University of Minnesota, where he also waited on table. He acquired his medical education in the Northwestern University Medical School at Chicago, and while there he carried a paper route, tended a furnace, waited on table, pressed clothes, clerked in flower stores, and later had work more valuable to him in his training as a physician in the office of Dr. Paul B. Magnuson, then chief surgeon of the Chicago and Alton Railway, the Union Stock Yards and the Chicago Junction Railroad. Doctor Magnuson entrusted him with looking after the night calls and other duties. During his senior year at Northwestern he was also employed as a house physician in the People's Hospital at Chicago, and it was with this thorough training and experience that Doctor Mangan came out to Montana soon after graduating and receiving his diploma as a Doctor of Medicine from Northwestern University.

After one year in general practice at Outlook he opened the St. Anthony Hospital, a private enterprise which he owned until recently and which is now the Outlook General Hospital. This hospital has an equipment of ten beds, but is built for larger capacity, and in the past five years it has rendered a splendid service not only on the Montana side but to patients from Southern Saskatchewan.

Doctor Mangan made arrangements for others to handle his practice and left Outlook December 28, 1917, to begin his duties in the army. He enlisted in Chicago, was commissioned January 10, 1918, with the rank of first lieutenant, and was first assigned to duty at Fort Oglethorpe, Georgia. While there he attended the officers training camp, and he also saw many of the German troops removed from the interned ships in New York harbor. Going north to Hoboken he joined Base Hospital No. 46, and crossed the ocean without incident of encountering a submarine, landing at Liverpool June 21st and proceeding by way of Southampton across the channel to Cherbourg, France. His unit was sent to Bazoilles-Sur-Meuse, an important army hospital center. Doctor Mangan was placed on the surgical staff and had charge of two surgical wards for a month. He was then ordered with an operating team to the St. Mihiel sector, reporting to Colonel Flint of Mobile Hospital No. 39. He remained there on duty during twelve days of the St. Mihiel drive. September 26th he was sent to a point ten kilometers south of Verdun, where he reported to the eminent American surgeon Colonel Crile of Cleveland, Ohio, in charge of Mobile Hospital No. 5. That was his place of duty until after the signing of the armistice, when he was ordered back to the base and soon afterward put in charge of the Roentgenological laboratory of Base Hospital No. 46 and Provisional Hospital No. 1. March 20, 1919, Doctor Mangan was ordered to St. Nazaire for transportation home, crossed the ocean on the transport Madaaska, arrived at Newport News without incident May 6th, and was mustered out at Camp Dix, New Jersey, May 11th. From there he went to Chicago, where he met Mrs. Mangan, and both returned to Outlook, where he soon resumed his professional work.

April 28, 1915, at Chicago, Doctor Mangan married Miss Delia L. Gallagher, one of a family of two sons and three daughters born to Edward and Bridget Gallagher. Mrs. Mangan is a native of Albany, New York, where she was born in 1886 and is a graduate nurse of St. Bernard's Hospital. Doctor and Mrs. Mangan have one son, Robert.

William Denmon Dooley trailed a bunch of cattle into Northeastern Montana before any of the section lines had been run by the Government surveyors, worked his stock on the public domain, later acquired a homestead, developed a profitable ranch and farm, and when a railroad was constructed across his land and a station established the name given it was Dooley. Dooley is now one of the promising towns of Northeastern Montana, and the name fitly honors the pioneer activities and influences of one of the best citizens of Sheridan County.

It was the impetus of boyhood adventure that sent William Denmon Dooley into Montana nearly thirty years ago. He was born at Mount Sterling, Montgomery County, Kentucky, June 14, 1875, and spent most of his life before coming to Montana in Missouri. His grandfather, Jabez Dooley, was an Irishman who established the family in Kentucky at Winchester, where he is buried. He spent his years as a farmer and married Rebecca Scobey. One of their children was Obediah Dooley, who was born in Kentucky, was a slave holder's son and grew up on a plantation where most of the labor was performed by negroes. As a soldier he did what he could for the establishment of the Confederate States of America. The war over he returned home to find his parents working in the fields, whereas previously they had been of the independent class. He, too, had to resort to labor to lay the foundation of a career, and spent the rest of his life in Kentucky as a farmer. He died at the age of sixty-two. His wife was Willett Highland, daughter of Denmon Highland, of German stock. Her father was also of the slave holding class. She died in middle life, the mother of the following children: Annie, who became Mrs. Emmet Drake and died in Montgomery County, Kentucky; David, of Clay County, Missouri; Willet, an osteopathic physician at Cameron, Missouri; Bettie L., who married Charles Tapp and died in Colorado Springs, Colorado; Jabez, of Oklahoma; Pearl, who was married and died near Sharpsburg, Kentucky; and William Denmon.

When about nine years of age William D. Dooley left the home of his parents in Kentucky, where he had begun his education in a country school, and went to live with an uncle in Missouri, in Clay County. He finished his education in the schools of Barry, that state, grew up in a country community and knew nothing of the world outside until he discovered it for himself.

In 1892, before he was eighteen years of age, a Nebraska resident then visiting in Clay County induced him to return to Nebraska with him and his nephew. The nephew was a boy chum of William Dooley. The trip to Nebraska was made only with the intention of visiting and then returning home. Things happened which changed the boys' plans and instead of going East they came West in search of "big wages" popularly supposed to be paid for ranch work in Montana. A train on the Union Pacific took them to Ogden, and after visiting Salt Lake they went north to Butte and finally reached Fort Benton. Arriving there they were confronted with the real situation. Their money was nearly gone, and something had to be done to repair their resources. They accompanied some wool wagons going across to Lewistown. About that time homesickness struck young Dooley and he would have given his part of the world to be able to go home. However, he was determined to discover the real truth about the high wages paid working boys. His first job was on a sheep ranch at $35 a month. Soon afterward he went to the range as a cowpuncher at $40 a month. By that time he had worn off his homesickness and was becoming acclimated. Mr. Dooley continued a range man for wages while he remained in the Judith Basin country. Among well known stockmen his employers were Alvin Lincoln, Charley Belden and the McNamara brothers.

Abandoning the Judith Basin country Mr. Dooley came into Eastern Montana, bringing a bunch of forty head of cattle which he had accumulated. He swam them across the Missouri River and trailed them into the Plentywood locality of what was then Valley County. Accompanying him was Irvin Shippee of Plentywood, and both were among the pioneers of this region.

Mr. Dooley's ranching efforts for nine years were extended with headquarters just east of Plentywood. He was one of the parties to sign the petition encouraging Government survey of the public domain. Not satisfied with his first location, after the settlement of the public lands began in earnest he came further northeast and located the south half of section 17, township 36, range 56. There he built his pioneer shelter, the nucleus of his present seven-room home. Gradually his efforts in the cattle and horse business expanded. His stock was run under the brand "4-4" on the left rib. Annually for eighteen years he has been a stock shipper, his first shipment going out the year after his settlement as a squatter near Plentywood.

His ranch has developed to include 1,500 acres, and 400 acres are in cultivation for the growing of grain and forage. He had some harvest every year until 1919, in which year of drought he threshed only forty-two bushels of wheat, and mowed the rest of his crop for hay.

The Soo railway was built through the Dooley ranch in 1913, and from the beginning he has been one of the most liberal and enterprising in promoting the commercial prosperity of the town of Dooley. He is one of the partners in the Hunter Lumber Company, was one of the promoters of the Farmers Elevator, also of the Citizens State Bank of Dooley, and has served that bank as president from the beginning. The political influences of his early life were those of the democratic party, and his first presidential choice was Mr. Bryan, but he has been satisfied to vote and has never been an aspirant for public office.

At Utica in the Judith Basin country on July 26, 1902, Mr. Dooley married Miss Grace Jackson. Her father, William Jackson, was a native of Ireland, lived in Canada for some years, and was a pioneer settler of the Judith Basin, where after ranching for a number of years he moved to Oregon and is now a resident of Hermiston. His wife was Jennie Dalgleish, a native of Canada. The children of the Jackson family were: William, of Utica, Montana; Lizzie, wife of Irvin Shippee, of Plentywood; Mrs. Dooley, who was born in Ontario May 25, 1873; Peter, of Utica; Howard, of Idaho; Edward, of Hermiston, Oregon; Mary, wife of Ed Morse, of Big Sandy, Montana; Clinton, of Hermiston; and Lucy, wife of Milton Lehner, of Wallace, Idaho. Mr. and Mrs. Dooley have two sons, named Clifford L. and Bradley Lawrence.

AUSTIN NORTH, known all over Eastern Montana as a real estate dealer and Billings city and country builder, is a self-made man in every sense of the word. He was born on the 20th day of May, 1869, "way down in old Iowa" just west of Des Moines in Dallas County, where he spent his early life on his father's dairy stock farm. While it was a boyhood, involving work from three or four o'clock in the morning until nine and ten at night, feeding, milking and caring for the cattle, growing the crops and food stuffs, clearing out the underbrush on the river bottom lands and cutting timber for firewood and fence posts, he looks back upon it as the foundation of his strength and endurance and the source of many other qualities that have helped him to success in business.

In 1888 his mother's health failed and the family went with her to California and Southern Oregon, where she departed this life in the fall of 1888. The father and children remained during the following winter and in the spring of 1889 went back to the old home in Iowa. Austin North, however, returned to the West and located at Billings, where he found employment on the range, in the United States Postoffice and with the Northern Pacific Railroad Company. Thus since 1889 he has lived his life in helping make Billings the big city of the Northwest; the natural distributing center of the Midland Empire covering Eastern Montana and Northern Wyoming.

To his various business claims he has given close and studious personal attention, but numerous and exacting as were these demands, they were not sufficient to abate in the slightest degree his great and abiding faith in the progress and development of his home city. Trained to hard work and long hours, he has been enterprising, progressive, energetic and farseeing. His individual example has been twenty years in advance of the growth of the wonderful little city he has done so much to help build, and of the Yellowstone country which he had persistently advertised near and far.

A very strong character, true and loyal friend, good citizen, loving husband and indulgent father, Mr. North has been a man among men in Montana, prominent, influential and useful. Every activity in his life has been employed directly or indirectly for the general welfare, in sympathy with the righteous aspirations and efforts for elevation and improvement.

He never says "it can't be done," and only death itself can stay the vitality of his unaching mind and body. "Believe in yourself and dare to do, then give to the world the best you have and the best will come back to you" is a motto hanging on the office walls of the North Real Estate Investment Company. While this motto has been the keynote for Mr. North and his business organization, hundreds of others have read it and derived inspiration for their own careers.

His work as a city and country builder, his unusual ability and force of character, his continual willingness to do for Billings with every energy and faculty, guided by lofty, loyal ideals and dominated at all times by a strong sense of duty, is an achievement in itself, and destined to survive his mortal presence in the community.

He has always been a persistent champion of public and private parks, playgrounds and outdoor sports. Many years ago he bought the beautiful natural park estate adjoining the city on the northeast near the business and industrial center of Billings, and built a massive three-story stone Country Club House with golf, baseball and athletic field, extensive grandstand, bleacher and automobile parking space. All of this was done at his own expense. At the entrance stood a great sign "Come out in the open air and sunshine. Health is Wealth. The mark of the Master and the greatest asset on earth. This will be the public pleasure grounds for all clean outdoor sports."

When Mr. North has recognized a call to what he conceives to be his duty he never shirks or hesitates, but goes straightforward to the end, no matter what the consequences may be in personal inconvenience or loss to himself.

Mr. North organized and established the Austin North Company January 1, 1892, to carry on and transact a general real estate, mortgage loan and insurance business. This business was reincorporated as the present North Real Estate Investment Company in 1902. He is still its president. The company occupies its own building on the corner opposite the court house with the most complete, best arranged, well lighted ground floor business offices in the city. It is the oldest established real estate office in Eastern Montana.

The same year Mr. North also organized the Billings Commercial Exchange, composed of the leading bankers, lawyers and business men of the city. He was secretary of this organization, to promote the general prosperity of all the varied interests of the State of Montana and especially those of the County of Yellowstone and City of Billings, to procure, preserve and disseminate reliable information in relation to commercial, financial and industrial affairs—that is to say, its railroads, banking and exchange, stock and wool growing, stockyards, slaughtering, packing and manufacturing interests; its immigration, agricultural and horticultural interests; public improvements, educational, professional, social, moral and benevolent interests; to promote efficient, honest and economical government, and to oppose by all honorable means opposition to these and all other public interests.

Ten years later Mr. North initiated the Billings Chamber of Commerce, a strong organization of the leading citizens occupying its own beautiful modern three-story brick club house. This is still carrying on the same public welfare work for the entire Midland Empire, and Mr. North is an active member on its good roads, publicity and entertainment committees.

Mr. North is a republican. He is one of the owners of the Billings Daily Gazette, the leading newspaper of Eastern Montana. He has always taken an active interest in national, state, county and city political affairs, though never a candidate for nor has held any political office.

He is a good advertiser and knows how to make publicity count most, which is evidenced by his work while chairman of the Billings Publicity Committee. He is a farmer and livestock grower and operates a 1,200 acre farm north of the city, planning its development as a means of carrying out his ambition to be a producer.

Mr. North's father was T. R. North, of Indiana, in which state he enlisted in the Civil war October 16, 1862, in Company K, Fifty-seventh Indiana Volunteers, under Capt. E. L. Billings. The mother of Mr. North was Naomi E. Stewart of Illinois.

Mr. North married Miss Hattie Swartz, of Michigan. They have five children living: Two daughters born respectively September 12, 1912, and December 13, 1916; and three sons born January 25, 1904, May 22, 1911, and April 19, 1915. The family live in a good modern home on a high hill in "The Elevation" (Top o' the Town) overlooking the city from the Northwest.

Mr. North's activities did not cease with the beginning or the ending of the World war. He served as an active committeeman for all the Liberty and Victory loan drives during the war in the selling of the bonds. After the war he inaugurated the "Build Now" campaign for Billings that business might "carry on" and employment be furnished soldier and civilian during the reconstruction period.

Mount St. Charles College. Education has always gone hand in hand with the religious activities of the Catholic Church. Rt. Rev. John P. Carroll, who was installed as Bishop of Helena January 31, 1905, was primarily an educator, and in a very busy administration he has emphasized all phases of the educational program. He had been Bishop of Helena only a few years when he erected on what was known as Capitol Hill Mount St. Charles College, which has now completed its tenth year and has earned its right to a high place among Montana's educational institutions.

It is a boarding and day college for young men and boys, under the direction of the secular priests of the diocese of Helena.

The site of the college and the purpose of its establishment are best described by quoting from the address delivered by Bishop Carroll at the occasion of the laying of the cornerstone September 27, 1909. Bishop Carroll said, addressing directly Hon. William Howard Taft, President of the United States, who had journeyed out to Montana to assist in the ceremony:

"Mr. President we have laid the corner stone of Capitol Hill College. The building which will rise on these foundations we have named from the eminence whereon we stand—an eminence so lofty and beautiful and so set apart from city, valley and mountains that it commands a complete view of that magnificent panorama which nature and man have spread out before us at this gate of the Rocky Mountains. No wonder the people of Helena from the day their city was made the capital of Montana have with one accord pointed to this eminence as the natural site for the capitol building. Disappointed that the capitol was not located here they are today consoled by the thought that our college will perpetuate the name they have given to the hill, and as the years go by will become a most potent ally of the state in securing obedience to the laws enacted in the capitol. The aim of Capitol Hill College will be to give the young men of Montana a thorough, liberal education which will fit them for leadership in any vocation they may choose and at the same time so surround them with religious atmosphere that they may ever follow conscience as their guide. Knowledge and virtue are the armor with which Capitol Hill College shall strive to equip its students. And these, says Washington, are the chief supports, the firmest props of both state and nation. It is with singular pleasure, Mr. President, I welcome you to this height and to this ceremony of the laying of the corner stone of our college."

The campus comprises about fifty acres, with ample accommodations for all present and future building plans, and also with generous fields for athletic sports. The equipment of buildings include the main college building, Gothic in style, four stories and basement, the new Gymnasium and Science Hall, completed in 1917-18. Two additional buildings are under construction at present, a dormitory building and a building for younger boys of the preparatory department.

From the beginning physical training has been a regular part of the curriculum, and military drill is also an established feature of the program. Mount St. Charles was a unit of the Reserved Officers Training Corps. The college is a member of the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, and its high school department is accredited by the State of Montana. The college maintains a full four year high school and four year college course, and also professional courses preparing for the regular work of medical and law schools. The principal executive officers of Mount St. Charles College are Very Rev. John J. Tracy, Ph. D., president, Rev. Norbert C. Hoff, vice president and treasurer, and Rev. Arthur J. Harrington, prefect of discipline. The former presidents of the college were Rev. Stephen J. Sullivan, D. D.; Rev. John L. McMullen, A. M.; Rev. Peter F. Macdonald, A. B. The present faculty is as follows: Very Rev. John J. Tracy, Ph. D., Political Science; Rev. Norbert C. Hoff, A. M., Philosophy, Biology; Rev. John S. Foley, Greek; Rev. Jeremiah I. Lehane, Latin; Rev. James H. O'Neill, A. M., Physics; Rev. J. Alphonsus Rooney, S. T. L., Mathematics; Rev. Patrick Casey, A. M., Sociology, History; Rev. Thomas B. Killila, A. B., S. T. B., English; Rev. Arthur J. Harrington, Latin; Rev. C. E. Turnbull, Dramatic Expression; Rev. John Delaney, Chemistry; Capt. Harry K. Adams, U. S. A., Military Science; Mr. George Kessler, French; Mr. H. F. Delaney, English; Mrs. J. Myron King, Music; Mr. William Fluhr, Athletic Coach; Dr. B. V. McCabe, Medical Adviser.

Rev. Norbert C. Hoff, vice president and treasurer of Mount St. Charles College, was educated for the Catholic priesthood, and has given practically all his mature career to this Helena institution.

Norbert Casper Hoff was born in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, November 10, 1889, son of James and Ida (Casper) Hoff, also natives of Milwaukee and representing two pioneer Milwaukee families. These families emigrated from Southern Germany after the Revolution of 1848 to become members of a Christian Communistic colony at Cheboygan, Wisconsin. The communistic plan failed. The grandparents became founders of Wisconsin Lakes Ice Company, and members of the family also laid the foundation for the first Catholic Church built and still in use in Milwaukee.

Rev. Norbert C. Hoff received his A. B. degree from Columbia College at Dubuque, Iowa, in 1910, the Master of Arts degree from the same institution in 1916, and he also holds the degree S. T. B. from the Catholic University of America at Washingon. He met Bishop Carroll at the time Mount St. Charles College was founded and at that time decided to study theology, which he did between 1910 and 1914 at the St. Paul Seminary, an institution founded by the celebrated Archbishop Ireland and financed by the late James J. Hill. Father Hoff arrived in Montana in August, 1914, and has devoted all the talents of his mind and heart to the institution of which he is now vice president. He is also well known throughout the state as a lecturer.

Rev. Arthur J. Harrington, who is Prefect of Discipline at Mount St. Charles College in Helena, was appointed to that post in 1919, and had previously served as Professor of Latin in the College.

He was born at Newport, Rhode Island, July 30, 1890, and received his preliminary education in the public schools of his native city, graduating from high school there. He was a student in the College of St. Laurant at Montreal from 1909 to 1912, acquired his philosophical education in the Seminary of Philosophy at Montreal during 1912-14, and from 1914 to 1918 was a student in St. Paul Seminary at St. Paul, Minnesota. He was ordained in the Helena Cathedral on Pentecost Sunday, May 19, 1918, by Bishop Carroll.

Frank A. Weinrich, of Mondak, who is numbered among the early permanent settlers of this region, is a contribution to the State of Montana from Henry County, Illinois, where he was born January 4, 1875, a son of Charles and Mattie (Schroeder) Weinrich, the former of whom was born in Germany but came to the United States when nineteen years old. He located in Henry County, Illinois, where he spent the remainder of his useful life and died there in 1888. His widow survives him and is living in Henry County. Their children were as follows: Edward J., who is a resident of Richland County, Montana; Frank A., who was the second in order of birth; Annie, who is the wife of James Olien, of Perry, Iowa; and Minnie, who is the wife of Fred Gutthardt, of Illinois.

The early boyhood of Frank A. Weinrich was passed on his father's farm in Henry County, Illinois, and he attended the rural schools of that locality. When only fourteen years old he began to be self-supporting by working on neighboring farm for $10 per month, and was advanced until he received double that amount. At the close of several years he began farming on his own account, but did not find it very profitable, for those were the days of low prices for farm produce, and he sold corn as low as 11 to 15 cents per bushel. He therefore decided to try his fortune in the West and left Illinois for Cascade, Montana, whither a friend had preceded him. To his delight he found no difficulty in securing employment at ranching at $35 per month, which then seemed big wages to him.

In 1901 Mr. Weinrich believed he saw a good opportunity to go into business for himself and moved to Mondak. At that time it was in the Yellowstone Valley District, into which new settlers were flocking, and he saw that a reliable livery business was liable to prosper. Mr. Weinrich bought out Pat Gallagher, who owned the only livery business in this section, starting in with a couple of teams and buggies, but gradually developing his holdings until he also controlled a valuable freighting business, hauling between Mondak and Tokna, now Savage. During the nine years that he was in the livery business he did some very valuable work in the settlement of this region by assisting settlers to locate, driving oftentimes as far out as Enid and Savage and into the Red Water country on the west. When the auto took the place of the horse he was enterprising and farsighted enough to see his opportunity, and built a garage at Mondak disposing of it with his livery barn about 1910.

In the meanwhile Mr. Weinrich had bought a ranch, stocked it with cattle of the grade popular in this section, and became a rancher. He runs his cattle under his original brand "EA" on the left shoulder, and has bred up his stock to a considerable degree. Mr. Weinrich has contributed much toward the permanent development of this region by improving his own land and encouraging others to follow his example. While he has maintained his residence at Mondak, he continues to operate his ranch, and his home is one of the best in Roosevelt County. He owns the site of the old Fort Union just at the mouth of the Yellowstone River, where the first military stand was made in this part of the west. There are plenty of silent evidences of its importance as a defensive outpost of civilization still in existence, and as historical ground it is very interesting.

Mr. Weinrich identifies himself politically as a young man with the republican party, and cast his first presidential ballot for Major McKinley in 1896 in Henry County, Illinois. He was elected a commissioner for Valley County, Montana, and had served but three months when Sheridan County was organized, and he was elected for a term of six years as commissioner of the new county. While a Valley commissioner he served on the board with Commissioners J. A. Ferris and William McBride. His associates on the new board are Harry Loucks and Eli Hanson. Their chief work was the opening up the county with highways. When Roosevelt County was organized Mr. Weinrich was one of the energetic promoters of the project, and was named as one of its first commissioners in the bill creating the new county, in the naming of which Weinrich had a hand, as he has always been an enthusiastic admirer of Colonel Roosevelt. With him on the board are R. E. Patch and John H. Anderson. Already the board has made progress in promoting the project of building a highway, with Federal aid, across the county east and west, and it chose Mondak as the county seat and installed the county records there. First a republican, Mr. Weinrich joined Colonel Roosevelt in his revolt against the conservatives in the republican ranks and became a member of the progressive movement, and still belongs to that branch of the republican party.

On May 22, 1907, Mr. Weinrich was married at Williston, North Dakota, to Miss Pearl Stiehl, a daughter of Daniel and Nancy (Hall) Stiehl. Mrs. Weinrich was born at Salem, North Dakota on March 16, 1885, one of five sisters. Mr. and Mrs.

Weinrich have the following children: Bert H., Harry F. and Frank G.

Mr. Weinrich's interest is centered in the new county he has assisted in creating, and his best work is given to shaping its policies in such a manner as to insure its rapid growth. A man of considerable experience in county building and road construction, he may be depended upon to do well whatever he undertakes, and Roosevelt County is fortunate in having at its head men of the caliber and patriotism of Mr. Weinrich and his associates. Mr. Weinrich is a prominent man and one of means, but he has earned every bit of his prosperity. Coming to this region as he did, a practically penniless young man, with nothing but his willingness to work and his determination to succeed, his progress is very remarkable and praiseworthy. The early settlers of any section deserve all they secure, for they have to go through experiences in the making of their neighborhood that the majority would shrink from in dismay. They face hardships and discouragements of every kind, but if they are of the staying kind their compensation comes, and then they feel that they have their reward for their endurance and hard work. The history of this country shows that the men who developed its different sections were of the character of Mr. Weinrich and those with whom he labored, and they are now enjoying the well-merited prestige that is theirs.

Joe D. Filcher has been a Montana resident for thirty years or more, grew up in this state, and has had a varied experience in commercial and public affairs at Boulder, and is serving as the present postmaster of that city.

Mr. Filcher was born at Santa Rosa, California, November 7, 1878. His father, John T. Filcher, who was born in Staffordshire, England, in 1838, was brought to this country by his parents in 1842. The family lived for several years in Ohio and later moved to Marysville, California. John T. Filcher received his education in those two states, was married at Marysville, and became a silk maker by trade. He moved to Santa Rosa in 1875, continued in his business there, and in 1880 settled in Montana. For several years he was employed as a skimmer at the blast furnace in the smelters at Butte, and in 1889 moved to Boulder, and was one of the early residents of that city. He was a prospector for gold, silver, lead and copper. He died at Boulder in 1906. Politically he was a democrat, was a member of the Christian Church and was affiliated with the Masonic fraternity. He married Mary Nevells, who was born in Arkansas in 1847, and is now living at Calgary, Alberta, Canada. A brief record of their children is as follows: Eliza, who died at the age of nineteen; Ralph, employed in the Gas Works at Butte; Thomas, who died at the age of four years; Charles, who died at the age of eight; Jennie E., wife of Charles Zang, a contractor and builder at Calgary, Canada; Joe D.; Enoch, who died at the age of six years; and Maude, wife of Thomas Mills, of Helena, assistant to the chief clerk of the Montana Division of the Railway Mail Service.

Joe D. Filcher attended school at Butte one year, at Comet in Jefferson County two years, and graduated from the Boulder High School in 1896. Later he took a special course in bookkeeping at the Butte Business College, from which he was graduated in 1900. Mr. Filcher's working experience covers nearly a quarter of a century. For three years he worked in the mines around Butte, for two years was bookkeeper at Avon for the Birdseye Mercantile Company, was clerk with the Boulder Mercantile Company at Boulder four years, and during 1910 was appointed and served as deputy sheriff under Sheriff A. V. Gibson. He then resumed his work with the Boulder Mercantile Company, remaining with that establishment until 1918. For over a year Mr. Filcher was deputy sheriff under the present sheriff, T. L. Locker, but resigned in September, 1919, to accept the appointment of postmaster at Boulder, and is now giving all his time to the efficient administration of the local post-office. He also served as alderman of the second ward, and resigned that office to become postmaster.

Mr. Filcher is a republican. He is a member of the Boulder School Board, owns a modern home in that city, and is considered one of the community's most substantial and public spirited residents.

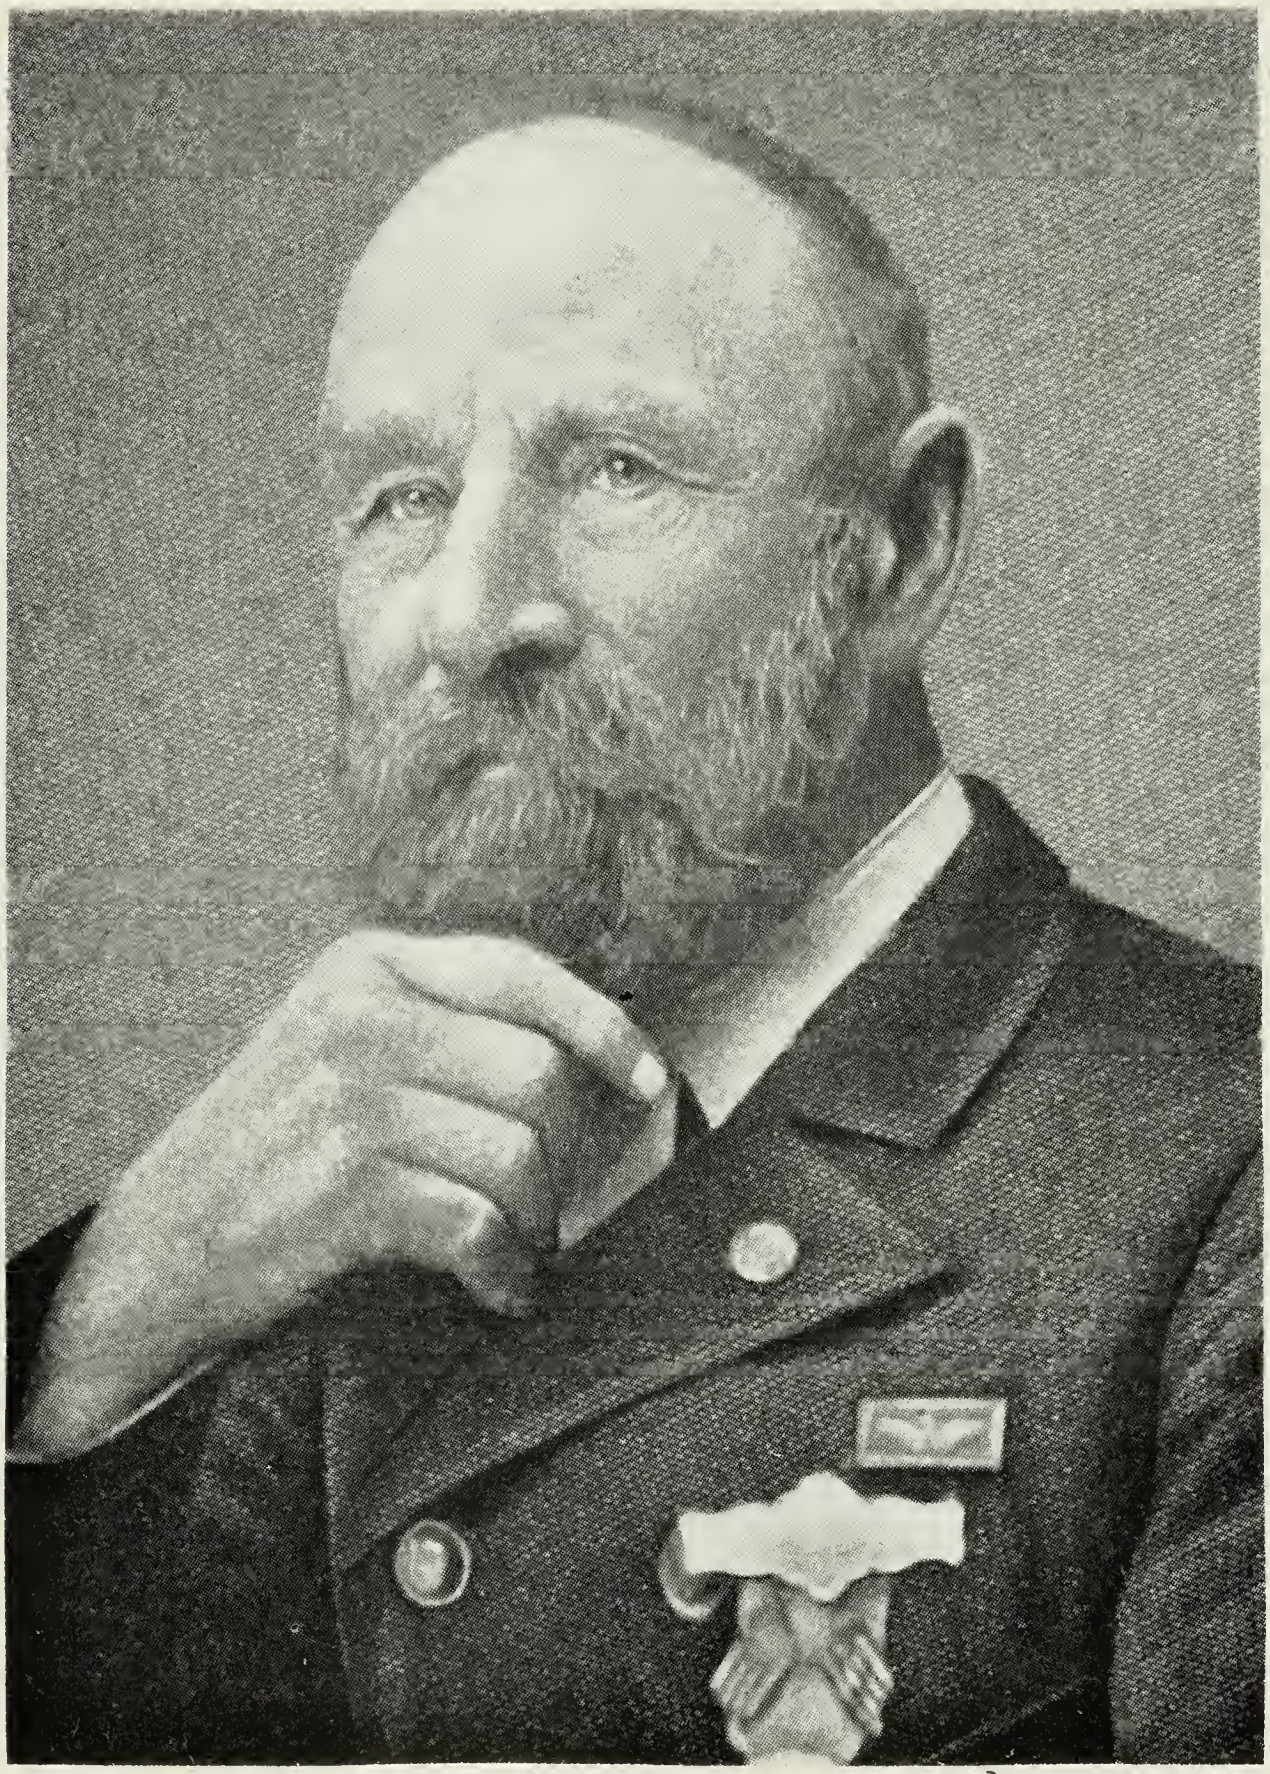
In 1908, at Butte, he married Miss Jessie Taylor. Her father, J. K. Taylor, is an honored old time resident of Boulder and Montana. He was born in South Carolina in 1854 and lived in his native state to the age of twenty-five. On coming to Montana in 1879 he engaged in mining at Gregory, and since 1904 has lived at Boulder. For many years he was a carpenter and builder. He married Charlotte Marie Smith, who was born at Portsmouth, Ohio, March 31, 1865. Mrs. Filcher is the third in a family of nine children. The oldest of them, Ruby Charlotte Taylor, is the wife of Robert Tedford, a farmer at Santa Ana, California; John Keene Taylor is a resident of Boulder; James Bannon enlisted in June, 1918, for four years as a sailor, and is now with the United States battleship Maine; Orin M. Taylor owns a meat market at Boulder; Isabelle is the wife of Clyde Darby, a tractor engineer living at Boulder; Lewis Gregory is a butcher by trade and lives at Butte; Arthur H. is a student in the law department of the University of Michigan, while Grover C., the youngest, graduated from the Boulder High School in 1919.

Charles Fremont Green came to Montana in the early days as one of the contractors in the construction of the Northern Pacific Railway. He afterward became a successful horse and cattle rancher in Teton County, and through the increasing scope of his activities attained a place of great prominence and influence in that locality.

Mr. Green, whose death occurred November 17, 1914, spent practically all his mature career in Montana. He was born at Janesville, Wisconsin, January 14, 1862. He acquired his early education in the public schools at Janesville and also attended the Spearfish Academy. He was with his brother, William Green, when he came to Montana in the early '80s. After helping complete some of the contracts for the Northern Pacific Railway he took up land and engaged in the horse and cattle industry in Teton County. That was his chief business until his death. He also had an interest in the stage line between Steel and Chouteau.

Mr. Green was a man prominent in his locality, making an effort along political lines. He was an active republican, but held only one public office—that of county administrator. He was a delegate to several county and state conventions. He and his wife were members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. One of the things in which he was most interested as a citizen of Teton County was the construction of good roads.

Mr. Green married Miss Jennie Morehead on April 25, 1906. Mrs. Green, who is living at Chouteau, was born at Detroit, Michigan. She is the mother of three children: Phyllis, Lloyd and Elizabeth.



Kalispell, Montana

T. A. Thompson, district judge of the Eleventh Judicial District, composed of Flathead and Lincoln counties, is a young man to hold such a responsible office. He was born at Long Lake, Minnesota, March 25, 1879, a son of K. and Anna (Odegard) Thompson, and second in their family of four children.

Judge Thompson took his academic course at the University of North Dakota and his legal one at Ann Arbor, Michigan, and in the University of North Dakota, spending two years at the former and one year at the latter institution. In 1909 Judge Thompson located at Kalispell and carried on a general practice, in which he was very successful. Not long after he came to this region he was made attorney of Flathead County through appointment, and was elected to that office, making a record for himself as a fearless and energetic prosecutor that brought him prominently before the people. A vacancy occurring in the district court, he was appointed to fill it, and approval of the appointment was shown by the people in his district by his election to the office in 1916.

Judge Thompson was married at Wadena, Minnesota, to Miss Maud Longfellow, a daughter of Walter and Louise (Hitter) Longfellow. Mrs. Thompson is a graduate of the Wadena High School, and is a most charming and accomplished lady of considerable musical talent, which she has carefully cultivated. Judge and Mrs. Thompson have two children, James L. and Illa Maud. Judge Thompson is a Mason and a Shriner. Both he and Mrs. Thompson affiliate with the Congregational Church of Kalispell. In politics he gives his support to the democratic party. Few men are honored by elevation to the bench so early in life as Judge Thompson, but all are convinced that he is fully fitted by natural ability and experience for the impartial discharge of its heavy responsibilities, and the people of Kalispell are proud of the distinction which has come to them through having one of their attorneys selected for the office.

Robert N. Eaton, clerk of the court of Flathead County, is a man who is interested in every movement for the advancement of the best element of Flathead County and Kalispell. He was born at Covington, Kentucky, a son of James D. and Margaret A. (Gordon) Eaton, being the youngest of the nine children of his parents.

After attending the public schools of Kentucky and North Dakota Mr. Eaton came to Kalispell in 1895. While in North Dakota he lived at Dunseith, which was named in honor of his grandmother, who bore the maiden name of Jane Dunseith and was a direct descendant of Thomas Carlisle, the famous English historian and essayist. He was a member of the North Dakota National Guards, first serving as bugler of Troop A, First Battalion of Cavalry. In 1897, when Company H of the First Montana National Guards was organized, he enlisted and was sent to Helena, Montana, but was rejected on account of physical disability. In 1902 he assisted in organizing Company H, Second Montana National Guards, and remained a member of that company. In June, 1902, he was made sergeant, and as such attended in August, 1905, the first encampment at Fort Ellis, Bozeman, a historical old fort of Indian warfare days. In May, 1906, Mr. Eaton was promoted to be first lieutenant of his company and in June was made captain, and as such attended the encampment at the new Camp Lewis on American Lake, Washington. In May, 1910, he was made major and assigned to command of the Third Battalion. In August, 1910, after attending the national encampment at American Lake, Company F and Company H of the Third Battalion were ordered into the field to fight forest fires in Western Flathead County, which service requires brave men, and were thus engaged for five weeks. This was one of the most disastrous fires Montana has ever experienced, and the National Guardsmen were placed on a line with two companies of regular United States infantry. The smoke from these fires was so thick that during the time they were raging it was impossible to see across the street at Kalispell, and even the sun was seen through a smoky haze. Cinders fell all over Flathead and adjoining counties. At the time the national guardsmen were ordered to the Mexican border Mr. Eaton was very desirous to accompany them, but was again rejected on account of disability.

In 1909 Mr. Eaton was appointed to the position of deputy clerk of the court of Flathead County, and held it until 1917, when he was elected to the office and still holds it, giving entire satisfaction. Prior to becoming connected with the county court, he served as deputy sheriff under Sheriff Gregg, and is one of the best known men in Flathead County.

In 1905 Mr. Eaton was married to Miss Florence M. Head, a daughter of Forest D. and Lucie Hannah (Cockman) Head. Mr. Head was the first county superintendent of schools of Lincoln County, Montana, and held that office for three successive terms, and was very active in promoting the intellectual development of that region. Mr. and Mrs. Eaton have three children, namely: Margaret Lucie, Florence Ida and Virginia May, all of whom are students of the Kalispell schools. Mr. Eaton belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America and is clerk of the local camp of Woodmen of the World. He is a Knight Templar Mason and is past patron of Adah Chapter No. 17, Order Eastern Star, of Kalispell. For fifteen years he served as a member of the volunteer fire department of Kalispell, and in many other ways has rendered his community and county invaluable service. Personally he is of so genial a nature that he makes friends everywhere and has been able to exert a powerful influence for good among the young men of this region, who look up to him and follow his example.

Edward F. Morgan. While America has enthusiastically welcomed back from foreign shores her beloved soldiers of the great war of 1917-18, she has not forgotten the heavy debt she is under to the veterans of another great conflict, that which was waged between the North and South, and the survivors of it are cherished by the nation and the communities enriched by their presence. One of these veterans who holds the friendship and confidence of a wide circle is Edward F. Morgan of Kalispell. He was born at Plymouth, Windsor County, Vermont, April 1, 1842, a son of Isaiah and Harriet (Potter) Morgan, of English-Irish and English extraction, respectively.

Edward F. Morgan belongs to the same family as did the distinguished Revolutionary General Morgan, who as Captain Morgan won honors at Quebec when the American colonies were still under the British rule. Later on his genius for military tactics was recognized by General Washington, who raised him to the rank of general and sent him against the British commander Tarleton, who with 500 of his own troops and 500 Indians were laying waste to North Carolina and Georgia. By a series of masterly attacks General Morgan succeeded in driving the enemy out of these colonies and captured at Wilmington, Virginia, British stores which were much needed by the colonial troops. Sir Peter Parker, an uncle of the grandmother of E. F. Morgan, was an admiral in the British navy. Her aunts melted all the pewter in the neighborhood for bullets. Henry Morgan, a brother of General Morgan, was a sufferer from the Indian attacks, his family being captured by them and compelled to accompany the savages on foot during a journey of many days. Mrs. Morgan with great presence of mind managed to leave a trail behind them by dropping from time to time minute portions of her garments, and by means of this trail, Henry Morgan followed them and finally overtaking the party, aroused his wife and children, and killed the sleeping Indians, only one of them escaping him. To prevent any future attempts at kidnaping Mr. Morgan scalped and skinned these Indians and upon his return home hung these ghastly trophies about his house as a warning of what any intruders might expect at his hands, and, needless to say, he experienced no further trouble from them.

Edward F. Morgan was only twenty-one years old when he enlisted in his country's service on October 23, 1862, in Company C, Sixteenth Vermont Volunteer Infantry, from which he was honorably discharged on October 23, 1863. On September 2, 1864 he re-enlisted in the Third Vermont Battery of Light Artillery, and remained in the service until the close of the war. He saw service at Hagerstown, on the Rappahannock, at Manassas, Petersburg, Culpeper Courthouse, Warrentown Junction and Gettysburg, and at the latter saw the Louisiana Tigers make their famous but futile charge under General Pickett, and also saw General Hancock commanding his troops near Peach Orchard. It was at Gettysburg that Mr. Morgan was severely wounded, so much so that it is a miracle he escaped alive. He was in Start's Battery, Capt. Romeo Start commanding. Shot through the arm early in the battle, he refused to leave his place, but had a piece of silk drawn through the wound to hold it together, and his arm bound up, and resumed his fighting. The breech was then shot off his gun, but he picked up another, only to have it shot from his hands. His bayonet and canteen were shot away and four bullets from his cartridge belt. His equipment was not all that suffered, for he was wounded twice across the breast, and then received a severe scalp wound, which last finally incapacitated him. In describing the latter Mr. Morgan says that the last injury made him see a million stars. During his service he was at different times under Generals Hooker, Mead and Grant. After his second discharge he returned home, but his health was impaired by his wounds and the exposure of his severe military experience, and he went to Wisconsin, where he was engaged as an engineer. Later he filed on a homestead in Cherokee County, Iowa, and developed a valuable farm from the wilderness. While a resident of Iowa he belonged to General Custer Post No. 25, Grand Army of the Republic, but later transferred to Lyon Post No. 30 of Kalispell, of which he is now adjutant and quartermaster, but at the time of its organization he was made commander, and he is very enthusiastic with relation to the Post.

On May 24, 1869, Mr. Morgan was married at Prairie du Chien, Wisconsin, to Miss Alice Jane Collins, born in Clayton County, Iowa, a daughter of Henry Clay and Mary Lucinda (Walker) Collins, the former of whom was born in Kentucky and the latter in Missouri. Of the six children born to Mr. and Mrs. Collins, Mrs. Morgan was the eldest, and she came into the world in 1850. Mr. and Mrs. Morgan had four children, but only one survived infancy, their daughter, Ruby Luella. She first attended school in Cherokee County, Iowa, and later in Kalispell, but her studies were interrupted on account of impaired eyesight. She is now the wife of J. M. Parsons, a ranchman of Rollins, Montana, and they have a son, Manford Morgan Parsons, who was born July 15, 1915.

After they had succeeded in developing their Iowa farm Mr. and Mrs. Morgan decided to move to Montana, and selected Kalispell as their future home. At that time it was a typical frontier settlement, but Mr. Morgan had faith in its future and has been spared to see his judgment backed up by the development here, in a great part of which he has taken an active share. Mr. Morgan came on ahead of his family, and as he was unable to secure any kind of a house for them, had a carpenter erect a small frame house for temporary occupation. Mrs. Morgan and the little daughter joined Mr. Morgan and they moved into this house before it was completed. This first house is still standing in the Morgan back yard, and is a sample of the shelter the pioneers of the town had to accept. Mr. Morgan was a mason by trade and soon had all he could attend to in brick laying and stone work, and he carried on a contracting business for some years. His life had been one of constant industry, and numerous houses at Kalispell and Creston and throughout the county attest to his skill. His fellow citizens proved their confidence in him by electing him public administrator in 1917. While in Iowa he was a justice of the peace for eight years.

Although far advanced in years, Mr. Morgan is seen every day on the streets of Kalispell, and is hale and hearty for his years and the hardships he has endured. Both he and Mrs. Morgan are held in the highest esteem, for they are the very salt of the earth, generous, sympathetic and helpful. No one is ever turned away from their hospitable door. Their hearts are always big enough to admit one more friend, and their kindly natures take pleasure in sharing the sorrows as well as the joys of their intimates.

Mr. Morgan has taken a deep interest in politics in national elections, and he has always supported the republican ticket.

Proud of his family and his American descent, Mr. Morgan cherishes many relics of earlier days, among them being a letter from Plymouth, Vermont, dated May 1, 1816. It would be difficult to find another man in this section who has done more for his country in both peace and war than Mr. Morgan, and his many experiences and good judgment make his counsel valued in his community and his advice is often sought by those who desire to benefit by his wisdom and knowledge of men and affairs.

ALMERON D. MORRILL. The residence of the Morrill family in the Fairview community of the Yellowstone Valley, while covering a period of only eighteen years, has in every respect been a most substantial contribution to the development and improvement of the land, the establishment of new standards of education and civic enterprise, and a later generation will undoubtedly owe a big debt to the work and character of such people as the Morrills.

For several generations the Morrill family lived in the Pine Tree State of Maine. Almeron D. Morrill was born near Bangor in Penobscot County of that state April 7, 1862. His father, Castanas Morrill, was born at Belfast, Maine, and for sixty-two years lived as a farmer on the old home place. When he left Maine for the west he settled temporarily in Oklahoma, and in 1910 moved to the Yellowstone Valley of North Dakota, where he died in August, 1911. He married Sarah Allen, daughter of a Maine farmer at Bangor. Both the Allens and Morrills were of English stock. Sarah Allen Morrill died about twenty years before her husband. She was the mother of six sons and five daughters, and the six now living are: Edwin, Henry and Mrs. Laura Coyt, all of Bangor; Philip, of Utah; Mrs. Mary Elkins, of Fairview, Montana; and Almeron D.

Almeron D. Morrill grew up on a farm, had a country school education, and left home at the age of seventeen. At that time he went to what was considered the far west, at Lyons, Nebraska. In that locality he worked as a farm hand at $8 a month, four years later became a tenant farmer, and was married in Nebraska and had no reason to be dissatisfied with what he accomplished there as a farmer and home maker. His removal to the Yellowstone Valley was due to some advertising which came into his home, and desiring to place his children in a new country where land might be acquired through the exercise of homestead rights he sold his Nebraska possessions, farm lands already having reached a comparatively high price there. Thus in the month of June, 1902, the Morrills began their residence in the Yellowstone Valley. The central part of the Morrill farm today was originally the claim of a member of the Benoit family, which arrived here two years earlier than the Morrills. For the possession of this Mr. Morrill paid $200. The improvements consisted of a log shack 12 by 12, which Mr. Morrill occupied as a shelter until his family arrived. Then they began the construction of the nucleus of a better home, a part of which is still occupied by the family. Mr. Morrill acquired his first income in this new region by breaking land at $2 an acre. He planted no crop the first year, but made preparations for the following season, at which time he harvested 400 bushels of wheat, 1,000 bushels of oats and 100 bushels of corn. Though this is not regarded as a corn country he has had several good crops of corn since then. Mr. Morrill was a pioneer in the grain business and broke almost the first acreage of land for farming ever plowed in the entire district. That enterprise he made profitable for several years as a dry farming project before artificial irrigation was introduced. While the irrigation ditch was under construction the activities furnished a ready local market for the surplus grain and feed raised on the Morrill land. One year, says Mr. Morrill, his 7,000-bushel granary was full of oats and 1,000 bushels piled on the ground outside. The efforts of Mr. Morrill at breaking up the land, destroying the grass and the grazing did not appeal to his neighbors, mostly old-time cattle men. However, he soon demonstrated the wisdom of his course by the practical results he obtained, and in a year or so his skeptical neighbors were following his example. His demonstration work really became convincing when he paid $6 an acre for more land, broke it up, and his first crop paid $90 to the acre.

Besides proving up and patenting his own claim, Mr. Morrill acquired much land at an average price of $6 an acre, and after growing grain on it for several years sold out at a large profit. Unlike many of the settlers even of his time, his efforts at stock growing have been measured by only what his farm needed.

Mr. Morrill gave his sole attention to farming until his enterprise had earned him a surplus capital, which he has used for investment in other enterprises and to perform its proper service in the general development of the community. He took stock in the First National Bank of Sidney when it started, also in the Security State Bank of Fairview, and was a member of the board of directors of each and vice president of the latter. He helped start the Co-operative Elevator, and was president of that institution for a time.

No schools and educational facilities were in readiness for the Morrill family when they came to the region. They have readily encouraged and supported all such efforts, the first schoolhouse being built near their home. Mr. Morrill helped put the logs together for the building, and his daughter Maude had the distinction of teaching the first term. Mr. Morrill was also a member of the first school board. The region was equally lacking in religious activities, and the Morrills quickly allied themselves with other church-going members of the community and organized a Presbyterian congregation. In this Mr. Morrill became a trustee and elder and superintendent of the Sunday-school. His daughter Maude was the organist of the church while his daughter Dora was teacher of a Sunday-school class and his son William was secretary and treasurer of the Sunday-school.

Politically Mr. Morrill was brought up in a home which stood for the democratic party, and he cast his first presidential vote for Mr. Cleveland and has supported that party in all the subsequent campaigns.

Early in his farm experiences in Nebraska Mr. Morrill married Miss Eleanor Woods. She was born near London, England, March 25, 1864, and came to the United States at the age of ten years with her brother. Her parents were Charles and Emily (Wade) Woods. Mrs. Morrill grew up at Oakland, Nebraska, and acquired a country school education. Her only brother, Frederick Charles Woods, is now general manager of the Union Telephone Company at Galesburg, Illinois. Mr. and Mrs. Morrill have five children. The oldest, William, now has the chief responsibilities of the home farm. Maude, the pioneer teacher of the community, is the wife of Charles Staley, of Lander, Wyoming, and has a son, Melroy. The daughter Dora, is Mrs. William Klaus, of Fairview Montana. Eleanor Morrill is a student at Knox College, Galesburg, Illinois. The youngest, Allen Wade, is still on the farm, and has also contributed his part toward the general family success in Montana.

Samuel J. Hardy, of Fairview, is one of several brothers who have been responsible for some of the permanent development along the Yellowstone River, and who were early settlers of their respective localities.

Mr. Hardy, whose early interests were identified with ranching on the public domain and who in later years has by his own example stimulated the widespread growing of the wonder crop of alfalfa in the Lower Yellowstone Valley, was born in LaCrosse County, Wisconsin, July 13, 1872. His father, William Hardy, was a native of Ireland, an early settler in Wisconsin, and spent his active life as a farmer near Lacrosse. His numerous children have scattered through the west, many of them having been residents of Richland or adjacent counties in Montana. Samuel J. Hardy acquired a public school education and lived at home until long past his majority.

On coming west he joined his brother Charles at Anaconda, Montana, and learned the trade of cook under his brother's direction. That trade has stood him in good stead during his later years, since he has never married and has maintained a home of his own. For six months Mr. Hardy worked as a "flunkey" or second cook at Anaconda for a railroad construction company engaged in building what is known as "the figure eight" at the smelters. Because of the slowness of the job, and having been reared on a farm and used to its activities. he then decided to seek something more in line with his experience and preferences. He therefore joined his two brothers and came to the Yellowstone country near the mouth of the river around Fairview. He settled and homesteaded in the valley within the limits of North Dakota. The three brothers combined their capital to engage in the cattle business and started with a herd of Minnesota "dogies." The raising of cattle and the production of beef occupied Mr. Hardy for nine years in association with his brothers. By that time the settlers were encroaching upon the domain of the cattle men, and it became necessary to resort to farming.

Mr. Hardy's pioneer home was a log house which still serves as his domicile, and is a place of comfort and satisfaction to him. It consists of two rooms, the roof is still covered with dirt, and it has the distinctive advantages of "adobe construction," being warm in winter and cool in summer. Mr. Hardy occupies it as a bachelor and his brothers lived with him until the spring of 1913, when they made homes of their own.

The farm of Mr. Harding comprises a half section. Besides his homestead he bought an adjacent quarter in the same section 33, township 104 north and range 101 west. When driven by necessity to farming he began breaking the soil, and the entire half section has been brought under the plow. For some years his crops were altogether grain. Then, in line with advanced ideas of good soil development, and to supply a growing market for hay, he and his brothers began sowing alfalfa and have been pioneers in the introduction of that crop in this section of Montana. Much of the Hardy farm is now in alfalfa and he plans to concentrate all his facilities upon that crop in the near future. While the Hardy brothers were pioneer alfalfa growers, their early efforts were not altogether encouraging. At one time they had tons and tons of alfalfa with no market. Eastern feeders had not learned to appreciate the value of western alfalfa, and for a time the Hardy brothers fed their alfalfa to sheep. During the past four or five years there has been no lack of demand for this staple article, and while at one time the brothers were satisfied with the price of four dollars a ton, the demand was such that in 1920 there was a ready market at thirty dollars a ton.

Samuel J. Hardy was one of the local parties who built the first school in his district. The logs were cut along the Yellowstone and the patrons of the district did the construction work. Mr. Hardy was long past voting age when he came to Montana and his first presidential vote was cast in Wisconsin for Mr. McKinley. He deviated from republican regularity when he supported Mr. Wilson in 1912, and also gave his vote to the democratic candidate four years later. He is serving as clerk of his township in McKenzie County. Many of his interests are centered at Fairview, where he was a stockholder and director in the Bank of Fairview from its founding until 1918, when he sold out. He is now a stockholder in the Fairview Land Company, a real estate corporation of which L. E. Newlon is president.

JOHN ANDREW BENOIT. In the spring of 1900 there came into the valley of the Lower Yellowstone a settler of French blood, who has since been one of the permanent settlers and useful citizens of the Fairview community.

John Andrew Benoit was born at Montreal, Canada, April 26, 1844, son of Godfrey Benoit, whose father was a Canadian Frenchman and descendant of one of the pioneer French families of Quebec. Godfrey Benoit married Catherine Masse, and they spent their lives as farmers. A number of the Benoit family have been identified with the city of Worcester, Massachusetts, where Delia, a sister of John A., is still living. John A. Benoit was the second in a family of six sons and three daughters.

He lived at Montreal to the age of seventeen and acquired a good education in both French and English. Then coming to the United States he located at Springfield, Massachusetts, and for six years was employed as a clerk and then learned silver plating, an art he followed until he came West.

His first western experience was at Winnipeg, Canada, and failing to find public land he left that city in a Red River cart drawn by an ox team, with destination Turtle Mountain, Manitoba. He stopped at Bay St. Paul, where he took up land and lived for five years. Ambitious again to resume his connection with the country over which floated the stars and stripes, he crossed the United States boundary at St. Johns and established a home at Rolla, North Dakota, where he lived about fifteen years as a merchant.

It was with an extensive experience as a business man and rancher that he arrived in the Fairview community in the spring of 1900. He made this move by means of wagon, and brought with him over the trail 350 head of "dogies" or range cattle. For the next five years he was a rancher on the public domain, running his stock under the brand "A with a lazy B" on the left hip. The market to which he sent his finished stock was St. Paul. Having in view the purpose of making a permanent settlement in the valley Mr. Benoit and family exercised their four homestead rights on the Dakota side of the state line not far from Fairview. These claims were all proved up and improved, but all have since been sold out of the family except that of Mrs. Jennie Hardy. Owing to the encroachment of settlers at the end of five years Mr. Benoit had to sell his stock, and then located at Ridgelawn and opened a small country store. Two years later he changed his location to Ray, North Dakota, where he again sold goods for two years. Contracting the mountain fever, he moved to Mountain Home, Idaho, a place then being widely advertised as the poor man's country and with wonderful prospects in view because of a planned irrigation system. He was at Mountain Home five years, doing business as a merchant. The failure of the irrigation project to achieve the things expected of it disappointed him and he abandoned the country and returned to Montana. At that time an irrigation project was being developed in the Yellowstone Valley under the auspices of the Federal Government. Once more in the Fairview region Mr. Benoit opened a store, and has continued as a merchant, though in 1918 he sold his original business to his son, J. M. Benoit. At the present time he conducts what is known as "The Farmers Exchange" buying cream, furs, hides and other farmers' produce.

Mr. Benoit is one of the few residents of Montana who can claim the distinctive honor of having voted for Abraham Lincoln. It was his first vote in this country, and he supported the martyred president for a second term in 1864. He also voted for General Grant in 1868, and had the opportunity of shaking hands with the great American general at Hartford, Connecticut, while Grant was on a campaign tour. Mr. Benoit is affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and he and his wife were brought up as Catholics and reared their children in the same faith.

At Hartford, Connecticut, Mr. Benoit married

Miss Alvina Lucas. She was born at Champlain on the St. Lawrence River, in the Province of Quebec, November 9, 1850, daughter of Philip and Annie (LaMotte) Lucas. Like her husband she is the second child in a family of six sons and three daughters. Five of them are still living. Besides Mrs. Benoit there are two who claim United States citizenship, Napoleon Lucas of Brooklyn, New York, and Reney Lucas of Hilo Island in the Sandwich Islands. Mr. and Mrs. Benoit have a goodly family of sons and daughters and also a number of grandchildren. The oldest daughter, Mary, is the wife of Alfred Collins of Lucky Strike, Alberta, and mother of nine children; Mrs. Charles Hardy lives at Fairview, Montana; Minnie is the wife of George Lamphere, of Spokane, Washington; Rose is the wife of Arthur Northey, of San Francisco; Aristide is a resident of Croteau, Alberta; Ada married Martin Anton, of Bismarck, North Dakota; Henry, the oldest son, is in Portland, Oregon; John M. is the successor of his father as merchant at Fairview, and for nineteen months was with the colors during the World war, being nine months overseas in France. He married Lena Block. The youngest, Arthur, a resident of Salt Lake, Utah, was also in the army, doing his service at Camp Lewis, Washington.

Sidney M. Logan. A thorough and profound lawyer, whose connection with much law business has made him a more or less familiar figure in the courts of Flathead County and the State of Montana, Sidney M. Logan typifies the best class of legal mind, and his high standing at the bar is unquestioned. Further, he is a stirring and stalwart citizen, a friend of progress and advancement and, although he would be the last to admit it, a leader in his profession in this part of the state.

Mr. Logan was born at St. Augustine, Florida, March 2, 1867, a son of Capt. William Logan, who was born in County Louth, Ireland, December 9, 1830. He was a son of Thomas D. and Margaret (Rohan) Logan, natives of Scotland and Ireland, respectively. Of their eight children Captain Logan was the only one who came to the United States. He was graduated from famous old Trinity College in 1847, and the next year left Ireland for America and located in New Orleans, Louisiana, where he was an assistant engineer in the city's employ, but resigned to enlist in Company I, Seventh United States Infantry, as a private for service during the Mexican war. After participating in that campaign under General Taylor on the Rio Grande River, and also under General Scott, until the fall of the City of Mexico, he received promotion to the rank of sergeant, and, remaining in the service, was detailed to guard the frontier between Texas and Mexico. In 1862 he was in the Army of the Potomac, and being severely wounded at the battle of Fredericksburg was sent to the hospital on David's Island in New York harbor, and after his recovery was detailed for duty as hospital steward until he fully regained his strength. Rejoining his regiment, he took part in the battles of Chancellorville and Snecker's Gap, and was promoted to a lieutenancy. After the surrender of the Confederate forces under General Lee, Lieutenant Logan went to St. Augustine, Florida, and there served as quartermaster general until 1869, when he was sent with his regiment to Fort Steele, Wyoming, to guard the Union Pacific Railroad, then in process of construction. He moved on to Fort Beaufort, North Dakota, and to Montana in 1872, taking part in the Yellowstone expedition, as well as the campaign of General Baker against the Sioux Indians, which lasted from 1872 until 1876, and during a greater portion of that time he was stationed at Fort Shaw. In 1875 he was commissioned captain, and did recruiting service at Dubuque, Iowa, returning to his regiment, then under General Gibbon, to resume operations against the Sioux Indians. Captain Logan was on the ground the day following the memorable disaster which resulted in the death of General Custer. Returning to Fort Shaw in 1877, Captain Logan was removed to Fort Missoula and accompanied General Gibbon on the expedition which resulted in the battle of Big Hole on August 9, 1877, where he met his death at the hands of a vengeful squaw. His death was universally recognized as a distinct loss to the United States Army, and he was mourned alike by his men and fellow officers. He rests in the National Cemetery on the Custer battlefield.

The biography of this gallant officer would be incomplete without reference to an incident following his death at the battle of Big Hole. One of his ancestors was a member of the illustrious family of Bruce. This history of Scotland relates that it was the ambition of the great Bruce to visit the Holy Land, and not being able to realize it, he asked the Douglas to carry his heart to the place of the crucifixion. Complying with this request, Douglas placed the heart of the Scotch king in a silver casket, and in a battle with the Saracens threw it in the midst of the fight, crying "Go first brave heart in battle, as thou were wont to do and Douglas will follow thee." The casket was later found pierced with a barbarian spear. This account became a part of Scottish history and tradition. Walter and Robert Logan were in that battle. One was killed, the other married a daughter of Robert Bruce, a granddaughter of the great Bruce. The Logan crest has since then been a heart pierced with an arrow. When William Logan started for America his father gave him a ring with the family crest engraved on a violet colored stone. At the time he left Florida his Masonic friends gave him a ring engraved with Masonic emblems. After he was killed the Indians mutilated his hand in order to obtain possession of these rings. After twenty-three years the rings were recovered by chance from Indians, Captain Logan's friends recognizing them when they saw them on the hands of these Indians.

Captain Logan was married to Miss Odelia Furlong, a native of Strasburg, Alsace-Lorraine, Germany.

Sidney M. Logan was only ten years old at the time of his father's death, but remembers him distinctly and has always held his memory in loving esteem, endeavoring to shape his actions so as to be a credit to his forebears. In order to earn the money for his legal studies he was engaged for a time in the cattle industry, but after his admission to the bar in May, 1889, he entered at once upon the practice of his profession, first at Helena, Montana, then at Seattle, Washington, and then, in the spring of 1891 he located premanently at Kalispell, where he has since remained. During the Spanish-American war Mr. Logan helped organize a troop of cavalry, and was elected second lieutenant, but it was not called out, as the war was over before their services were required.

Mr. Logan has always been one of the boosters of Flathead County, and his progressive spirit has been evidenced in every civic improvement that has been inaugurated. A lawyer of far more than ordinary ability, he enjoys a large practice and has been connected with some of the most important jurisprudence of the state. Fraternally he is a member of the Elks, of which he is past exalted ruler; and of the Modern Woodmen. Both he and his family belong to the Disciples Church. One hundred per cent a republican, he has adhered to its principles since boyhood, and served Kalispell as mayor. In 1892 he was assistant secretary of state, and from 1891 to 1896 served as attorney of Flathead County. A member of the board of park commissioners, he assisted in securing for Kalispell one of the finest boulevard and park systems in Montana. The present handsome Carnegie Library was constructed during his term of office. Mr. Logan went the limit during the great war in war work and was one of the nine men appointed by Governor Stuart to form the Montana Council of Defense, an honor he highly appreciated.

On June 25, 1890, Mr. Logan was married at Helena, Montana, to Miss Cleora Stout, a daughter of R. P. and Ella (Toole) Stout, and a niece of ex-Governor Toole. Mr. and Mrs. Logan became the parents of the following children: Cleora Felice, wife of R. A. Thon, of Great Falls; Mary Luella, who became the wife of Dr. C. M. Orser of Kalispell; Eula Odelia, who married Edward L. Houtz, late editor of the Kalispell Journal, now residing in Great Falls; Sidney M., Jr., a law student, and veteran of the great war, spent sixteen months in France as a member of Company G, Twenty-third Engineers, and participated in the battles of St. Mihiel, Argonne, Meuse, St. Remy Offensive and Toul sector; and William R., who is studying mining and metallurgy and during vacations is a guide in Glacier National Park. The latter twice volunteered for service, but was each time rejected on account of physical disability. The Logan boys, coming as they do from good old Scotch fighting stock, naturally responded to their country's call for defenders of its honor and possessions. Loyal to the standard of "Old Glory" as their father and grandfather before them, they had not the slightest desire or even thought of shirking their duty, or failing to live up to the example of that brave grandfather who sleeps on the Custer battlefield. America loves to render due honor to her soldiers who left to us

"Much more by far, than all the crowns
That Europe's monarch ever wore,
The heritage our heroes left
A nation free from shore to shore."

JOHN H. DOLIN, editor and proprietor of the Medicine Lake Wave, is a veteran printer and newspaper man, having been in the profession and trade for a period of thirty-five years. He has been a factor in Montana journalism since 1909.

Mr. Dolin was born at Taunton, Massachusetts, January 21, 1861. His parents, however, were western people at that time and he was born during a visit of his mother in Massachusetts. His father, Felix Dolin, came from County Fermanagh, Ireland, when a young man, was employed as a laborer on public works for a time, and subsequently moved out to Minnesota and buying a small farm midway between St. Paul and Hastings. In 1863 he moved from there to Sibley County, Minnesota, and acquired wealth as a farmer in that locality, where he died at the age of seventy-eight. He married Elizabeth Clemens, a native of Tipperary, Ireland, who survived her husband a few years.

John H. Dolin, the only child of his parents, was reared in a devout Catholic home and grew up in the atmosphere of a farm. He acquired a good common school education, supplemented by two years of high school at Henderson, Minnesota. Whatever the influences were that caused him to take up printing he found that trade a congenial one and has been satisfied to make it the basis of a life profession. At the age of sixteen he began learning his trade in the office of the Sibley County Independent at Henderson, and spent five years there. He then became self supporting, removed to St. Paul, and in order to perfect himself in all branches of the business remained for three years in Brown and Tracey's job office. For two years he was foreman for the Northwestern Chronicle, and remained in St. Paul in different offices until 1889. Going further west, he was with the Free Press at Devil's Lake, North Dakota, working for Mr. McGahan until 1896, and from there moved to York, North Dakota, where he founded his first paper, the York Ledger. Of the Ledger he was publisher until he left North Dakota and came to Montana in 1909. In November of that year he began his connection with the Medicine Lake Wave, which had been founded by his son Joseph F. Dolin. John H. Dolin has been actively identified with the Wave ever since, and on January 1, 1920, bought the plant and is now both editor and proprietor.

His father was a democrat and he cast his first presidential vote for Mr. Cleveland in 1884. However, since 1888 he has supported the republican party and has always voted at national elections. For a number of years he was a member and is a Past Master Workman of the Ancient Order of United Workmen, and is now affiliated with the Knights of Columbus.

In May, 1883, in Sibley County, Minnesota, he married Miss Mary Ann Doheny. Her father, Dennis Doheny, was born in Tipperary, Ireland, came to the United States when a boy, was brought up in Pennsylvania, became a farmer and stockman, and later moved west and settled in Sibley County, Minnesota, where he continued farming. His last years were spent at Grand Harbor, North Dakota, where he died at the age of sixty-five. He married a Miss Cunningham, who survived him a few years. Mrs. Dolin, who was born March 15, 1865, is the youngest of five children, the others being: Mrs. Kate McAuliff, of South St. Paul; Jack, who died in South St. Paul; Walter, of Minneapolis; and Thomas, of Long Lake, Minnesota. Mr. and Mrs. Dolin have three children: Joseph F., the well known newspaper man of Plentywood, whose career is sketched elsewhere; Mrs. Sam Rettinger, of Long Lake, Minnesota; and Mrs. Otmar Bottger, of Fairfield, Iowa.

LESLIE F. MILLER. The successful management of an important business industry in a community where competition is rife and high standards prevail presupposes the possession of more than ordinary commercial ability as well as a comprehensive knowledge of the particular line involved. When these requisites are met in the head of a large milling business, and to them is added the progressive and enquiring tendencies of the younger and physically sturdier member of the family, a harmony should result as gratifying generally as it is financially. Such a combination of interests is found in the Russell-Miller Milling Company, of which Arthur Miller, the father, is a member of the firm, and Leslie F. Miller, the son, is manager of the business at Billings.

Leslie F. Miller was born at Valley City, North Dakota, August 25, 1883, a son of Arthur and Clara (Russell) Miller. Arthur Miller was born in England in 1852 and was seventeen years of age when he came to the United States, settling in Minnesota, in which state he was married to Clara Russell, daughter of John Russell, she having been born in that state in 1858. Shortly after their union they moved to Valley City, North Dakota, where in 1879 was founded the Russell-Miller Milling Company the organizers being Mr. Miller and his father-in-law, John Russell. Mr. Miller had full charge of the business at Valley City, where he remained until 1893, in that year going to West Superior, Wisconsin, where he assisted in the building of a mill for the company. This he managed until 1899, when he went to Minneapolis and erected a mill for the concern of which he is vice president and general superintendent, his home now being in that city. Mr. Miller is an independent voter upon political questions, is a member of the Congregational Church, and is affiliated with the Masons. He and Mrs. Miller became the parents of the following children: Jessie, who is the wife of Robert H. Bosard, an attorney of Minneapolis; Edith, the wife of Harry C. Buffington, executive engineer of the Holt Tractor Company, Peoria, Illinois; Leslie F.; and Arleigh, assistant sales manager of the Russell-Miller Milling Company, who died January 7, 1919, at Minneapolis, at the age of thirty-two years.

Frank F Mueller

Leslie F. Miller received his education in the public schools of Valley City, North Dakota, and West Superior, Wisconsin, and after his graduation from the high school at Minneapolis in 1902, entered the University of Minnesota, where he completed his junior year. He is a member of the exclusive Delta Upsilon Greek letter fraternity. In 1905 Mr. Miller went on the road as a traveling representative for the Russell-Miller Milling Company, his territory being North Dakota and Montana, and made his advent in the latter state on his first trip in July, 1906. In 1907 he was placed in charge of the mill at Minot, North Dakota, which was built at that time, and remained there until February, 1912, when he came to Billings, as manager of the company here, a capacity in which he has acted very efficiently to the present time. The mill, elevator and offices are situated on First Avenue, South, between Thirty-sixth and Thirty-seventh streets, and the capacity of the mill is 650 barrels of flour daily, necessitating the employment of forty men, who are under Mr. Miller's supervision. The company now has mills at Minneapolis, Minnesota; Valley City, Grand Forks, Minot, Jamestown, Bismarck, Mandan and Dickinson, North Dakota; and Sidney and Billings, Montana. The officers of the company are: E. P. Wells, president; H. S. Helm, general manager; and Arthur Miller, vice president and general superintendent.

Leslie F. Miller is a business man of proved ability, who has various important connections in commercial and financial circles, being a stockholder in the company which he represents as manager at Billings; president and majority stockholder in the Purity Bread Company of Billings, and a stockholder in the Logan Farmers Elevator Company at Logan, North Dakota. He is an independent voter, and belongs to Billings Lodge No. 394, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, the Rotary Club of Billings, and the Billings Golf and Country Club.

On November 24, 1914, Mr. Miller was united in marriage at Billings with Miss Harriet Rowley, daughter of Col. H. W. and Harriet (Meeker) Rowley, of Billings, where Colonel Rowley is a capitalist. Three children have blessed this union: Martha, born December 15, 1915; Rowley, born January 26, 1917; and Arthur, born May 8, 1919.

Benjamin Van Vorous. One of the leading merchants of Homestead is Benjamin Van Vorous, who has been identified with the business life of the place since 1913. Although not the pioneer merchant of the town for two other stores were doing business when he located here, he is now the oldest merchant of the village, his original competitors having abandoned the fight.

Mr. Van Vorous was born in Door County, Wisconsin, October 15, 1878, a son of Levi Van Vorous and a grandson of Armstrong. The last named spelled his name Van Voorhees, as did all his New York ancestors, who were of the old Holland Dutch settlers and of the old Dutch patroons of Amsterdam, now the City of New York. This family claim heirship to the original townsite of New York City the ground upon which the old town was built.

Levi Van Vorous was born in Geneva, New York, grew up in the home of his blacksmith father there, received a limited educational training, and began life for himself as a laborer. At one time he was employed on the Erie Canal. In about 1865 he went out to Wisconsin, where he bought fish for Detroit and Buffalo firms at Washington Island, and in time became one of the largest fish dealers in the United States. At Fish Creek he also embarked in a general mercantile business, and he spent the remainder of his life at that place.

Levi Van Vorous married Rachel McGee, the daughter of Benjamin McGee, a New York farmer and a native of that state. Mrs. Van Vorous was also born in the Empire state and she still survives her husband and resides at Fish Creek. Mr. Van Vorous passed away in 1913, when he had reached the age of seventy-seven years. Of their twelve children, eleven attained years of maturity, namely: Okey J., whose home is in Bayfield, Wisconsin; Cora, who became the wife of Gunder Gunderson and died at Fish Creek; Margaret, who married Henry Birmingham, of Sturgeon Bay, where she passed away; Marie, who married E. T. LeClair deceased; and she is living in Boston, Massachusetts; Joseph, who was drowned at Fish Creek, leaving a family; Bert, of Lewistown, Idaho; Ruth, who became the wife of George Sutherland and died at Fish Creek; Benjamin, the Homestead business man; Pearl, of Minneapolis, the wife of Colonel George E. Leach; Grace who married Clarence LaPeer, of Fish Creek; and William, whose home is in Milwaukee.

Levi Van Vorous supported first the democratic and then republican principles, but beyond his interest in elections gave little time to politics.

The home surroundings of Benjamin Van Vorous during his youth were the farm, and his education came from the schools of the locality. He remained with his parents until past his majority, and then engaged in teaching country school, but not being satisfied with this vocation he found a more congenial field in mercantile employment. Going to Minneapolis, Minnesota, he secured the position of assistant window trimmer with Donaldson's Glass Block, and after completing his apprenticeship with them as a window trimmer he went on to Duluth and served another firm in the Glass Block there. He remained at the head of the lake district for four years, employed in various mercantile lines, and from there made his first trip into the Northwest and passed through Montana enroute to Seattle.

After a short time spent in prospecting in and around Seattle Mr. VanVorous came back to Montana in February 1903, and secured employment with the Butterey people, general merchants at Havre. After a year or so he went on to Billings and entered the old McCormick house of general merchants as a clerk, remaining in their service for two years. His next employment was in Bismarck, North Dakota, where for a year he was employed by Webb Brothers, and then returned to his home state of Wisconsin. Mr. Van Vorous remained in that state one year, lumbering and merchandising at Fish Creek, but having once breathed the western air he longed for it again and once more returning to Montana located at Kalispell, where he was with the clothier George Wilson for four years. He then sought the advantages of Eastern Montana, which was rapidly being settled and proving itself productive, and selecting Homestead as his business point he opened his trade relations here under the name of the Farmers Store. His store room was twenty-two by thirty-six feet stocked with groceries, but later dry goods were added, and still later shoes and hardware, in all of which lines he is still interested. The only other enterprise of Homestead with which he has been connected is the Homestead State Bank, of which for a short time he was a director and the vice president.

In Duluth, Minnesota, November 20, 1901, Mr. Van Vorous was married to Miss Ida Johnson, who was born at Eagle Bend, Minnesota, March 31, 1876, a daughter of Nels Johnson, of Swedish birth and a life-long farmer. He was the father of eleven children. Mr. Van Vorous was chairman of the first Liberty Loan drive at Homestead in the interest of the World war, and bore an active part in all other war work, while Mrs. Van Vorous gave her time unstintedly to the success of the Red Cross Chapter here and was one of the efficient knitting force of the village. When he reached the voting age Mr. Van Vorous espoused the cause of the democratic party and gave his first presidential vote to Mr. Bryan, next to Colonel Roosevelt in 1904, again to Mr. Bryan in 1908, to Colonel Roosevelt in 1912, and in 1916 supported Mr. Hughes for the presidency. He took his initial degrees in Masonry at Kalispell, and holds his B. L. membership in Plentywood.

Christian F. Winter, of Medicine Lake, is the proprietor of the pioneer meat market of the town. He was born in Sibley County, Minnesota, July 29, 1884, and his boyhood days were passed on a farm there. His education came from the district schools, but his attendance therein was so short as to be almost unmentionable, yet it sufficed to enable him to conduct his business successfully. Before reaching his majority he worked for wages as a farm hand, and his parents received the wages until he became of age.

His parents are Joseph P. and Catherine (Dressel) Winter, both of German birth. They came to the United States, however, when they were children, and were married at LeSueur, Minnesota. Joseph P. Winter spent some time in a store and later engaged in the saloon business, but eventually became a farmer, and that proved in the main his life's work. He finally sold his farm at LeSueur and moved to Montana, being still a resident of Medicine Lake. During the period of the Civil war he served as a laborer in the vicinity of St. Paul, and he had an older brother who was a Union soldier.

Joseph P. Winter was born in 1844, and his wife was six years younger, and she passed away in the fall of 1916, at Medicine Lake. Their children were as follows: Frances, the wife of Theodore Tax, a homesteader near Medicine Lake; Adam, of Deering, North Dakota; Mary, the wife of A. F. Metzler, of Red Wing, Minnesota; Charles, whose home is in Froid, Montana; John, a farmer at Trenton, North Dakota; Christian, of this review; Joseph P., engaged in the garage business in Medicine Lake; Louise, the widow of John I. Mead, of Medicine Lake; and Phillip A., who was the soldier son, and suffered the loss of his right arm in the famous Argonne battle of France. He is now in vocational training in St. Paul.

In March, 1909, Christian F. Winter came into Montana, shipping an emigrant car containing horses and machinery to Culbertson, where he unloaded and brought them to his claim. He entered his land in sections 31 and 32, township 32, range 57, 8½ miles south of Medicine Lake, proved it up in 1913, and this claim still forms a part of his real estate possessions. He at once purchased a 10 by 12 shack of a settler who had abandoned the region, and in this he housed his effects and began his bachelor existence in Montana. His brother, who had preceded him to the state, was living within half a mile of the claim of Christian Winter, and the home of the brother became somewhat his home. During the four years he lived on the claim and while proving up he made his living chiefly outside of the soil, working for wages while his brother looked after their combined interests and in reversed order. The pioneer shack in time gave place to a three-room house, a well was dug, one quarter of his land was fenced, and ninety-five acres were put under the plow, where he raised wheat, oats and flax his banner grain yield coming to him in 1912. Mr. Winter also had a few cattle, and his claim began to take on the appearance of the home of a permanent settler, but about this time his wife died and he disposed of his stock to his brother and left the state.

Going then to Noonan, North Dakota, Mr. Winter engaged in the butcher business with another brother, Charles Winter. He conducted a shop for this brother during the three years he was located there, and returning then to Medicine Lake in December, 1916, he opened a shop here and has continued in the business ever since. He has the distinction of occupying the original meat market of the town built by the pioneer butcher and market man of Medicine Lake.

Mr. Winter was married first at LeSueur, Minnesota, to Miss Mary Huber, a daughter of Alois Huber. She was born in that Minnesota town, and died on their Montana homestead without issue. On the 23d of April, 1916, at Brookings, South Dakota, Mr. Winter was married to Miss Alice McKinney, a daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth (Hurd) McKinney. Mrs. Winter was born at Brookings December 1, 1893 and is one of a family of three sons and five daughters. They were farming people, and the parents came into South Dakota from Wisconsin. A daughter, Phylis, was born to Mr. and Mrs. Winter May 7, 1918.

The political faith of the Winter family has been democratic, although in recent years Joseph P. Winter has allowed his faith in those party lines to wane. In national affairs his son Christian has followed in his footsteps, and cast his first presidential vote for Mr. Bryan in 1908. Later he supported Mr. Wilson in both his campaigns for the presidency.

Thomas E. Bowman. The early pioneers of Eastern Montana numbers Thomas E. Bowman, of Medicine Lake, a settler of this locality in the year 1900, but his advent into the state dates much farther back than that for he first came here in the early eighties, when a youth of twenty, accompanying his parents to the Black Hills country.

The Bowman family started west from Roane County, Tennessee. They journeyed by rail to Southeastern Kansas, stopping in Montgomery County, and in the spring of 1870 they located at Independence, Kansas, spending eleven years there as farmers. Then loading their wagons, they resumed their journey and came on to the Northwest, to the Black Hills country, stopping at Spearfish South Dakota, where the head of the family engaged in freighting and also in farming.

From that point Thomas E. Bowman started out for himself. He had received a district school education in Kansas, and his first several years after reaching the age of maturity were spent as a stockman on the range and as a buffalo hunter in Southeastern Montana and South Dakota. He covered the Little Missouri River country as a cowboy, and among his employers were the 3-9 outfit on Lance Creek, the Y. T. people in Crook County, Wyoming, the LAK outfit on Beaver Creek and the 101 outfit in Wyoming. During five years he rode the range as a wage earner, and then engaged in the stock business for himself in Crook County, Wyoming. He ran his stock under the brand "76," and for a time was engaged in ranching on the Alkali Hills in Meade County, South Dakota. He was one of the early shippers of beef cattle out of that country, loading at Olrich, South Dakota, for the Chicago market.

Early in the eighties Mr. Bowman began hunting buffalo for the hides and the carcasses which during three or four winters covered the country along Beaver Creek and in the Little Missouri and Box Elder regions of what is now Carter County, Montana. In partnership with a "Lame" Jones he carried on the business when David Russell and Oscar Brackett and other old hunters yet alive were making records as hunters of this big game, and the scene of the big slaughters of the Bowman-Jones party was around Chalk Buttes and on Beaver and Fallon Creeks. The region was then stocked with buffalo as numerous as ever cattle grazed it later, and it was not difficult to find a stand where the animals could be reached in quantities with the old Sharps rifle he carried. While many wonderful records were made by the old hunters at a single stand, the best work done by Mr. Bowman was seventeen buffalo without moving from his stand. There was a good market for the beef in the Black Hills at six cents a pound, and the business of buffalo hunting was profitable in season until 1883, when the remnant of the discouraged band gave up this country to the white man, as did the Indian later and moved into the open country of Canada.

In 1895 Mr. Bowman removed north to Ekalaka and ranched in the Hill country between there and Camp Crook, and remained there with his "76" brand until 1898, when he went farther north to the Yellowstone country, near Sidney, Montana. There were but few people scattered over that valley region at that time, and it was a stock country only. In 1899 he continued on north, crossed the Missouri River, and located where Bainville now stands, holding his stock there during one winter, and the next year reached the spot which he has ever since called home, Medicine Lake.

When Mr. Bowman came into this part of old Valley County he brought about one hundred head of his old "76" brand of cattle and squatted where but few settlers had then located. No survey of this region had been made, and those intending to settle and acquire land had the choice of the locality. Mr. Bowman built his shack on the bank of Lake Creek, an arm of the Big Muddy, and this pioneer dwelling with its additions has sheltered the family ever since. During more than a dozen years he had access to the open range, and his cattle and horses had undisputed possession of this grassy region. But settlement began with the surveying of the country, and within a few years all the vacant land had been located and a community of people lived where jackrabbits and coyotes formerly held sway.

Mr. Bowman's stock in the beginning was a good grade of Hereford cattle and Percheron horses, and both of these he improved with registered sires as the years passed. His beef cattle were of a generous build, and he produced the champion beef steer sold on the Chicago market up to 1917. This was a four-year-old Hereford-Shorthorn weighing 1,540 pounds when sold August 28, 1917, and brought Mr. Bowman $231.00, the highest priced grass steer ever sold at the Chicago market up to that time. Mr. Bowman went out of the cattle business in 1919, when he made his final shipment to market. In the height of his career as a stockman he wintered 960 head of cattle in his lots at Medicine Lake, and usually ranged from three to five hundred head, shipping from three to five carloads a year. He has sold cattle as low as seven cents a pound, and his highest price was in 1919, when he sold at sixteen cents a pound.

Mr. Bowman proved up on the land he acquired in 1905, and his additional entry, together with his homestead and his purchases, give him a ranch of 1,600 acres. He has developed a farm of 700 acres, where wheat, oats, barley and flax have been grown profusely and have yielded bountifully.

Thomas E. Bowman was born in Roane County, Tennessee June 22, 1857, a son of William and Mary E. (Evans) Bowman. William Bowman is a resident of Phoenix, Arizona, at the age of eighty-seven years. He was born April 25, 1833, at Kingston in Roane County, Tennessee, a son of William Bowman, who was born in Virginia and pioneered to Tennessee in the early settlement of that state. He was a farmer and a soldier in the War of 1812. William Bowman, Sr., passed away in Montgomery County, Kansas, as did also his wife, who bore the maiden name of Mary Bacon. William and Mary Bowman had three sons: Edward, who died in Mississippi; James R., who died in Louisville, Kentucky; and William, of Phoenix, Arizona.

William Bowman, Jr. married Mary E. Evans, who died at Spearfish, South Dakota, in 1912. She was a daughter of Patrick and Rebecca Evans, of Irish parentage, and the Bowmans are of English descent. William and Mary (Evans) Bowman became the parents of the following children: Thomas E., of Medicine Lake; Elijah P., of Meeteetsee, Wyoming; Rosseau P., of Phoenix, Arizona; John C. whose home is also in Phoenix; Derealous C., who died at Bason, Wyoming, in 1908; Demarius S., wife of Arthur P. Hewes, of Phoenix; and Cortelia M., the wife of William C. Foster, also of Phoenix.

Thomas E. Bowman married in Deadwood, South Dakota, October 16, 1894, Mrs. Della Bond who was born in Keokuk County, Iowa, August 1, 1859, a daughter of John W. and Demarius Hanson. When Mrs. Bowman was fifteen years of age the family removed from Keokuk County, Iowa, to California, and she grew to womanhood in Alameda County. Mr. Hanson was a farmer in Iowa but in California worked in the surveyor-general's office for three years. He subsequently returned to his Iowa farm, and died there in 1908, at the age of eighty-two. His wife died in the year 1902, when she was seventy-two years of age. Mr. Hanson was a native son of Indiana, born in Posey County. He gave his political support to the republican party, and many years ago he was his party's candidate in Iowa for Congress. In Masonry he reached the thirty-second degree, and he lived up to the teachings of that fraternity. The following children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Hanson: Mary E., the wife of John A. Benson, of San Francisco; Solon A., whose home is in Alamo, Washington; Alpheus P., of Long Beach, California; Della, the wife of Mr. Bowman; and Monta A., widow of Milo A. Adams and a resident of Berkeley, California. Mrs. Bowman has one daughter by her former marriage, Elizabeth Demarius, the wife of Dr. J. G. Barnhizer, of Forrest, Illinois.

When Thomas E. Bowman reached the age of maturity his first presidential ballot was cast for General Grant, and he has ever since supported the principles of the republican party. Mrs. Bowman voted first for Benjamin Harrison at Sundance, Wyoming where Mr. Bowman at one time owned the townsite and was identified with its incorporation as a town.

CLINTON J. POE is the druggist of Medicine Lake and one of the founders of the town. He came into the locality in March, 1910, first identifying himself with the old town of Medicine Lake and with the Lake Drug Company, and has the distinction of being the pioneer druggist of this region. The Lake Drug Company comprised Mr. Poe and A. W. Huxsol, the latter now of Wolf Point, Montana, and when the firm moved to the new town of Medicine Lake it occupied the lot upon which Mr. Poe's business house now stands and was one of the first business firms established in the town. The first building which the firm occupied was a mere shack, 20 by 24 feet in dimensions, and it now forms a part of the present business house of the Poe Drug Store.

Mr. Poe was born at Cannon Falls, Minnesota, June 23, 1884, a son of Jonathan S. Poe and a grandson of the Rev. Richard Poe. The Rev. Richard Poe, an early circuit rider of the Methodist faith, rode over Goodhue County, Minnesota, and preached to the pioneers until age retired him. He died at the age of ninety-two years and lies buried at Cannon Falls. It was in 1856 that he brought his family into Minnesota and his home was on a farm near Cannon Falls. The Rev. Poe was a veteran of both the Mexican and Civil wars, and held the rank of first lieutenant in the war with Mexico. His family comprised twelve children, and of his numerous sons William, Baker, Alonzo and Jonathan S. were Union soldiers.

Jonathan S. Poe, a native of Danville, Kentucky, removed to Minnesota before the Civil war, in which he enlisted for service against the Confederacy as a member of Company I, Thirteenth Minnesota Infantry. He enlisted almost at the beginning of the struggle, and was wounded in the battle of Mill Spring Kentucky, which incapacitated him for further service, and he afterward drew a pension. His life was spent as a farmer.

Jonathan S. Poe was married in Minnesota to Emma Babcock, who was born at Port Huron, Michigan, a daughter of Dow Babcock. They became the parents of the following children: Mrs. Ivie D. Simpson, of Redwood Falls, Minnesota; Mrs. E. E. Orr, of Wadena, Minnesota; Mrs. O. E. Elstad, of Dennison, Minnesota; Mrs. Lewis Bascom who died at Cannon Falls, Minnesota; Richard M., of Cannon Falls; and Clinton J., the youngest of the children. Jonathan S. Poe early became a republican voter, but afterward turned his political influence for temperance and was one of the first to join the prohibition party and took an active part in the work which led finally to nationwide prohibition.

Clinton J. Poe was born at Cannon Falls, Minnesota, June 23, 1884. His boyhood environment was the farm, and he continued as a farmer until the age of twenty-one, in the meantime receiving a district school education. He later attended the Cannon Falls High School and graduated therefrom. He then began learning the jewelry trade and also working in the drug store of Schofield Brothers of Cannon Falls, remaining with that firm until removing to North Dakota and spending a year at Glenbury. From there he came to Culbertson, Montana where he spent three years in the jewelry business. From Culbertson Mr. Poe came to Medicine Lake in 1910, and the Poe drug business occupies this Medicine Lake field alone. Mr. Poe became a registered pharmacist by practical experience.

As a citizen of Medicine Lake he entered wholeheartedly into the life and growth of the town, was instrumental in its incorporation and was elected the town's first mayor, holding that office for two terms. He was one of the leaders in the effort to make Medicine Lake the county seat of Sheridan County, and supported the movement which brought Sheridan County into existence. He became a stockholder in the Farmers Elevator at the time it was organized, and also purchased a small lot of stock in the Farmers Telephone Company when it was organized.

The Poe home in Medicine Lake, erected by its present owner, is a five-room cottage, modern in its appointments, commodious and comfortable. Mr. Poe was married in Bainville Montana, October 22, 1910, to Miss Marie Bielen, who was born in St. Paul, Minnesota, August 15, 1887, a daughter of Peter and Sophie (Friedman) Bielan, the father a native of Germany and the mother of Minnesota. Mr. and Mrs. Bielen came from St. Paul, Minnesota, to Montana in 1907 and opened the St. Paul Hotel in Culbertson. Three children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Poe: Dorothy, Helen and John.

When Mr. Poe became a voter he espoused the cause of the republican party and cast his first presidential ballot for Mr. Taft in 1908 but since has twice supported Mr. Wilson. Fraternally he is connected with the Masonic Order, a member of Trowel Lodge No. 67, of Culbertson, Montana. During the World war he was actively identified with the committees carrying forward the work of raising funds to support the soldiers at the front and at home, actively helping in all the Liberty Loan drives and in the work of the local Red Cross.

GEORGE CHARLESWORTH is one of the men of courage, foresight and industry who have accomplished the pioneer work in Northeastern Montana and laid the substantial basis which subsequent generations will use for all the prosperity they enjoy.

Mr. Charlesworth, who has been identified with what is now Sheridan County since 1905, was born in the anthracite coal region of Pennsylvania, in Lackawanna County, April 7, 1877. His father, John Charlesworth, a native of England, spent his active life as a stone mason at Scranton. He married Lucy Brunt, who also died in early life. Their children were: Arthur, who preceded his brother George to Montana and is a rancher near Medicine Lake in Sheridan County; Kenneth, who spent his life as a coal miner at Scranton and died by accident in 1919; George; Amanda, wife of Lewis Hunter, of Union, New York; and Elizabeth wife of Walter Vertreese, of Harmony, Maine.

George Charlesworth like most coal miners' sons had little opportunity to attend public schools. At the age of eleven he was helping support himself as a gate tender at the mines, and did a boy's part in that industry to the age of fifteen. He then worked in the Bristol House at Scranton, had other employment, and finally went into a Scranton foundry and served a year at the molder's trade.

Mr. Charlesworth made his first venture in Montana when about nineteen years of age. At Shawmut he found employment on a sheep and cattle ranch, and for several years continued as a wage worker in the Musselshell locality.

He then returned East to Kansas City, Missouri, and for about two years was an employe of the Swift Packing Company at the metropolis of Western Missouri. His early experiences in Montana had made a strong impression upon him, and he again sought his opportunities in the Treasure state and in 1905 settled in the Medicine Lake locality of what is now Sheridan County.

As a ranch hand he was employed by some of the pioneers of the region including Tom Bowman and Frank Arnett. After a period as a wage worker he entered land and began the improvement and development of a farm of his own. His claim lies near the townsite. He took up both a homestead and desert claim, giving him a half section, one being in section 12 and the other in section 24, township 32, range 56. His first shelter was a box structure and weatherboard windbreak, 14 by 16, and there he kept a bachelor's home for a time. He hired his first breaking done, and a year later acquired a team of his own. As rapidly as his capital would warrant he began stocking his claim with cattle, and combined stock and crops with fair results. While on the claim he married, and remained until his farm was substantially improved. He developed a modest permanent home of three rooms by joining his original shack to another building, and making the rooms comfortable inside. While he could not enter the cattle business extensively because of the rapid settlement by homesteaders, he always kept a small herd, and still uses the brand "DbarW." From the original home the Charlesworths moved to a property owned by Mrs. Charlesworth adjoining the townsite. By long continued industry Mr. Charlesworth has made his efforts count through grain raising and small ranching.

At Culbertson, Montana, April 7, 1908, he married Mrs. Emily M. Royels. She was born in Missouri, October 4, 1877, youngest of the children of Dennis and Maria (Jacquef) Adams. Her father, who was born at Newburyport, Massachusetts, June 1, 1830, spent his early life in his native state, learned the shoemaker's trade, then went West, spending a year in Illinois, and from there going to Missouri and locating in Sullivan County. He had acquired a liberal education and for a number of years was a successful schoolmaster. He abandoned the schoolroom to become a farmer, and spent the rest of his life in that substantial industry. While in Missouri he enlisted in the Union army, was commissioned a lieutenant, promoted to captain, and served throughout the entire war. His only injury resulted from a shell glancing from a tree and hitting him, and ever afterward he was slightly crippled. He drew a pension for many years. Captain Adams took the usual old soldier's interest in politics, was a republican, served frequently as judge of elections, and was reared a Presbyterian. He married his wife in Missouri, having met her in Illinois. She was born October 28, 1839, and died February 20, 1899, in her sixtieth year. Their older children were: Charles W., of Eldridge Missouri; Mary Helen, wife of John M. Taylor, of Wyola, Montana; Nathan Elsworth, of Clear Springs, Missouri; Dennis Ezra, of Ross, Montana; Annie Staple, now Mrs. William Somerville, of Barber, Wyoming; John Quincy of Brush, Colorado; Moses Noice, named for his father's mother, of Harris, Missouri; and Miles Thomas, of Harris, Missouri.

Mrs. Charlesworth was educated in the district schools of Missouri and come out to Montana in June, 1896, visiting a brother and sister at Hutton. While there she met her first husband, Edward Royels, and after their marriage they moved to Eastern Montana and established their home near the present town of Medicine Lake, at that time thirty miles from the nearest postoffice and trading point at Culbertson. They did horse ranching when the range was unobstructed, and when Mrs. Royels was left a widow and the country opened for settlement she entered a half section. Eventually she left the horse business and took up cattle and is one of Montana's successful women in the livestock and agricultural industry. The Charlesworth home was erected in 1915, just a dozen feet from the Medicine Lake townsite and is a commodious structure of ten rooms.

Mrs. Charlesworth had two children by her first marriage: Clarence Thomas Royels, born April 26, 1900, a stenographer and student in the military school at Reme Field near San Diego, California; and Mabel Emily, who graduated from the Medicine Lake High School in 1920. Mr. and Mrs. Charlesworth have a daughter, Lucy Maria, named for both her grandmothers, born November 22, 1909, and now in the fourth grade of the public schools.

Mr. Charlesworth cast his first ballot for president for Major McKinley, and has been a regular republican voter. Mrs. Charlesworth also grew up in a republican home and holds to the same politics. Both contributed their modest share to the success of the Red Cross and other war auxiliary movements. Mrs. Charlesworth, though she had never knit a pair of socks in her life, took up home knitting, and in addition to her heavy housework completed eleven pairs of men socks from Christmas to the first of April.

Edward Charles Elliott. In 1893 Montana, conforming to those standards which have long been recognized as essential for the sound civic development of an American commonwealth, provided for the establishment of four institutions of higher education—the State University at Missoula, the State College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts at Bozeman, the State Normal College at Dillon and the State School of Mines at Butte. Two decades later (1913) the Legislature sought to coordinate the work of these institutions and to secure their more effective and economic operation. This was accomplished by constituting the several institutions as integral parts of the University of Montana. The State Board of Education was authorized to appoint a Chancellor as the chief executive officer of the new University organization; which represents a pioneer experiment in American higher education.

To this post of Chancellor of the University of Montana which he assumed February 1, 1916, Dr. Elliott brought a wealth of educational experience, scholarship and administrative ability that have proved a profound influence not only upon the affairs of the University but the educational outlook and standards of the entire state.

Of English parentage, Edward Charles Elliott was born at Chicago, Illinois, December 21, 1874, son of Frederick and Susan (Petts) Elliott. He acquired his early education in the public schools of North Platte, Nebraska, to which place the family removed in 1881. He then pursued the scientific course at the University of Nebraska in Lincoln, graduating Bachelor of Science in 1895. He received his Master of Arts degree in Chemistry in 1897. The following six years were spent in Leadville, Colorado where he was first a teacher in the high school, and from 1898 to 1903 superintendent of city schools. In 1903 he entered the Teachers College of Columbia University at New York, specializing in educational administration. He received his Doctor of Philosophy degree in 1905, and spent the summer of 1904 as a special student in the University of Jena, Germany. At the Columbia Teachers College he was assistant in 1903-04 and teaching fellow in 1904-05.

Doctor Elliott is a member of the Phi Kappa Psi college fraternity.

Prior to coming to Montana Doctor Elliott was for ten years connected with the University of Wisconsin as associate professor of education from 1905 to 1907, and as professor of education from 1907 to 1916. From 1909 to 1916 he was also director of the course for the training of teachers.

In addition to his other work Doctor Elliott was employed in special investigations under the United States Bureau of Education from 1906 to 1910, and did similar work with the New York School Inquiry, in 1911-12 the Vermont Educational Inquiry in 1913, and has been an adviser to various state and municipal educational commissions. He was a lecturer in the summer session of Columbia University in 1907 and at the University of Chicago in 1911. In 1917 he was president of the Department of Higher Education in the National Education Association. He is the author of "Fiscal Aspects of Public Education in American Cities," published in 1905, of three bulletins on State School Systems, published in 1906, 1908 and 1910 by the United States Bureau of Education, of City School Supervision, published in 1913, and collaborated with Professor E. P. Cubberley of Stanford University on State and County School Administration, a two volume work published in 1915-16.

J. C. Wood. There could be no more comprehensive history written of a community, or even of a state and its people, than that which deals with the life work of those who by their own endeavor and indomitable energy have placed themselves where they well deserve the title of "progressive," and in this sketch will be found the record of one who has outstripped the less active plodders on the highway of life, one who has not been subdued by the many obstacles and failures that come to everyone, but who has made them stepping stones to higher things, so that at the same time that Mr. Wood was winning his way to the front in agricultural and horticultural affairs he was gaining a reputation for uprightness and honor.

J. C. Wood, successful farmer and orchardist at Wood's Bay, Flathead Valley, was born at Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, and is the son of Samuel and Matilda (Marr) Wood. He was reared at home and secured his education in the schools of Allegheny City (now the North Side, Pittsburgh), after which he attended and graduated from the Iron City Commercial College of Pittsburgh. In young manhood he was engaged in teaching school in Iowa, and in 1878 he went to Colorado, attracted there by the stories of fortunes made in the mines. From that time until 1891 Mr. Wood mined and prospected in almost every important mining camp in the country, including Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona, Wyoming, Idaho, Montana, British Columbia. During this time he filled every position in mining from prospecting to superintendent of gold mines and mills. However, in 1891 Mr. Wood showed sound judgment when he homesteaded 160 acres of land on the eastern shore of Flathead Lake, the land being located on the bay which bears his name, Wood's Bay. An interesting fact in connection with this incident is that Mr. and Mrs. Wood came to the Flathead Valley home on their wedding trip, in typical western style, by "prairie schooner," having made the trip from Del Norte, Colorado, to Butte, Montana, in 1895 thence to the Flathead Valley. In 1891 Mr. Wood gave his first efforts to the building of a home, with pleasant surroundings, and the improvement and cultivation of his farm, in all of which he was highly successful. But the great success which has attended his efforts, and which overshadows everything else that he has attempted, is as an orchardist, for as the years have passed he has not only added to and developed his orchards, but he has so improved the grade of his fruit that today he stands pre-eminently the leading horticulturist of Montana, a position which he has reached only by indefatigable and persistent efforts along definite lines. Mr. Wood is an idealist when it comes to fruit growing, and he always works toward his ideals. This has been the secret of his success. He has exhibited the products of his orchards at the World's Exposition at San Francisco, where he won two gold and two silver prizes, and has won numerous silver cups as prizes at other fairs, such as Salem, Oregon, Seattle, Washington, Helena, Montana, etc. In fitting recognition of his standing in his chosen field of endeavor, Mr. Wood has served as the president of the State Board of Horticulture, president of the Montana State Horticultural Society, president of the Flathead County Farm Bureau and is now (1920) holding the office of state horticulturist. It is said of Mr. Wood that not only has he been notably successful in fruit raising on his own account, but that he has done more probably than any other one man to stimulate and encourage the planting of orchards and the proper care of fruit in this state.

In Del Norte, Colorado, in 1885, Mr. Wood was married to Mary Grant, and to them have been born six children, namely: Samuel Oliver; Marian Ada, who became the wife of H. S. McElroy, of the east shore of Flathead Lake, and they have three children, Edith, Clarissa and Hugh; Elwyn Grant who finished the public school course, attended and graduated from the Pullman College, Washington, and then took post-graduate work at Amherst College, Massachusetts. He is a veteran of the World War, having served in France eleven months as a member of the Twentieth Regiment of Engineers, and at present is district horticulturist at Walla Walla, Washington. Christina Matilda, who is a graduate of Pullman College, became a teacher in Flathead County. She is a very intelligent and efficient young woman and during the recent war she served as county demonstrator. It was in marked evidence of her ability and popularity when, at the close of the war and the abolition of many of the special war measures, she was continued in her position by petition of the taxpayers, in which movement the women of the county were especially prominent. She is a typical Montana girl, independent and energetic, and drives her own car to various points in the county where she holds bureau meetings. John, who graduated from the Kalispell High School, took two years work in the Montana State University at Missoula, and is now employed in the shoe department of the Missoula Mercantile Company. He married Irene Roole, and they have one child, John Thomas. Helen Ruth is a student in the Missoula High School.

Politically Mr. Wood is an earnest supporter of the democratic party, and takes a deep interest in public affairs, especially pertaining to his own locality. He is deeply interested in educational matters and served six years as a member of the Kalispell High School Board and twenty-three years as a member of the school board of his district. He and his wife are active members of the Presbyterian Church, to which they give generous support. Mr. Wood's indomitable courage, persistent and aggressive efforts and his excellent management have brought to him the prosperity which is today his. He has ever stood ready to do what he could in pushing forward the wheels of progress and advancing commercial prosperity in this vicinity, and his career, both public and private, has been one worthy the high esteem which those knowing him best freely accord.

William D. Miller, editor and proprietor of the Saco Independent, and one of the members of the Board of Commissioners of Phillips County, and has been a resident of Saco since April, 1903. He was born at New Carlisle, Indiana, September 24, 1878, a son of Charles W. Miller, also born in Indiana, near New Carlisle, where he was later engaged in farming. In 1910 he migrated to the state of Washington, and has a ranch near Ellinsburg. He was born in 1852. His wife, who bore the maiden name of Lydia Hicks, was also born in New Carlisle, and she is a daughter of Dr. J. L. Hicks, either a native of Indiana or one of its early settlers. Charles W. Miller and his wife became the parents of six sons and one daughter, but William D. and his brother Jesse M. are the only members of the family living in Montana.

William D. Miller entered the employ of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad Company at Burlington, Iowa, and served as station agent at Durham and Redding, Iowa, and Darlington, Missouri, and from the latter point came to Montana in 1903 as station agent at Saco for the Great Northern Railroad.

At the expiration of a period of five years Mr. Miller purchased the Saco Independent, and succeeded W. W. Coon as editor and proprietor. This paper was founded by Harry Franklin. It is a six-column quarto and devoted to county development and news, with political leanings toward the republican party. Mr. Miller took advantage of the opportunity to acquire a home from the public domain, and entered his claim in the Milk River Valley country, and while proving up, being a bachelor, lived in a one-room, log cabin. He did what farming was required for proving up, and was also engaged in stockraising during that time, and he has continued his agricultural interests. As a business man of Saco in addition to his printing plant he is a director of the Saco Co-operative Store.

William D. Miller was reared in a republican household and early learned republican sentiments. His first presidential vote was cast for William McKinley, and in national elections his party nominee always has his ballot. He was appointed United States commissioner at Saco, this being his first official service, and he held the office for ten years. Most of the filing and making proof of title of this whole region was during his period in office. Mr. Miller was elected one of the first commissioners of Phillips County, and after serving for two years was elected for a term of six years in 1916. His associates on the board are Charley Ross, of Dodson, and Harry S. Whitcomb, of Malta. As a showing for their work the board can lay claim to the honor of organizing Phillips County and getting the various branches of the services to operating systematically, and also rendering the same service to the municipality. A Carnegie Library was secured through their instrumentality; a new jail was erected for the county; water works and an electric light plant installed at Dodson; and sewers and water works were installed at Saco before the incorporation of the latter city. Road building has received its proper share of attention, although it is the policy of the board to build them rather for the convenience of the neighboring farmers than for the pleasure of the chance tourist. Much of the work that is being done by the board is for the future and its full value cannot be adequately appreciated for some time to come, but the commissioners are men of practical experience and are animated by a love for their county and a desire to improve it just as fast as is wise and just.

On June 6, 1906, Mr. Miller was married at Saco, Montana, to Miss Edna Taylor, a daughter of W. H. Taylor, a native of Minnesota. Mrs. Miller was reared in the locality of Saco, and completed her educational training in a commercial college at Missoula, Montana. Mr. and Mrs. Miller have three children, namely: Howard, Marion and Frances. Mr. Miller belongs to the Odd Fellows, and has passed all of the chairs of Saco Lodge, of which he is now a past grand.

Montana Wesleyan University. The Methodist Church was one of the first religious institutions to become permanently planted among the mining population of early Montana territory. Churches in nearly all the larger cities have already celebrated their semi-centennials. Hand in hand with religious worship Montana Methodists have given an unusual share of their attention and means to the cause of education. In the minutes of the first Montana Conference August 2, 1877, is voiced a demand for the establishment of a school of higher grade "to meet the wants of the people who are unable to bear the expense of sending their children to eastern schools." Five years later, in 1882, a committee was appointed to consider the manner of starting an educational institution. In 1888 a field agent was appointed and in 1889 the Conference determined to locate a school at Helena. The first president of the board of trustees was the late Col. Wilbur F. Sanders, and the first treasurer was Fred Gamer.

Montana Wesleyan University opened its doors to students in 1890 after the completion of a building in the valley about six miles north of Helena. After street car service was discontinued to the Prickly Pear Valley the location was isolated, but the school has never closed its doors. The panic of 1893 and the slow development of the state in the matter of population are the principal reasons why the institution did not sooner realize the hopes of its projectors.

In 1900 the school was moved to temporary quarters in the heart of Helena, and against many adverse circumstances it continued its work until January, 1914, when it was moved to its present location at Klein Campus. Through the generosity of Mr. Henry Klein a donation of over $16,000 came to the school. It was from this fund that the trustees were able to secure a tract of ground twenty-two acres in extent 2½ blocks from the capitol grounds, calling it the Klein Campus out of respect to the name of the generous donor. In the meantime the original building in the valley, costing about $7,000, was leased to the Deaconess Association, and is the home of the Montana Deaconess School.

During the past five years, in spite of rising costs and other enormous difficulties that have confronted trustees of educational institutions all over the country, Montana Wesleyan has reached a degree of building and other equipment that enables it to fulfill the high purposes and ideals of the founders thirty years ago. The fine campus now contains two splendid examples of school architecture, the main administration building being known as Helena Hall, and in 1920 a new dormitory for women, Mills Hall, was completed and occupied. Other buildings convenient to the campus are utilized for dormitory and other purposes, and the students also have access to the many advantages of the capital city, including the State Historical Library, the State Laboratories, the City Library, Y. M. C. A. and all the rich and varied social, religious and civic advantages of Helena.

Montana Wesleyan has a complete faculty organization of men and women specialists in their lines of work, and the educational facilities embrace not only the general academic and college course, but special scientific departments, domestic science department, music and commercial department.

The aim of the college is best stated in words taken directly from the college publication: "The aim of Montana Wesleyan College is to help its students to attain the largest success and usefulness in life. It therefore holds constantly to the highest educational standards in each of its various departments of instruction, and insists upon thorough scholarship in every course offered. The College does not consider merely intellectual training a sufficient preparation for the most successful life. It aims, therefore, to hold constantly before its student-body the highest moral and religious ideals, and earnestly strives to develop its students in the essentials of genuine Christian character.

"The college was founded by and is the property of the Methodist Episcopal Church, from which it also derives its support. Yet it is denominational only to the extent that its discipline is in harmony with the views of the church which founded and supports it. The school is based on broad Christian principles such as are commonly held by Protestant churches. It has a positive Christian spirit and atmosphere, and its teaching is reverent and earnest, but it is neither dogmatic nor sectarian."

Allan Clark Lemon since the fall of 1919 has been Dean of the Montana Wesleyan College at Helena. Mr. Lemon is one of the young men in Montana's educational affairs, and has distinguished himself by his ability in educational administration and as a leader in many of the newer ideas of higher education.

Mr. Lemon was born near Akron in Plymouth County, Iowa, January 23, 1889. His ancestors were English, were colonial settlers in Pennsylvania, and in a later generation planted their homes in the Province of Ontario, Canada.

Mr. Lemon attended the rural schools of Plymouth County, Iowa, graduated from the LeMars High School in 1909 and took his college work in Morningside College at Sioux City, Iowa. He was graduated with his A. B. degree from that institution in 1913. The following year he was principal of the high school at Iowa Falls, and in the fall of 1914 came to Montana and for three years was superintendent of schools at Culbertson. Mr. Lemon's first association with the Montana Wesleyan College at Helena was as athletic director and teacher of history. He performed those duties a year, beginning in the fall of 1917. The following year he served as chief clerk in the department of agriculture and publicity for the State of Montana, with offices in the capitol, and at the same time directed the athletic activities of the Montana Wesleyan College as coach. From this work he was called to his present duties as dean of the college in the fall of 1919.

Mr. Lemon has concentrated his experience and his studies along the special line of school administration. He took post-graduate work in that subject during the summer sessions of the State University of Iowa in 1913, 1916 and 1920 and was also a research and post-graduate student in the University of Montana in the summer of 1917. Mr. Lemon is an independent voter, an active member of the Methodist Episcopal Church and steward of his church at Helena, and is a member of the Montana State Teachers' Association. He is affiliated with Helena Lodge No. 3, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons. He is also a member of the honorary educational fraternity, Phi Delta Kappa, and of the honorary debating fraternity, Pi Kappa Delta, both national organizations.

Mr. Lemon and family reside at 805 Sixth Avenue. He married at LeMars, Iowa, in 1914, Frankie Irene Crouch. Mrs. Lemon is a graduate of the LeMars High School, and also from the Iowa State Teachers' College at Cedar Falls. Mr. and Mrs. Lemon have one son, Emmett Dean, born January 6, 1916.

Rev. Charles M. Donaldson was chosen by the board of trustees as the new president of Montana Wesleyan College in 1920, to succeed Leon H. Sweetland. In the interval following Mr. Sweetland's resignation Dean Allan C. Lemon had been acting president.

Doctor Donaldson came to Montana in 1910, having been appointed to Fort Benton by the late Dr. W. W. Van Orsdel. He served that church for more than three years, with responsibilities covering a wide field beyond the jurisdiction of the immediate church, involving the visiting of many appointments and work in communities where since then churches have been erected. During his pastorate at Fort Benton the North Montana Annual Conference was held in that city, and at that time the Order of Caleb was instituted.

Rev. Mr. Donaldson was appointed to Lewistown in 1913, and made the five years of his pastorate notable in every way. Though reappointed for a sixth year, he was soon afterward selected by Bishop Shepard to take up the work of St. Paul's Church at Helena. He was pastor of St. Paul's during the year 1919, and in 1920 was associate secretary of Helena Area of the Methodist Centenary, leaving the duties of that position to become president of Montana Wesleyan Collge.

Rev. Mr. Donaldson graduated from Hamline University in 1905 with the degree Ph. B. In June, 1920, he was honored by his alma mater with the degree of doctor of divinity. His scholastic standing was high at the university and he also gained a reputation as being an all around athlete. He entered in 1907 the Boston School of Theology, where he majored in philosophy under Doctor Bowne, and in religious history under Doctor Sheldon. He graduated in 1910 with the degree S. T. B., and while at Boston took additional work in the Curry School of Biblical Interpretation and Expression. Throughout his active ministry he has been distinguished by his deep love for young people and his interest in all that pertains to young life. His various pastorates have been especially successful for what he has accomplished among young people. During his pastorate at Fort Benton the first "Win my Chum" meeting in the United States was held.

Karl P. Krueger. Talented and cultured, with a natural aptitude for mechanics, Karl P. Krueger, of Butte, is admirably fitted for the important position he is holding as superintendent of the West Colusa Mine, not only by experience and acquired knowledge, but by his acknowledged ability and broad capacity for the conduct of his business affairs. A native of Montana, he was born, May 20, 1883, in Bozeman, of German ancestry.

His father, the late Louis Krueger, Sr., was born in Berlin, Germany, in 1843, and was there brought up and educated, as a youth serving an apprenticeship at the stone mason's trade. Immigrating to the United States in 1861, he first followed his trade in Pennsylvania for a short time. Coming to Montana in 1866, he located at Fort Benton, and subsequently moved to Helena. Continuing at his trade, he did all the mason work for the Government at Forts Yellowstone and Ellis, and at the Crow Indian Reservation. He afterward prospected awhile at placer mining, being thus engaged until 1872, when he settled in Bozeman, Montana, where he was successfully employed as a contractor in mason work until 1886, as a pioneer resident helping to build the town and in the meantime acquiring title to several business blocks. From 1886 until his death, June 12, 1919, he lived retired from active business, enjoying a well-earned leisure. He was a stanch democrat in politics until Wilson's second campaign, when he joined forces with the republican party.

J. W. S. Campbell

Louis Krueger, Sr., married in Helena, Montana, Emily Ketterer, who was born in Baden-Baden, Germany, in 1851, and died in Bozeman, Montana, November 30, 1905. Ten children were born of their union, four girls dying when young. The living are: Louis, Jr., and Albert, residents of Bozeman and both are plumbers; William, also of Bozeman, is a clerk in a store; Karl P., the special subject of this brief sketch; Anna, residing in Bozeman, is the widow of the late Charles Fridley, a pioneer ranchman of that place, who died of the Spanish influenza during the epidemic in the fall of 1918; and Harry, a prosperous ranchman of Reed Point, Montana.

After his graduation from the Bozeman High School with the class of 1901, Karl P. Krueger attended the State Agricultural School of that place for two years, and then entered Columbia University in New York City, where he was graduated in 1906 with the degree of Engineer of Mines. While there he joined the Greek letter fraternity Phi Kappa Sigma, of which he is an interested member. Coming to Butte soon after receiving his degree, Mr. Krueger mined underground for a year, and during the ensuing five years was employed in the engineering office of the company. In 1912 he was made assistant foreman of the West Colusa Mine, and proved himself so efficient in that capacity that he was promoted to his present high position as superintendent of the same mine in 1913. This mine, located in the Meaderville District, employs 700 men, it being one of the largest and most important of the Anaconda Copper Mining Company's properties, yielding its owners a good yearly income.

Mr. Krueger married in October, 1914, at Butte, Miss Imelda Kelley, a daughter of John and Mary (Chatham) Kelley. Her father, a miner by occupation, came to Butte in 1876, in pioneer days, and here resided until his death. His widow survived him, and is still a resident of this city. Karl P. Krueger, Jr., the only child of Mr. and Mrs. Krueger, lived but two short months. Politically Mr. Krueger is a stanch supporter of the principles of the republican party. Socially he is a member of the Silver Bow Club.

JOHN S. CAMPBELL came to Montana over thirty years ago, and before he settled down to the serious tasks and responsibilities that have made him such a prominent factor at Reed Point he followed many occupations, freighting, mining and performing miscellaneous services for a number of people in and around Helena.

Mr. Campbell, who has spent fifteen years as a rancher at Reed Point, was born in Walkertown, Ontario, Canada, March 10, 1866. His grandfather emigrated from Scotland and settled on a farm in Ontario, where he spent his last years. His father, William Campbell, was born in Ontario, in Essex County, in 1840, spent his early life in his native province as a farmer, and finally lived at the home of his oldest son, Joseph S., in Cadillac, Michigan, where he died in 1913. He was a conservative in politics and a member of the Methodist Church. William Campbell married Maggie Summerville, who was born in Ontario in 1842 and died in that Province in 1898. They were the parents of eight children, John S. being the seventh in age. Margaret, the oldest, lives at Chesley, Ontario, widow of Charles Arkell, who was a matcher in a furniture factory; Elizabeth is the wife of William Whitehead, owner of a large wheat farm in Alberta, Canada; Joseph S. as a young man joined the volunteer forces to put down the Riel rebellion in Canada and is now living at Seattle, Washington; Jennie is the wife of Burton McNett, a farmer at Middleton, Michigan; Catherine married H. Ramsey, a hotel proprietor in British Columbia; William is an Ontario farmer; John S. is next in age; while James, the youngest, is a farmer in Ontario.

John S. Campbell was only about eleven years old when he put himself in close touch with the practical problems of life and the business of earning a living. He had received some schooling in Ontario, and at the age of eleven he went to work on farms in that province. At the age of fifteen he went with his brother Joseph to Cadillac, Michigan, and two years later came to the Northwest, Fargo, North Dakota, where during the winter he supplemented his education by attending local schools and also worked on a farm for S. G. Roberts.

Mr. Campbell came to Helena, Montana, in the summer of 1888. He engaged in the teaming business until 1891, and from April to November of the latter year was employed by the government forces making a geological survey of the Crow Indian Reservation. The following winter he spent in Helena, and during the summer of 1892 he was freighting from Helena to York. In 1893 he went to Wicks, Montana, and worked hard for three months in a leased mine, but was never paid a cent for that labor. He then went back to Helena and in the spring of 1895 began farming in that locality. That was the beginning of his independent enterprise as a Montana agriculturist. He remained there eight years and in 1903 bought a farm at Reed Point and occupied it in the spring of the following year. Since then his interests have rapidly grown as a farmer and stockman. He owns 500 acres just east of Reed Point, and the townsite is on part of his land. His modern home is in Reed Point and he has some other real estate there.

Mr. Campbell is vice president of the Reed Point State Bank, which was established in 1916 by J. B. Arnold and J. A. Snidow of Billings, Mr. Campbell and Pleun Roobol of Reed Point and also Thomas W. Marshall of the latter town. Mr. Marshall has been cashier since the opening of the bank and the president is J. B. Arnold. The stockholders are Mr. Campbell, Thomas W. Marshall, Irven Rash, Joseph Deeney, Carl Bue, Pleun Roobol, J. B. Arnold and T. A. Snidow. Situated in the midst of a prosperous country, the bank has grown in strength and service, has a capital of $25,000 and surplus of $5,000, while its average deposits are $175,000. The bank is housed in a new brick structure on Division Street.

Mr. Campbell is president of the Community Club of Reed Point, is a democrat, a member of the Methodist Church, and is past master of Reed Point Lodge, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, and a member of the Helena Camp, Woodman of the World.

In December, 1891, at Helena, he married Ada Kroll, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Kroll, both deceased. Her father came to Montana in 1885 and was a miner at Marysville. Mrs. Campbell, who died at Reed Point in 1910, was the mother of a family of five children: Hattie, wife of Elmer Humphrey, a rancher near Reed Point; Ruth, who is at home with her father, and for two terms attended the Methodist University at Helena; Joseph, assisting his father in business; Jennie, wife of Ray Tenant, a rancher at Wibaux, Montana; and Leslie, who is a high school student.

George H. Weaver is proprietor of Hotel Richards at Libby, and he and his capable wife have given that hotel a splendid reputation among the traveling public as a high class modern institution with the spirit of service dominating every feature, and thus the hotel is doing its share in promoting the general welfare and prosperity of this thriving town of Northwestern Montana.

Mr. Weaver was born at Roseburg, Oregon, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Beverly Weaver, of an old Tennessee family. He acquired his early schooling in Myrtle Creek.

Mr. Weaver married Jennie Gorman, a native of Iowa and a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Gorman. They were married at Helena. They have one son, Myron B., born at Chinook July 26, 1906. The son has been carefully reared and educated, and is now in the first year of high school. He is a typical western boy.

In politics Mr. Weaver is a democrat. He is a Mason and Mrs. Weaver was a member of the Eastern Star at Cut Bank, Montana, where she and her husband lived, and is a past matron of the Northern Star Chapter. Both attend the Presbyterian Church, in which their son is a member and an active junior worker in the Sunday school. Mr and Mrs. Weaver took the management of Hotel Richards in 1919. This hotel is thoroughly modern, fireproof, with hot and cold water, steam heated and electric lighted, and has twenty well appointed guest rooms.

Clayton H. Tyler, a lawyer and president of the Crescent Oil Company of Roundup, Montana and Thermopolis, Wyoming, is one of the substantial business men of Roundup, and held in high esteem by the people of this region. He was born at Hartford, Connecticut, July 28, 1879, a son of Col. Heman A. and Harriet Ann (Noble) Tyler.

Col. Heman A. Tyler was born at Ellensville, New York, October 17, 1842. During the war between the states he served in the First Connecticut Heavy Artillery, and retained his interest in military matters to such an extent that after the close of the war he entered the First Regiment, Connecticut National Guards, and on November 8, 1871, was commissioned adjutant, and made major on February 14, 1872. On March 12 1874, he received his commission as lieutenant colonel, and Governor Hubbard appointed him colonel of this regiment on December 29, 1876, which he held until he resigned on June 16, 1878. Subsequently he entered the Putnam Phalanx, and lived to see his four sons enlisted in different military organizations.

Colonel Tyler joined the Knights of Pythias on April 19, 1869, as a charter member of what was then Saint Bernard Lodge, but later became Crescent Lodge No. 7. He was also a Knight Templar, belonging to Washington Commandery and to Sphinx Temple, Ancient Arabic Order Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. While living at East Hartford, Connecticut, Colonel Tyler served as a member of the committee of the Second North School District, and in 1877 was elected on the republican ticket as a member of the General Assembly of the state. After he moved to Hartford, Connecticut, he was elected a member of the City Council in 1889 and 1890, from the Fourth Ward. At one time he was secretary and treasurer of the Putnam Monument Commission, for whose use the Legislature appropriated $10,000, and when the fine equestrian statue was completed and dedicated on June 14, 1888, Colonel Tyler was chief marshal of the ceremony. Moving from Hartford to Wethersfield, he became equally well known to the people of that community, and maintained offices in the Hartford Trust Company Block, where he carried on the insurance business, to which he devoted the greater part of his life. Seeing the possibilities of Crescent Beach, he was one of the developers of it, and built the Ninigret House and later the Crescent Park House, as well as the landing used by thousands of Hartford people every summer. Here during the last years of his life Colonel Tyler spent his summers, and was known to practically everybody, and was held in affectionate respect by them all. He was twice married, his first wife, to whom he was united in 1866, being Miss Harriet Ann Noble, and she died on January 15, 1905, having borne him the following children: Mrs. Willis B. Case, Mrs. William P. Barber, Mrs. Hubert W. Chapman, Miss Allys E. Tyler, Dr. Heman A. Tyler, Clayton H. Tyler, Clarence M. Tyler and Royden E. Tyler. There were eight grandchildren when Colonel Tyler died on May 11, 1911. As his second wife Colonel Tyler married Mrs. Harriet (Smith) Munger, widow of Doctor Munger, formerly professor at Yale University, who survived him. Colonel Tyler donated to the State of Connecticut the original grounds of Niantic for use by the Connecticut National Guards for encampment purposes. These grounds have since been enlarged and are known as the finest in the United States.

Clayton H. Tyler attended the public schools of Hartford, Connecticut, and then entered the law department of Yale University and was graduated therefrom. In 1900 he went to Seattle, Washington, and remained there until 1905, when he moved to Omemee, Bottineau County, North Dakota, staying there until the spring of 1909, when he came to Roundup and has the distinction of being the first of his profession to locate permanently in this city. In December, 1909, he was appointed a United States commissioner by Federal Judge William H. Hunt for a term of four years, and assisted prospective homesteaders in appropriating vacant Government land in this vicinity. He belongs to the American Bar Association and the Sons of the American Revolution, and is eligible to membership in the Patriots and Founders. During the Spanish-American war Mr. Tyler was band master for the Third Connecticut Regiment. In addition to practicing his profession, in which he specializes in commercial law, Mr. Tyler represents R. G. Dun and Company, and is president of the Crescent Oil Company. In politics he, like his honored father before him, is a republican.

On June 5, 1906, Mr. Tyler was married to Miss Minnie Mills, born at Washington, District of Columbia. Mr. and Mrs. Tyler are numbered among the best people of the county, and are the center of a charming social circle, where they have a number of congenial friends.

WALTER K. ADAMS. One of the men who became identified with the locality of Glendive during its early period of development is Walter K. Adams, who came to Montana in May, 1903, from his native State of Minnesota. He was born in Rice County of that state March 4, 1864, a son of Thomas C. Adams, and a grandson of Timothy K. Adams. The grandfather was a native of Massachusetts, where he followed farming. He migrated from that state to Vermont, and finally arrived in Minnesota, where he died in Rice County after a residence of five years. He married Mary Nichols, also of a Massachusetts family, and their children comprised two sons and four daughters. The Adams family were originally from England, and they trace their descent in this country to Henry Adams, a brother of a Revolutionary patriot and statesman, Samuel Adams.

Thomas C. Adams was born at Enowburg, Vermont, in 1837, and was eighteen years of age when he left his native state for Wisconsin, and a young man of twenty-four when he arrived in Minnesota. He was early inured to argricultural pursuits, and farming continued his occupation through life. His official connection with Rice County, Minnesota, was as a county commissioner, and he was a staunch supporter of republican principles and well known for his political convictions. He was a member of the Congregational Church, but never identified himself with fraternal orders. Thomas C. Adams married Georgia Vose, a daughter of Rev. Gilbert Vose, also a Vermont man and a Congregational minister. Mr. Adams died in 1916, but he is still survived by his widow, who is now spending the closing years of her life at Hammond, Louisiana. Their children numbered five, namely: Rena M., wife of William D. Abbott, of Winona, Minnesota; Walter K., of Sidney; Hubert G., whose home is in Corvallis, Oregon; Burton S., postmaster of Sidney; and John Quincy, of Hammond, Louisiana.

Walter K. Adams received his training in youth on the farm, and the first twenty-one years of his life were spent in the country. From the district schools he entered the high school at Faribault, Minnesota, and later matriculated in Carleton College at Northfield, that state, where he prepared himself for a business career. He was first employed as a bookkeeper for a milling company at Faribault, and after spending two years in their office he returned to the farm and for twelve years conducted the old homestead in Rice County. The expiration of that period ended his final connection with agricultural life, for in 1899 he was elected the county auditor and has since followed a business career. He was chosen on the republican ticket to the office of auditor, and served in that position for four years, on the expiration of which period he came out to Montana.

Mr. Adams was induced to change his place of residence to this northwest region through the influence of a brother who was then identified with the Sidney locality. Shortly after his arrival Mr. Adams engaged in banking, assisting in the organization of the Bank of the Valley, and he was made its assistant cashier. The institution in 1908 was chartered as the First National Bank, and since that time Mr. Adams has served it as vice president. In partnership with his brother Burton S. Adams he has also dealt extensively in real estate, handling both dry and irrigated lands, and in this way they have contributed materially to the improvement and development of Richland County. Before Richland County had been organized Walter K. Adams served for six years on the Board of Commissioners for Dawson County, his colleagues on the Board having been Henry Dion of Glendive and L. C. Faultemeyer of Wibaux. The routine work of the county occupied these three commissioners, and the division or segregation of Richland County also occurred during their incumbency.

Mr. Adams was reared under republican influences at home, and he cast his first presidential vote for Benjamin Harrison and has voted at each presidential election since 1888. He represented his county in the Republican State Convention in Montana. He was made a Mason in Faribault, Minnesota Lodge No. 9, where he still maintains his Blue Lodge, Chapter and Commandery membership, and is a member of Algeria Temple of the Shrine at Helena, Montana. He has sat in the Grand Lodge of the Eastern Star, of which he is a past patron. During the World war he served Richland County as fuel administrator.

In Rice County, Minnesota, September 4, 1889, Mr. Adams married Miss Elizabeth Herrington, who was born in that county November 19, 1861, a daughter of Elias and Mary (McDermott) Herrington. The father, who was a farmer, came to Minnesota from Delaware, but the mother was born in Scotland and came to the United States through Canada. Mrs. Adams was the oldest of their five children, and she was splendidly educated in Pillsburys Academy. Mr. and Mrs. Adams are the parents of four children, namely: Georgia K., who graduated from Carleton College of Minnesota and then became an instructor, is now a high school teacher; Mabel J., also a graduate of Carleton College, is a high school teacher in Billings, Montana; Mary E., who also completed her training in Carleton College, is now principal of the high school of Mankato; and Winifred is a junior in the University of Minnesota, a member of the class of 1921.

MRS. D. T. DARLING. While there is a resident population at Hot Springs, that famous Montana resort is best known to the thousands of annual visitors. It is safe to say that as a permanent resident none is better or more affectionately known and none performs a more useful service than Mrs. D. T. Darling.

She was born in Indiana, and her maiden name was Grundhoffer. She was married to Charles B. Darling of Harrisville, Rhode Island. They were married at Helena, Montana, and on April 17, 1891, they homesteaded in the Flathead Valley. Mrs. Darling went through all the hardships of pioneering, and Mr. Darling died on the homestead, leaving her a widow with an only son. This son, Budd Olney Darling, was born at Rimini, Montana, and was educated in the high school at Kalispell. Mrs. Darling and her son were inseparable companions, camping, fishing and hunting together, dancing, and making all their work and pleasure a common lot. The boy had an unquenchable military ardor, and it was the call of patriotic duty that separated him from his mother and cherished companions. He has enlisted three times in the United States Army.

November 7, 1909, he was mustered in and served until his honorable discharge in January, 1911. The outstanding feature of his duty in that first enlistment was when he was called upon to fight forest fires. September 4, 1914, he again enlisted at Butte, and served until his discharge in April, 1917. This time he was on duty on the Mexican border around Douglas, Arizona. June 28, 1918, he was again enrolled as an American soldier and served until February 24, 1919.

Mrs. Darling is a typical Western woman, wholesouled and warm-hearted, and her life seems to have been occupied principally in serving others. The heaviest burden she ever endured was when she had to part with her son when he enlisted to fight against the Germans. Her son, while not in the army, has been engaged in hauling passengers to and from Hot Springs. After he went into the army and in order to have occupation and to cover the sense of desolation, Mrs. Darling determined to take up the same work. For three years her Buick touring car has been carrying passengers from the railroad at Kalispell to Hot Springs and other surrounding points. She is a master at the wheel, and one of the most skillful drivers in Montana. Hundreds of people have been her passengers, and they have always been certain of a safe landing and of making the train on time. In three years of driving, frequently day and night, she had to be pulled in only once. One time she had three men as passengers when something went wrong. The men felt that with a woman chauffeur the situation was hopeless. They made a crude attempt at locating the trouble, and finally Mrs. Darling asked them to go back and sit in the shade, and when relieved of their troublesome presence she quickly discovered what was wrong with the machinery and in a few minutes the car was run on its way. A hundred-mile drive at night has never had any terrors for this fearless and confident motorist. One time as she was driving alone at night a flashlight was thrown on her and two guns pointed with an order to halt. She coolly obeyed orders, and then heard one of the men say to his companions, "Why, it's Mrs. Darling," and she was quickly told to go on. Later she learned that the men had been lying in wait for a load of liquor, and were posing as state officials to secure their share.

In former years the red men were always assured of warmth and food at the Darling home, and now while driving along the road whenever possible she asks these aboriginal inhabitants to ride, a favor much appreciated. She has many warm friends among the Indians.

Mrs. Darling has proved a good business manager, and since coming to Hot Springs by her own efforts has accumulated several nice properties, and has erected several cottages which she rents every summer. She favors working girls who cannot afford high priced accommodations, and in her cottages one can secure all the comforts and at the same time have the protecting care and oversight of "Ma Darling," as she is affectionately known.

Mrs. Darling volunteered her service overseas as an ambulance driver, but was rejected by the inflexible rule of the army that no mother or wife might accompany a soldier son or husband to the front.

WILLIAM R. ALLEN, a former lieutenant governor of Montana, is a native son of the Treasure State, but his solid reputation rests not so much upon anything he has done in public life and politics as upon his energy and forcefulness as a business executive and organizer.

Mr. Allen, whose home is at Anaconda, was born in French Gulch, Deer Lodge County, July 25 1871, son of William N. and Cordelia (Waddell) Allen. His father was of Scotch ancestry and a native of Missouri, being one of the early pioneers in Montana. The mother was of an old Kentucky family.

William R. Allen started life with a good equipment, though chiefly natural ability and practical experience. His schooling was acquired in the grammar grades and in the Helena Business College, which he attended from 1888 until his graduation in 1891.

During the past quarter of a century Mr. Allen's name has been increasingly identified with some of the larger constructive enterprises of Montana. He is credited with having been the chief personal influence which made possible the building of the Butte, Wisdom & Pacific Railway, which was the first line of railroad to open up and permit the development of the wonderful Big Hole Basin. Besides being president and chief executive of this railroad he is also president of the Boston and Montana Development Company, the Boston Fire Insurance Company, a director of the State Savings Bank of Butte, and has been connected with a number of other corporations.

He is a type of business man whose services are needed in the public affairs of any community or state. However, his political record is brief, including service in the eighth and tenth assemblies and as lieutenant governor of the state and presiding officer of the Senate from January 1, 1909, to January 1, 1913. Mr. Allen is affiliated with the Masonic Order, Odd Fellows and Elks, the Montana Club, the Lambs Club of Helena, the Silver Bow Club and the Anaconda Club. He married Miss Eliza Berkin. Their three children are Mildred, Esther and Ruth.

WALTER T. GUTZ, cashier of the Camas State Bank of Hot Springs, is one of the able financiers of this part of Montana and a man widely and favorably known. He was born at Pomeroy, Iowa, a son of Fred and Anna Gutz, pioneers of Iowa, who had nine children. Walter T. Gutz attended the Iowa State University at Iowa City, from which he was graduated in 1911 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts, and he later secured the degree of Doctor of Law. In June, 1912, he came to Montana and located at Camas, and he and his brother, H. P. Gutz also a native of Iowa organized the present bank, with the latter as president and the former as cashier. It is capitalized at $20,000, and Walter T. Gutz is in charge of it his brother being a resident of Selby, North Dakota. The acting vice president is B. A. Moore. This bank is the only one in the western part of the Reserve and does a large amount of business. The capability and reliability of the efficient young cashier inspires confidence and the business men know that through its medium they are sure of having their finances handled in a manner entirely satisfactory to them and their business associates. When the bank was established the outlook was not encouraging, but when confidence was inspired and the people made to feel that they could trust the officers of this institution business came to it, and now its affairs are in a very flourishing condition.

Walter T. Gutz was married to Corinne A. de Mers, a daughter of Jacques de Mers and his wife Leonie G. de Mers, the former of whom was a pioneer of Western Montana, coming here from Canada and establishing a trading post for the Indian trade. Demersville, Montana, was named in honor of him. Mrs. Gutz attended the Butte High School and a business college of that city. Mr. and Mrs. Gutz have a daughter, Dolce Leah. Mrs. Gutz is a Catholic. A strong republican, Mr. Gutz has given his party a loyal support and will continue to do so, as he believes that the best interests of this country are conserved under republican administrations. An intelligent, upright and sound man of business, Mr. Gutz has had a strong influence in developing this region, and his community is under heavy obligations to him for his work in this respect. Both he and his wife enjoy the social life offered here, and their pleasant home is often the scene of delightful gatherings of many frinds, to whom they give a warm-hearted hospitality.

MELVIN D. CLARKE. One of the men who is connected with the industry that is of such vital importance to the country and has borne such a distinctive part in the development of Montana is Melvin D. Clarke, general manager of the Winne Creek Ranch Company and whose home is at Harlowton. The cattle industry has attracted to it some of the most energetic men of the country, and in its ramifications it has influenced almost every branch of activity.

Mr. Clarke was born in Waldo County, Maine, on the farm of his father, February 23, 1863, a son of Dudley Perley and Lucy Ellen (Warren) Clarke, both of whom were natives of Waldo County, Maine. Dudley P. Clarke died in 1898, when he was seventy-one years old, and his wife died in 1909, aged seventy-two years. They had twelve children, of whom six daughters and five sons lived to maturity, and nine now survive. Of them all Melvin D. Clarke was the sixth in order of birth. Dudley P. Clarke was reared in his native county and attended its schools. With the discovery of gold in California he joined the westward rush and in 1849 went to that state in a sailing vessel around Cape Horn. After three or four years in California, during which time he was engaged in prospecting on Feather River, he returned to his old home and bought his father's farm and there engaged in farming and raising standard breeds of cattle and sheep. He was a prominent man, serving as selectman and a member of the school board for several years, being elected to these offices on the democratic ticket. He was a consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

In addition to attending the public schools of Waldo County Melvin D. Clarke had the additional advantage of a course at Freedom Academy. Leaving home at the age of twenty years, he went to Lowell, Massachusetts, and worked in a cotton mill for a year, and then came West to Billings, Montana, where he arrived in April, 1884 making the trip from there overland to Judith Gap, where he engaged with Archie McGreagar, a sheep grower, and remained on his ranch for a year, leaving him to go with C. E. Severance, who was also in the sheep business. In 1891 Mr. Clarke located on Milk River and was engaged in the sheep business for himself until 1895, in that year returning East, and for ten years was employed by the Boston, Massachusetts, Elevated Railroad Company. He then returned to Montana and for a time was in Meagher County, later locating on Smith River, where he was manager for the Clear Creek Range Live Stock Company. In 1916 he sold his interest in it and located on Winne Creek as general manager for the Winne Creek Ranch Company. While living on Smith River Mr. Clarke was a school director of his district for six years. He belongs to Diamond Lodge No. 7, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, of Twodot, Montana; Harlowton Chapter No. 22, Royal Arch Masons; Helena Commandery No. 2, and he is also a thirty-second degree and Shriner Mason, belonging to Algeria Temple, Ancient Arabic Order Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. He is also a member of Middleseck Lodge No. 17, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, of Malden, Montana, and is a charter member of the Knights of Pythias of Malden, Montana. Politically he is a republican.

On June 10, 1909, Mr. Clarke was married to Miss J. Blanch Roberts, born in Brownville, Maine, a daughter of Granville Roberts. Mr. Clarke is a man who knows how to handle others, is reliable, resourceful and dependable, and can be counted upon to find a way out of every difficulty, and for this reason his services are highly valued by his associates and his community.

THOMAS LESLIE LYLE, who has spent nearly all his life in Montana, is a photograph artist by training and talent and in five or six years has built up the leading commercial photography establishment in the state.

Mr. Lyle was born in Winnipeg, Canada, September 8, 1887, and was about a year old when his parents Thomas and Bessie (Gamble) Lyle came to Montana. Thomas Lyle was born in Ireland in 1832, was reared in that country, and married there. His wife was born in Scotland in 1864. Thomas Lyle learned the trade of blacksmith and in 1885 came to America, living at Winnipeg, Canada, for two years, where he followed his trade, and in 1888 established his home in Helena. He was a blacksmith for many years and is now in the shops of the Northern Pacific Railway at Missoula. He is a member of the Presbyterian Church. His wife, while her home was at Helena, died at Rochester, Minnesota, in 1913. Leslie Lyle is the oldest of eight children. Margaret, the second, is the wife of Charles Dimmick, an electrician living at Los Angeles, California. William is an express messenger at Helena with the Northern Express Company. Henry assists his brother Leslie in the studio. Andy is a freighter at the oil wells at Eastland, Texas. Robert is now with the United States Marines in the Philippine Islands. Bessie and Edgar are both at home attending public school. Four of the boys have military records. William spent a year overseas in the artillery division; Henry was one of the first American soldiers to go to France, and saw some of the hardest fighting in which the Expeditionary Forces participated, including the Argonne Forest and the St. Mihiel Drive. He was awarded the French Croix de Guerre for bravery. Andy Lyle entered the officers training school at Waco, Texas, but the armistice was signed before he was prepared for duty. Robert enlisted in the Marines three months before the armistice was signed, and, as noted above, is still in the army.

Leslie Lyle acquired his education in the public schools at Helena, but left school at the age of seventeen to go to work. His first three years were spent with the Northern Pacific Railway, then three years in the employ of the Helena Electric Railway, and four years with the Missoula Light and Water Company in the railway department. During this period of four years he was diligently studying the technique of photography, having taken up the art as an amateur. In 1914 he returned to Helena and established a small studio, and from the first has emphasized commercial photography. He now has the leading establishment of its kind in the state, but also does high class portrait work. However, his business as a commercial photographer brings him orders from all over the state and outside states, and constitutes a service that is resorted to by newspapers, business concerns and many others who require the best class of work.

Mr. Lyle's studios are in the Pittsburgh Block and his home is at 710 Hillsdale Street. He is unmarried. In politics he casts his vote independently and is a member of the Presbyterian Church.

Mrs. Annie Patterson Walker. The record of leading personalities in the Flathead country would be incomplete without mention of Mrs. Annie Patterson Walker, a resident of this section of Montana for nearly thirty years and widely known and esteemed as proprietor of the Hotel National at Kalispell.

She was born in the land of purple heather in Argyleshire, Scotland, a daughter of Archibald and Jeannette (Simpson) Patterson, being one of the younger of nine children. She spent her early life in the City of Glasgow, where she attended school, and on April 27, 1887, was married to Charles M. Walker, of Aberdeen. In the month of May following their marriage they left Scotland, crossed the ocean to Montreal, in which Canadian city they remained four and a half years, and then made their final stage of westward progress to the Flathead country. At Kalispell they entered the hotel business, and continued it jointly until the death of Mr. Walker on April 18, 1913. His death left Mrs. Walker with only two relatives in Montana, Archie and Mathew Patterson, both of whom were born in Scotland. Archie is connected with the K. M. Company of Kalispell, while Mathew, who was a United States soldier during the World War, is employed in Spokane, Washington.

The Hotel National is regarded as one of the most complete and adequate hotels in point of service in Western Montana. It has the material equipment and facilities, but the dominating characteristic is the wholesome, homelike atmosphere due to the pervading genius of Mrs. Walker as proprietor and manager. Mrs. Walker while she has revisited Scotland twice has never thought of leaving her home and friends in Montana. She is a member of the Eastern Star, the Maccabees and the Presbyterian Church. She has seen many changes in this section of Montana during her residence, and her own life and service have contributed in some measure to the progress which Kalispell has enjoyed.

James Clinton Smith, of Pony, Montana, is one of the men to whose knowledge and practical ideas with reference to agricultural matters this region is deeply indebted. Not only has he operated successfully as an individual, but also for the Government, and a number of the more progressive ranchmen have adopted his methods to their benefit and the advancement of their neighborhood. Mr. Smith was born in Muscatine County, Iowa, February 24, 1877, a son of James E. Smith, born in Iowa in 1851, and now a resident of Pendleton, Oregon.

Growing up amid rural surroundings and taught habits of industry and thrift, James E. Smith became a farmer of Muscatine County, Iowa, continuing in that calling when he moved to Hand County, South Dakota, in 1883. When he located in the vicinity of Billings, Montana, in 1892, he added stock-raising upon an extensive scale to his farming activities, and although he went to Oregon in 1910, he is still engaged in these lines in the neighborhood of Pendleton. The first name of his wife is Nellie, and she was also born in Iowa, the year of her nativity being 1849. They became the parents of the following children: Claude D., who is in a stock business at Grant, Montana; James Clinton, whose name heads this review; Pearl S., who lives on his ranch near Billings, Montana; Susie, who is the widow of Harry Hoppell and lives on her ranch near Billings, her husband having died during the winter of 1918 with the influenza; Orpha, who married Jack Howley and lives west of Billings on their ranch; and George, who lives at Great Falls, Montana, and is manager of the Capital Commission Company, a wholesale fruit house.

James Clinton Smith attended the public schools of Yellowstone County, Montana, and was graduated from the Billings High School in 1896. For the subsequent five years he was engaged in a stock business of his own, and then was employed by the Government as assistant farmer at the Montana Industrial School at Lower Big Horn, Montana, for four years. Mr. Smith then was a teacher of industry at Fort Shaw, Montana, for a year, when he was transferred to the Crow Reservation as sub agent for six months. Leaving the Government service, Mr. Smith in 1907 bought a farm of 160 acres nine miles west of Billings and conducted it until he sold it in February, 1919. This farm was a very desirable one, all irrigated and improved. He then moved to Pony, where he is temporarily retired. Since reaching his majority he has given a loyal support to the principles of the republican party. Fraternally he maintains connections with Billings Lodge No. 394, Benevolent Protective Order of Elks.

In 1908 Mr. Smith was married at Billings to Miss Nellie Cecile Snyder, a daughter of W. F. Snyder. Mr. and Mrs. Smith have one son, William Daniel, who was born April 11, 1911. Mr. Smith has proven himself a valuable man and deserves the credit which is accorded him. Both he and Mrs. Smith are favorites among their many friends, of whom they have a legion in the different communities in which they have lived.

Oscar G. Smart. In the early '70s the lure of the northwestern country of Montana, with all its fascination of gold and adventure, brought from his far eastern home in Maine, where up to that time he had been a farmer, Oscar G. Smart, who for nearly a quarter of a century was one of the successful stockmen of Montana.

He was born at China in Kennebec County, Maine, October 16, 1842, son of Ira and Eliza Smart. His father went to Maine as a young man and spent his life in Kennebec County as a farmer and citizen of integrity and much influence. Oscar G. Smart had a liberal education, attending the public schools of his native county and finishing in Kents Hill Seminary at Vassalborough. When he started West in the spring of 1872 he traveled by railway as far as the Missouri River, at Omaha embarked on a steamer that carried him to Fort Benton, and thence overland to Helena. He had some experiences prospecting and mining at Alder Gulch, and for about three years was a freighter. For a brief time he made his headquarters at Haymaker Creek and then preempted and homesteaded on the Musselshell River about four miles below the present town of Twodot. Here his interests were concentrated, and beginning with the modest equipment of a pioneer he kept his herds of cattle and flocks of sheep grazing over the domain, and at one time owned several thousand acres of land and sent many carloads of cattle, sheep and horses to market. He continued to be a resident of that locality until his death on May 27, 1899. While his business achievements brought him prosperity, it was his character that is gratefully remembered. He always showed an undoubting reliance on Divine Providence, and practiced benevolence in his relations with his fellow men, and his highest aspiration was to discharge with fidelity and cheerfulness every duty and contribute what he could to the happiness of others. To many old timers as well as members of the younger generation his death came as a great loss. He was a Mason and in politics a republican.

N. P. Evans

In 1884 he went back to Maine and on February 2 married Miss Alice Lillian Vining, daughter of Daniel and Elizabeth (Choate) Vining, of Kennebec County, where the Vinings have been a substantial family for many generations. Her mother was of the famous American lineage of Choate, one of whom was the brilliant lawyer and diplomat at one time an ambassador to England. Her brother, Marcellus Vining, served as a first lieutenant in the Seventh Maine Infantry and was killed at the battle of Gettysburg, and another brother, Reuben, gave up his life for the Union cause at Fredericksburg. After the death of Mr. Smart Mrs. Smart became the wife of Andrew D. Nichols of Malden, Massachusetts. She has busied herself with philanthropic and patriotic causes and in the spring of 1917 became chairman of the Red Cross for Wheatland County, serving in that capacity eight months and remained diligent in the affairs of the Red Cross the remainder of the war period.

Forrest V. Smart. The gentleman whose life history is herewith outlined is a man who has lived to good purpose and achieved a large degree of success, solely by his individual efforts. By a straightforward and commendable course Mr. Smart has made his way to a commanding position in the business world, winning the hearty admiration of the people of his community and earning a reputation as an enterprising, progressive man of affairs which the public has not been slow to recognize and appreciate. Those who know him best will readily acquiesce in the statement that he is eminently deserving of the material success which has crowned his efforts and of the high esteem in which he is held, representing, as he does, one of the honored old families of Montana, members of which have done much for the general upbuilding of the same from the pioneer epoch to the present time.

Forrest V. Smart was born at White Sulphur Springs, Montana, on March 9, 1885, and is a son of Oscar G. and Alice Lilliam (Vining) Smart. Oscar G. Smart was born in China, Kennebec County, Maine, on October 16, 1842, and died on May 27, 1899. His widow now makes her home in Harlowton. They were the parents of one child, the subject of this sketch.

Forrest V. Smart secured his elementary education in the common schools of his home community, in the normal school at St. Cloud, the high school at Billings, Montana, and the Shaddock Military Academy at Faribault, Minnesota, where he was graduated with the class of 1904. In that class Mr. Smart stood second highest in military science, and on July 26, 1904, was offered a second lieutenancy in the United States army. In that year, however, he came to Meagher County, Montana, and took active personal charge of his ranch of 8,000 acres, to which he later added 7,000 more acres. Here he has devoted himself to the breeding and raising of sheep, cattle and horses, in which he has been remarkably successful. He has had on his ranch at one time nearly 10,000 sheep, 1,000 head of cattle and 100 horses. In 1917, having enlisted for military service, Mr. Smart sold off a good share of his live stock holdings, including 9,000 head of sheep and 1,568 head of cattle. He then went to Camp McArthur, where he entered the officers' training camp, but the great struggle having ended before he was called into field service he was discharged on November 26, 1918. He returned at once to his ranch and bought four hundred good grade cattle and 90 head of registered Hereford cattle for breeding purposes, having leased his ranch for three years when he went into the army. The ranch is finely equipped with substantial and comfortable buildings, and everything is so arranged as to permit of maximum results with a minimum of effort and labor.

On October 20, 1908, Mr. Smart was united in marriage with Zelma B. Robertson, who was born in the State of Washington, the daughter of Frank E. and Lucia Robertson, who are now living at Twodot, Montana, where Mr. Robertson operates a stage line. Of their three children, Mrs. Smart is the eldest. Mr. and Mrs. Smart are the parents of six children, namely: Oscar G., Alice L., Dorothy R., Forrest E., Donald and Harriet.

Fraternally Mr. Smart has for many years had a deep interest in the Masonic order. He was first made a Mason in Lewistown Lodge No. 37, at Lewistown, Montana, but dimitted and became a charter member of Musselshell Lodge No. 69 at Harlowton. He was made a Royal Arch Mason in Hiram Chapter No. 15, at Lewiston, but dimitted and became a charter member of Harlowton Chapter No. 22. He was made a Knight Templar in Lewiston Commandery No. 14, but dimitted and became a charter member of Palestine Commandery No. 18 at Harlowton. He is also a member of Algeria Temple, Ancient Arabic Order Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, at Helena.

As a man of ability, sturdy integrity and usefulness, and as a citizen representative of the utmost loyalty, he has merited consideration by his fellow men, and his life record is deserving of a place in this publication, which touches those who have given to and sustained the civic and material prosperity of our community and state.

Nathaniel Powell Evans, the present postmaster of Bozeman, has been a rancher and dairyman in this section of Montana for many years. While he has not lived in Montana continuously, he first viewed this section of the Northwest when it was a raw and untraveled wilderness, more than fifty years ago. In fact his father was one of the first to settle in the territory and occupy himself with the basic pursuits of agriculture. Most of those who came during the '60s were prospectors, miners and otherwise identified with the transitory stage of industry.

His father was Philip E. Evans, who was born in Cooper County, Missouri, in 1833. The grandfather, Thomas Evans, was a native of Maryland, where the Evans family had first settled when coming from Wales in colonial times. Thomas Evans was a Missouri pioneer, was a physician and surgeon by profession, and spent his last days at Sedalia, Missouri. Philip E. Evans was reared and married in Missouri, and after his marriage settled on a farm in Pettis County. In 1863 he moved to Hendersonville, Kentucky, was there one year, and in 1864, leaving his family in Missouri, came to Montana. At the locality then known as Stinking Water, now called Ruby Valley, in Madison County, he homesteaded 160 acres. He put up a log cabin, and with its rude accommodations furnished a place of entertainment for the passing public, a service that was as much appreciated as a high-class hotel by modern travelers. In 1870 he moved to Deer Lodge, was a farmer and dairyman, and subsequently became extensively interested in the sheep industry. He died at Deer Lodge, one of the honored and respected old timers, in 1888. He was a democrat, served as assessor of Deer Lodge County, now Powell County, and was a member of the Masonic fraternity. Philip E. Evans married Mary B. Powell who was born in Virginia in September, 1837, and is still living at Missoula, having been a resident of Montana for more than half a century. Nathaniel Powell Evans is the oldest of their children. Anna, who died at Missoula, was the wife of the late Henry McMurphy. Edwin died in young manhood. John M. Evans is distinguished as a present congressman from Montana, his home being at Missoula. Lutie is the wife of J. W. Lister, a Missoula postmaster. Henry W. is a farmer at Deer Lodge. Thomas is in business at Missoula. Maggie died in the State of Washington in 1914, wife of William Allen, who is a farmer in that state. Dollie died at Missoula after her marriage. Sophia is the wife of a merchant at Oshawa, Canada.

Nathaniel Powell Evans was born in Pettis County, Missouri, June 27, 1857. He came to Montana with his mother and the other children in 1865, and his early memories are associated with the country around Deer Lodge. He attended a primitive rural school there but went back to Missouri to complete his education in the University of Missouri. He left school at the age of twenty and for about two years worked as a cowboy in Deer Lodge and Beaverhead counties. He also taught school in Henry County, Missouri, one year, and was a farmer there for one season. Mr. Evans located permanently in Montana in 1885, and was a farmer at Deer Lodge until 1899, when he removed to Bozeman. From his activities as a farmer he was called to the duties of postmaster of Bozeman in 1915, being appointed by President Wilson. He owns a highly developed farm of 640 acres, with equipment and facilities for dairying, located six miles west of Wilsall in Gallatin County. He and his family reside at 912 South Central Avenue, and his wife owns a dwelling house in Bozeman, 160 acres of land four miles north of Bozeman and a homestead of 160 acres near Melville.

Mr. Evans has always followed the political fortunes of the democratic party. For two years he was county commissioner of Deer Lodge County. He is a member of the Baptist Church, of Bozeman Lodge No. 6, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, Bridger Camp No. 62, Woodmen of the World, at Bozeman, and is active in the Chamber of Commerce.

In 1885, in Henry County, Missouri, he married Miss Sarah Ann Powell, a daughter of Lucas and Betty (Powell) Powell, the latter now deceased. Her father is a retired farmer in Henry County, Missouri. Mrs. Evans died in June, 1914, the mother of seven children, two of whom died in infancy. Philip E. the oldest of those living, is on his father's farm six miles west of Wilsall. Mary is the wife of L. L. Short, employed in a lumberyard at Bozeman. William L. is in the draying business at Bozeman. Edwin W. is a member of the United States Coast Guards in the State of Washington. Ruth is the wife of Thomas Crouse, connected with the Bozeman Milling Company. In 1916, at Bozeman, Mr. Evans married Mrs. Josephine Stiff, a native of Minnesota, widow of June Stiff, a well known farmer of Bozeman. By her first husband Mrs. Evans has three children: Jesse Stiff, who was in the United States navy and up to the summer of 1919 was on duty in Russia. He received his discharge in the latter part of 1919 and is now in Bozeman. Teressa Stiff is a stenographer for a shipbuilding company at Tacoma, Washington. Donald Stiff is a farmer near Melville.

WILLIAM R. VEZINA. The press ranks as one of the first institutions of importance in any new country. Northeastern Montana has built up and prospered largely in the last ten years, and one of the early newspapers established in that section is the Dooley Sun, of which William R. Vezina is the founder and proprietor.

Mr. Vezina is a young newspaper man and had his training in the newspaper business in Wisconsin. He was born at St. Paul, Minnesota, June 18, 1890, son of John C. and Elizabeth (Brinkman) Vezina. His father was born at Montreal, Canada, in 1856, of French ancestry. His mother was born at Keokuk, Iowa, of German parentage. John C. Vezina when a child was brought to the United States, grew up and received his education at Keokuk, Iowa, was a merchant's clerk there and for a few years engaged in business for himself in that city. During his residence at St. Paul he was for fourteen years a traveling salesman for Lindeka, Warner & Schumeyer, a well known wholesale house of Minnesota. After that he was a merchant in Dodd City, Minnesota, three years at LeSeuer, that state, and is now in business at Elsworth, Wisconsin. He is a republican in politics and affiliated with the Royal Arch Chapter of Masons and Odd Fellows. He and his wife have four children: Charles Edward, of Elsworth, Wisconsin; Arthur John, of St. Paul; William Reuben; and John Charles, Jr., of Dixon, Illinois.

William Reuben Vezina spent his early life at St. Paul, Dodd Center and Missoula, Montana, and at Elsworth, Wisconsin. After completing his education at Elsworth he went to St. Croix Falls, Wisconsin, and for three years was editor of the Standard Press. He was married there in the spring of 1913 and at once came to Montana, and after some months at Plentywood and Antelope, being manager of the Antelope Advocate, he followed the new branch of the Soo Line and identified himself with the town of Dooley. The first edition of the Dooley Sun came off the press November 7, 1913. In his editorial in the first issue Mr. Vezina told the people that he was there to promote the welfare of the locality and all interests contributing to the development of the region, and that the politics of the paper would be democratic. Since then he has made the Sun an instrument of real value to every legitimate interest in the community. During the World war he devoted its pages freely to the building up and consolidating of patriotic sentiment and to carrying on the various branches of the war work.

Mr. Vezina has served under two appointments as United States commissioner at Dooley. His first appointment was made June 22, 1916, and he was again appointed in September, 1918. He is also president of the Dooley Commercial Club, which during a brief existence advertised the village, started sidewalk building, and did much to direct the attention of outside localities to this new town of Montana.

April 30, 1913, Mr. Vezina married Phi Bernice Clayton, daughter of Benjamin and Minnie (Wilcox) Clayton, both natives of Minnesota, the former born at Taylor's Falls and the latter at Sunrise.

Her father is a hardware merchant at St. Croix Falls, Wisconsin. Mrs. Vezina has a sister, Dora, and a brother, Howard G., who was a sergeant in the Three Hundred Forty-First Infantry with the American Expeditionary Forces. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Vezina are Benjamin John, William Reuben, Jr., Howard Clayton and Elizabeth Irma.

Fred G. Mills. The Town of Outlook in Sheridan County was in the infancy of its development when Fred G. Mills identified himself with the locality as a merchant in October, 1913. He has kept his own business developing and growing, and his enterprise has been one of the important factors in the life of the locality.

Mr. Mills was born in Benton County, Iowa, December 28, 1868, a son of John Mills, a native of England. John Mills came to this country and settled in Ohio at the age of seventeen, lived at Springfield for several years, and married at Elmyra, Ohio, Melissa Potter. She was born in that state in 1848, her father having been killed while a soldier in the Mexican war. From Ohio John Mills moved to Illinois and thence to Iowa, and followed his trade as a blacksmith until his death at Beaman in 1898, at the age of fifty-five. His wife died at Beaman at the age of fifty-two. Their children were: Clara C., who married Byron Oberton, of Dows, Iowa; Charles E., of Griswold, Iowa; Fred G.; Lambert, of Rock Island; and Eugene P., of Kansas City, Missouri.

Fred G. Mills acquired only a common school education, and at the age of seventeen was making his own way. He learned the trade of carpenter at Dows, and that trade was his chief means of livelihood for nineteen years. He worked in different localities of Iowa, but for seventeen years his home was at Dows in Wright County. On leaving Iowa he moved to Sheridan County, North Dakota, which was his home for seven years. He began there as a farmer, and subsequently took the management of a lumber yard at Martin. While in Sheridan County, North Dakota, he exercised his homestead right and proved up a claim two miles south of Martin. At that time he had a growing family, and they lived on the homestead and did most of the work, while through his outside business efforts he provided what the farm failed to produce.

It was from his homestead in North Dakota that Mr. Mills came to Montana and located at Outlook in October, 1913. He took charge of a line lumberyard in the village, and when the yard was taken over by another company he entered the hardware business on his own account. He established a new business under the name F. G. Mills & Company, with himself as manager. The original stock comprised a general but small line of hardware, stoves and paints. He also had an undertaking department, the manager of which was his son Claude W. Mills. Since then the stock has been increased threefold. At the beginning his store room was 24 by 40 feet. It is a large and flourishing business now, and some of his trade comes from Southern Saskatchewan, a distance of twenty-five miles from Outlook.

Mr. Mills has served a term on the City Council, and while in North Dakota was school treasurer of Martin two terms. He cast his first presidential ballot for Cleveland and has always supported the democratic nominee for president. He grew up, however, in a republican household. He joined the Masonic fraternity at Harvey, North Dakota, and still holds his Blue Lodge membership there.

At Dows, Iowa, February 16, 1890, Mr. Mills married Miss Florence S. Henthorne. Her father, Ephraim Henthorne, spent his life as a farmer and died in Iowa in 1905. Mrs. Mills, who was born March 30, 1871, is the youngest of the four living children of her parents, the others being Mrs. Jennie Rudy, of California, William, of Kansas, and Mrs. Evelyn Chamberlain, of Los Angeles. Mr. and Mrs. Mills have two sons. Frank C., the older, manager of the Outlook Lumber Company, married Lizzie Werner and has two children, Cecil and Wayne Werner. The other son, Claude W., previously mentioned and still in business with his father, was for sixteen months absent in service with the colors. He was trained in Camp Lewis, Washington, and was in Company A, under Captain Spalding, in the Three Hundred and Sixty-Second Infantry. Later he was transferred to the Presidio, San Francisco, then to Fort Douglas at Salt Lake, and at the signing of the armistice was at Great Falls with a guard company in motorcycle work. He was discharged at Camp Lewis January 3, 1919. Claude Mills married Miss Mildred Crabtree, a daughter of John W. Crabtree.

Charles G. Christianson. So much of the permanent development of Northeastern Montana has been made within the past decade or within the present century that it is possible to speak with particular reference to the pioneer labors of some of the men who founded commercial institutions and have had a valued part in the upbuilding of towns and other resources. One of these is Charles G. Christianson, the pioneer merchant of Redstone and one of the first settlers in that section of the Big Muddy Valley.

Mr. Christianson was born at Erskine, Minnesota, April 25, 1885, son of Gustav and Sophie (Kaldager) Christianson. His parents were born about seven miles from Christiania, Norway, were married in 1880, and in 1883 sailed from Christiania for New York. After paying their passage money they had little left. The first summer was spent in Ottertail County, Minnesota, as wage workers, following which they took up a homestead in Polk County, made a farm of their claim and developed it substantially. When they sold this a few years ago they retired and are now living at Erskine. Their children are: Carrie, wife of C. A. Ness, of Erskine; Charles G.; Ida, of Erskine; Olive, wife of Halvar, Aakhus; Effie, in Minnesota; Julia, of Erskine; Oscar, of Flaxville, Montana; Emma, employed in the offices of the Northern Pacific Railway Company at Fargo, North Dakota; Selmer, of Erskine; and Miss Hiklma, who is the only one of his children still at home. The son Oscar, of Flaxville, Montana, had an interesting experience as a World War soldier. For one year he was in France with the Headquarters Company of the Ninety-first Division, was in the Argonne campaign, on the firing line four consecutive days, and was wounded September 29, 1918, when a piece of shrapnel struck him behind the ear. However he had recovered and was back in the ranks ready for the advance when the armistice was signed. He reached New York, April 15, 1919, and arrived at Redstone, Montana, the 6th of May.

The father of these children early took steps to become a citizen, and gained his last papers after five years. He did his first voting as a republican, but in later years has exercised an independent choice among candidates. He and his wife are Lutherans in religion.

Charles G. Christianson lived on the home farm in Minnesota to the age of twenty years. In the meantime he had attended country schools, and when he left home he chose a business career and gained his preparation for business as clerk in Erskine for L. F. Benson, a local merchant with whom he remained for seven years. Out of his wages he saved most of the capital which enabled him to engage in business for himself when he came to Montana.

His arrival in Northeastern Montana was on August 20, 1913, at which date he opened his store at Redstone. He was attracted to this region because it was new and open to settlement and promised opportunities for business. While preparing for his merchandise opening he was engaged in freighting his stock from Plentywood, and housed it in the store building erected first at "the old town" of Redstone by Olaf Berghand & Son, of whom it was purchased and by whom it was moved to the new Redstone when the railroads came and that village was laid out.

Before coming to Montana Mr. Christianson also had a brief experience in business at Crosby, North Dakota. He arranged a partnership for his Montana venture with Andrew Ingwaldson and C. C. Peterson. The firm name chosen was the Redstone Mercantile Company. This was one of the two pioneer stores to initiate commercial enterprise at Redstone but is now the only one that has stood the test of time under various adverse circumstances. The same firm also furnished most of the capital and enterprise for the Flaxville Mercantile Company, which established a business at Flaxville March 1, 1916. The manager of that is Mr. Oscar Aslakson who came into the firm as a partner at that date. Mr. Christianson has always had the active management of the business at Redstone. The original stock of goods was valued at $3,500, but at the end of four months goods double that value were on the shelves of the store. The business has been growing and prospering and is now one of the substantial bulwarks of this part of the Big Muddy Valley. Mr. Christianson has also used some of his resources to invest in farming property and intends to push farm development as fast as the country improves and conditions justify. He began voting as a republican, casting his first vote for Mr. Taft. He not only stands for protection but for temperance and prohibition and is a strong enemy of the drink traffic. While in Minnesota he served as a clerk to a committee chairman in the State Senate. He and Mrs. Christianson are members of the Methodist Church, and he took his degrees in Masonry in Eagle Lodge No. 103 at Redstone and has served the order as treasurer.

At Fosston, Minnesota, July 11, 1914, Mr. Christianson married Miss Thora Hegland. She was born at Arneberg, Norway, not far from Christiania, February 3, 1884, and in 1897 her father, Ole Hegland, brought his family to the United States and established a home on a farm near Fosston, Minnesota, where Mrs. Christianson was reared. She acquired a liberal education, being a graduate of the State Normal School at Moorehead, Minnesota, and was granted a life teacher's certificate. For eight years she taught country schools, also did work in the grades at Erskine and her last school work was done in Montana as principal of the Froid schools in 1914. Mrs. Christianson was the second of four children. Her oldest brother, Thomas, is a farmer on the homestead in Minnesota. Her sister, Tina, is a trained nurse who was in the Red Cross service at Camp Lewis, Washington. The other sister, Miss Joren, is a teacher and for four years was in the schools at Redstone. Mr. and Mrs. Christianson have two children, Gwendolyn and Roger.

Reginald G. Tyler. It would hardly be fair to regard the experiences and achievements of Reginald G Tyler as a farmer in the Homestead locality of Sheridan County as typical of that district though they illustrate the possibilities of the region for unusually energetic and ambitious young men. On the basis of what he has done Mr. Tyler is a firm believer in the great agricultural prosperity of Northeastern Montana. He is actively identified with banking and other organizations at Homestead, and is also one of the present Board of County Commissioners of Sheridan County.

Mr. Tyler was born near Mazomanie, Wisconsin, October 7, 1882. His grandfather Tyler took his family West from New York State to Wisconsin at an early day, and cleared away the timber and made a farm in the wooded section of Southern Wisconsin. He was the father of several children, including John G. Tyler and Aby Tyler. The latter became the wife of John Preston and died in Wisconsin. John Gaylord Tyler, father of the Homestead business man, was reared in Dane County, Wisconsin, acquired a country school education, and spent all his active career as a farmer. He acquired a homestead in Dane County, developed a farm, and left his home and business affairs to enter the Union army at an early date in the Civil war. He served as a private until the struggle ended with the downfall of the Confederacy. His fellow citizens always showed complete confidence in his ability and judgment, and honored him with the office of township supervisor for a number of years and as chairman of the board. He was a republican, and rather late in life united with the Congregational Church. John G. Tyler, who died in 1893, married Amelia Watson, who also came of a family of Wisconsin farmers, and she died in January, 1897, at the age of sixty-two. They were the parents of three sons: Robert W., of Homestead, Montana; Algernon S., of Spirit Lake, Iowa; and Reginald G.

Reginald G. Tyler completed the work of the Mazomanie High School, also attended the University of Wisconsin at Madison, and his experiences before coming to Montana were of a nature to sharpen his business faculties. After leaving school he taught for two years, then sold school supplies for eighteen months, for several years lived in St. Louis, Missouri, where for a year and a half he was a street railway conductor and for a similar time receiver in the car sheds for the St. Louis Transit Company.

He had also gained a practical knowledge of farming during his youth in Dane County. He was twenty-four years of age when he arrived in Montana in May, 1906, and from the first has been identified with the Homestead locality. He came West for the purpose of acquiring a free home. At that time the Government had not completed the survey of the lands, though some filings had been made on the part first surveyed. Mr. Tyler, therefore, was a squatter, his settlement being three miles northeast of the present site of Homestead. In conformity with Government regulations he put up a small one-room frame shack, though his home was mainly with his brother until he married. He and his brother Robert W. were associated in the stock business and planned to make that their permanent enterprise. These plans had to be changed since as soon as the lands were surveyed and opened there occurred a great rush of settlers and the domain was quickly parceled out among individual claimants. The Tyler brothers had in a measure foreseen this contingency, and had made preparation to cultivate and make a living from their claims. Reginald Tyler has since developed his homestead into a permanent and productive proposition, and has increased his quarter section to 480 acres. This is now one of the leading wheat farms of the region.

Mr. Tyler has sown wheat seven times, has harvested a crop every season, his lightest yield being six bushels to the acre, the greatest drought year in the history of the region, 1919. The products taken from the land has also comprised some flax, and he is now experimenting with sweet clover. To take the place of his pioneer abode he has constructed an eight-room bungalow with basement under all, making a modern home, with a Delco lighting system. A frame barn 34 by 60 feet, with cattle sheds, granaries and garage, constitute a valuable group of building improvements. His farm is on the main road leading from Culbertson to Plentywood and is about equidistant from these points.

While his principal business and the chief source of his prosperity has been farming, Mr. Tyler has lent his influence and personal resources to the commercial development of Homestead. He is president of the Homestead State Bank, an institution founded in 1909, and operating with capital stock of $20,000, surplus and undivided profits of $5,000 and deposits of $148,000. The vice president is I. C. Marindahl, the cashier, H. N. Stuverud, and other directors are H. E. Borreson and Guy Casper. Mr. Tyler helped organize the Farmers Elevator at Homestead, and has continuously been president of the stock company. He is also a director and secretary of the Northeastern Montana Auditing Association at Plentywood.

Mr. Tyler has taken the degrees of Blue Lodge Masonry at Plentywood. He cast his first presidential vote for Colonel Roosevelt, but in 1916 supported Mr. Wilson for president. Mr. Tyler was appointed a member of Board of County Commissioners March 1, 1919, as the successor of John Anderson. His colleagues on the Board are J. D. Matkin, of Plentywood, and J. C. Timmons, of Scobey. Beside routine matters the Board has called two special bond elections, one for drought relief, which failed to carry, and Mr. Tyler was enlisted in the opposition to the proposition when considered by the Board. The other election is for bonds for permanent road building, and was held April 23, 1920. Another important matter before the Board is the movement for a county division, looking toward the creation of a new county out of the west part of Sheridan County.

Mr. Tyler had been in this region about three years and had made considerable progress toward the development of his claim when he found his wife. December 19, 1909, near Homestead, Miss Hattie Bennett became his bride. She was born at Iola, Wisconsin, August 30, 1883, a daughter of Palmer J. Bennett and Louisa (Larsen) Bennett. She was reared and educated in Wisconsin and at the age of sixteen became a teacher. The last work she did in the schoolroom was in the Homestead community of Montana just before her marriage. She also took a homestead near that of Mr. Tyler, and they were neighbors and fellow pioneers before they united their fortunes in one home. Mrs. Tyler is the oldest of three children, the others being Mrs. James Honaker, of Viroqua, Wisconsin, and Alvin L. Bennett, of Lemmon, South Dakota. Mr. and Mrs. Tyler have a son, Stanley Clyde, born June 30, 1914. During the World war the Tylers were interested in seeing their community do its part in the different drives for funds, and Mrs. Tyler was also busily engaged in knitting at home and doing the work of the local Red Cross Chapter.

GEORGE C. EPLER. This is one of the names most intimately identified with the growth and commercial development of the Town of Dooley from its infancy. Mr. Epler is cashier of the Citizens State Bank of Dooley and is also officially connected with other local concerns and has been associated with other public spirited citizens in working out the destiny of this young and thriving town of Northeastern Montana.

Mr. Epler was born on a farm in Ottertail County, Minnesota, August 8, 1882. His father, Jacob H. Epler, went West from New Jersey and became one of the first settlers of the Territory of Minnesota, taking up a claim at Austin in 1854. He farmed in that community for several years and then moved to Ottertail County and died at Austin in 1910. When the Civil war came on he left his farm to enlist in Company K of the Fourth Minnesota Infantry, and was a Union soldier three years and seven months. He was in Sheridan's army, marched from Atlanta to the sea, and was wounded by a musket ball in the leg in a skirmish at Jackson, Mississippi. He never had the advantages of a thorough education but was a patriotic American, was a student of events and times, and always a great reader. In politics he was a republican, was a Mason and a Methodist. Jacob H. Epler married Anice M. Chandler, who is now living at Pasadena, California. She was born in the Province of Quebec, Canada, and as a child came to the United States with her parents, William and Mary (Phelps) Chandler. Her father was a farmer and spent his last years at Austin, Minnesota. Of the ten children in the Chandler family three sons became Union soldiers and one of them died during the war. The children of Jacob H. Epler and wife were: Cora, wife of F. D. Cruikshank, of Dooley, Montana; Helen A., wife of O. A. Robertson, of Washington, D. C.; William D., who has a farm in Saskatchewan, but lives at Outlook, Montana; Starling, of Billings, Montana; Joseph W., of Scobey, Montana; George C.; John C., a merchant at Dooley; and Edna F., living with her mother at Pasadena.

George C. Epler grew up in a country district in Minnesota, graduated from the high school at Perham, and took the normal course in the Minnesota State Normal School at Moorhead. For several years he lived at Hanaford, North Dakota, going there as a teacher, and later was in the implement business. For one year he was cashier of the State Bank of Revere, North Dakota, and then moved to Dooley, Montana, where with his previous knowledge of banking he organized the Citizens State Bank. His associates were William D. Dooley, J. L. Ueland and Andrew L. Ueland, and the bank was chartered under its present name with a capital of $20,000. The officers are: Mr. Dooley, president; J. L. Ueland, vice president; Mr. Epler, cashier; while subsequently H. C. Hanson became assistant cashier. The other director is N. K. Markuson of Medicine Lake, member of the Markuson-Epler Company, Ford distributors.

Mr. Epler is also one of the partners in the Hunter Lumber Company at Dooley, is secretary and treasurer of the Farmers Elevator, and is one of the proprietors of the Montana Motor Company of Plentywood and the Markuson-Epler Company of Medicine Lake.

While his father was a strong republican Mr. Epler and four of his brothers became democrats. George C. Epler cast his first presidential vote for Judge Parker in 1904. During the World war he was chairman of the Liberty Loan drives in Dooley and had the pleasure of seeing the community go over the top at every campaign. He is a Master Mason, his membership being at Cooperstown, North Dakota.

At Hanaford, North Dakota, June 1, 1910, Mr. Epler married Miss Ella O. Jackson, daughter of Claus and Ida (Hegge) Jackson, the former a native of Norway and the latter of Cresco, Iowa. The Jackson family were early settlers in North Dakota, where they homesteaded near Hanaford. Claus Jackson served two terms as sheriff of Griggs County, and for a number of years has been a merchant at Hanaford. In the Jackson family were five children: Mrs. Clara Kencke, Mrs. Epler, Chester, Mrs. Edna Markuson and Miss Inez. Mr. and Mrs. Epler have four children, named Lois, Deane, Eleanor and Bernice.

Oliver P. Waller, who is prominently identified with the town of Antelope as a merchant, has been a citizen of this community since 1910. In July of that year he arrived in Sheridan County from North Dakota, and his first business identification here was as a banker, having assisted in founding the first banking enterprise of Antelope, the Citizens Bank, a private institution belonging to the Wilson line of banks and which has since been incorporated as the Citizens State Bank. Mr. Waller was made the cashier of the bank and opened it for business in September, 1910. The bank was incorporated while he was connected with it, and he then became its vice president and a member of its board of directors. Mr. Waller continued in the active management of the institution until 1916, when he left the banking business to engage in merchandising in the town of Antelope.

The Antelope Mercantile Company, comprising Mr. Waller, his brother Olaf P. Waller and E. O. Teigan, purchased the hardware stock of C. M. Island and in time changed the line to include general merchandise. Mr. Waller is one of the managers of the Antelope Mercantile Company, and he is also one of the well known farmers of Sheridan County.

Oliver P. Waller was born in Norman County, Minnesota, near Twin Valley, July 20, 1879, a son of Peter O. Waller. The father immigrated to the United States from his native land of Norway about the year 1868, when a young married man. He was born at Grue in Soler, near Kingsvinger, in December, 1835, and was married to Christina Christianson, who was born in the same locality about a year later than her husband. She died in 1901, and Mr. Waller passed away in 1914. Their children were: Christian P., of Seattle, Washington; Olaf P., a member of the Antelope Mercantile Company, and who has been prominently identified with the interests of this locality since 1911; Henry P., whose home is in Amidon, North Dakota; Peter P., of Antelope; Clara P., a resident of Coopersville, Michigan; Tina, wife of Joseph Sherrick, of Colvin, North Dakota; and Oliver P., of Antelope.

Peter O. Waller made his first settlement in the United States in Goodhue County, Minnesota. He arrived in this country without capital, without a dollar to his name, and was a laborer during his residence in Goodhue County. From there he went to Norman County in 1871 and took up a homestead, which he proved on and there demonstrated his success as a farmer. As soon as possible he became a naturalized citizen of the United States and espoused the cause of the republican party. He acquired but a limited knowledge of the English language. Both he and his wife were earnest in their support of the Lutheran Church.

Oliver P. Waller obtained his educational training in the public schools of Red Wing, Minnesota, in the Lutheran Seminary and in Concordia College at Moorhead, Minnesota. He then began a commercial experience as a clerk for his brothers, Olaf P. and C. P., and on leaving their employ he went to Rogers, North Dakota, and obtained the position as store manager. After four years in that position he was elected cashier of the First State Bank of Rogers, and after another four years had passed he came to Antelope and resumed his banking enterprise with the Wilson line of banks, as already noted.

Mr. Waller has shaped his political course after his father's affiliations. His first presidential vote supported Major McKinley in 1900, and he has ever since cast his ballot for republican presidential candidates. He was made a Mason at Leal, North Dakota, and retains his membership there.

While living at Rogers, North Dakota, on the 3d of March, 1909, Mr. Waller was married to Miss Susie Mason, who was born at Sheridan Illinois, August 24, 1891, a daughter of Fred Benton and Clara (Copies) Mason, both of whom were born in Illinois. In their family were three daughters and two sons, namely: Josie, wife of C. N. Yule, of Woodworth, North Dakota; Mrs. Waller, the second born of the children; Fred B., Jr., who served as a North Dakota soldier in the World war, went with the Army of Occupation to Germany, was injured there, and is now in the Fort Sheridan, Illinois, Hospital; John, of Minneapolis, Minnesota; and Margaret, whose home is in Woodworth, North Dakota. Four children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Waller: Marion, eight years of age; Laverne, six years old; Eugene, five years of age; and Clair, one year old.

Michael Geary. A long life and a busy one has been that of Michael Geary of Helmville. Mr. Geary is a Montanan whose experience dates back fifty-five years. From a limited enterprise of a small homestead he has accumulated a splendidly located and valuable ranch, has been a cattleman for half a century, and has done much to promote the welfare and upbuilding of his home community.

Mr. Geary was born in County Waterford, Ireland, June 29, 1844, and is a member of one of the oldest Irish families. The farm he was born on was the life-long place of residence of his father and grandfather, and has been in the Geary family for over four hundred years. His paternal grandmother was Julia Cunningham, also a life-long resident of County Waterford. The family record of the Gearys has been traced back to the ninth century, when one of Mr. Geary's ancestors was in the service of the King of Munster and was archbishop of Cashel.

Patrick Geary, father of Michael Geary, was born in 1807 and died in 1883, spending all his life as a farmer in County Waterford. He was a conservative in politics and a Catholic in religion. He married Alice Cleary, also a life-long resident of County Waterford. Their oldest child, John, came to America, was a lumberman, and died at Dundee, Illinois. James was a farmer and died at Helmville, Montana, in 1900. Margaret died at Helmville, the wife of William Hyde, a farmer who also died there. Julia died at Helmville, wife of I. H. Helm, a pioneer rancher who died in 1898 and for whom the town of Helmville was named. Patrick is a resident of County Waterford, Ireland, Michael is the sixth in age, Daniel was a farmer and died at Helmville in 1907, William died in infancy.

Michael Geary acquired a thorough education in his native county of Ireland, and the training he received in schools has been widely supplemented by reading and experience among men and affairs. He came to the United States in 1864, and in the same year arrived in the Boise Basin of Idaho, following on the heels of the first immigration to Idaho territory. His first efforts both in Idaho and Montana were in placer mining. In 1867 he homesteaded eighty acres at the present site of Helmville. He also preempted 160 acres, and he still owns that original 240 acre tract. His possessions have grown until he now has 3,200 acres in his home ranch. Hard work, perseverance and good judgment have enabled him to rise above the circumstances of his early life, and he is regarded as one of the most successful pioneers of that section of the state. He owns a fine residence on his ranch, with a splendid barn and other buildings. For some years he has specialized in pure bred Shorthorn cattle, and has about 600 of that fine stock on his ranch year in and year out. His land is largely devoted to the raising of hay and grain. Mr. Geary was formerly a democrat but is now affiliated as a republican in politics. He has always taken an interest in the educational advantages of his home locality, serving as school trustee. In 1901 he was elected a member of the Legislature, serving during the seventh session, representing Powell County, and was a member of the federal relations and other important committees. Mr. Geary is a Catholic, and is affiliated with Deer Lodge Council No. 1810, Knights of Columbus.

In 1883, at Helmville, he married Miss Anna McLaughlin, a daughter of Patrick and Mary (Dwyer) McLaughlin, now deceased. Her father was a copper miner in Michigan and died in that state. Mrs. Geary, who died in 1900, at Helmville, was the mother of eight children. Agnes, the oldest, is the wife of Ed Ellsworth, a business man at Helmville. She is a graduate of St. Vincent's Academy at Helena and is the mother of five children, named Annie, Ira, Edward, Frances and Margaret. Michael, the oldest son of Mr. Geary, enlisted in 1918, was sent to Camp Lewis, Washington, then to the Presidio in California, was trained as an infantryman and mustered out in March, 1919, and is now assisting his father on the ranch. Patrick John, the third of the family, also assists on the home ranch, as does Clemence Celestine. Mary Casilda is the wife of Asa Ellsworth, living on a ranch near Helmville. Anna Ita and Gertrude Viola are both graduates of Sacred Heart Academy at Missoula and at present are at home with their father. James Carroll, the youngest, assists his father on the ranch.

Edward G. Kane. Thoroughly conversant with the most approved methods used in mining operations, and possessing marked executive and business ability and tact, Edward G. Kane, superintendent of the Bell-Diamond Mine, is an active assistant in maintaining the reputation of Butte as one of the busy centers of the mining industry. He has the distinction of being a native born citizen, his birth having occurred in this city on October 7, 1888.

John P. Kane, his father, was born in 1857, in County Waterford, Ireland, and while yet in his 'teens immigrated to the United States, settling in the copper regions of Upper Michigan. Going from there to Baltimore, Indiana, he remained there for awhile, in the meantime helping build the water works of that place. Following the pathway of the pioneer, he came to Montana in the '60s, and soon became foreman of a mine belonging to the Anaconda Copper Mining Company, later filling a similar position for the Montana Ore Purchasing Company, which belonged to F. A. Heinze. Subsequently returning to the Anaconda Copper Mining Company, he was a mine foreman, or superintendent, until his death in 1911. He was a steadfast democrat in politics; a faithful member of the Roman Catholic Church; and belonged to the Woodmen of the World.

The wife of John P. Kane was Elizabeth A. Dolan. She was born in Sheffield, England, in 1865, and still makes her home in Butte. Their children, seven in number, are as follows: Edward G., the subject of this brief personal sketch; William A., of Butte, a machinist; Katherine, unmarried, resides with her mother; Patrick E., who was graduated from the Creighton Medical College at Omaha, Nebraska, with the degree of Doctor of Medicine, is successfully engaged in the practice of his profession in Butte; Joseph J., of Butte, is attending the Creighton Medical College; John, a senior in the Butte Central High School; and Richard, a junior in the same school.

Acquiring his education in Butte, Edward G. Kane attended the parochial schools and Saint Patrick's High School, and in 1909 was graduated from the Montana School of Mines with the degree of Engineer of Mines. Entering the employ of the Anaconda Copper Mining Company the same year, he was made rodman in the engineering department, and in 1910 was promoted to the position of mine surveyor. Four years later Mr. Kane was advanced to the position of assistant superintendent of the Bell-Diamond Mine, and in that capacity showed such good judgment and broad capacity for management that he was made superintendent in 1917, an important position that he has since filled most acceptably, having under his supervision 750 employes. This mine, with offices at the plant, is situated on the north central part of the company's property, on the Anaconda Hill, and is one of the most productive of the Butte mines.

Politically Mr. Kane is identified with the democratic party, but has never been an aspirant for official honors. Religiously he is an active member of the Roman Catholic Church. Fraternally he belongs to Butte Council No. 668, Knights of Columbus, in which he has taken the third degree. He is unmarried and lives with his mother at 510 West Galena street.

John H. Davis. Through almost twenty years the enterprise of the Davis family has been directly reflected in the use of the range, the cultivation of the land, the improvement of the country, the building of homes, the opening of banks and other commercial enterprises in the Plentywood community of Sheridan County.

The senior member of the family is John A. Davis, father of John H. Davis of Plentywood. John A. Davis was born in Pennsylvania, was left an orphan before he was four years of age, and spent part of his boyhood in the home of his sister Martha. He acquired very little schooling. He was in Michigan when the Civil war came on, and as a youth enlisted in the Seventh Michigan Infantry. For two years and four months he was in General Grant's command and participated in some of the great battles of the war, including Gettysburg. He was twice wounded, and was honorably discharged at the close of the war, returning to Michigan but immediately started west. In Martin County, Minnesota, he homesteaded, but the dry climate offered a severe handicap to farming, and selling his claim he moved further north in that state and began buying and selling horses and cattle. During one of his excursions he met the girl who became his wife. He married in 1877 and afterward moved into the Dakotas. He cut and hauled cordwood for the steamboats on Red River, used his cattle for breaking prairies, and later became a freighter with bull team outfits from Grand Forks to Devil's Lake and as far as Bottineau, North Dakota. He also did some work on the construction of the grade of the Northern Pacific Railroad in North Dakota, and for a time had his home and headquarters at Devil's Lake. From there he moved to Bottineau, where he operated a steam saw mill and grist mill, and subsequently established a cattle and horse ranch on the Mouse River, making his home at Willow City. He was elected and served two terms as a member of the North Dakota Legislature, and his partner in the implement business was elected at the same time to the Senate. John A. Davis carried on his various business enterprises at Willow City until after he came to Montana.

He was one of the early settlers of Western Montana, settling in the Flathead Valley in 1893. He built the first creamery in that valley and was also a farmer and in the livestock and sawmill business.

His son, John H. Davis, was born at Cormorant, Minnesota, September 24, 1879, and spent his childhood in North Dakota and Montana. Most of his education was acquired in the Kalispell High School, followed by a business course at Minneapolis. He then became actively associated with his father in business, and in the spring of 1901, after wintering a bunch of cattle just inside the Canadian border, having gathered the stock together in the Province of Manitoba, they moved over into the grassy and untamed region of eastern Montana to use the domain of what was then Valley County. Their headquarters were at Culbertson, the nearest town, and their stock ranged over the region east and north of the Big Muddy. The ranch house was built near the international boundary on the Big Muddy, some ten miles northwest of Outlook. That spot subsequently became the homestead of George A. Davis, one of the sons of John A.

During the past twenty years John H. Davis has been largely associated with his father in the cattle and horse business. He homesteaded a half section joining that of his brother George, proved his title, and was busy with his industry there until the fall of 1912. Then, after his marriage, he built a home in Plentywood, and for two seasons bought grain for the local elevator, and was also the first buyer for the same company at Outlook. His range being cut off and curtailed because of the influx of homesteaders on the Big Muddy, he bought a ranch on the Fort Peck Indian Reservation, moving his horses thither. The exact location of the ranch is Sioux Pass, between Smoke and Wolf Creeks. This property he improved from the foundation, erecting a modest and comfortable home and other buildings, fenced its two sections and opened up a farm. In the spring of 1914 he re-engaged in the cattle business, and has since worked both cattle and horses. His specialty is Hereford cattle, breeding with pedigreed males, and being a factor in contributing to the raising of the character of beef cattle.

John H. Davis also joined in the movement for the founding of the First National Bank of Plentywood, both he and his father taking stock in the institution and his father becoming its first vice president and the son a member of the first board of directors. The son is now vice president. John A. Davis was one of the leaders in the movement for a farmers' store at Plentywood and served as president of the organization a few years, Forrest Goodman being vice president, Jud Matkin, George McCoy and John Falxa, all old residents of the locality, being members of the board of directors. John H. Davis was also a stockholder for a number of years.

At Great Falls, Montana, December 18, 1912, John H. Davis married Miss Victoria Freeman, daughter of Thomas and Charlotte Freeman. She was born at Fort William, Ontario, March 16, 1882, and finished her education in a business college at Minneapolis. Mr. and Mrs. Davis were children together when the families lived on the Mouse River, and saw more or less of each other until their marriage. They have spent their lives industriously, have made their presence beneficial to whatever community they have called their home. Mr. Davis grew up in a republican home, casting his first presidential vote for William McKinley. He is a Blue Lodge Mason, an Odd Fellow, a member of the Maccabees at Kenmare, North Dakota, and is affiliated with the Sons of Veterans at Kalispell.

CURTIS M. AND J. V. MILLER. In nearly every community are individuals who by innate ability and sheer force of character rise above their fellows and win for themselves conspicuous places in public esteem. Such ones are the well-known gentlemen whose names appear above, men who have been identified with the history of the Flathead country for more than two decades, during which time their lives have been closely interwoven with the material growth and development of this section, while their careers as progressive men of affairs have been synonymous with all that is upright and honorable in citizenship.

In 1898 there came to Montana F. G. Miller and his wife, whose maiden name was Emma Wetzel, together with their two sons, Curtis M. and J. V. F. G. Miller was a man of most excellent parts and had rendered good service to his country as a soldier during the war of the rebellion. The former home of the family was in Martin County, Minnesota, and on their arrival in Flathead County they bought 160 acres of land located one and a half miles west of Kalispell, and the two sons are now devoting themselves to the management and operation of this farm.

Curtis M. Miller is a good practical farmer and has ably co-operated with his brother in their agricultural operations. They raise hay, grain and fruit, making a specialty of alfalfa hay for the Kalispell market, and in the raising of which they have been very successful. Mr. Miller has erected a very comfortable and attractive residence and is in a position to enjoy life as only those can who live close to nature.

On April 10, 1913, Mr. Miller was married to Orva Freytag, who was born in Gladstone, Oregon, the daughter of Oscar and Emma (Rinearson) Freytag. They have one daughter, Thelma Louise. Mrs. Miller is an earnest member of the Congregational Church. Politically Mr. Miller gives his earnest support to the republican party and takes an active part in promoting its success. Fraternally he is a member of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. During the recent war Mrs. Miller devoted herself indefatigably to the work of the Red Cross, and is well liked in the social circles in which she moves.

J. V. Miller, who is the able colaborer with his brother in the operation of the old home farm, has also applied himself earnestly to the work in hand and is numbered among the progressive and enterprising farmers of the Flathead Valley. Twenty-two years' residence in this locality has but confirmed his fellow citizens in their estimate of him as a man of clean character, sterling integrity and indomitable perseverance in the prosecution of any work in hand. Thus he has earned the high place he holds today in popular esteem.

Mr. Miller was married to Alta Thornton, a native of Colorado and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Thornton. To this union has been born a son, Norman Frederick. Politically Mr. Miller is in accord with the traditions of the family and gives his earnest support to the republican party.

GEORGE FORSYTHE. Butte is not only noted as being the greatest mining city in the world, but it has other claims to distinction, and one of the most important of these is that of possessing one of the most beautiful playgrounds in the country. They are located about four miles outside of Butte and are operated under the name of the Columbia Gardens. Here the natural advantages have been developed and every known device for healthful amusement been installed so that people come to the gardens from every state in the Union. The concessions of these gardens are leased by George Forsythe of Gregson, one of the foremost men of his calling in the state, and under his experienced direction entertainment of the highest class is provided.

George Forsythe was born at Fremont, Ohio, on July 29, 1872, a son of Andrew C. Forsythe, who was born in the city of Oswego, New York, February 12, 1839. He went to Kingston, Canada, in young manhood, was later married there, and became a foreman in the starch factory of Kingston, although a carpenter by trade. Coming to the United States later on in life, he went into the contracting and building business at Fremont, Ohio, and after some years of successful operation in that city moved to Marshall, Michigan, in 1881, and there continued in the same business. Contracts taken at Grand Rapids, Michigan, in 1887, took him to that city, and he lived there for a number of years. His wife died there in 1910, after which he broke up his home and for some time lived with his son at Butte, but is now a resident of Palm Beach, Florida. In every community in which he has resided Andrew C. Forsythe has been a representative man, giving his support to republican principles, the faith of the Episcopal Church and the teachings of Masonry. In addition to being a Mason he is also an Odd Fellow and Knight of Pythias. Andrew C. Forsythe married Jeanette Ingalls, born in the British Isles in 1842. Their children were as follows: Annie, who married Ed Tierney, a newspaper man of Toledo, Ohio; Gertrude, who married Philo Moses, a carbon manufacturer of Oakland, California; George, whose name heads this review; Judson, who is a clerk in the recorder's office at Grand Rapids, Michigan; Robert, who was a broker of Grand Rapids, Michigan, died in 1919; and Charles, who is a haberdasher of Detroit, Michigan. The paternal grandfather of George Forsythe was a native of Scotland, who was a stone mason by trade and emigrated to the Province of Ontario, Canada, and there died in 1879, when quite an aged man.

George Forsythe left school when he was only fourteen years old and entered the employ of Marshall Field & Company, and after a year was sent by this concern to Lewistown, Montana. Later he entered the employ of T. C. Power & Company, general merchants, and for four years had charge of the men's furnishings department. Having gained a very valuable experience he felt qualified to embark in a clothing business of his own at Lewistown, and conducted it for a year and then disposed of it. Returning to Marshall, Michigan, he became sales agent for the Dobbins Furnace Company, covering Michigan and Ohio, but a year later responded to the call of the west and returned to Montana, this time selecting Butte as his field of operation. This was in 1894, and upon his arrival in the city he took a position as salesman for O. K. Lewis.

In the meanwhile Senator Clark had become interested in developing a pleasure place for the people of this part of the state, and the Columbia Gardens were opened somewhat in the line of an experiment. Mr. Forsythe took over the ice cream concession. Finding that the gardens were not sufficiently improved, Senator Clark closed them for a year in order to better carry out his original ideas. With the reopening of the gardens Mr. Forsythe secured the lease on all of the concessions and has conducted them ever since. No one who has never paid Columbia Gardens a visit can judge of the importance of these concessions or the responsibilities resting upon their proper operation. Thousands visit this playground of Butte, and their comfort and pleasure must receive suitable attention. While the scenery and floral displays are unsurpassed by any in this part of the country, it is doubtful if visitors would be drawn to the gardens in such large numbers by them alone. Those who come out by the electric road or in their automobiles except to find entertainment and refreshment for the body as well as the mind, and Mr. Forsythe recognizes this and governs his operations accordingly. His plans have naturally been considerably expanded with the growth of the gardens in other directions, but the same high standard has been preserved.

Mr. Forsythe is also interested in the Hot Springs at Gregson, being president of the Hot Springs Company. The springs are located seventeen miles southwest of Butte, and Gregson is both a summer and winter resort. The temperature of the water is 196° and is found to be excellent for various disorders. The company has built and operates a fine modern hotel, heated entirely by this natural hot water. In connection with the hotel is a swimming pool 160 by 60 feet, and natural vapor baths. Mr. Forsythe lives at Gregson in a modern residence which he owns, and also owns a 260 acre farm, from which abundant supplies are obtained for the hotel.

Mr. Forsythe has two children by his first marriage to Jeanette Morris in the year 1896, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Morris, early pioneers to Montana. Morris Irvin Forsythe, his son, served overseas in France and Germany with the American Expeditionary Forces. His daughter, Jeanette, born in 1902, lives with her mother in Los Angeles, California. On September 16, 1912, he married Victoria Davis, a daughter of Mankin and May (Bryant) Davis, residents of Big Timber, Montana. Mr. and Mrs. Forsythe have two children, Virginia May, who was born April 18, 1914; and George Irvin, who was born July 21, 1918.

Formerly a republican, Mr. Forsythe is now a democrat. He belongs to Silver Bow Lodge No. 48, Ancient, Free and Accepted Masons, Butte Consistory, in which he has been made a thirty-second degree Mason; Bagdad Temple, Ancient Arabic Order Nobles of the Mystic Shrine of Butte; Butte Lodge No. 240, Benevolent Protective Order of Elks; and the Silver Bow Club of Butte.

Mr. Forsythe is a man who has studied human nature and understands pretty thoroughly what people want in their moments of relaxations. He knows that they appreciate wholesome food and entertainment and prefer to have things good rather than showy. It has always been his aim to cater to the best class, judging from the standpoint of character rather than wealth, and co-operates with Senator Clark in providing special entertainment for the children at Columbia Gardens. The success which has attended Mr. Forsythe is all the more remarkable in that it has come through his own unaided efforts and his ability to first learn what people want and then meet their demands, and if possible educate them into an appreciation of something a little bit better with the progress of time. At Gregson Mr. Forsythe is recognized as the moving spirit of the place, and through his enterprise he has organized and developed a health resort known all over the country, and in this development he has advanced the prestige of the state to no small extent.

DUKE GIST is an old timer in Southwestern Montana, has been ranching for thirty years or more, and is a former sheriff of Beaverhead County, being one of the best known citizens of Dillon.

Mr. Gist was born in DeKalb County, Missouri, March 7, 1865. His father, F. M. Gist, was born near Plattsburg in Clinton County, Missouri, in 1831. The Gist family was one of the first established in Northwest Missouri in the country long known as the Platte Purchase. F. M. Gist was reared and married in Clay County in the same section and spent the greater part of his life as a farmer in that and in DeKalb and Gentry counties, Missouri. As a young man he and two other youthful companions started west, reaching Colorado, but one of the party was taken ill and F. M. Gist returned with him to Missouri. He died at McFall in Gentry County, Missouri, in 1913. He was a democrat and for many years a loyal member of the Masonic order. His first wife was a Miss Finch. Her only son, Watt, was a farmer in Missouri and died at McFall in 1917. For his second wife F. M. Gist married Xantippe Gartin, who was born in Gentry County, Missouri, and died in DeKalb County that state in 1872. John, the oldest of her children, is a farmer in Bushong, Lyon County, Kansas, and a breeder of Holstein cattle; Frank is a Gentry County, Missouri, farmer; Joe is in the mining business in Colorado; Duke is the fourth in age; Mary lives on her farm near Emporia, Kansas, widow of Ira Horney, who died in 1918; Charles is employed in a mill at Greeley, Colorado; Maggie is the wife of Mack Christie, a farmer at McFall, Missouri; and George was a farmer and died at McFall, Missouri, in the winter of 1918.

Duke Gist spent his early life on his father's Missouri farm and acquired his education in the public schools at McFall. After reaching his majority, seeking the bigger opportunities and bigger life of the Northwest, he came to Montana and for two years worked in the mines at Hecla. He was then an employe at Glendale of Levi Cartier, a pioneer butcher. At the end of a year he bought the business, and conducted it for three years. Since then his business interests have been chiefly ranching. He developed a fine ranch of 1,520 acres in the Big Hole Basin of Beaverhead County, but sold that valuable property in the spring of 1916. He is still interested in ranching, but since 1909 has made his home in Dillon. He was elected for three consecutive terms as sheriff of Beaverhead County and served for the six years of 1903 to 1909. Mr. Gist is a democrat. He owns a modern home at 116 South Idaho Street and another dwelling on South Pacific Street. Fraternally he is affiliated with the Dillon Lodge No. 23, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, Dillon Chapter No. 8, Royal Arch Masons, St. Elmo Commandery No. 7, Knights Templar, and Bagdad Temple of the Mystic Shrine at Butte. He is prominent in Odd Fellowship, serving three times as noble grand of Bannack Lodge No. 3, and has been high priest of the Odd Fellows Encampment. In July, 1904, at Dillon, he married Miss Clara Sharkey, daughter of Neil and Mary (McGraw) Sharkey. Her mother died at Dillon in 1910, and her father is a well known rancher of the Dillon community. Mr. and Mrs. Gist have one daughter, Mary, born August 7, 1905.

WARREN J. JENNISON bears a name that is prominently associated with many of the leading industries of this section of Montana. He was born in Pope County, Minnesota, October 25, 1885, and grew to mature years in the home of a miller and grain man, Charles W. Jennison, well known now in the industrial life of Montana.

Charles W. Jennison was born at Shelburne, Vermont, June 21, 1858, a son of John Wesley Jennison and Jane Ann Lufkin, and a grandson on the paternal side of Jason H. Jennison, a descendant of the Jennison who came from England to the United States in 1637 in company with Captain William Jennison, a brother. When Charles W. Jennison was about seventeen months old his parents moved to Wisconsin and settled in Green Lake County, where the father purchased a timber farm. He put the same vigorous energy into the clearing of this land that he had used in clearing the rock from his father's Vermont farm, but the strenuous labor soon sapped his vitality and shortened his life. He subsequently gave up the farm and entered merchandising at Kingston, Wisconsin, of which he was also made the postmaster. But on his first trip to Milwaukee to replenish his stock of goods he contracted a severe cold, which resulted in typhoid pneumonia, and he died April 25, 1864. He was born in Chittenden County, Vermont.

Following the death of her husband Mrs. Jennison, his widow, was summoned to Vermont to attend the illness of her sister, taking her three children with her. They reached their destination June 15, 1864, and six days later she suddenly died. Her children were Arlie Izora, now Mrs. James T. Williams, of Minden, Nevada; Charles Wesley, of Williston, North Dakota; and Emma Jane, the wife of Charles H. Henningsen, of San Jose, California.

Charles W. Jennison and his sisters being thus suddenly deprived in their childhood of their parents were left to the care and compassion of relatives of both parents. An uncle seemed ambitious to become the guardian and have the handling of their estate, although his competency was seriously questioned by other relatives. But finally a brother of their father, then living in Minnesota, was appointed to the office of guardian. About this time a maternal aunt came on from California to visit her sick sister, and seeing the situation and fearing for the welfare of the children spirited them away from their uncle and took them down the Hudson to New York and had embarked on a steamer for the Isthmus of Panama before the designing uncle could overtake them.

After a voyage of three weeks the little party were landed in San Francisco and were taken by boat to Sacramento, then by rail and stage to Placerville and by private four-horse stage, the Horace Greeley stage, to a ranch near Genoa in the Carson Valley of Nevada, the home of the aunt. There the children lived together for four years, and it was there that Charles W. Jennison received his first schooling and learned to fish for trout. When eleven years of age he was sent back to his Minnesota uncle guardian, this being in 1869, and he made the journey by stage to Reno and thence by rail over the old Union Pacific Railroad and saw where the last and golden spike had been driven. He was in the company of two lady companions to Clinton, Iowa, from where he made his way alone to Waseca, Minnesota, where his uncle lived. A few months after this the uncle removed to Janesville, Minnesota, and there the young lad completed his education, learned telegraphy, and was given a position at the age of fourteen. When but fifteen he was both agent and operator on the Chicago & Northwestern system, and he worked at different points for some eight years. In 1880 his uncle passed away at Janesville, and young Jennison then left railroading to take over his uncle's lumber business, thus beginning his career as a lumberman.

Duke Gist

He remained in Janesville for eighteen months, when he sold his interests there and then spent six months in the James River Valley of South Dakota. Near the town of Ashton he took up a claim, but disposed of it as soon as he received his government receipt, and going to Glenwood, Minnesota, established himself in the retail lumber business. Five years were spent there in the lumber and grain business, and then going to Appleton, Minnesota, became identified with the grain and milling business as a member of the Appleton Mill company, of which he was the president and secretary. After ten years there Mr. Jennison removed to Minneapolis for better educational facilities and family environment, and was connected with a grain and lumber company there until 1905, when he moved to North Dakota and became interested in the Rugby Flour Mill. This plant was incorporated in 1907 as the Rugby Milling Company, and two years after this, in 1909, Mr. Jennison transferred his residence to Williston, North Dakota, and built the Williston Flour Mill, with a capacity of 250 barrels daily. He was associated in this enterprise with H. O. Frank and W. J. Miller, and these gentlemen also form the owners of the mill at Rugby, a plant with a capacity of 200 barrels daily.

In 1907, under the name of the Rugby Elevator Company, they established a line of elevators along the Great Northern Railroad, and in the spring of 1913 extended their interests into the Fairview locality and built a flour mill with a capacity of 175 barrels, acquired coal properties and opened a mine within the corporate limits of the city and constructed a power plant and established a public utilities concern. The milling business is incorporated under the name of the Fairview Mill Company, while the coal mining interests are incorporated under the name of the Jennison Coal Mining Company and the public utilities concern under the name of the Jennison Light & Power Company, the latter comprising a transmission light and power line to Sidney, Montana, at which point they supply electric current. The company has also recently acquired the Fairview Brick Company, and is constructing a new plant where clay will be taken from the coal mine a thousand feet back under the hills. This is a wonderful brick clay under test, and its possibilities are not yet fully determined.

On coming to Fairview Warren Jennison became associated with the company as an equal partner. In 1916, at Bainville, Montana, the company constructed a 500 barrel flour mill, that point being the outlet on the Plentywood-Scobey line of railroad for the very excellent hard, dark northern spring wheat, rivaling in quality the best wheat produced in North Dakota or Canada. All these various companies mentioned are corporations with the exception of the Jennison Mills Company at Bainville, which is conducted as a co-partnership. H. O. Frank is the president of all these various companies, W. J. Miller is the vice president, C. W. Jennison is treasurer and general manager, and Warren Jennison is manager and secretary of the Fairview Mill Company, the Fairview Brick Company, the Jennison Coal Mining Company and the Jennison Light & Power Company.

Charles W. Jennison on the 2d of October, 1882, married Miss Josephine Almira Lathrop, of Appleton, Minnesota, a daughter of the Hon. A. W. Lathrop. Mrs. Jennison was born in Minnesota, and died June 30, 1896, the mother of four sons, Warren Judson, Wesley Lathrop, Alfred Willis and John Charles. Wesley L. Jennison, who was born in 1887, died at the age of eighteen, just as he was entering as a student the University of Minnesota. Alfred W. Jennison was born in 1892, and the birth of John Charles Jennison occurred in 1894. For his present wife Charles W. Jennison married at Tacoma, Washington, in 1908, Miss Claribell Watson, a daughter of John Watson. Mrs. Jennison was born in Michigan, is a graduate of the Moorehead Normal School in Minnesota, and before her marriage was a teacher of English and music.

Politically Mr. Jennison has always given his support to the republican party, but is interested in political matters only to the extent of being a public-spirited and loyal citizen. He and his sons are communicants of the Episcopal Church.

Warren J. Jennison completed his school days in the Central High School of Minneapolis, Minnesota, where he graduated in 1904. His first work was in a grain commission office in the Chamber of Commerce as a clerk, but in 1907, after he had attained the position of cashier of a grain and lumber company, he left that firm and became associated with the Rugby Milling Company as its secretary and manager. In the summer of 1913 he came to Fairview, where he has since been actively identified with the community's interests and is numbered among its most prominent developers.

Warren J. Jennison in 1909, in Rugby, North Dakota, married Miss Bernice Josephine Harmon. She is a native daughter of Indiana, and her father is Theopholis K. Harmon, a leading lodge man and a veteran of the Civil war. They have one son, Wesley Grant, born in 1911. Mr. Jennison is a Master Mason and a republican.

William John Clemens. Adherence to upright methods of business and modern ways of production have brought the Purity Dairy Products Company into a foremost place among concerns of its kind in this part of the state, and one of the men largely responsible for this desirable condition of affairs is its efficient manager, William John Clemens, one of the responsible business men of Anaconda. Mr. Clemens was born at Missoula, Montana, August 10, 1886, and has never been out of his native state. His father, Henry Clemens, who resides with his son, was born in Germany in 1845, but ran away to the United States in 1862 in order to escape the compulsory military service, and coming as far west as Shakopee, Wisconsin, worked as a farm hand until his marriage. In 1879 he came to Montana and for a time was engaged at Sun River in chopping rails for railroad ties, and then walked to Missoula, as the railroad was not then built to that point. Later he found employment with the Northern Pacific Railroad and remained with it until 1894, the year of the great strike, when he left the railroad, and coming to Anaconda was car inspector for the Butte, Anaconda & Pacific Railroad for a number of years, and then for two years was at the Washoe Reduction Works of the Anaconda Copper Mining Company. For the subsequent thirteen years he was night watchman for the Copper City Commercial Company, and then retired. He is a democrat, a Roman Catholic and a member of Anaconda Camp No. 154, Woodmen of the World. His wife, who bore the maiden name of Margaret Haskamp, was born in Germany in 1866, and she died at Anaconda May 4, 1915. Their children were as follows: John Henry, who is a locomotive engineer, lives at Rocker, Montana; William John, whose name heads this review; and Thomas Henry, who is a traveler.

William John Clemens attended school at Missoula and completed the common grades at the age of thirteen years, when he entered the employ of the Copper City Commercial Company as delivery boy, and worked up to be a clerk in the hardware department, in all being with this company for ten years and two months. In 1907 he embarked in a dairy business in Deerlodge Valley, and conducted it for three and one-half years. Then he sold and, in 1910, formed a partnership with H. G. Coy and for four years was in an implement business at Anaconda. In 1916 Mr. Clemens became delivery man for the Purity Dairy Products Company and rose until in 1917 he was made its manager. The company handles milk and manufactures butter, ice cream and cheese, and is the leading concern of this kind in Deerlodge County. The offices and dairy are located at 113 East Commercial avenue. This company is incorporated and its officers are as follows: W. H. Dunningan, president; Geroge P. Wellcome, vice president; H. H. Durston, secretary and treasurer; and W. J. Clemens, manager. Mr. Clemens is independent in his political views. He is a Catholic by inheritance and conviction. He owns his modern residence at 114 Pine street.

On April 14, 1910, Mr. Clemens was united in marriage to Miss Edith Perry, a daughter of George and Lucy Perry, both of whom are now deceased and buried in the cemetery at Anaconda. Mr. Perry was in the brick department of the Anaconda Copper Mining Company at Anaconda. Mr. and Mrs. Clemens have two children, namely: Eleanor Elizabeth, who was born December 8, 1913; and Evelyn Margaret, who was born February 23, 1918. Having advanced through his own individual efforts Mr. Clemens deserves great credit for his present prosperity. Beginning his business career at an age when children of this generation are considered mere babes, he kept steadily at work, saved his money and invested it wisely, and today occupies an enviable position in his community. While his business cares have occupied him to the exclusion of outside connections, he takes an intelligent interest in the growth of his city and state and believes that both are the best to be found in the world.

John W. Bridge had the responsibility of opening and establishing and has since been cashier of the Blair & Company State Bank, at Helmville, Montana. This is affiliated with one of the prominent banking houses in the Northwest. J. W. Blair, president of the company, is a well known Montana banker and capitalist, while the two vice presidents, W. T. Day and C. T. Hansen, are well known figures in the financial life of the State of Washington. The Helmville Bank has resources of over $200,000, capital stock and undivided profits aggregating over $36,000, while the responsibility of the firm to depositors is over $2,000,000.

John W. Bridge was born at Warren, Illinois, March 25, 1884. He is of Scotch ancestry. His grandfather, Robert Bridge, was born at Glasgow, Scotland, in 1808, and in early life came to America, following his business as a contractor and builder at New York City, and later becoming a farmer in Southern Wisconsin at Lake Koshkonong. He was there in the territorial period of Wisconsin. When he retired from the farm he moved to Whitewater, Wisconsin, and spent the last few years of his life at Evanston, Chicago, Illinois, where he died in 1907. He was ninety-nine years of age at the time of his death and had retained his faculties almost unimpaired to the end. His wife was a Miss Kelly, a native of Scotland, who died at Whitewater, Wisconsin, at the age of eighty-four.

William H. Bridge, father of the Montana banker, was born near Elkhorn, Wisconsin, in 1844, grew up and married there and followed farming. In 1869 he moved to Fremont, Nebraska, where he established and conducted a nursery. In 1872 he returned to Illinois and settled at Warren where he was in the flour milling business for fifteen years. After 1887 he conducted a flour mill at Norfolk, Nebraska, and about 1907 retired from business, living at Spokane, Washington, several years and is now a retired resident of Pasadena, California. He is a republican and a very active member and supporter of the Congregational Church. William H. Bridge married Nellie Ranney, who was born near Elkhorn, Wisconsin, in 1851, and is from one of the oldest Connecticut families. Jessie, the oldest of their four children, is the wife of Dr. P. D. McCornack, a suregon and specialist in children's diseases at Spokane, Washintgon. William, Jr., died at the age of nineteen. Ernest L. owns a chicken ranch at San Gabriel, California.

John W. Bridge, youngest of the family, was educated in the public schools at Onawa, Iowa, Lincoln, Nebraska, and Norfolk, Nebraska, graduating from the high school of the latter place in 1901. He spent two terms in the University of Nebraska at Lincoln and two years in Oberlin College in Ohio. He is a member of the Lincoln Chapter of the Delta Tau Delta college fraternity. For a short time in 1905 Mr. Bridge was cashier of the Union Depot at Norfolk, Nebraska, and then entered the National Bank of Commerce at Minneapolis, serving it as bookkeeper for ten months. The following year he spent assisting his father in the flour mill at Norfolk, and after that until 1910 engaged in the real estate business at Spokane, Washington. Mr. Bridge opened the Helmville office of Blair & Company's State Bank in 1910, and has since been the active manager and cashier and is largely responsible for the patronage and prosperity of the bank.

Mr. Bridge also owns a ranch of 640 acres at Helmville. He is an independent republican in politics and is affiliated with Ruby Lodge of Masons at Drummond, Montana. In 1917, at Butte, he married Miss Marie Hickey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hickey. Her father is a retired mining man at Butte and her mother is deceased. Mrs. Bridge is a skilled vocalist, having finished her musical education in the Root Conservatory of Music in Chicago. Mr. and Mrs. Bridge have one son, William Thomas, born March 6, 1918.

Leo J. McGrath. In writing of the eminently capable and progressive men that are intimately associated with the advancement of the mining interests of Butte, special mention should be made of Leo J. McGrath, superintendent of the Alice Mine. He has been a resident of the city for nearly a score of years, during which time he has ever heartily endorsed all enterprises conducive to its welfare. A son of Joseph McGrath, he was born October 18, 1881, in Grass Valley, Nevada County, California, of Irish parentage.

Born in Ireland in 1850, Joseph McGrath was brought up and educated in his native land, living there until nineteen years of age. Married at that age, he came with his bride to the United States, going directly across the country to Grass Valley, California. There he was engaged in mining pursuits until 1911, coming then to Butte, where he has since been similarly occupied with the Anaconda Copper Mining Company, at the West Gray Rock Mine. He is a democrat in politics, and a member of the Roman Catholic Church.

Joseph McGrath married in Ireland in November, 1869, Mary Flood, whose birth occurred in Ireland in 1851, and in November, 1919, the happy couple celebrated the golden anniversary of their marriage at their pleasant home, 934 Utah Avenue, where a large gathering of friends and relatives showered them with congratulations and gifts. Nine children were born of their union, as follows: Maggie, who died at the age of eighteen years in Grass Valley; Thomas, of Butte, is superintendent of the West Gray Rock Mine; James, who died in Grass Valley at the age of nine months; Mary, wife of Dr. J. A. Carew, a well known dentist of San Francisco, California; Leo. J., the special subject of this sketch; Frank, who died in Grass Valley, aged eighteen years; Genevieve, wife of A. J. Smith, an automobile dealer in Los Angeles, California; Helen, living with her parents, is employed in Symons' department store; and Paul, now engaged in mining at the West Gray Rock Mine, enlisted in May, 1917, and was sent to the navy yard in Brooklyn, New York, where he was mustered out of service in January, 1919.

Attending school in Nevada County, California, until fifteen years old, Leo J. McGrath then entered a dry goods store in Grass Valley as a clerk, and gradually worked his way up through the different departments until made window dresser, a position of considerable importance. Coming to Butte in 1902, he worked for six months as an underground miner in the Bell-Diamond Mine, and was similarly employed in the East Gray Rock Mine for two years. Mr. McGrath was subsequently employed as a miner in the West Gray Rock Mine until 1913, when he was made shift boss, a position that he filled most ably until 1915, when he was promoted to the position of assistant superintendent. In March, 1917, Mr. McGrath accepted his present high position as superintendent of the Alice Mine, and has since discharged the duties devolving upon him with credit to himself and to the entire satisfaction of the company with which he is connected. Under his supervision are 250 employes of the Alice Mine, which was one of the first silver mines of North Walkerville, but which since the beginning of the World war has been a zinc producing mine.

Mr. McGrath married in May, 1913, in Grass Valley, California, Miss Edna Kinley, a daughter of Richard and Jane (Morgan) Kinley, of Grass Valley, where her father is employed as battery man in a gold quartz mill. Mr. and Mrs. McGrath have one child, Francis, born June 21, 1917. Politically Mr. McGrath is a firm adherent of the democratic party. Religiously he is a faithful member of the Roman Catholic Church. Fraternally he is a member of Butte Council No. 668, Knights of Columbus, in which he has taken the third degree, and of Grass Valley Lodge No. 1301, Order of Eagles. Mr. McGrath has an attractive home at 938 Utah Avenue, very near that of his parents.

Arthur L. Hawkesworth. Possessing great mechanical skill and inventive talent of a high order, Arthur L. Hawkesworth, master mechanic of the Butte Mines Machine Shop, is thoroughly acquainted with every branch of the machinist's trade, and in the various places in which he has been employed has won an enviable reputation for efficiency and dexterity in the use of the machinist's tools. A son of the late James Hawkesworth, he was born August 25, 1869, in Bay City, Michigan, being a descendant on the paternal side, in the fifth generation, from Josiah Wedgwood, the famous English potter, who invented the ware bearing his name, the lineage being traced through his daughter, Elizabeth Wedgwood.

James Hawkesworth was born in 1839 in the Province of Ontario, Canada, where his father settled on emigrating from England to America. A man of scholarly attainments, he was educated at a college in Buffalo, New York, and after his graduation returned to Ontario, Canada, where he lived for a while. Settling in Bay City, Michigan, in pioneer days, he became superintendent of a sawmill, and was there engaged in business until his death in 1872. A man of spotless integrity, he was held in high respect throughout the community. He was broad-minded, liberal in his religious views, and a prominent member of the Universalist Church. Politically he was a republican, and fraternally he belonged to the Ancient Free and Accepted Masons.

The maiden name of the wife of James Hawkesworth was Julia Clark. She was born in 1841 in Buffalo, New York, where she was married, coming from a family of prominence, Doctor Ryerson, the noted educator of the Province of Ontario, having been her great-great-uncle. Three children blessed their marriage, as follows: Lula, wife of John J. Miller, junior member of the Bradley-Miller Lumber Company, of West Bay City, Michigan; Frank, an erecting engineer in California; and Arthur L., of whom we write.

Obtaining his first knowledge of books in the public schools of his native city, Arthur L. Hawkesworth subsequently attended a private school, receiving therein the equivalent of a high school education. At the age of sixteen years he entered the Standard Machine Shop in Bay City, and there served an apprenticeship of three years at the machinist's trade. Entering the employ of the Bay City Iron Works in 1888, he served as a journeyman machinist for six months, after which he worked as tool maker in Chicago, Illinois, for a year. Coming to Montana in 1890, Mr. Hawkesworth was for two years an employe in the John Steadman Foundry and Machine Shop. Going then to Elkhorn, Jefferson County, Montana, he was for three years machinist at the Elkhorn Mine, and the ensuing year worked in the Caird & Hawkesworth Machine Shop in Helena, the junior member of the firm having been his brother, Frank Hawkesworth, and the senior member, Charles Caird.

Going next to Marysville, this state, Mr. Hawkesworth was employed for six months there as a machinist, and then worked two months for his brother's firm in Helena. Accepting then a position as master mechanic at the Elkhorn Mine, he retained it until 1904. Subsequently passing through Butte, he went to Great Falls as master mechanic for the American Smelting and Refining Company, with which he was associated for a year. Returning to Helena, he was foreman for the firm of Caird & Hawkesworth two years. Coming from there to Butte in 1907, Mr. Hawkesworth was for three months employed as a machinist at the Speculator Mine for the North Butte Company, and the following year served as foreman of the Montana Iron Works.

Mr. Hawkesworth was afterward master mechanic for the East Butte Mining Company for a year, and then for three months was similarly employed by the Butte & Bacorn Mining Company. Returning to the East Butte Mining Company, he was master mechanic for six months. In 1914 he became identified with the Anaconda Copper Mining Company as machinist in the Anaconda Machine Shop, later filling the same position in the Leonard Machine Shops and at the Tropic Mine. Promoted to the position of foreman of the Leonard Machine Shop in 1916, he retained it a year, and in 1917 became master mechanic of the Butte Mines Machine Shop, a position that he has since filled with credit to himself and to the gratification of his employers. The shops, in which 150 men are employed, are located at the Anaconda Mine, in the central part of the Anaconda Hill. Mr. Hawkesworth owns an attractive residence at 2124 Argyle Street, and has title to other real estate of value in Butte. He has made excellent use of his inventive powers, being the inventor of four patents, an oil pump, a mine ventilator, and two bits to be used in the mines for drilling purposes. These inventions will eventually revolutionize the rock drilling industry of the world, and will undoubtedly be to him a source of great revenue.

Politically Mr. Hawkesworth is an earnest worker in the democratic ranks, and as a state delegate from Cascade County to the state convention helped nominate Governor Tool to the high position he subsequently so ably filled. While a resident of Helena he served as alderman two years, and was nominee for city treasurer, but was defeated at the polls by a small majority. He is now, in 1920, a member of the Democratic Central Committee, representing the Seventy-first Precinct of Silver Bow County. Fraternally he is a member of Butte Aerie No. 11, Order of Eagles, and of Butte Camp No. 153, Woodmen of the World.

Mr. Hawkesworth married in 1894, at Helena, Miss Mamie Lynch, a daughter of Michael and Bridget (Sweeney) Lynch, neither of whom are now living. Her father was for many years section foreman for the Northern Pacific Railroad Company at Elkhorn, Montana. Mr. and Mrs. Hawkesworth have four children: Lee, born in July, 1897, is a machinist at the Butte Timber Mill; Arthur J., born in June, 1898; Mourice, born in 1907; and Lawrence, born in 1913.

HOWARD CHARLES COONEY. Establishing his business in a small way, Howard Charles Cooney, vice president and general manager of the Cooney Brokerage Company, has built it up until it is one of the leading ones in its line in the state, and he can point to his success with pride, for he has won it through his own personal efforts. Mr. Cooney was born at Windsor, Ontaria, Canada, on April 29, 1876, a son of John Ward Cooney, and grandson of John W. Cooney, who died in the Province of Ontario, Canada, when Howard Charles Cooney was a very small child.

John W. Cooney, now a resident of Missoula, Montana, was born in Ontario, Canada, in 1836, and was there reared and educated and developed into a nurseryman. He located his nursery at Arnprior, Ontario, Canada, about 1878, and in 1895 came to the United States and became one of the pioneer miners of Butte, Montana, following that industry until his retirement in 1903, when he located permanently in Missoula. He is a democrat and a Roman Catholic. His wife, who bore the maiden name of Mary O'Callahan, was born in the city of Cork, Ireland, in 1839, and died at Butte, Montana, in 1891. Their children were as follows: Percival J., who is an educator in one of the schools of Riverside, California; F. H., who is president of the Cooney Brokerage Company, resides at Missoula, Montana, and a sketch of him appears elsewhere in this work; Florence E., who is an artist of New York City, was graduated from the Chicago Art Institute; Howard C., whose name heads this review; and Byron E., who is a resident of Butte, is county commissioner of Silver Bow County, and proprietor and editor of the Montana "American."

Howard Charles Cooney was educated in the separate schools of Ontario, Canada, and graduated from the Arnprior High School in the class of 1892. In 1895 he came to Butte, Montana, and began working in a grocery store, remaining in it until 1897, when he engaged in the brokerage business which his brother Frank H. Cooney had established. This business has been expanded to its present proportions, and its operations are very extensive. The firm is now incorporated with Frank H. Cooney as president; Howard C. Cooney as vice president and general manager; and A. M. Harrington as secretary and treasurer. The main offices are at 601 East Platinum Street, Butte, while the branches are at Missoula and Great Falls, Montana.

Mr. Cooney follows his father's example in both politics and religion, and like him is a democrat and Roman Catholic. He belongs to the Silver Bow Club and the Butte Country Club. In addition to his other interests he is secretary and treasurer of the Evening Star Development Company operating in Elliston, Montana, and has charge of its affairs as general manager. Mr. Cooney owns a modern residence in the Coral Park Addition to Butte.

In 1912 he was married at Missoula, Montana, to Miss Leona Shryock, a daughter of J. W. and Leona Shryock, residents of Missoula, where Mr. Shryock is engaged in an automobile tire business. Mrs. Cooney attended the State University at Missoula. Mr. and Mrs. Cooney have three children, namely: Margaret Eleanor, who was born February 8, 1914; Leona Mary, who was born September 22, 1916; and Howard C., Jr., who was born in April, 1918.

JOSEPH MERRICK. As the greatest mining city of the world, Butte has attracted to it some of the most capable mining experts from all countries, and the resultant production of its mines shows that such a condition has been brought about through intelligent selection of the men placed in positions of authority. Joseph Merrick, acting superintendent of the Moonlight Mine, is a representative of that portion of the Old World now attracting considerable attention under its new name of Jugo-Slavia, but at the time of his birth was under Austrian rule. He was born at Croatia, Austria, on August 5, 1872, a son of Joseph Merrick, also born in Croatia, where he still resides, in 1842, and was there reared, educated and married, and taught the stone mason's trade. Conditions under the Austrian rule were intolerable, and so he came to the United States, and after a year spent in the woods of Wisconsin he came to Montana and followed his trade at Helena, Butte and Missoula. He was also at Spokane and Seattle, Washington, and at different points in Oregon, working at his trade. In all he spent twenty years in the United States, but finally returned to his native land. While in this country he gave his support to the democratic party. All his life he has been a member of the Roman Catholic Church. He married Ursa Sajcie, born in Croatia in 1841, and who died there in 1916. Their children were as follows: Tonka, who is a resident of Croatia, is the widow of John Luthich, formerly a stone mason, but now deceased, who visited the United States and lived in Montana for some years; Aleksia, who is a merchant of Croatia; Joseph, whose name heads this review; Fred, who is an employe of the Moonlight Mine of the Anaconda Copper Mining Company, is a resident of Butte, and came to Montana in 1900; and Maria, who is unmarried and lives with her father.

Joseph Merrick, the younger, attended the public schools of his native place until he was fourteen years of age, when he began working in order to assist his parents on their farm. When only sixteen years old he left his native land and went to the Argentine Republic in South America, and after some time spent at Buenos Ayres, was at Huhuly, working as a stone mason. Two years later he returned to Croatia, and in 1890 came to the United States, and for two years was engaged on city contracts for Spokane, Washington. In 1892 he arrived at Butte, and was engaged in the mason work on the original reservoir. After the completion of that contract he was employed for six months by the Butte, Anaconda and Pacific Railroad, leaving it to engage with what is now the Anaconda Copper Mining Company as an underground miner in the Green Mountain Mine, and later in the Parnal Mine. From that mine he went into the Bell Mine, the High Ore Mine, the Diamond Mine, the West Colusa Mine, and finally to the Moonlight Mine in the order named. The date of his engagement at the Moonlight Mine is 1904, and in four years he rose to be shift boss, and in 1916 was made assistant foreman, and still later became acting superintendent, having under his supervision 300 men. The mine is located at the east end of Granite Street.

Mr. Merrick is a democrat and a member of the Roman Catholic Church, having inherited both his political and religious creeds from his father. He is a member of the Croatian Association, which has headquarters in Pennsylvania, and is an ex-member of the Modern Woodmen of America. Mr. Merrick is a thrifty man and has invested some of his savings in a modern residence at 1415 Utah Avenue, and also in Anaconda mining stock, and stock of the Davis-Daly property and the Green Cananea stock.

In 1900 Mr. Merrick was married at Butte to Miss Fannie Christ, a daughter of Joseph and Mary (Persick) Christ, residents of Glasgow, Montana. Mr. Christ is a very successful rancher of Montana and came to the state during its pioneer days, so that he has borne his part in its development. Mr. and Mrs. Merrick have the following children, all of whom are attending school, the eldest now being in high school: Isabelle, who was born in 1904; Matilda, who was born in 1906; Victoria, who was born in 1908; and Fannie, who was born in 1910, daughters; and a son, Joseph, who was born in 1912.

The production of the mines owned and operated by the Anaconda Copper Mining Company aggregates one-fourth of the copper supply of the United States and one-seventh of that of the world, so some idea may be had from that of the importance of the work of the men engaged in superintending these rich ore deposits. Mr. Merrick has become thoroughly Americanized, but, remembering the abuses and hardships of his native country under former oppression, he cannot but rejoice that it has emerged a republic, and that there is every indication that there is a prosperous era opening up for this courageous "small nation."

Hard working and capable, Mr. Merrick is typical of the men who have brought about Butte's prosperity. His mind is centered on his work and his efficient handling of its manifold problems, but at the same time he is interested in civic improvement and the expansion of the public schools. It would be difficult to find a better citizen, more capable workman or kinder neighbor than he, and those who know him feel that he is one in whom implicit confidence may be placed without any fear of its being abused.

EDWARD LINDSAY RALSTON. Numbered among the dependable men of Butte, Edward Lindsay Ralston, superintendent of the Anselmo Mine, has earned the confidence he now commands through his own efforts. He was born at Ralston, Deerlodge County, Montana, on November 27, 1886, when it was still in Silver Bow County, and comes of an old American family, founded in this country by ancestors who came here from the North of Ireland in colonial days. He is a son of William A. Ralston.

William A. Ralston was born at Greenboro, Pennsylvania, in 1846, where his family had been located for several generations, and he died at Ralston, Montana, in 1914, his remains being interred at Butte. In 1861, although then but fifteen years of age, he enlisted for service during the war between the states in an Illinois volunteer infantry regiment and was under General Sherman's command. Being mustered out in 1864, after three years of service, he returned to Illinois, and from there came in 1865 to Montana, becoming one of the very first pioneers of Virginia City. There he engaged in placer mining, and he was also engaged in prospecting for gold at Gold Creek, Montana, still later coming to Butte, where he was again a pioneer, owning and operating its first livery stable and a stage line which ran between Butte and Deer Lodge. From Butte he went to Helena, and then returned to Butte, which he left for Silver Bow. In August, 1886, he removed to the Big Hole Valley and became a rancher of that region, owning 760 acres of land that became quite valuable. The settlement which grew up about him was named in his honor, Ralston, and there he died. A strong republican, he was elected on his party ticket to the State Assembly from Deerlodge County in 1910 and 1911. Fraternally be belonged to Anaconda Lodge, Benevolent Protective Order of Elks, and Butte Lodge, Independent Order of Odd Fellows. His wife bore the maiden name of Frances Cox, and she was born in Kentucky in 1856, and was killed in an automobile accident in 1914, which occurred in the vicinity of the family ranch. Mr. and Mrs. Ralston became the parents of the following children: Charles S., who conducts the homestead at Ralston; Alexander G., who is a surgeon of Utah, was graduated from the Medico Chi College of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, with the degree of Doctor of Medicine, and served during the Philippine war with the First Montana Volunteers as a member of the hospital corps for three years; Alice H., who is a trained nurse and instructor of nurses in the California Hospital of San Francisco, California, was graduated from the Penn Hospital at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, in 1908, served with Base Hospital No. 10, American Expeditionary Force, going over with one of the first units and being with the British Red Cross for two years, receiving four service stripes in honor of her length of service and returning to this country in March, 1919; and Edward L., who is the youngest born.

Growing up in his native place Edward L. Ralston attended the local schools of Deerlodge County and the Germantown Academy at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, from which he was graduated in 1906. He then entered the Montana State School of Mines at Butte, Montana, and took a three years' course, completing his training by a year at the University of Utah, Salt Lake City, from which he was graduated in 1910, with the degrees of Bachelor of Science and Mining Engineer. That same year he began working for Harper, McDonald and Company, engineers of Butte, and in July, 1911, went with the East Butte Copper Mining Company as assistant engineer. On January 1, 1913, he was made superintendent of the Florence Mine at Neihart, Montana, returning after a year to Harper, McDonald and Company as assistant engineer. In 1915 he became draughtsman for the City of Butte and was in the office of the commissioner of public works until March, 1917, in that month receiving his appointment as superintendent of the Anselmo Mine, which is located at the corner of Woolman and Alabama streets. Under his supervision are fifty employes. The mine produces silver and zinc and is operated by a New York syndicate. Mr. Ralston owns his modern residence at 1028 West Platinum Street, and also a third interest in the Ralston ranch. Like his father he is a republican. He belongs to Mount Moriah Lodge No. 24, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, and the Lodge of Perfection of Butte.

On January 1, 1910, Mr. Ralston was married at Butte to Miss Helen West Pyle, a daughter of Joseph Clinton and Helen (Prosser) Pyle. Mrs. Pyle died at Butte in December, 1919, but Mr. Pyle survives and is a geologist for the interests of Senator W. A. Clark, and a leading mine operator of Montana. Mr. and Mrs. Ralston have the following children: Edward L., Jr., who was born November 13, 1910; Helen West, who was born August 13, 1912; Donald Clinton, who was born February 28, 1915; and Joseph Pyle, who was born September 23, 1919.

Malcolm Bowden, superintendent of the Travona Mine, is one of the best instances Butte affords of the self-reliant, dependable mining expert, whose experience and knowledge are receiving proper recognition. He was born at London, England, on August 1, 1885, a son of Josiah Bowden, who was born in Cornwall, England, in 1836 and is now a resident of Helena, Montana. John Longmaid, who married his sister, was a pioneer of Butte during the early days of its mining activities, and it is probably because of the latter's success in this country that Josiah Bowden was led to sell his mercantile establishment in England and bring his wife and children, all of whom were born in England, to the United States in 1886. Josiah Bowden came direct to Montana after landing in this country and located at Helena, where he has since resided. For some years he was a bookkeeper for the Montana Central Railroad, later was a bank accountant, and in 1919 retired from active life. Since receiving his papers of citizenship he has been a supporter of the republican party. Born and reared in the faith of the Society of Friends, he still holds to it. His wife was Ellen Hart prior to her marriage, and she was born at Belfast, Ireland, in 1836, and died at Helena, Montana, in 1909. Their children were as follows: Josiah, who is with the State Nursery Company of Helena, Montana; Marguerite who married A. J. Horsky an attorney of Helena; Charles A. who is a draughtsman for the Anaconda Copper Mining Company of Butte; Malcolm whose name heads this review and two who died in childhood.

But an infant at the time of the family's settlement in Helena, Mr. Bowden was reared in that city, and attended the grammar and high schools until the close of his sophomore year. In 1900 he began working in the mines of Jefferson County, Montana, and remained there for two years, and then, returning to Helena, spent a short period in the employ of several mercantile and financial houses. In 1903 he entered the preparatory School of Mines at Butte, and in 1904 matriculated at the School of Mines, and was graduated therefrom in 1908 with the degree of Mining Engineer. For a short time thereafter he was in the employ of what is now the Montana Power Company, and then went back to the Jefferson County mines as a mining engineer, and remained there until 1910. In that year he was able to carry out plans that had been long maturing and visited different points in Europe, especially in France, not only making the trip for pleasure, but also to gain a knowledge of methods of working in the various mining centers of the Old World. Upon his return to Montana in 1911 he engaged in mining in Beaverhead County, and was made superintendent of the Hecla Mine, in which capacity he continued until 1912. The position of foreman of the gold mine at Helena was then offered him, and he accepted it and discharged its duties until 1914. During 1915, 1916 and 1917 he lived at Helena, recuperating from his arduous tasks, and in the latter year came to Butte and became associated with Senator W. A. Clark's interests. His experience and skill brought him promotion, and in August, 1919, he was made superintendent of the Travona Mine, which position he still holds. This mine is located on West Aluminum Street, and produces silver and zinc.

Mr. Bowden is unmarried, and lives at the Leonard Hotel. He has never cared to tie himself down to strict party lines, but gives his support to the candidates he believes will best discharge the duties of the office in question. Mr. Bowden belongs to the Episcopal Church. A Mason, he is a member of King Solomon Lodge No. 9, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, of Helena, Montana. He also belongs to the American Society of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers and the Silver Bow Club. Believing in the future of Montana as one of the greatest mining centers of the world, Mr. Bowden has not hesitated to invest in mining properties in the state, and is a man of ample means. He has risen to his present position through his own efforts, and his success is all the more commendable because it has been brought about in this manner and not through outside influence and capital. As a man Mr. Bowden possesses a personality which impresses people favorably and wins for him lifetime friends both professionally and in social circles.

Robert E. Thomas. The rate of progress in this country is largely dependent upon the readiness of the people to take advantages of the natural resources of the land or their ability to meet the demands of a developing civilization and adapt their operations to economic conditions. While, of course, the dominating interest at Butte is mining, so many others are developed as an outcome of these stupendous operations that practically every line of industrial and commercial activity is represented here, and some of the most masterful figures in the business world have made the city their permanent place of residence. One of these men is Robert E. Thomas, president and manager of the Butte Ice Company.

Robert E. Thomas was born five miles east of Anaconda in Deerlodge County, Montana, on January 18, 1884, a son of Ephraim Thomas who was born in Wales in 1833. Coming to the United States in young manhood, he located in Deerlodge County at a time when rigid pioneer conditions prevailed, and he was one of the very earliest settlers of that region. Acquiring land from the Government, or at a very low price, he became an extensive landowner and had several large ranches, and later he became interested in mining to a considerable extent. From the time he received his papers of citizenship he espoused the principles of the republican party. His wife bore the maiden name of Gwennie Evans, and she was born in Wales in 1839. Both of them were struck by lightning and died immediately in 1891. Robert E. Thomas was sitting between them at the time they were killed, and strange to say he was uninjured. Their children were as follows: William E., who is a miner of Butte; Margaret, who married R. R. Kilroy, managing editor of the Standard Publishing Company of Butte; Gwennie, who married Frank Ham, department manager of the Copper City Commercial Company, lives at Anaconda, Montana; Joseph, who is foreman of the Concentrator at the Washoe Reduction Works at Anaconda, Montana; and Robert E.

Robert E. Thomas attended the public schools of Anaconda, and was graduated from the high school course of that city in 1901, following which he began working for Roach and Smith, wholesalers in candy and cigars, and remained with them for three years. Mr. Thomas then went to Seattle, Washington, and was employed in the ship yard of Moran Brothers for 3½ years. In 1908 Mr. Thomas came to Butte to work on the Butte Evening News as business manager, and held that position until that journal discontinued publication three years later. He then entered the clerical department of the Anaconda Copper Mining Company and remained there until December, 1911, when he went with the Butte Ice Company, a close corporation, practically owned by E. C. Largey. Beginning his career with this concern as bookkeeper, Mr. Thomas rose to be manager in 1913, and in 1914 he, together with H. A. Frank, bought the business. Mr. Thomas is president and manager and Mr. Frank is secretary and treasurer while E. M. Frank is vice president. The offices are located at 600 South Main Street, and the ice houses are at Walkerville, South Butte, on Lake Avoca, and a large one on Iron Street, Butte, in the wholesale district. The plant, which is the largest of the place, is located at Dawson, Montana, with a capacity of 35,000 tons. The company handles about 73,000 tons annually and has the sole contract for supplying the Anaconda Copper Mining Company and the Milwaukee Railroad.

Mr. Thomas is independent in his political actions. He belongs to the Silver Bow Club, the Silver Bow Country Club, the Chamber of Commerce, the Butte Business Men's Association and the Butte Ad Club. In addition to his residence at 309 Granite Street he owns other real estate in Butte, and two mines at Southern Cross, Montana.

Mr. Thomas was married at Butte to Miss Mary Conlon, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Conlon. Mrs. Conlon is deceased, having passed away in the spring of 1908, but Mr. Conlon survives her and lives retired at Butte, where he was at one time a miner, having come here in 1865. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas became the parents of the following children: Madelon, who was born July 20, 1909; Margaret, who was born in 1910; Mary Frances, who was born in 1913; Robert, who was born in 1914; Patrick, who was born in 1917; and Elizabeth, who was born in 1918.

Properly numbered among the sagacious and alert young business men of Butte, Mr. Thomas has won his present standing through his own force of character and willingness to do his duty in every position he has held. Since taking charge of his present business he has developed it very materially, and has plans for its further expansion in the near future.

WILL A. CAMPBELL. Helena and this section of Montana numbers among her best known newspaper men and journalists Will A. Campbell, the editor of the Helena Independent, which has the distinction of being the oldest newspaper in the state in years of continuous publication under one name.

Mr. Campbell, who was born in Lincoln, Nebraska, May 8, 1881, is of Scotch descent, and the founder of the Campbell family in the United States was his grandfather, William Samuel Doke Campbell, who now resides at Monmouth, Illinois. He was born in Scotland, and on coming to this country he settled in Tennessee. Campbell County in that state was named in his honor, and he was a farmer there for many years. He married for his second wife a Miss Maxwell, who became the grandmother of Will A., and she, too, was born in Scotland. Her death occurred in Illinois during the period of the Civil war. J. A. Campbell, a son of these worthy Scotch immigrants, now resides at Lincoln, Nebraska. He was born at Campbell Station in Campbell County, Tennessee, in 1851, but was reared in Monmouth, Illinois, and is a graduate of Monmouth College. Soon after his marriage he went to Lincoln, Nebraska, where from 1879 until 1884 he served as the city superintendent of schools, later engaging in farming, and for the past number of years has been engaged in the wholesale grocery business in Lincoln. He is a republican voter, and a member of the Scotch Presbyterian Church and of the Masonic and Knights of Pythias fraternal orders. J. A. Campbell married Josephine Faulkner, who was born near Mount Pleasant, Iowa, in 1849, and whose death occurred at Ainsworth, Nebraska, in May, 1919. Five children were born to the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Campbell, namely: Will A., the well known Helena journalist; Maude E., who became the wife of a Mr. Hibbard and resides at Covington, Nebraska, where Mr. Hibbard is a farmer; Glenn M. is the business manager of the Helena Independent; Bert E., whose home is also in Helena, is the advertising manager for the Helena Independent; Margaret is principal of the high school at Ainsworth, Nebraska.

Will A. Campbell was given a splendid educational training to fit him for his life's work, and many of the leading journals of the West have had the benefit of his services. From the graded schools of Lincoln, Nebraska, he passed into the academy at Weeping Water, Nebraska, from which he graduated in 1897, and then matriculating in the University of Nebraska he was the editorial writer for the Nebraska State Journal during the 3½ years he was a student there. This completed his school training, and during the following two years he was the editorial assistant to J. Sterling Mortin, secretary of agriculture and owner of the Conservative at Nebraska City. Mr. Campbell next went with the Denver Post, on which he served as a special writer for a time, during one year was receiver for a paper at Blair, Nebraska, and returning then to Denver handled the strike situation there for the Denver Post and the Chicago Chronicle for two years. His next position was as financial reporter and editorial writer for the Sioux City Tribune, and in 1906 became the Sunday editor for the Omaha Bee, his services being retained in that capacity until 1909. He then became associated with the Omaha Chamber of Commerce as publicity manager for 1½ years, was next connected with the Great Northern Railroad Company as assistant to Louis W. Hill and handled the publicity end of the land exploitation department of that company until 1913.

It was at the close of this period that Mr. Campbell became associated with Helena, and the city has ever since claimed him among her progressive and influential citizens and business men. At this time he bought into the Helena Independent with Lewis Penwell, and this relationship has ever since continued, and in fact they were business associates even before that time. The Helena Independent was incorporated in 1889, and was reincorporated by Mr. Campbell in June, 1913, as the Independent Publishing Company of Helena, of which he is the president. The vice president is Glenn M. Campbell and the secretary and treasurer is Jane M. MacMillan. It was as early as 1866 that the paper was first launched in the newspaper world as the Independent, and it was then published at Deer Lodge, but was moved to Helena in 1867 and became the Helena Independent, a name it has retained through all the succeeding years. It is an independent democratic paper, and the plant is located at 52 South Main Street, where it is equipped with all the modern devices for the successful conduct of a large and representative journal, and it conducts the second largest business in the state in publishing and in the wholesale paper business.

Outside of his newspaper work Mr. Campbell has also gained prominence as a rancher and farmer. He owns the Four Range Ranch three miles east of Helena, containing 1,087 acres and known as one of the best and most efficiently equipped ranching properties in Montana. Its buildings are modern in every particular, its water is supplied by artesian wells and its lighting system by electricity. Mr. Campbell also owns a modern residence at 530 Hemlock Street in Helena, one of the finest homes in the city.

In 1903, at Blair, Nebraska, he was married to Miss Maude L. Carter, a daughter of Capt. Nathan Carter, one of the pioneers of the West and an early Indian fighter. He was also a Government contractor and the builder of Fort Kearney, Nebraska. From 1863 until the time of his death Mr. Carter had charge of frontier posts, and was commander of Fort Kearney during the Indian war. Virginia was his native state. A son, Bill Carter, was born to Mr. and Mrs. Campbell, November 23, 1908. Mr. Campbell is independent in his political affiliations, and is a member of the Presbyterian Church. His fraternal relations connect him with Ottawa Lodge No. 51, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, at Marysville, Montana, Helena Chapter No. 2, Royal Arch Masons, and Helena Consistory No. 3, and he is a thirty-second degree Mason. He is also a member of Helena Lodge No. 193, Benevolent Protective Order of Elks, at Helena, and belongs to the Montana Club at Helena, to the Rocky Mountain Club of New York City, to the Glacier Park Country Club, Glacier Park, Montana, to the Union League Club of New York City, Helena Country Club, the Rotary Club of Helena, to the Commercial Club of Helena and to the Helena Young Men's Christian Association.

T. W. Simpson. Since coming to Bozeman in 1909 Mr. Simpson has applied his energies to varied lines. He is a farmer and farm owner, a dealer and shipper of livestock, and is head of the well known real estate firm of Simpson & Truitt.

Mr. Simpson was born near Greensburg in Westmoreland County, Pennsylvania, March 3, 1859. His father, Thomas Simpson, was born in Scotland in 1835. After his marriage he came to America, lived in Canada a few years, and then located near Greensburg, Pennsylvania, where he was employed as a coal miner. In 1862 he joined the Fifty-third Pennsylvania Infantry and participated in the campaigns of the Army of the Potomac in and around Richmond. At the desperate Battle of Petersburg only sixteen men from his regiment were left fit for duty and six out of his company. The rest were either killed or captured. While trying to save a wounded comrade he was captured, and was soon afterward sent to Andersonville Prison, where he died as a result of exposure and hardship in 1863. His grave number at Andersonville is 8080. He was a republican in politics and a member of the Presbyterian Church. Thomas Simpson married Eliza Crockard, who was born in Scotland in 1827 and is now past ninety-two years of age and is still living near Greensburg, Pennsylvania. She was the mother of four children: Isabelle, wife of John B. Errett, a machinist living at Connellsville, Pennsylvania; T. W.; Mary, who died September 3, 1919, was the widow of James H. Kane; and Lida, who died at the age of sixteen years.

T. W. Simpson was left fatherless at the age of four years, and had to apply himself to productive labor at the earliest possible age. He attended the rural schools of Westmoreland County until fifteen years of age, and the following year he went to Quincy, Illinois, and worked on farms in that locality for five years. From 1881 to 1889 he farmed at Agricola, Coffey County, Kansas, and then built an elevator and engaged in the grain business at Agricola. He conducted his elevator and did a prosperous business for seventeen years. After selling out he came to Bozeman in 1909 and bought a farm 1½ miles west on the Huffine Road. This is a very valuable and productive place, consisting of 240 acres of irrigated land. He has also bought and shipped livestock, and the firm Simpson & Truitt not only do a large business in handling real estate in Gallatin County but are dealers in horses, cattle and sheep.

Mr. Simpson's partner is L. W. Truitt. He is also his brother-in-law. Mr. Truitt for a number of years was junior member of the Gallatin Lumber Company, and served two terms as mayor of Bozeman, leaving that office in January, 1919, and gave the city a splendid administration of its municipal affairs.

The offices of Simpson & Truitt are in the Owenhouse Building. Mr. Simpson is a republican and during 1918 served by appointment as county commissioner. He is a member of the Methodist Church and is affiliated with Bozeman Lodge No. 18, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, Zona Chapter No. 12, Royal Arch Masons, St. John's Commandery No. 12, Knights Templar, and Bozeman Lodge No. 463 of the Elks. He is an active member of the Chamber of Commerce. His firm owns the Senator Hoffman corner opposite the postoffice at Bozeman, and Mr. Simpson makes his home there, while his partner resides in the Evergreen Apartments. Simpson & Truitt own a ranch adjoining the Montana State College and the townsite on the south. This consists of 160 acres of irrigated land.

In 1880, at Columbus, Illinois, Mr. Simpson married Miss Lizzie C. Truitt, daughter of Sylvester and Harriet (Woodworth) Truitt, both now deceased. Sylvester Truitt was born in Kentucky in 1834, was an early settler in Western Illinois and in 1881 moved to Kansas, where he continued as a farmer and died at Ottawa in that state in 1918. Mr. and Mrs. Simpson have four children: Clyde A. was a graduate of the Gem City Business College at Quincy, was a bookkeeper for the Morris Packing Company and died at Agricola, Kansas, at the age of twenty-three; James Sylvester finished his education in a business college at Lawrence, Kansas, and is on his father's ranch west of Bozeman; Ralph died at the age of ten years at Agricola, Kansas; Mary Catherine is a graduate of the high school at Waverly, Kansas, attended the Montana State College and is the wife of Earl McMahon, a shoe salesman living at Bozeman.

L. W. Truitt

T. W. Simpson

SAMUEL C. FORD. The quality that has distinguished and permeated the entire administration of Samuel C. Ford as attorney general of Montana has been a moral courage that has kept him true to his convictions and principles against all the forces that a cynical, prejudiced and hostile world can muster. The office of attorney general has a great deal of routine work to perform. That has been done thoroughly by Mr. Ford and his subordinates, but beyond the routine he has used his official powers as a positive expression of the law and popular opinion, and in many cases has given vitality to laws that have been treated as dead letters on the statute books.

Mr. Ford is a comparatively young man, has been practicing law fourteen years, and nearly all of that time has been taken up with public duties, either in the United States district attorney's office or as attorney general of the state.

He was born at Albany, Clinton County, Kentucky, November 7, 1882, but spent his life before coming to Montana in Kansas, where his people were pioneers. This branch of the Ford family originated in Scotland, and were early settlers in Kentucky. His grandfather, William Ford, was born in Kentucky and spent the greater part of his life on a farm in Clinton County. During the Civil war he fought on the Union side. William Ford, Jr., father of Attorney General Ford, was born at Albany, Clinton County, Kentucky, in 1847, was reared, educated and married in Kentucky and as a young man taught school. He also operated a saw mill and manufactured lumber in his native state. In 1885, when Samuel C. Ford was about three years of age, the family moved to Wellington, Kansas. William Ford established and operated one of the first flour mills in this section of the state. Subsequently he moved out to the new country of Western Kansas, and developed a farm and ranch thirty miles south of Garden City in Haskell County. He lost practically all his property as a result of several dry years culminating in the panic of 1893-94, and in the winter of 1894 removed to a small farm at Garden City. While there he began cultivating what had been an amateur occupation as a bee man into a commercial business, and eventually became one of the leading producers of honey from Western Kansas. He finally sold this part of his business in 1908. In 1899 William Ford was elected county treasurer of Finney County, Kansas, and re-elected in 1902. Because of a change in election laws his first term was for three years and his second for two years. He retired from office in 1905, after that giving all his attention to his apiaries, and in 1908 engaged in the real estate and insurance business at Garden City. He has been through all the vicissitudes that have beset the Western Kansas pioneers, and it is part of the eternal fitness of things that he has for several years past been enjoying an ample degree of prosperity. He is a devout Christian, a member of the Baptist Church of Garden City, is affiliated with the Masons and Odd Fellows and is a republican in politics. William Ford married Glenora Elizabeth Snow. She was born at Albany, Kentucky, in 1851. Their children were six in number: Sallie, wife of J. H. Billings, a mechanical supervisor at Pueblo, Colorado; James P., associated in the real estate and insurance business with his father at Garden City; Samuel C.; Iva, who died at Helena, Montana, in 1907, wife of Cleveland Belisle; Charles F., a telegraph operator at Dallas, Texas; and Bina, wife of Robert Gerald.

Samuel C. Ford's early environment was Western Kansas, and he personally recollects some of its drought and poverty stricken conditions of early times. He attended rural schools in Haskell and Finney counties, graduating from the Garden City High School in 1903. It was his ambition to become a lawyer, but without the exercise of a great deal of self reliance and hard work he could not have attained his goal so early as he did. For five months after leaving high school he worked as a bridge carpenter with the Santa Fe Railway. The savings from that period of work enabled him to matriculate as a student in Kansas University at Lawrence. The first year he earned his board as waiter in a restaurant, giving six hours of his time to the restaurant, and earning some other money by tending furnaces and doing similar work. The second and third years he spent at the university he drove a laundry wagon and on Saturdays clerked in a clothing store. Therefore when he graduated from the university with the degree LL. B. in the law department in 1906, he had earned something more than his degree, which was merely a token of what hard and persistent effort might accomplish. After university he was member of the honorary law fraternity Phi Delta Phi, and also belongs to the Acacia fraternity, a strong and prominent fraternal organization throughout the United States made up of college men who are members of the Masonic fraternity.

Mr. Ford came to Montana and began practice at Helena in 1906. He soon earned recognition as an able young lawyer, took an active part in republican politics, and in October, 1908, was appointed assistant United States district attorney. He served in that office six years, until September, 1914. In 1916 he was elected attorney general of the state, and qualified for office January 1, 1917. In his campaign for election Mr. Ford came before the people emphasizing as the chief plank in his platform the enforcement of all laws. One of the first acts after he was sworn in was to direct the county attorneys to enforce the law against gambling, wine rooms and houses of prostitution. The energy and determination manifested in the attorney general's office at the state capital soon radiated out to remote quarters of the state, and as a result many communities acquired a due respect for law and authority. When the national prohibition act became effective on December 31, 1918, the attorney general used all his official power to enforce the Federal act. During the past four years the office of attorney general of Montana has been out of politics. Mr. Ford has played no favorites, and in his administration has kept an eye single to his duties and responsibilities as he interprets them to be from the laws and constitution of the state.

Mr. Ford is a prominent member of the Lewis and Clark County and State Bar associations. He is affiliated with Lodge No. 3, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, Helena Consistory No. 3 of the Scottish Rite, Algeria Temple of the Mystic Shrine and Helena Lodge No. 193, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks.

His residence is at 421 North Ewing Street. November 24, 1910, at Helena, he married Miss Mary L. Shobe, daughter of Waller and Isabelle (Lesley) Shobe. Her parents are residents of Spokane, Washington. Her father is a distinguished humanitarian, who served five years as superintendent of the State Orphans' Home at Twin Bridges, Montana, and resigned that office to take up his present work as superintendent of the Hutton Settlement, a private orphanage built by H. L. Hutton, a multi-millionaire. This is one of the finest institutions of the kind in the United States. Mrs. Ford for a number of years has been prominent in Helena musical circles, being a skilled instrumental performer, and completed her musical education under private tutors in New York City. Mr. and Mrs. Ford have two children: Dorothy Leslie, born October 25, 1911; and Isabelle Elizabeth, born July 24, 1915.

Justus L. Ueland. One of the most vigorous and effective farmers and ranchmen of Sheridan County was the late Justus L. Ueland, whose work of development here was done in the locality of Comertown. He settled in this region at a time when the country was being built up, starting at the grass roots, and during the brief span of years he was spared he made his mark as a builder. He was a ranchman distinctively, and the things he did and the improvements he made were for the benefit of his community as well as for himself, and his posterity may well be proud of his achievements. His capital when he came hither was limited, and he entered upon the development work of this locality as a homesteader, after waiting some years for the opening of the public lands to enter, and when he passed off the stage of action he left as his legacy to his family a splendid ranch and farm in what is often referred to as the Ueland Flats.

Justus L. Ueland was born in Webster County, Iowa, February 6, 1878, and when he was a lad of ten or twelve years his parents moved to North Dakota, and in Lamore County, that state, he passed from his boyhood into his youth. He finished the common school work and then attended the school of agriculture of the University of Minnesota, from which he was graduated in March, 1900. Beginning life seriously, he then spent a few years near Minot, North Dakota, and there earned the first dollars of his capital, being associated in his undertakings with his brother, and this partnership continued for some time after he located in Montana.

To his intensive industry Mr. Ueland added unerring judgment, so that it is not surprising that his enterprises prospered. He took pride in his stock, grading up his horses and cattle to better strains of Percheron and Belgian horses and White Face cattle, developing finally into a shipper of cattle, and he continued as such until disease struck down one of the most progressive men of his district. Mr. Ueland was a man of vigorous and robust physique, and his interest in his work spurred him on to undertake tasks so heavy that eventually his vitality was worn away. He took a deep pride in his community, was greatly interested in the schools, good roads, and in fact in everything which promised to contribute toward securing a well-developed system of civic government. At each election he did his duty as a citizen, and as he was a man of strong convictions he usually cast his vote according to them and his wide information, rather than according to party dictates. A man of the highest personal honor, he was a stickler for fairness and honesty in all things and would not tolerate loose living or unsound principles. He was a man of religious tendencies, and was brought up in the Lutheran faith. A lover of home, he found his pleasure in his family circle, to which he was always glad to welcome his friends, of which he had a host.

Justus L. Ueland was a son of L. A. Ueland, who is mentioned more fully elsewhere in this work. The Ueland family is of Scandinavian origin and belonged to the thrifty rural class in the old country, as they have since been in the new. In 1914 Justus L. Ueland was married in Lamore County, North Dakota, to Julia Dunsdon, a daughter of David F. and Lucinda (Overlees) Dunsdon. Mrs. Ueland was born in Christian County, Illinois, and is the eldest of five children. Mr. Dunsdon was born in Illinois, but his wife was a native of Indiana. The Dunsdons are farming people, and their family home is at Edgeley, North Dakota.

During the great war Mr. Ueland did a good citizen's part in assisting the administration to carry out its policies, and was a very liberal subscriber to all of the drives. His death occurred March 18, 1919. He was a stockholder of the Citizens State Bank of Dooley and of the State Bank of Outlook. Mr. Ueland was a man of stability and power of concentration, and possessing as he did will and resourcefulness he was able to build up a large and profitable business. He had the open mind and heart and quick understanding which made for him many warm, personal friends. Always keeping the good of his community close at heart, his life will continue to be an inspiration to those he left behind him.

Tom Kelley, of Dodson, is known throughout this community as one of the early cowboy settlers of Montana, and as such he has been a factor in many localities of the state. In 1878 he came into what was then the Territory of Montana, driving in a herd of cattle for a cattle pool. He started from the Panhandle country of Texas, traversed the regular trail through Eastern Colorado, crossed through Wyoming and into Montana, headed the Little Missouri River, came down the Little Powder River to the big stream, down that stream almost to the mouth of the Mizpah, and then into Miles City, the destination of the outfit.

This constituted the first trip Mr. Kelley made into this far northern region, and he remained here from the end of September until the first of November following, when he returned over the trail to Cheyenne, and there took the train back to Texas and resuming his work on the range for the "LX" outfit in the Panhandle, whose headquarters were about eighty-five miles northwest of Fort Elliott, and the several subsequent trips he made over the trail northward were started from that region. The exact locality of this ranch was some eighteen miles north of Amarillo, Texas, on the Fort Worth and Denver Railroad.

Mr. Kelley became a man of the range of that northwest region of Texas in 1873, engaging in rescuing stolen horses from the Indians and appropriating them to his own use and ultimately joining a cattle outfit there as a range man. The year 1876 marks the introduction of range cattle into that region by Charley Goodnight, and from that time until 1892 Mr. Kelley was identified with that region. Mr. Goodnight was an old partner of John Chisholm, the maker of the historic Chisholm trail from Texas to Kansas, and who passed away in old age in Kansas City. Mr. Kelley made nine trips over the lonely region between Texas and Montana, the last one having been made in 1892, when the herd was stopped six miles east of Ekalaka. Mr. Kelley remained in that country until 1897, and in that time became acquainted with all the historic old ranchers who inaugurated the cattle industry in Southeastern Montana.

On leaving the Ekalaka locality in 1897 Mr. Kelley also left the state and turned toward the far North. At Seattle he boarded a boat for Juneau, Alaska, and during his residence in that far northern country from November until April of the following year he prospected for minerals, which he failed to find. He then drifted back alone, as he went out, and again in Montana he established his headquarters on Milk River at Chinook. By this time he was rather near the bottom financially, and securing work with a sheep outfit he continued in that locality until the spring of 1899, when he came East to Malta, and thence out to the Little Rockies and secured work on a sheep ranch there. During that summer he entered the service of the "Circle Diamond" people, the Bloom Cattle Company, but after a few months returned to the ranchman George Jones, a sheep man, with whom he remained until the 16th of July, 1903, when he and Bud Jacobs came to the Dodson locality and purchased the quarter section upon which the Town of Dodson now stands.

On beginning his connection with this locality Mr. Kelley secured some goods and embarked upon a mercantile career in connection with Mr. Jacobs, and in March, 1904, he purchased his partner's interest in the business, but in the following June sold a half interest in the enterprise to A. J. Barret, who is still associated with him in business. In 1906 they platted the townsite of Dodson, and in the same fall sold three-fourths of the townsite to B. D. Phillips, Major Logan and Charley Whitcomb, who incorporated the Dodson Townsite Company.

The firm of Kelley and Barret have erected several buildings in Dodson, and are at present engaged here in the garage business. Mr. Kelley also has ranching interests on First Creek, one of the tributaries of Beaver River, where during the past few years he has carried on alfalfa farming chiefly. He entered his homestead there in 1917, and it now forms a part of his ranch.

Mr. Kelley is a native son of the Lone Star State, born in the City of Galveston August 5, 1853, and was reared in Savalla County. The principal town of that entire region was then Uvalde, and he was a youth of eighteen before he left that locality. All the school training he received he obtained there in about thirty days, and when he left that country to go into the Panhandle he was the owner of two or three horses.

William Kelley, his father, was also born in Texas, a son of John Kelley, who was one of the first settlers of that commonwealth, going into that country about 1819, when it was yet a part of Mexico. He fought in the Texas revolution, and thus contributed to the independence of the old Republic of Texas. He ultimately removed to Savalla County, and is buried in the Uvalde Cemetery. This old Texas patriot and Irishman was born in France, and came to New Orleans when a boy of nine years. He married Emma Salisbury, and their children were Edmund, John and William.

William Kelley passed his life as a stockman, and his last years were spent in Savalla County, and he was killed while in the Town of Uvalde. During the Civil war he served with the Confederate army, a member of the Eighth Texas Cavalry, under General Hood, Army of Northern Virginia. Among many other engagements he participated in the Battle of Gettysburg, and he served through the entire struggle without wounds or capture, resuming his stock business when his army life ended. William Kelley married Martha M. Lakey, from Louisiana, who survives her husband and is the mother of three sons, William, Tom and Dr. John Kelley.

In Havre, Montana, June 15, 1908, Tom Kelley was married to Miss Catherine Cotter, whose father was James Cotter, an Irishman of Belfast, where Mrs. Kelley was also born. Her mother was Anna Coleman. Mrs. Kelley is the youngest of her parents' ten children, and she has two brothers in the United States, James, who spent many years of his life in Montana but is now a resident of the State of New York, and Michael, who is a ranchman on Beaver Creek in Phillips County, where his brother James formerly ranched. Mrs. Kelley came to the United States with one of her brothers in 1906, and she and Mr. Kelley became acquainted in Dodson. Their union has been without issue.

Mr. Kelley is active in politics only as a voter, supporting democratic principles. During the World war Mrs. Kelley was an active worker in the interests of the Red Cross, performing an excellent part in the war work done by the branch chapter at Dodson.

PETER E. JOHNSON was one of the first settlers of Medicine Lake, having located in this locality before the birth of the new town. It was in March of 1910 that he established his home at old Medicine Lake, where he was engaged in general merchandising as a member of the firm of P. E. Johnson and Company, the firm comprising himself and his brother Oscar. The brothers came from North Dakota to Montana as settlers, Peter coming from Sherwood and Oscar from Mohall, that state, the former having been engaged in the lumber business and the latter as a merchant's clerk, and combining their capital and experience at Medicine Lake they established their first independent business for both.

The Johnson brothers were natives of Minnesota, Peter born in Hennepin County April 21, 1872, and Oscar in Douglas County January 2, 1884, but both were reared in Alexandria and were educated in the public schools. They were sons of Eric Johnson, who filed on and proved up a homestead near Hinsdale in Valley County, Montana, and continued as a resident of this state for six years, leaving it in July, 1919, and returning to Alexandria, Minnesota, where he had first settled in 1878. Eric Johnson was a native of Sweden, born in the northern part of that country at Jemtland, where the sun shines at midnight, and he was a farmer there. His people were of the poor class, and he was additionally handicapped in his childhood by the death of his father and the family's maintenance being shifted to his young shoulders. His educational training was therefore limited, and he came to the United States at the age of twenty-one knowing practically nothing but work. He met his future wife aboard ship, and they were married in Alexandria, Minnesota. She was Miss Ingeborg Johnson, and passed away in Minneapolis, Minnesota, the mother of one child, Peter E. Eric Johnson afterward married her sister, Emma Johnson, who bore him the following children: Anna, who died as Mrs. Emil Umbright at Fargo, North Dakota; John A., whose home is in Minnesota; Oscar L., a former business partner of his brother Peter; Emma C., the wife of Ole Johnson, of Hinsdale, Montana; Edward L., of Medicine Lake; Ellen, of Alexandria, Minnesota; William A., mentioned in the following paragraph; and Arthur, also of Medicine Lake.

William A. Johnson volunteered for service in the World war and was assigned to one of the oldest and most historic regiments in the United States, the Fighting Fourteenth, but his services were given in the United States. He trained at Fort Wright, Vancouver, and also saw service at Portland, Camp Lewis near Tacoma, Washington, Camp Dodge, Iowa, Camp Grant and at Camp Russell, where he was discharged after the signing of the armistice. He was a corporal in the infantry and won conspicuous attention as a sharpshooter and received a medal for his work. His business career has been spent as a clerk in Medicine Lake.

During his early life Peter E. Johnson learned the lumber business from his father, who was engaged in the retail lumber trade during more than forty years. After leaving home the son was chiefly employed in lumber yards as a salesman in Alexandria, Minnesota, and in North Dakota, and during his residence at Mohall he filed on a claim there and proved it up, and the proceeds from its sale gave him the needed capital with which he started in business for himself at Medicine Lake.

P. E. Johnson and Company opened their store at old Medicine Lake in a building 24 by 30 feet, and this was the third store opened in the village. It continued in business there prosperously until the new Town of Medicine Lake came into existence, and the Johnsons then moved their building to the new site, and it was one of the first business houses to open its doors to the public in this new town. The firm continued in their pioneer building until their new store was built in the same year, and since 1910 they have carried on their operations in a building 28 by 60 feet, and their stock has continued along the same lines as at first with the exception that they have added the buying of cream, of which they are the pioneer dealers here. The Johnson brothers, Peter E. and Oscar L., remained together in the business until the death of Oscar November 14, 1918, dying from influenza. Peter E. Johnson has since carried on the business, in which he is ably assisted by his two younger brothers, Edwin and Arthur.

Peter E. Johnson became the proprietor of the Lake Hotel and Cafe June 25, 1919, the successor of Charley Sager. The east half of this building was the original and only hotel in old Medicine Lake, and it came to the new town on wheels about the time the general exodus was made. In addition to his mercantile and hotel interests Mr. Johnson has also been actively identified with the municipal affairs of the town, and is now serving his second term as the mayor of Medicine Lake. He was actively interested in the county division movement which resulted in the creation of Sheridan County out of Valley County, and was even more actively associated with the battle over the county seat establishment which was carried on through the two sections, continuing over a period of four years and finally settled in the courts by the dismissal of the suit in the fall of 1919, Plentywood winning the decision.

Mr. Johnson was reared under democratic influences. His first presidential vote was given to Mr. Bryan in 1896, and he supported the Nebraska statesman in all his subsequent campaigns and the ticket of his party in all national elections since that time.

At Minot, North Dakota, December 22, 1904, Mr. Johnson was married to Miss Carrie Stromstad, who was born in Norway in November, 1885, the third of the six children of her father, G. Stromstad, who came to the United States from Norway. A daughter, Bernice, was born to Mr. and Mrs. Johnson in March, 1912.

Mr. Johnson is a past grand of the Medicine Lake Lodge of Odd Fellows, has served as a delegate to the Grand Lodge, and has taken the Encampment and Canton work of that order. He has also served as a district deputy grand master here, and was the first noble grand of Medicine Lake Lodge.

ALBERT L. TENNIS, the manager of the Farmers Elevator and Milling Company of Medicine Lake, has been a factor in the business life of this region of Eastern Montana since 1911. He was born in Renville County, Minnesota, near Bird Island, November 21, 1876, and his environment when he was a boy was the country. His father and mother had gone into that region of Minnesota when it was a new country, took land of the public domain and developed a farm, and there the husband and father passed away in 1883, when but thirty-six years of age.

Lafe Tennis was a native of Wisconsin, born near Oshkosh, and he grew to mature years there as a farmer's son. His father was also Lafe Tennis, who had immigrated from Norway to Wisconsin many years before the Civil war, and spent the remainder of his life in that state. His widow came out to Minnesota during the later years of her life and died in Renville County in 1903, at the age of seventy-two years. They were the parents of the following children: Lafe, Jr., Louis, Ole, Swen and Ann. The daughter married Holver Hogstell.

Lafe Tennis, Jr., the father of Albert L., was a child in the home of parents in rather straightened circumstances, and he was early inured to work. When the Civil war came on he joined the Union army at the age of sixteen, was assigned to an infantry regiment, and was with General Sherman in his Atlanta campaign. He received a wound which sent him to the hospital, and the war was over before he was able to return to his command. Afterward he took up farming, and soon went out to Minnesota. At his early death he left a widow and six children, and she cared for and educated them. She bore the maiden name of Margaret Hogstell and was a daughter of Holver Hogstell, a native son of Norway. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Tennis were: Henry, of Minneapolis; Lillian, the wife of Henry Sommermeyer, of Minneapolis; Hattie, who became the wife of Knute Knudtson, and died in Renville County, Minnesota; Albert Lawrence, of Medicine Lake; Emma, who married Charles Eck, of Minneapolis; and George, a banker at Lake Norden, South Dakota.

Albert L. Tennis received some seven months of graded school work after his country school training. He worked on the farm with his mother until he was twenty-one, and then began his own business career with a hammer and saw, working at the carpenter's trade for three years during the summer months in the vicinity of Bird Island. He then entered the grain business as a helper in the Crown Elevator Company at Bird Island. His first managerial position was at Norton, North Dakota, and he also served the Crown Company in his home town, bought grain for the Hawkeye people at Aberdeen, South Dakota, was with the Farmers Grain Company on the Farmers Line out of Devils Lake, and from that point went to Edmore, North Dakota, where he spent four years buying and shipping grain for the Anchor Grain Company.

Mr. Tennis' next location was at Plentywood, where during less than a year he was engaged in the confectionery business, disposing of the business at the end of that time and settling a few miles south of Froid, where he resumed his old occupation of buying grain. He was connected with the Farmers Elevator Company, but after a year there he returned to North Dakota and spent the next two years at Willow City, buying and shipping grain for the St. Anthony & Dakota Elevator Company.

But having once had a taste of Montana life he was not content to remain elsewhere, and on his return he located at Medicine Lake and entered the service of the Farmers Elevator Company. On November 28, 1919, upon the consolidation of that enterprise with the Farmers Elevator & Milling Company, he was made manager of the latter. He is now one of the stockholders of the enterprise. He was also for two years a member of a company engaged in farming on the reservation adjacent to Medicine Lake.

Mr. Lafe Tennis, the father of Albert L., was a republican politically, and his church was the Lutheran. His three sons also became republicans when they became of age, and Albert L. cast his first presidential vote for Major McKinley in 1896. He supported Colonel Roosevelt in 1904, Taft in 1908, and in 1912 he cast his ballot for Mr. Wilson, but in 1916 resumed his place in the republican ranks and voted for Mr. Hughes. His official service is as a member of the council of Medicine Lake, in which he is now serving his first term. While on the Farmers Line out of Devils Lake he was postmaster of the Town of Ellsbury for two years. He was made a Mason at Willow City, North Dakota, and completed his Blue Lodge work at Plentyville and is still a member of that lodge. During the period of the World war Mr. Tennis gave freely of his time to the sale of war stamps and bonds, and also took an active part in the work of the Red Cross. Mrs. Tennis was an officer in the local Red Cross Chapter, and she is also a member of the Eastern Star, and filled a chair in the Chapter at York, North Dakota.

Mr. Tennis was first married at Bird Island, Minnesota, in February, 1904, to Miss Oline Landswerk, a daughter of Peter Landswerk, who moved to Minnesota from Chickasaw County, Iowa, but was a native of Norway. Mrs. Tennis was born in Iowa, and after completing her country school training she took up millinery work and was thus employed at the time of her marriage. Her death occurred in April, 1910, the mother of two children, Lowell and Mavis, who are growing up in the home of their grandparents Landswerk in Iowa. At Plentywood, Montana, in June, 1913, Mr. Tennis was married to Mrs. Mame Mowers, who was born at Clarion, Iowa, the oldest of the three daughters of E. F. White.

GEORGE S. BOGGS. Descended from honored ancestry and himself numbered among the leading citizens of Carter County, Montana, the subject of this sketch is entitled to specific recognition in a work of this character. A residence in this county of many years has but strengthened his hold on the hearts of the people with whom he has been associated and today no one here enjoys a larger circle of warm friends and acquaintances, who esteem him because of his sterling qualities of character and his business ability.

George S. Boggs was born in Clark County, Iowa, where his birth occurred on October 5, 1874, the son of George M. and Angeline (Fenton) Boggs. The father was born and reared within fifteen miles from the birthplace of his son George, and his wife was born and reared in Chillicothe, Missouri. To these parents were born the following children: Mrs. Nina Crawford; Mrs. Ruie Stelling, of Omaha, Nebraska; Clark C., of Carter County, Montana; Etha, wife of Charles Knight, of Seattle, Washington; and George S., the immediate subject of this review. George S. Boggs was reared under the parental roof and secured his education in the rural schools of the neighborhood. At the age of eighteen years he came to Montana with the Standard Cattle Company, the "101" outfit, as a cowboy, and on Little Beaver and Sandstone creeks, he worked for that outfit and the "Half Circle L" for four years. He then gave up range work and came to Ekalaka, where he was variously employed about town for about two years before engaging in ranch work on his own account. He began his ranch work near Ekalaka, but finally located on the head of Little Beaver, where he has since been located. He homesteaded there and now owns a section and a half of good land in a body. Here the "Bo—" brand has been maintained for more than twenty years, and the ranch is one of the best known in that neighborhood. Prior to coming to Montana Mr. Boggs had gained valuable experience as a range rider for the Morecroft Ranch Company near Morecroft, Wyoming, where he had gone as a youth of fifteen years.

Mr. Boggs was appointed deputy sheriff of Custer County following the election of Sheriff W. E. Savage, under whom he served six years, followed by two years under Sheriff Hugh Wells, thus receiving exceptional training as a peace officer and intimate acquaintance with the details of the office of sheriff. After this official experience he gave his sole attention to his ranch until Carter County was created by the Legislature, when he was named in the bill as the first sheriff. At the first county election he was elected to succeed himself, having previously won the republican nomination against two competitors. He has given conscientious and faithful attention to the discharge of his official duties and has thereby won the respect and admiration of all who know him.

In November, 1896, Mr. Boggs was married to Mrs. Barbara Hedges, a native of Scotland, and who by a former marriage has two sons, Harry H. and Oliver G.

Politically Mr. Boggs is a firm adherent of the republican party. Fraternally he is a member of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. He has been a witness of and a participant in the wonderful growth and development of the section of country honored by his citizenship, for when he first came to Ekalaka it had but a single store, an eating house and a saloon. He at once gave his efforts to the upbuilding and improvement of the place. For nine years prior to the incorporation of the village he served as a member of the school board. A man of genial and kindly nature, he is well liked by all and is numbered among the representative men of his county.

MATT F. CAREY. Unless a man possess confidence in himself, his community and his calling he cannot hope to make much progress in life, nor will his location in a neighborhood advance its prosperity to any marked degree. On the other hand, if he is ambitious, satisfied that he is engaged in the right business in a locality where the prospects are excellent, his own enthusiasm is bound to inspire others with faith, attract outside capital and bring about important changes in local affairs. Especially is this true of the merchant, who by reason of his business is brought into personal contact with all classes, and in learning their tastes and requirements with reference to his wares also becomes acquainted with their ideas and their fitness for their own lines of endeavor. As they make an impression on him, so he in turn influences them, and if he possesses the right characteristics before long he begins to be recognized as one of the strong factors in the constructive work of the community. Such a man is Matt F. Carey of Ekalaka, member of the Charters Mercantile Company, his partner being M. C. Newstrom.

Matt F. Carey was born in Freeborn County, Minnesota, on June 3, 1882, a son of Martin Carey. The birth of Martin Carey occurred at Rush City, Wisconsin, and he spent his life as a farmer and ranchman, dying at Belfield, North Dakota, when sixty-eight years old. While a stanch republican, he never held any public office. Martin Carey was united in marriage at Albert Lea, Minnesota, to Mary Tracey, a daughter of John Tracey, who survives her husband and is now living at Austin, Minnesota. Martin Carey and his wife had the following children born to them: Mrs. Nell McBride, who is a resident of Melton, North Dakota; Mrs. Margaret Cunningham, who is a resident of Albert Lea, Minnesota; Edward, who is a resident of Baker, Montana; Matt F., whose name heads this review; John, who is a ranchman in the vicinity of Ekalaka; Patrick, who is a ranchman of the same neighborhood as John; Joseph, who is still on the old homestead at Belfield, North Dakota; Mrs. Nick Boltz, who also lives at Belfield, North Dakota; Angeline, who is a school teacher of Baker, Montana; and Madeline, who is a school teacher of the Belfield locality of North Dakota.

The Carey family was founded in this country by Patrick Carey, who came here from Ireland and located in Wisconsin, where he was married. His children were as follows: Martin, who became the father of Matt F.; James; Patrick, who entered the priesthood and spent his life at Red Wing, Minnesota; Mrs. Winnie Dryer; and Edward, who is chief of police at Albert Lea, Minnesota.

Matt F. Carey attended the public schools until he reached the eighth grade, and then became a student in a business college at Austin, Minnesota, following which he took a six months' course in the Minneapolis School of Business at Minneapolis, Minnesota. He began his business career as a clerk in a store at Buffalo, North Dakota, from which point he came to Ekalaka to accept a position as a member of the selling force of the R. C. Charters Company. Industrious and thrifty, from the time he came to Ekalaka in May, 1909, he had before him the idea of establishing himself in business, and when the opportunity arose for his becoming part owner of the concern employing him he had the money to make the purchase, all of which he saved from his salary, the new firm coming into being in July, 1919. The Charters Mercantile Company does a general merchandise business, selling at retail only, and drawing its patronage from a radius of sixty miles. This house has been in existence for about a dozen years, and the new management is not only upholding all of the old standards but creating new and better ones, and is justly numbered among the stable concerns of the county. Mr. Carey has identified himself with other enterprises, being secretary and vice president of the telephone company, treasurer of the Ekalaka Commercial Club, treasurer of the Rifle Club and director of the fire department. During the late war he was one of the Government agents for the sale of War Savings Stamps, and bought liberally of all of the issues of Liberty Bonds.

On June 17, 1916, Mr. Carey was united in marriage at Ekalaka, Montana, to Mrs. Emily (Trout) Meriam, a daughter of John Trout. Mrs. Carey was born in Michigan, but was brought to Montana when a child, and was reared in this state, chiefly at Helena. In addition to his comfortable residence at Ekalaka Mr. Carey has proved up a homestead in the locality, which he still owns. A man of sound principles and progressive ideas, he has advanced rapidly, and his progress is all the more to be commended because, as before stated, it has come about through his own efforts and his willingness to work and save. He is a strong democrat, and is now serving as a member of the City Council of Ekalaka, his methods as a public official being the same he has found so eminently successful in his private enterprises, and the community is benefiting accordingly because of his connection with its management.

June G. Olsen. Montana enjoys a high reputation because of the high order of her citizenship, and none of her citizens enjoy a more enviable position in the esteem of his fellows than the gentleman whose name appears at the head of this sketch, who is successfully engaged in the drug business at Ekalaka, the county seat of Carter County. A residence there of nearly twenty-five years has given his fellows a full opportunity to observe him in the various lines of activity in which he has engaged, and his present high standing is solely due to the honorable and upright course he has pursued. As a leading citizen of his community he is eminently entitled to representation in a work of this character.

June G. Olsen was born in Benton County, Iowa, on June 12, 1881, and is a son of Rasmus Olsen, who was born in Copenhagen, Denmark, in 1845. The latter came to the United States about the close of the Civil war and went at once to Iowa, where he obtained employment as a farm hand. Later he took up land in Benton County, bought other lands, and spent his final years as a successful farmer, his long and industrious life being rewarded by a handsome accumulation. He was a republican in political matters and his religious belief was that of the Lutheran Church. Rasmus Olsen married in Luzerne, Iowa, Lundina Nicholaison, who also was born in Copenhagen. These parents are both now deceased, Mr. Olsen dying in 1882 and his widow survived until 1919, having married a Mr. Pedersen after the death of Mr. Olsen. To Mr. and Mrs. Olsen were born the following children: Mrs. J. H. Coffey, of Bozeman, Montana; Oleander L., of Fairview, Montana; Addiel F., of Fairview; Mrs. E. C. Ohlsen, of Minneapolis, Minnesota; Clarence E., also of Minneapolis; June G., the immediate subject of this review; and Walter G., of Northwood, Iowa.

June G. Olsen attended school up to the age of ten years in Cedar Falls, Iowa, that being practically the limit of his school attendance. However, he early formed habits of careful reading and close observation and is a well informed man. His first employment was as a "bell hop" in the Irving Hotel at Waterloo, Iowa, where he remained for three years, when he accompanied his brother Clarence to Montana, arriving here on August 4, 1895. They stopped first at the old "TD" ranch, then in Custer County, and there he obtained his first employment as a range rider. He followed that work for about twelve years, and also during that period did a good deal of stage driving, covering the Miles City—Ekalaka trail, most of the trip being made at night. He and his brother entered homesteads in what is now Fallon County, on Miles City Creek, as squatters, but more recently June G. took up land near Ekalaka, which he had patented and still owns. He closed his ranching experience with the "Hash Knife" outfit and abandoned the range in the fall of 1906. He then entered the Postoffice store as a clerk, remaining there for three years. He next went to the north side of the Yellowstone River and spent a summer ranching near Fairview, raising horses in partnership with his brother. He then returned to Ekalaka and resumed his former position with Mr. Wilson. The next season he became a clerk in Walter H. Peck's general mercantile store, where he remained a year. He then purchased a half interest in the Postoffice store from Mr. Wilson, a good store building was erected and the partnership was maintained for four years, during which time they added a drug department. In the meantime Mr. Olsen took up the study of pharmacy by correspondence course, and soon afterward became the sole owner of the store. The following winter he went to Minneapolis, where he entered the Minnesota Institute of Pharmacy. He took the state examination as a pharmacist at Helena, was registered and has since conducted a drug business, together with which he carries jewelry and all the accessories now found in all up-to-date drug stores. Besides building the store building occupied by him, Mr. Olsen has also erected four other business houses and his residence, and in every possible way he has helped to advance the material interests of the community.

At miles City, Montana, on June 6, 1909, Mr. Olsen was married to Henrietta M. Terrett, the daughter of A. F. Terrett, who was an early settler of Custer County, having come from Indian Territory and settled on a ranch on the Tongue River. He was the father of the following children: Mrs. Georgia Francis, of Wyoming; Mrs. Philip Myers, of Chicago; Henrietta, Mrs. Olsen, who was born in what is now Oklahoma on May 17, 1889; John F., deceased; Mabel, of New York; and Warren, of Chicago. To Mr. and Mrs. Olsen have been born two children, Beverly, born in 1910, and William, born in 1914.

Politically Mr. Olsen is a stanch supporter of the republican party. His only public office has been that of a member of the school board, where he rendered good service in the interest of education. He was a member and hearty supporter of the Red Cross during the recent war, and also a member of the One Hundred Club, a community organization for the better protection of life and property during the war and also to secure a more complete loyalty among the citizens. For a few months he served as a justice of the peace, but resigned the position. In every phase of community life he has taken a keen interest, his support being given to every movement promising to advance the public welfare in any way. Because of his stand for the right things and because of his fine personal character he justly merits the high position he holds in the esteem of the people.

Louis T. Ramme. Individual enterprise, which is the just boast of the people of Montana, is forcefully exhibited in the career of Louis T. Ramme, a substantial citizen and well known hotel keeper at Ekalaka, Carter County. He has been a resident of Montana for many years, has been a witness of the wonderful development of this country and has himself had a part in the work of upbuilding the country and advancing it in the scale of civilization. Of earnest character and forceful personality, he has made a definite impression on the community where he lives and is justly numbered among its representative citizens.

Mr. Ramme was born at Houghton, Michigan, on May 23, 1866, and is the son of Chris Ramme, who is now a retired stockman and farmer living at Ekalaka. The latter was a pioneer of Montana, having come to this state in 1877, coming up the Yellowstone River and landing at old Milestown, then a tent village located just below where Miles City now stands. Five years after his advent to Montana he was followed by his son, the subject of this sketch. The latter had been reared at the old home in Michigan, receiving his school education in Menominee and completing his studies at Neosha, Wisconsin. From the age of fifteen years he has been practically on his own resources and has thus earned the proud American title of "self-made" man. Louis Ramme was sixteen years old when he came to Montana, stopping first at Miles City, where he waited on table for about a month, after which he became cook in a restaurant there, following that vocation until 1884. He then went to Mussellshell River and went on the range as a sheep owner with his father. Later they moved over to Powder River and then to Ekalaka just before the founding of that town. They suffered very severely from winter losses, and finally, in 1891, they sold out. Thereafter Louis Ramme followed sheep shearing, cooking, machineshop work and other lines. In 1911 he came to Ekalaka and engaged in the hotel business, which he has followed ever since. He devotes his attention principally to the cuisine, and it is a matter of common consent hereabouts that as a chef he is a little superior of anyone else in this section of the country.

Mr. Ramme entered a homestead east of Ekalaka, proved it up, but later disposed of it, but still owning a ranch nearer the town. He has at times resumed ranching with cattle and horses, but his former unfortunate experience with sheep has discouraged him from again handling them. He became associated with others in the organization of the Ekalaka Fair Association, and has ever stood ready to do everything in his power not only to contribute to the welfare of the people here, but he never overlooks an opportunity to induce new settlers to come to this locality, being a persistent and consistent booster for Carter County in particular and Montana in general.

At Miles City, on August 8, 1903, Mr. Ramme was married to Mrs. Hattie Nehrbass, a former playmate of his back in Hartford, Wisconsin. She is a daughter of Samuel Leonard and stepdaughter of Edward Burns and wife, nee Harriet Felt. Mr. Burns was born in Ireland, came to the United States in boyhood and located on a farm at Hartford, Wisconsin, where his death occurred. To Mr. and Mrs. Ramme has been born a daughter, Martha. By her former marriage Mrs. Ramme is the mother of the following children: Mrs. Clifford O'Connor, of Fond du Lac, Wisconsin; Leslie T., of Ekalaka; Laverne, wife of Theron Comstock, of Ekalaka; and Linville, of Ekalaka.

Politically Mr. Ramme has been a stanch supporter of the republican party, though since the Roosevelt campaign of 1912 he has occupied an independent attitude. Fraternally he is a member of Ekalaka Lodge No. 120, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, of which he is the present worshipful master, being the first to hold that exalted position in this county. Mr. Ramme has always retained an optimistic attitude towards the affairs of life, never allowing things, however discouraging, to deter him, and he is always inclined to see the best side of everything. This happy trait, with other fine personal qualities, has commended him to the good will and esteem of the people.

William P. Nims. The office of biography is not to give voice to man's modest estimate of himself and his accomplishments, but rather to leave upon the record the verdict establishing his character by the consensus of opinion on the part of his neighbors and fellow citizens. In touching upon the life history of the subject of this sketch the writer aims to avoid fulsome encomium and extravagant praise; yet he desires to hold up for consideration those facts which have shown the distinction of a true, useful and honorable life—a life characterized by perserverance, energy and well defined purpose. To do this will be but to reiterate the dictum pronounced upon the man by the people who have known him long and well.

William P. Nims was born in Jackson County, Iowa, on January 22, 1867, and is a son of James Nott Nims, now a retired farmer of that place. James Nott Nims was born and reared in Jackson County, Iowa, to which locality his father, Amasa Nims, had come in 1838 from Bolton County, New York, taking up Government land and spending his remaining years there as a farmer. His son Wesley was the first white child born in Jackson County. Amasa Nims' father was one of the first forty Minute Men of the Revolution wintering at Valley Forge, Pennsylvania, and serving all through the Revolutionary war. James Nott Nims received a country school education and has been a man of clean life and character, never having taken a chew of tobacco, used an oath or played a game of cards. He is a democrat in his political faith. He married Huldah Watterman, a daughter of Asahel Watterman, who migrated to Iowa from Frankfort, Indiana, and here became a successful saw-mill man. Mrs. Nims passed away in Iowa. She was the mother of the following children: William P., the subject of this sketch; Emily, who became the wife of Joseph Grant and died in Iowa; Nora, the wife of Harry Griffin, of Jackson County, Iowa; Pearl, wife of Riley Taylor, of Thermopolis Springs, Wyoming; Julius, of Jackson County, Iowa; Myrtle, the wife of Fay Huff, of Dupree, South Dakota; and Abner P., who lives at the old home in Jackson County, Iowa.

William P. Nims was reared in Jackson County, Iowa, and received a good practical education in the district schools there. He became familiar with live stock on the home farm and has continued to handle stock ever since. He became identified with Montana on September 15, 1910, and his first act in this state was the entering of a homestead five miles northeast of Ekalaka, on which he resided until he had completed the Government requirements and obtained a title to it. His career here has been a most interesting one in several respects. When he came here he was $900.00 in debt. As soon as he had completed a frame residence, 14 by 16 feet in size, and a small barn he came into Ekalaka and established a meat market. He gave his attention to this business until he had his land title, when he leased the market, which was the first one in the town, and bought an old livery barn, which he converted into a garage. After running that a year he sold it and purchased the only feed barn in town, which he also converted into a garage, and this he now occupies as a Ford sales and service station, including, of course, a full line of accessories. Mr. Nims has also been a large dealer in lumber, having erected sheds in 1915, and shipping in the first car of western lumber that had come to Ekalaka. He also brought in the first car of Portland cement, built the first cement sidewalk, established the first meat market and the first farmers' feed yard. As one of the active citizens of the town he urged its incorporation as a village, served two years as a member of the Village Council, and was instrumental in getting a resolution through that Council, ordering the construction of cement sidewalks on both sides of Main Street. With all his interests in town he has also given considerable attention to his ranch, which he has added to from time to time until it now comprises 1,800 acres, all fenced and in one ranch.

William P. Nims was married in Jackson County, Iowa, on November 21, 1888, to Harriet Shrigley, who was born in Jackson County, Iowa, the daughter of a Vermont man, Lee Shrigley, who was a bookkeeper and clerk in Maquoketa, Iowa. To this union was born a son, Eugene L. Mrs. Harriet Nims passed away in 1910, and on December 14, 1914, Mr. Nims was married to Josephine Sammon, a native of Maquoketa, Iowa. She has proved up a homestead near Ekalaka.

Eugene L. Nims was born May 21, 1890, grew up with his father on the Iowa farm and was educated in the public schools of Iowa. Coming to Montana, he became identified with his father in the ranch work and has been his capable assistant ever since. In October, 1917, he volunteered for service in the recent war and was assigned to Company F, Fourth Battalion, Twentieth Engineers, with which he trained at Washington, D. C. He was sent overseas in January, 1918, and served in France. He was in the forestry engineers, which was engaged in manufacturing commodities for the army. He gave faithful service and returned home on June 7, 1919.

Such, in brief, has been the record of William P. Nims, than whom a more whole-souled or popular man it would be hard to find within the borders of Carter County, where he has labored not only for his own individual advancement but also for the improvement of the entire community whose interests he has ever had at heart.

Silas C. Dishno has been in Montana and other sections of the Northwest for forty years, and has filled in his time with a varied experience, though chiefly at ranching. He owns one of the finest ranches and is one of the leading producers of pure bred horses and cattle in the vicinity of Dillon.

Mr. Dishno was born at Whalensburg, Essex County, New York, January 6, 1858. His paternal ancestors were French and were colonial settlers in the Province of Ontario, Canada. His father, Charles Dishno, was born in St. Mary's, Ontario, in 1831, but in 1838 his parents settled in Essex County, New York. He was reared and married there and in early life took up timber and logging contracting. In 1866 he transferred his headquarters to Marquette, Michigan, and was a timber contractor in the northern districts of Michigan for over ten years. In May, 1879, he arrived at Bannack, Montana, and became a contractor for timber for the manufacture of charcoal on Rattle Snake Creek as an employe of Smith Ball, while in the winters he did logging for Mel Trask and Graves for four years. For two years he was proprietor of a hotel at Spring Mountain, Idaho, and then engaged in ranching on the head of the Lemhi in Idaho. He remained in that locality ten years, and later transferred his ranching headquarters to the Big Hole Basin in Montana, and died at Jackson in that community on September 15, 1906. He was a democrat and a member of the Catholic Church. Charles Dishno married September 17, 1856, Rosella Little, who was born in Vermont in 1842 and is now living with her son Silas, the oldest of her children. Eliza, the second in age, died at Spring Mountain, Idaho, being killed by a snow slide on December 23, 1883. She married Rock Vezina and he is now living at Leadore, Idaho. Julia died at Hancock, Michigan, in 1914, wife of Andrew Yell, also deceased. Mr. Yell was a contractor and builder and had the contract for the hardwood finish in the First National Bank Building at Dillon. Minnie, the fourth of the children, is the wife of Michael Proulx, a miner at Leadore, Idaho.

Silas C. Dishro

Silas C. Dishno was educated in the public schools of Champion, Michigan, but at the age of fourteen began working in the woods with his father and later in the mines of Northern Michigan. He was twenty-one years of age when he came to Montana in 1879 and for four years was associated with his father in the contracting business on Rattle Snake Creek. He worked in the mines around Bannack one year, spent two years in the mines of Spring Mountain, Idaho, and a year and a half in the smelters at Anaconda. For two years he was also in the mines where the present town of Gilmore, Idaho, now stands. Mr. Dishno began his career as a cattle rancher in Idaho, but in July, 1895, came to the Big Hole Basin of Montana, and has been one of the chief factors among the agriculturists and stockmen of that community for a quarter of a century. He owns 4,000 acres in a ranch which is located eight miles south of Wisdom. He has water on all his agricultural land, and the property is an extremely valuable one. Mr. Dishno has acquired a herd of well bred Shorthorn cattle, pure bred horses and also raises many cattle for beef. He is president of the Dishno Livestock Company and makes his home in the city of Dillon, having a modern residence at 407 South Railroad Avenue. Mr. Dishno is a Catholic, a democrat, and is affiliated with the Jackson Camp Modern Woodmen of America, and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. At Champion, Michigan, in December, 1881, he married Miss Melinda Rhino. Her father, John Rhino, was born in Canada in 1826, spent most of his active life in railroad service, and died at Champion, Michigan, in 1907. Her mother was Phoebe Burke, a native of Canada, who died at Champion, Michigan. Mr. and Mrs. Dishno have four children: Alfred C., a partner in the Dishno Livestock Company and associated with his father in business, with home at Big Hole; Edward, also a resident of Big Hole, and individual owner of a fine ranch of 640 acres of irrigated land; Minnie, wife of George Webber, a sheep man at Dillon; and Laura, wife of Charles F. Bland, a rancher at Big Hole.

Simon C. Faaborg, the cashier of the Security State Bank of Medicine Lake, was born at Clinton, Clinton County, Iowa, December 6, 1885. His father, Jens S. Faaborg, born in Denmark, acquired a liberal education in his native land, taught school there, and when he came to the United States, still a young man, he obtained work in a store in Delmar, Clinton County, as a clerk. Gradually he accumulated sufficient capital with which to engage in business, and his commercial life covered a period of about thirty-five years, and he has since retired. For twelve years he was a member of the Board of Education of Clinton, and in politics he is a democrat, while for a quarter of a century he has been a member of the Danish Lutheran Church of America and its treasurer.

Jens S. Faaborg was married at Clinton, Iowa, to Miss Marie Beuckel, who was also born in Denmark, and she came to the United States in young womanhood. Three sons and three daughters were born to Mr. and Mrs. Faaborg: Simon C., whose home is at Medicine Lake; Carl T., a merchant at Kimballton, Iowa; Dorothy, the wife of Carl E. Carlson, also of Kimballton, Iowa; Dagmar, wife of George Jorgensen, of Griswold, Iowa; Viggo and Thyra, both of whom are living at Clinton.

The boyhood days of Simon C. Faaborg were passed in his native town of Clinton, in the meantime securing his education in its public schools, and at the age of sixteen he obtained his first business experience as a clerk in his father's store. He remained in his father's employ until the age of twenty-three, when he went with the Peoples Trust & Savings Bank of Clinton, starting with the institution as a messenger and rising gradually in the scale of advancement until he was in charge of the collection department of that bank.

In September, 1912, Mr. Faaborg left his Iowa home and made his way to Medicine Lake, Montana, and his first connection with the business interests of this community was in the organization of the Farmers State Bank of Medicine Lake, in which he was associated with Adam Hannah of Minneapolis. The bank was organized with a capital of twenty thousand dollars, and Mr. Hannah became its first president and Mr. Faaborg its first cashier. It opened its doors to the general public in December, 1912, and Mr. Faaborg remained with it until July, 1915, when he disposed of his interest and went with the Security State Bank as its cashier, succeeding in that office George L. Ryerson. From that time to the present Mr. Faaborg has continued in the active management of the bank with the exception of the time he spent in the army.

The Security State Bank was organized in 1909 by D. Ray Gregg of Sherwood, North Dakota, George L. Ryerson of Mohall, North Dakota, and J. W. Schnitzler of Froid, Montana. It was organized first as a private banking institution with a capital of $8,000, and was known as the Bank of Medicine Lake. It was chartered as the Security State Bank in June, 1911, the parent bank having been opened at old Medicine Lake. The capital stock at the time the charter was received was increased to $20,000, and the officers at the present time are D. Ray Gregg, president, J. W. Schnitzler, vice president, Simon C. Faaborg, cashier, and John S. Gregg, assistant cashier.

During the World war Mr. Faaborg volunteered for service enlisting on April 27, 1918, in the medical department, and was assigned to the air service at March Aviation Field, Riverside, California. He was made a sergeant in the medical department in the air service division, and was at the March Field at the time of the signing of the armistice. He was discharged at Camp Lewis, Washington, April 29, 1919, and returned to Medicine Lake early in the following May and resumed his position with the Security State Bank. In addition to his banking interests he is interested in and aided in the promotion of the Dagmar-Medicine Lake Telephone Company and in the Medicine Lake Milling Company.

Mr. Faaborg was married at Medora, North Dakota, October 11, 1919, to Miss Antoinette Olsen, a daughter of Andrew and Lucia (Skidmore) Olsen. The father was of Norwegian birth, and for many years was active in the business life of Canby, Minnesota, as a merchant. Mrs. Faaborg was one of the younger children of her parents and was born in Minnesota October 19, 1891. She is a graduate of the Home of Economics Department of the University of Minnesota, holds the degree of Bachelor of Science, and was previously a student in the University of Colorado. She taught home economics in the high school at Bemidji, Minnesota, for one year, and during the World war served for a year as county home demonstration agent in Sheridan County, Montana, also spending a year in the same capacity in Missoula County of this state.

The Faaborg home politically contains a democrat and a republican. Mr. Faaborg cast his first presidential vote for Mr. Bryan in 1908, but Mrs. Faaborg has never exercised her right of franchise.

Grover E. Fulkerson. One of the solid banking institutions of this section of Montana is the Farmers State Bank of Medicine Lake, of which Grover E. Fulkerson is the cashier. He came to the Town of Medicine Lake in July, 1915, beginning at once his present connections with the bank, and he occupies a leading place among the business men of the county.

Mr. Fulkerson was born in Ramsey County, North Dakota, near Church's Ferry, December 11, 1889. His father was a homesteader there, and lost his life in the memorable Thanksgiving blizzard of 1896. He had taken a claim near Leads, and had erected a one-room box house for his family. On that fatal November day he went to Turtle Mountain after wood. His team consisted of a pony and an old horse, and before reaching his home he was overtaken by one of North Dakota's terrible blizzards, and was found dead only a mile and a half from his home. The remainder of the family, the mother and four little boys, were snowed in for three days, the duration of the storm. They were exceedingly poor and without proper clothing for the children or sufficient food. The mother took the children and the two dogs to bed to keep from freezing, and after a time the little cabin became so filled with snow that the bed alone was discernible. The mother had managed to bake a course cake on top of the stove during the first day of the storm, which lasted them until on the third day the neighbors came and rescued them. The old horse driven by the father had managed to get loose from the wagon, and was found at a neighbor's hay stack, a fact which had perhaps something to do with the family's rescue, indicating as it did that something had happened at the Fulkerson home.

So suddenly left a widow and under such sad circumstances, Mrs. Fulkerson faced a serious problem. The son Grover, the eldest child, was then six years old, but the mother succeeded in keeping the family together. When Grover was fifteen years of age they left the farm and went to Canada, locating near Canora, where the mother filed on a homestead and braved the hardships of a winter there in order to acquire title to her land. She passed away there in 1917, after seeing all her children reach years of maturity and take their places among the world's workers.

The husband and father of this unfortunate family was John W. Fulkerson, a native of Illinois and a son of a Civil war veteran, Jacob W. Fulkerson. This veteran soldier was a pioneer into North Dakota, a homesteader at Church's Ferry, and he died there in 1915. Jacob W. Fulkerson married Lucinda Gill, and John W. and Walter A. were the children born of the union.

John W. Fulkerson acquired but a limited educational training. He was born on a farm, and gave his life to that calling. He married Sophia Nelson, who was born in Wisconsin and whose father was a native of Norway. Two of his three children are yet living, Andrew P. Nelson, a resident of Church's Ferry, North Dakota, and Mrs. Jack Verhei, whose home is in Spokane, Washington. Mrs. Fulkerson also received a limited educational training, and she grew up in a home where work was the program of the day. Four sons were born to Mr. and Mrs. Fulkerson: Grover E., the Medicine Lake banker; Palmer, who was drowned near Canora, Canada, when eighteen years of age; Jacob W., of Glenaven, Saskatchewan, Canada; and Alvin M., a barber at Grenora, North Dakota.

During his early boyhood days Grover E. Fulkerson attended school intermittantly, attended for two terms the public schools of York, North Dakota, and completed his training in the commercial college at Grand Forks. He had made his own way through school, earning the necessary funds by doing chores for his board and at other occupations, and when he attacked the problem of real business it was as a merchant's clerk with Charley Studness at Church's Ferry. After acquiring some experience there he was made manager of a general store at Newville, North Dakota, and while at that point he studied embalming and passed the State Board examination of North Dakota and did the funeral work of the business at Newville. After coming to Montana he secured a license as an embalmer, but has done little at his profession since coming to Medicine Lake. On leaving the store at Newville he entered the bank at Calio and entered upon a career which has resulted in his connection with one of the substantial banking houses of Sheridan County. From the Farmers and Merchants Bank at Calio, North Dakota, which he served as assistant cashier, he went to the First National Bank at Hampden, North Dakota, and from there to the Hannah Bank at Halliday, North Dakota, where he spent two years and was the assistant cashier, coming from there to Montana.

The Farmers State Bank of Medicine Lake was organized in 1912, and is one of the Adam Hannah line of banks. It opened as a chartered institution with a capital of $20,000, its first officers being Mr. Hannah, president, H. G. Anderson, vice president, and Simon Faaborg, cashier. The same president still serves the house, but Mrs. P. B. Fulkerson is the vice president, Mr. Fulkerson is the cashier and S. O. Swenson is the assistant cashier. The bank deposits when Mr. Fulkerson assumed his office amounted to $37,000, while in 1919 they rose above $200,000, the average deposits at the close of the year was $185,000, and the surplus of the bank is $2,800.

The Fulkerson home was constructed by its owner. It is a full basement of the modern bungalow style, its six rooms are heated by a furnace, and the house is modern in all its appointments. Mr. Fulkerson was married at Egland, North Dakota, January 15, 1913, to Miss Pearl Borgenson, who was born at Faribault, Minnesota, in March, 1894, one of the six daughters of John M. Borgerson, a farmer and merchant. Three children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Fulkerson, John Eugene, Marjorie and Clinton.

Mr. Fulkerson affiliates with the democratic party in national affairs, casting his first presidential vote for Mr. Wilson, also his second, and he has served for several years as a member of the Medicine Lake Council. He is a member of the Odd Fellows fraternity, holding his membership in Medicine Lake Lodge No. 108.

Harmon H. Floyd, of Carter County, is one of the most extensive ranchmen of Southeastern Montana, and he has been identified with the life and interests of this commonwealth since August 26, 1884. When he arrived within its borders he was a young man in the employ of the Continental Land & Cattle Company, better known as the Hash Knife Company, and he went into camp with the advance guard of the outfit along the Little Missouri River, at the mouth of the Box Elder. There the camp remained until the spring of 1885, when the headquarters were moved to a point twenty miles above on that stream and was located there during the remainder of the time the company was engaged in business in Montana.

Mr. Floyd, however, is a native son of the Southwest, born in Parker County, Texas, in March, 1864.

His father, John Floyd, had established his home in the Lone Star State the year his son Harmon was born, going there from Fayetteville, Tennessee. He had previously served the Confederacy from the outbreak of the rebellion until he started for Texas, and in that state he became a farmer. He had learned the tanner's trade in his native state of Tennesseee, but abandoned that calling after he had lost his capital trying to follow it. His political activity was with the democratic party, and for some years after locating in Texas he served as the sheriff of Parker County. When the Floyd family took up their residence in that state the region in which they settled was overrun with hostile Indians. During the late '60s and early '70s bands of the hostile red skins roamed the prairies and killed unprotected settlers, men and women, and held a reign of terror for years. At the warning sound of Indian approach the settlers bunched themselves together, barricaded doors and windows, and made ready to sell their lives as dearly as possible. As a child the son Harmon distinctly remembers of running with his relatives to places of supposed safety when Indian scares were announced, and while many of the settlers' children were made captives and carried off by the Comanches, none of the Floyd family fortunately met that fate.

John Floyd married Aramantha Cole, who was born in Tennessee, a daughter of Jack Cole, a Tennessee farmer and slaveholder, as Mr. Floyd had also been in that state. They became the parents of the following children: Jack, whose home is in Amarillo, Texas; Addie, who married Jack Oxford and died at Weatherford, Texas; William, who died at Amarillo; Pink, whose death occurred at Santa Ana, Texas, after becoming the wife of Moses Waters; James, whose home is in Clovis, New Mexico; Frank, of Amarillo; Harmon, the Montana ranchman; and Brice, of Tucumcari, New Mexico. The family subsequently removed to Amarillo, Texas, where the father passed away at the age of eighty-four years and the mother when eighty-seven.

Harmon H. Floyd during his early youth received a most limited educational training, but he learned to read and write, and the knowledge which he added to this scant training as the years have come and gone has enabled him to cope with the incidents and problems which have confronted him in his business life. He left the parental home during the fall before his fiftieth birthday and worked on ranches until he was eighteen, and then became identified with a cattle outfit for the first time. It was from his native state of Texas that he started for Montana, accompanying the pioneer herd of the Continental Land and Cattle Company as cook for the Jo Carr outfit of fifteen men. The herd started from Seymour, Texas, crossed the Red River at Doan's store and followed the old trail through the Indian Territory, passed through Kansas and through its historic old cattle town of Dodge City on to Ogalalla, Nebraska, where it crossed the North Platte River, and went up that stream to Sidney Bridge, crossing into South Dakota near Edgemont, and passed east of the Black Hills to Rapid City. This trip of more than 1,000 miles consumed the time from May to August, and was performed without particular incident save an Indian holdup, when the red skins took some cattle from the herd at the point of guns as they were passing through Indian Territory.

Mr. Floyd had been in the employ of the Continental Land and Cattle Company for several years before starting on this journey, under the famed Tom Irby of Western Texas, and he continued with the company as long as they were identified with Montana. It was during a period of almost twenty years that he drew wages from them, and during that time he trailed cattle from Texas for them on two occasions. On leaving their employ he went with the "W" outfit on the head waters of East Fork, and after a year with that company he married and engaged in business for himself. In looking back over his career as an employe on ranches it is curious to note that he saved practically nothing from his earnings. Five hundred dollars would have covered all of value he possessed when he married, and it seemed to his friends and acquaintances useless and hopeless for him to entertain the thought of taking up the stock business for himself. However, he purchased stock of his father-in-law with $1,600 borrowed from the Butte County Bank at Belle Fourche and embarked on his business career. He chose the Government Reserve along the Little Missouri as his ranging place, and when he saw the necessity of owning land he bought two tracts adjoining the reserve, purchasing on credit, and as soon as the lands opened for settlement he filed on his homestead and desert claim, and upon his homestead he established his headquarters and erected his improvements.

In making his pioneer preparations for a home Mr. Floyd erected a two-room log house, which is now serving as the ranch bunkhouse. In 1913 a modern frame nine-room house was built, and his first accommodations for his stock were succeeded by his present extensive barn, one of the most substantial and attractive along the old Camp Cook trail. In time his acreage also began to enlarge by the purchase of patented lands, and notwithstanding the fact that it was openly predicted by his friends he would never succeed in his enterprise he now owns a ranch of 1,600 acres and is recognized as one of the largest stock dealers of his section of the state.

Mr. Floyd chose as his cow brand the "TJ-TJO" on the right side, and has continued this brand since the beginning of his venture in 1902. His initial herd was graded stock of the White Face strain, and he has kept them bred up to the highest quality by the purchase of blooded and registered sires, and it is probably due to this fact that the record for the highest price paid for grass cattle has come to him at the Omaha markets. His ranch has handled from 2 to 500 head of cattle, and he has followed the plan of holding his steers until three years old and then selling them.

As a farmer he has simply encouraged the growing of grass. The food value of Montana grass became known to him early in his experience in the business of preparing range cattle for the market and convinced him that the grass grown on Montana soil exceeds any like feed in food value grown anywhere else, and it puts weight into a steer that nothing else but the close feeding of the corn states can equal.

Mr. Floyd was married on the Little Missouri River, then a part of Custer County, although the ceremony was actually performed in Belle Fourche. The wedding occurred March 25, 1900, when Miss Kittie Belle Johnstone became his wife. She was born in the Black Hills at Central City, South Dakota, February 27, 1880, one in a family of two sons and four daughters to reach years of maturity. Her father was John Johnstone, a brother of Thomas Johnstone, whose history appears elsewhere in this work. Five children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Floyd, but the first born, John Harmon, died in infancy. The four surviving are Flora, Gifford, Margaret and Lois.

In his political affiliations Mr. Floyd is a democrat on national issues. He has served the district of Five Mile as a member of its school board almost since the beginning of his settlement here. His fraternal connections are with the Odd Fellows order, with which he united more than a quarter of a century ago, and with the Modern Woodmen of America.

Ernest W. Thomas, of Miles City, is a well known stock man and rancher identified with Prairie County's interests. He came to Montana in April, 1893, then a youth of twenty years, riding and bringing an extra saddle horse from Moorecroft, Wyoming. He had previously been a cowboy in that region for three years, working for the One Hundred and One ranch on the Belle Fourche and for other smaller concerns. He had still previous to this time spent a period with the Flying V ranch in South Dakota on the Morrow River, and therefore he brought with him to his last and final home a valuable experience as a westerner and ranch hand.

After arriving in the Tongue River country Mr. Thomas' first work was with Peter Wiley, a Scotchman who had a sheep ranch on what is now the Cheyenne Reservation at the mouth of Logging Creek, and he remained on that ranch one season. Going then to Miles City, on the 4th of July, 1893, he hired to Freeman Philbrick on the Rosebud, one of the most successful sheep men of the country. During a period of five years Mr. Thomas remained with him on the ranch, herding sheep, tending camp, and in fact doing everything to be done about a sheep camp. His wages had been from $30 to $40 a month, and his economy during all that time enabled him to save his earnings, and at the expiration of the five years he had created a capital of $2,000.

Being then ready to embark in business for himself Mr. Thomas joined Newell G. Philbrick, a brother of his former employer, and the two partners started their venture with about 1,800 yearling ewes. They established their ranch on the Rosebud, at what is now the Newell Philbrick ranch, and remained together for five years, when they dissolved the partnership and divided their 8,000 sheep, Mr. Thomas taking his bunch to Sheep Mountain, where his cattle ranch is now located. He continued the sheep industry until 1917, when the encroachment of settlers so threatened his range that he sold his band and turned his attention to the raising of cattle.

Mr. Thomas started his ranching enterprise on the public domain near Sheep Mountains, and for years following had access to a wide scope of territory. But seeing that he would eventually have to own title to land for pasture or go out of the business entirely he began buying land and with the passing years has developed a ranch of 10,000 acres, divided into two ranches, each having a set of improvements. His farming has constituted the growing of feed crops for his stock. His first shelter on his ranch was his sheep wagon, but later a log cabin was built, and in both he led a bachelor's life. Since then frame houses have succeeded the cabin, barns have been erected, and his are now among the best ranch improvements in that region of the state.

Mr. Thomas embarked in the cattle business as a breeder of Herefords under the brand "U-L," starting the industry in 1914, and has since developed a herd of 2,000 head. He belonged to the Montana Stock Growers Association for years before he entered the cattle business, and has rendered valuable service to this association as a member of committees. He has also extended his business interests beyond his ranching and is a stockholder in the Miles City National Bank, having also formerly served that institution as a director. He began his political activities as a citizen in Montana, for he reached his majority here, and he cast his first presidential vote for Major McKinley in 1896. His voting has constituted his active part in politics. In his fraternal affiliations he is both a Modern Woodman and an Elk.

Ernest W. Thomas is a native son of Iowa, born in Monona County, December 28, 1872. His parents were farming people and tenant ones, but capable of providing well for their children. The country school training which Ernest W. received was supplemented by one term of graded school work, and at the early age of seventeen he left home and began life for himself, thereafter also occasionally contributing some of his earnings to his sisters. Their father had died when Ernest was but fourteen years old, and his mother passed away some few years later. He was a son of Henry Thomas and a grandson of Benjamin Thomas. The last named was a farmer, and his children comprised his son Henry and two daughters, Mrs. Lenora Erskine and Mrs. Depew. Henry Thomas went from Ohio to Iowa, and was married there to Harriet Reynolds, a daughter of Patrick Reynolds, who came to the United States from the North of Ireland and spent the remainder of his life as a farmer and homesteader in Iowa. Henry Thomas was a Civil war soldier, and because of wounds received in service afterward drew a pension. He volunteered from Ohio at the age of seventeen, and at the expiration of his term re-enlisted and received his wounds at the battle of the Wilderness. He died in 1886, and his wife passed away in Woodbury County, Iowa, in 1894. Their children were: Ernest W., Cora, who is married and living in the Black Hills, Mrs. Edith Twining, of Custer County, and Myrtle, wife of Newell G. Philbrick, of Rosebud County.

Ernest W. Thomas was married at Miles City, Montana, December 15, 1906, to Miss Laura Sorenson, a daughter of one of the first settlers of this region, N. P. Sorenson, a blacksmith and in the early days of Montana a buffalo hunter. He married Eliza L. Herrington, and Mrs. Thomas was the fourth born of their seven children. Two children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Thomas, Bruce and Lillie Ernestine.

Peter Thompson. One of the most interesting characters in Carter County is found in the person of Peter Thompson, who for forty years and more has been prominently identified with the interests of Montana. Although he has not been a continuous resident of the commonwealth since his first advent to it he has been a conspicuous citizen of it since 1890. He came into what was then the Territory of Montana in 1876 as a soldier. The year previously, on the 21st of September, he had joined the Regulars at Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. The command under General Custer started from Fort A. Lincoln, three miles above Bismarck, to return Sitting Bull and his followers to the reservation which they had left. The Indians claimed all of Eastern Montana, but the Sioux tribe encroached upon all this country, confining by force the Crows upon a small strip of country bounded practically by the limits of their present reservation. The Black Foot, the Arapajo and other bands of Indians joined Sitting Bull in his war on the settlers, few as they were, and the Seventh Cavalry under the command of Custer met them first fifteen miles above the mouth of the Little Big Horn River

June 25, 1876, and three hours after the fight began the five companies of General Custer were annihilated.

Mr. Thompson was a member of Company C of that little army, and survived the terrible massacre owing to the fact that he had been unable to keep up with the command, being on foot and in company with James Watson. Their horses had given out, and the two soldiers followed the army as fast as they could, but were outdistanced and suddenly found themselves in the Indian village. They were driven from there and joined General Reno's command nearby. General Reno marched within three miles of the battlefield where Custer was surrounded, but taking in the situation he ordered a retreat after fifteen minutes' stand. For participation in this battle of the Little Big Horn Congress ordered a medal struck for the surviving men of the Custer command, and the one in Mr. Thompson's possession reads: "The Congress to private Peter Thompson, Co. C, Seventh Cav., Little Big Horn, June 25 and 26, 1876." On the back of his discharge papers is this endorsement: "This soldier participated in the battle of the Little Big Horn June 25 and 26 and was given a medal of honor for conspicuous bravery in said battle."

Mr. Thompson was discharged from the army at Fort Meade in 1890, after five years of active service, and he entered civil life as a quartz mill employe in the Home Stake Mills of Lead, South Dakota. He remained there for eighteen years, being the amalgamator of the mill, and then came into old Custer County and engaged in ranching on the Little Missouri. He entered land from the public domain and was enrolled among the first settlers of the region. He brought with him to the state two car loads of stock horses and engaged in horse raising, continuing this as a business until 1917, when he sold his band of horses and turned his attention to the sheep industry, which still claims his time in a small way. He has in the meantime suffered the adversities of the sheep industry as well as having enjoyed some of the prosperity of recent years. Mr. Thompson patented a homestead and tree claim and purchased some of the Northern Pacific Railroad lands, and these tracts, supplemented by entries made by Mrs. Thompson and purchases made of lands already proved, make the boundaries of the Thompson ranch to contain some 1,400 acres. His improvements include his home and his conspicuous barn, and his ranch is all fenced and cross fenced. His success at farming has been marked by failures as well as good crops, but more of the former perhaps than of the latter.

Peter Thompson had lived in three different counties, Custer, Fallon and Carter, without moving his residence. His interest in community matters has been that of a private citizen, he having rendered public service only when a member of the Nine Mile School Board. He was greatly interested in the erection of a good building for school purposes, but refused to permit his name to be applied to it, insisting that it be called after Nine Mile Creek running close by.

Mr. Thompson is a native son of Fifeshire, Scotland, born at the ancestral town of Markinch, December 28, 1853, a son of John F. and Agnes (Craig) Thompson, Peter being their second child. The other surviving members of the family are Arthur and Thomas, of Southern California, and Agnes Thompson, of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. Peter Thompson spent his boyhood and young manhood on the home farm, and remained in school until sixteen years of age. In 1865 the family left Scotland for the United States, sailing from Greenwich, England, for New York aboard the ship Columbus, and the first settlement was made at Temperance, Pennsylvania, in the vicinity of which the family lived on a farm until the son Peter reached manhood's estate. Soon after attaining his majority he enlisted in the army.

In Belle Fourche, South Dakota, September 21, 1904, Mr. Thompson married Ruth Bouicourt, who was born in Warren County, Missouri, April 14, 1874, a daughter of James and Eliza (Spear) Bouicourt, and is of French extraction on the paternal side. Of her parents' thirteen children ten are still living. Three children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Thompson, Susie, Celeste and Peter, Jr.

In his political affiliations Peter Thompson has always upheld republican principles where national issues are involved. He has been a Mason during a period of almost forty years.

NEWELL G. PHILBRICK is extensively engaged in ranching on the Rosebud, in the vicinity of Forsyth, but his industrial interests in Montana extend beyond his ranch to include banking, manufacturing and other lines. He came into Montana in 1891 and began his career in what was then Custer County, locating on the Rosebud in the community where he has ever since remained. He had at that time just passed his majority and had been engaged in farming in his far eastern home in Maine. He brought with him into the Northwest a cash capital to the amount of about $7,000 with which to engage in the sheep business, but during the few years which followed his first venture into the sheep industry he lost his entire capital owing to the tariff policy of the national administration at that time, for the price of wool went too low for a profit and sheep were almost worthless.

Thus reduced in capital Mr. Philbrick became a wage earner, but soon afterward, with the aid of financial backing, purchased 500 lambs and 2,100 yearling ewes and again entered the sheep industry. At this time the tariff had been restored on wool, owing to a new administration having come into power, and instead of the former 8 and 10 cents a pound the price of wool rose to 18 and 20 cents. With this advance in price Mr. Philbrick built up rapidly and came to own and run 10,000 head of sheep. He took in as a partner Ernest Thomas, and they remained together in the business during a period of five years and followed their ranching on the Rosebud. With the separation of this partnership Mr. Philbrick continued the business alone, and at the present time is running both sheep and cattle. As a cattle man he has added to his ranch industry very materially during the past five years, and now runs some 200 head of cattle under the brand "NP."

Mr. Philbrick entered his homestead on the Rosebud and occupied it until he proved up and made the necessary improvements to shelter himself and his sheep. His pioneer home and bachelor's headquarters was a mere dugout, a one-room affair with a cellar behind it in which to store his vegetables, the connection between the cellar and room having been a small hole through which he had to crawl. Leaving there he came to his present home, which he had purchased when he first came to the state, and here he has spent twenty of the best and most profitable years of his life. In the meantime he has added many thousand acres to the original tract, and now has two miles of the Rosebud within his domain. His ranch is practically all fenced, all his own building, and as a farmer he raises principally alfalfa hay, while some years have also given him good grain crops. His present home was erected in 1902, a two-story residence of ten rooms, equipped with both water and lighting systems.

While ranching has proved perhaps Mr. Philbrick's chief business in Montana other large industrial interests have also claimed a part of his time and attention. He is a director of the Rosebud State Bank and has also served that institution as its vice president, and he is a stockholder in the Billings Packing Plant, the Montana Life Insurance Company and the Security Bridge Company, all Montana industries. His connection with the political life of his county and state extends only to his voting privilege, which he began back in his native state of Maine as a republican, and the principles of that party have always received his support. He joined the Odd Fellows fraternity many years ago in Maine, but he is not now connected with any fraternal organization.

It was in Somerset County, Maine, that Newell G. Philbrick had his nativity, born June 10, 1869, and he remained with his mother until he left the state, gaining in the meantime a country school education in Aroostook County. He is a son of Freeman and Frances (Merrill) Philbrick, and a brother of Freeman Philbrick, who was the pioneer of the family in Montana.

Newell Philbrick has lived in Rosebud County since its organization, and here on the 21st of April, 1902, he was married to Miss Myrtle Thomas, a sister of his former business partner, Ernest Thomas. Mrs. Philbrick was born in Iowa in 1881. Two children have been born to bless their union, Verdie and Daisy.

ARTHUR CUNNINGHAM, of Miles City, has spent many years of his life in Montana and the Yellowstone Valley, but he is a native son of Ireland, of County Downe, and was born on a little farm at Kilkeel in the Parish of Morne March 18, 1854. Although during his lifetime he has gained a splendid education, this training was not received in a school room, but instead in the school of experience, which has been his constant teacher. As he was reared on a farm he became an expert in flail threshing grain, and he labored in the fields from his early boyhood days.

George Cunningham, his father, spent his life as a small farmer, he was born and died on a farm. He was an industrious man, satisfied merely to rear and provide for his family. He was perhaps of the fifth generation to occupy the place where he spent his life's activities. He married Ellen Rogers, a daughter of Thomas Rogers, likewise of an old family of that county, and of their eight children Arthur was the first born and one of the three to seek a home in America. His brother James resides in Bellingham, Washington, and his sister is Mrs. Ellen O'Connell, of Seattle, Washington.

It was in 1872 that Arthur Cunningham came to the United States, making the journey on the Batavia of the Cunard line. Making his way at once to Detroit, Michigan, he secured work at loading a vessel with lumber, and later went into the Lake Superior region of Marquette County and was employed in a saw mill there and in Clarksburg. In the winter months he secured work in the blast furnace for the Michigan Iron Company, and after that firm ceased their operations he worked for two other similar concerns until they too ceased operations. It was then that he started for the far West, reaching the Carson Valley of Nevada in 1875. He located in Douglas County, a valley of ranches, on one of which he secured work during the first summer. Going on then to Virginia City, he found work in a pan mill and spent three years at that occupation, in the meantime having accumulated some capital by saving his wages, and when he left that state he went on to California. At San Francisco Mr. Cunningham engaged in steamboating as a hand and truck man on board a boat plying the San Joaquin River to Stockton. This vessel was the Old City of Stockton, and when he finally gave up boating he went into Placer County and resumed his trade of a pig iron maker in blast furnaces. He worked in the pioneer blast furnace for the making of pig iron in California, and he also began mining for himself, but in this venture he lost money. Mr. Cunningham was next a hay baler in Napa County during the harvesting season, and then leaving the Golden State he went to Puget Sound, Washington, to resume blast furnace work, and was sent by his company up to the mines at Georgian Bay to take charge of their mining proposition there, continuing with this blast furnace as long as it continued in operation and was then a longshoreman at San Francisco.

At the close of this period Mr. Cunningham had been away from his native Ireland eleven years, and returning home for a visit, he was married there and in the spring of 1886 came again to the United States with his wife and located in California. His first employment after his return was in the hay fields and threshing grain, and in the autumn he went into Washington and settled on a ranch in Klickitat County, there buying a few old ewes and engaging in the sheep business. Since the time of his settlement in Custer County in the fall of 1899 he has made the handling of sheep his chief business interest. He identified himself with the locality of Baker, where he purchased land, developed a ranch and improved railroad land, and also made some successful efforts toward grain raising. He has been in and out of the sheep business at various times, and finally disposed of his flocks in April, 1919. During the past ten years he has made his home in Miles City, and has contributed a good modern home to the residential section of North Custer Avenue.

In February, 1884, Mr. Cunningham was married to Mary Ann Rogers, a daughter of Arthur and Mary Rogers. Mrs. Cunningham died during their residence in Washington, and lies buried at Goldendale in Klickatat County. She became the mother of four children, namely: Mary Ellen, a sister in the convent; George P., engaged in the sheep business in Argentina, South America; Catherine R., wife of William Koth and the mother of two children; Miss Margaret, of Seattle, Washington. In Chicago, Illinois, July 27, 1897, Mr. Cunningham married Mary Ann O'Farrell, a daughter of Michael and Mary (Landers) O'Farrell. The father was born near Quebec, Canada, and was of Irish parentage. His mother before marriage was Catherine Murphy. Mrs. Cunningham was born in the Parish of St. Catherine, Port Neuf, Canada, December 5, 1863, the fourth in a family of twelve children and of whom the following survive: Patrick, of Brighton, Illinois; Mrs. Catherine McGoran, residing in a suburb of Chicago; Johanna, wife of Albert Davidson, also of Chicago; Michael, another Chicago resident; and Joseph and Margaret Anna, who also make their home in Chicago.

Four children were born to the union of Mr. and Mrs. Cunningham, but only three are living, Arthur, Jr., Thomas Michael and Charles Alphonse.

FRANCIS MARION LACY is one of the most extensive ranchmen of Rosebud County, and he has been a factor in the affairs of this region since 1893. He traces his descent to an old Virginia family, and his paternal grandfather moved from that commonwealth to Kentucky and established the family name there. They are of old colonial stock of Revolutionary history, and the great-grandfather of Francis M. Lacy was a soldier in General Marion's band of horsemen in the war for independence. The grandfather married a Miss Myers, and their children were Milton and Frank, twins, Jacob, George, John, Ewing, Matthew, Mrs. Minerva Brown, Mrs. Jane Duncan and Mrs. Marcel Whitman. Milton and Frank were both Mexican war soldiers under Colonel Doniphan. They marched across the Southwest with General Taylor's army, and were stationed at Taos, New Mexico. The son Ewing served in Morgan's cavalry in the Confederate service during the war between the North and South, and another son was a member of General Price's army in that conflict.

Milton Lacy, the father of Francis M., is believed to have been born in Missouri, and was there reared. In 1853 he crossed the plains country to Oregon. His emigrant train went up the Platte River and thence up the Sweetwater on its journey over the regular Oregon Trail, and in Portland Milton Lacy followed blacksmithing for a time. Later he became a Yamhill County farmer. During his stay in Portland he married Martha Edwards, whose parents went to Oregon from Kentucky. Mrs. Lacy was born near Boonsboro, Kentucky, in 1833 and she is one of the numerous heirs to the Edwards estate in New York City which has been in litigation for generations. In 1871 Mr. and Mrs. Milton Lacy moved from Oregon to Texas but in 1884 returned north as far as Nebraska where Mr. Lacy homesteaded on Platte River in Scotts Bluff County. There he developed his home and farm and spent the remainder of his active life. He is still survived by his widow who continues to reside at the home in Nebraska.

The Lacy home was blessed by the birth of twelve children and all of this large family grew to years of maturity namely: John, whose home is at Scotts Bluff, Nebraska; George, who died in 1919, at Scotts Bluff; Mary, the wife of Fred Wrige, also a resident of that Nebraska town; Sterling, of Scotts Bluff; Thomas, who is a farmer near Torrington, Wyoming; Francis M., of Birney, Montana; Benjamin, of Scotts Bluff, Nebraska; Charles, a resident of Torrington, Wyoming; Dora, the wife of Billy Reeves, of Scotts Bluff; Dollie, who married James Ricely, of Fort Morgan, Colorado; Dessie, who is now Mrs. Reuben Bates and a resident of Scotts Bluff; Wilamette is the wife of Orville Dugger, of Bridgeport, Nebraska.

Francis M. Lacy was born in Zamhill County, Oregon, June 12, 1867, and was but four years old when taken by his parents to the Lone Star State and was a lad of seventeen when the family home was established in Nebraska. He was reared in both Burnett and Williamson counties, Texas, acquiring in the meantime a country school education, for his father was a farmer and he was reared as a farmer boy. When seventeen he began working on the range, and after going to Nebraska was employed by the Ogalla Cattle Company along the Platte River to the Wyoming line. After leaving the employ of that company he went further up the river to old Fort Laramie and secured employment with the Pratt and Ferris Company and later was with the Converse Cattle Company, both well known outfits of that region.

After coming to Montana in 1893 Mr. Lacy began work with the "UX" Company, belonging to the Pratt and Ferris Company, and was also in the employ of John Kendrick, now a United States senator from Wyoming. A period of fourteen years was spent with Mr. Kendrick, and during that time Mr. Lacy began collecting a bunch of cattle for himself, adding to the herd as rapidly as he could acquire the capital to do so. When he had accumulated twenty-five head he engaged in ranching for himself, securing what is now his homestead in 1894. He entered the tract as soon as it was opened for settlement, spending the winters at the ranch and during the summer months was employed by others in order to sustain himself while reaching a condition of independence. His last work for wages was as a cowboy for Capt. Joseph Brown, of the Three Circle ranch, in 1902.

The pioneer home of Mr. Lacy was a log cabin, where he lived a bachelor's life and which continued as his abiding place until the erection of his present modern five-room ranch house. The pioneer log cabin, however, is still doing duty and is now used as a chicken house.

Mr. Lacy began his cattle industry with the "X-A" brand, but changed later to the "H-2," and he continued to operate under the latter brand until 1919, when he sold it and also all of the cattle thus branded. Since then his brand has been the "campstool" on the left ribs. With the passing years he has added several tracts to his original holding, and is now the owner of more than a section of land lying along the Hangingwoman in Rosebud County. He has developed an alfalfa farm as well as a stock ranch, and his efforts at farming have followed along irrigation lines, he having recently built a system of ditches which irrigate nearly all his valley lands.

Mr. Lacy's interest in political matters has extended only to his voting privilege. He gives his support to the democratic party where national issues are concerned, but locally casts an independent ballot. During almost a quarter of a century he has been a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, affiliating with the lodge at Sheridan, and he is also a member of the Elks fraternity at that place.

Capt. Joseph Taliaferro Brown. The late Capt. Joseph Taliaferro Brown, a ranchman and widely known settler on the Tongue River in the community of Birney, came to Montana in the fall of 1886. He selected as his location the grassy and uneven country along the Tongue River, and this was the destination for his herd of cattle of 1,000 head which he had driven from the Indian Territory. He had started with them early in the year, having grazed them across Kansas, Nebraska and Wyoming, and he alone of the men making up the party remained as a fixture in Nebraska.

Captain Brown's homestead had been selected the summer before he came by his brother, and a pioneer home was built in which the family spent sixteen years. The homestead which he proved up is a part of the family estate and for twenty-two years Captain Brown was an active beef producer along the Tongue River. He came to believe implicitly in his new home state, and was one of the very ardent and enthusiastic friends of the commonwealth. He developed one of the two most valuable ranches here, extending for twenty miles along the river, and the stock shipped from it annually to the markets of Chicago and Omaha formed a considerable part of that sent out of this region. His recorded brand was, and is still, the "Three Circles," one on the right hip and two on the right side, and his ranch is everywhere known as the Three Circle ranch.

Captain Brown as a farmer in Montana was not known. He believed little in the success of dry farming, it being too unreliable for assured profit, but, with irrigation, farming he felt could be made a success. He raised much alfalfa, which crop he demonstrated a success, and the dry farming feeds he planted were such as he needed for his ranch only.

As a citizen Captain Brown showed his interest in politics and was chosen a member of the Legislature from Custer County and served a term in the Lower House. He was a democrat in politics, but being rather quiet in manner was not amiably disposed toward public speaking. He was captain of a cowboy company of Rough Riders, which company formed a part of Colonel Grigsby's regiment during the Spanish-American war. Chickamauga Park, Georgia, was the rendezvous of the regiment, and there it was located when the war closed and his command returned home.

Captain Brown was formerly a Texas man and resided there for many years, having gone there as a young man of twenty-two. He became claim agent for the Texas and Pacific Railway Company and was stationed at Marshall, and following his plans to engage in the cattle business when he should become able he eventually found a friend of means who joined him in the enterprise and they associated themselves together as partners. The Three Circle cattle which this partner, John Wyeth, owned in the Indian Territory were gathered and driven by Captain Brown into Montana in 1886, as above noted, and that ranch established here.

Captain Brown was a native of Copiah County, Mississippi, born January 26, 1849. A college man, he graduated from the University of Virginia, and also from the Kentucky Military School, and at almost the close of the war between the states he entered the Confederate service as a member of General Forrest's command. He was a son of Hezekiah George David Brown, a sailor of Hazelhurst, Mississippi, whose ancestors first settled in Virginia and finally drifted south to Mississippi. Captain Brown's mother was Mary Peachey Taliaferro, and among her children were two sons, her surviving son being Edwin Rice Brown, of Deer Park, Dallas, Texas. Captain Brown was a member of the Masonic fraternity and of the Knights Templar, and held his membership at Miles City. In church matters he was a Methodist.

Captain Brown was married at Marshall, Texas, December 13, 1883, to Mary G. Humphreys, a daughter of Daniel and Catherine (Jefferies) Humphreys. She is a great-granddaughter of Ralph Humphreys, who went to Mississippi from Virginia and was an officer in the Colonial army during the war of the Revolution. His son George was Mrs. Brown's grandfather, and his life was passed at Port Gibson, Mississippi, as a planter. George Humphreys married Mary Cobourn and their son Daniel was Mrs. Brown's father. The Jefferies family were also Revolutionary patriots, Mrs. Brown's maternal grandmother's uncles, Isaac and Evan Shelby, being soldiers of the Revolution and later one was a governor of Tennessee and the other a governor of Kentucky. Mrs. Brown is the eldest of the four children of her parents, the others being: Nathaniel J., of Port Gibson, Mississippi, who spent the active years of his life on Tongue River in Montana; Daniel P., who spent his life at Eagle Ford, Texas; and George Wilson, of Leesdale, Mississippi, whither he retired after giving his active years to ranching on the Tongue River.

Captain Brown died October 26, 1908, and his remains were laid to rest in the cemetery at Miles City. He and Mrs. Brown were the parents of three children. Albert Gallatin, who was trained under his father to ranching, and educated in the Virginia Military School, and is now business manager of the Brown Cattle Company. He married Annie May Powell, and has two children, Josephine and Albert Gallatin, Jr. Joseph Taliaferro, who was educated in the Virginia Military School, is now manager of the stock department of the Brown Cattle Company. He married Wille B. Powell, a sister of Albert's wife, and a daughter of William Byrd Powell, of Utica, Mississippi. Natalie Humphreys is the wife of Gilbert Woodard, a ranchman near Birney, with one daughter, Mary Brown.

Captain Brown erected his final home on Tongue River behind the mountains adjacent to this stream, and it is of modern, roomy construction and proportions and of convenient arrangement. He possessed a liking for books and owned a library of no mean proportions. His fondness for history was proverbial, and, being a lawyer by profession, he appreciated to the full the literary efforts of able writers and speakers and was interested in all manner of questions coming before the body politic.

August Theade. Montana not only honors August Theade as one of her early farmer citizens but also as a loyal and true soldier of the Union when war was being waged between the North and South. He is of German birth and parentage. His father, Andrew Theade, a farmer, proved his loyalty to his adopted country when he gave two of his sons to the Union cause during the Civil war. He became a naturalized citizen, took part in governmental affairs as a voter, and was a staunch upholder of republican principles.

Andrew Theade married Mary Kramer, and they became the parents of a large family of children, namely: August, the Montana soldier citizen; Ernest, also a Civil war veteran and a resident of Redfield, North Dakota; Augusta, who became the wife of John Krause and died in Riley County, Kansas; William, a Wisconsin farmer; Louisa, who married Leonard Schlump, of Grant County, Wisconsin; Carrie, the wife of John Kurtz, of Grant County; and Edward, whose home is at Sand Point, Idaho. The father of this family died in Grant County, Wisconsin, and the mother survived him for about fifteen years.

August Theade was born near Berlin, Germany, November 15, 1840, and was but three years old when the family embarked for the United States and established a new home in Wisconsin. He grew to mature years on a farm, was early inured to the work of the fields, and gained but a limited educational training. From Grant County, Wisconsin, he subsequently went to Lancaster County, Nebraska, where he spent a brief two years, and then as a passenger on the old Northern Pacific made the journey into the new Northwest and to Montana, spending three years here before he brought in his family. He arrived in Custer County in March, 1882, and three years later, in 1885, he homesteaded on the Yellowstone River bottom, at the present site of Clearmont. With the passing years he improved and developed a good farm, and continued actively identified with its interests until 1917, when he disposed of the property and located upon the flat nearby. At this second location he resumed his extensive ranching and cattle interests, and aided materially in the development and upbuilding of the community.

Mr. Theade was a youth of twenty-one years when he enlisted at old Patch Grove in Grant County, Wisconsin, for service in the Civil war, becoming a member of Company C, Second Wisconsin Cavalry, under Captain Woods and Col. C. C. Washburn. The regiment rendezvoused at Milwaukee, was subsequently sent to Benton Barracks, St. Louis, thence up the Missouri River to Jefferson City, back to Springfield, Missouri, and crossed the Ozark Mountains and joined the army of General Curtis July 4, 1862, on its way to Helena. There real service began with skirmishing and some fighting, while later on it took part in the Vicksburg campaign and helped beat the Confederates back to the latter point, and was around the place when General Pemberton surrendered it. Mr. Theade at that time saw 35,000 rebels walk out of the stronghold and become paroled prisoners. Following the Vicksburg campaign the regiment scouted along the Mississippi River and later was sent down the river from Memphis to the mouth of Red River, thence up that stream to Alexandria, Louisiana, and there went into camp for a few weeks. From that point this independent brigade under General Custer was ordered to Austin, Texas, and marched through the Trans-Mississippi department to that point. The command was there stationed when the surrender of General Lee ended the war, and it was there also Mr. Theade received his discharge and returned North by the way of Galveston and New Orleans, up the Mississippi River to Cairo, Illinois, and by rail to Madison, Wisconsin, reaching home on the 15th of November, 1865. Throughout all this long military service he escaped wounds, his chief discomfort having come from the lack of food, which frequently happened during the almost four years he was in the army.

Edwin Koch

With the closing of the war and the restoration of peace Mr. Theade turned his attention to his farming pursuits. He owned a farm near Avoca, Wisconsin, and he remained there until his migration to Nebraska and his subsequent advent into Montana. In the support of governmental affairs he has always espoused the cause of the republican party, but his political work has been given as a voter at the general elections.

On the 9th of October, 1866, Mr. Theade was married to Annie Krause, a daughter of Martin Krause. Mrs. Theade was born in the Province of Brandenburg, Germany, near the early home of the Theades, and her birth occurred in the year 1850. The six children born of their union are: William, of Livingston, Montana; Louisa, wife of Pose Beck, of Nebraska; John, a ranchman of the Clearmont community of Custer County; Mary, wife of George Stockhill, and they reside at Miles City; Rosa, wife of Harry Sanders, of Seattle, Washington; and Harry, who met his death at Hathaway on April 25, 1920.

EDWIN KOCH. The best equipped business college in western Montana, outside of Butte, is the Missoula Business and Normal College. This school is fully accredited by the National Association of Accredited Commercial Schools. The active administrative head and proprietor of this institution is Edwin Koch. Mr. Koch has made education his life work, and for a number of years held some important positions in the schools of Indiana before he came to Montana.

He was born at Columbia City, Whitley County, Indiana, August 4, 1873. His father, William Koch, a native of Germany, where he was born in 1827, came to the United States as a young man, lived in Pennsylvania and Ohio, and finally removed to Columbia City, Indiana, where he lived until his death in 1914. He was a millwright by trade. He voted his convictions as a republican and was a member of the Church of God. His wife was Sarah C. Yeater. They were married at the home of her parents in Illinois. She was born March 24, 1839, and is still living, at the age of eighty, at Huntington, Indiana. She was the mother of nine children: Lorenzo, deceased; Belle, wife of A. I. Montz, a carpenter and builder at Huntington, Indiana; Arbir, of Huntington, widow of Milton Huffman, who was a carpenter and builder; William E., in the real estate business at Huntington; Dayton, a farmer at Roanoke, Indiana; John, deceased; Frank, a farmer at Rochester, Indiana; Edwin; and Amanda, who died when four years old.

Edwin Koch had his first advantages in the rural schools in Whitley County. He graduated from the high school at Columbia City, Indiana, in 1891, and the following year began his work as a teacher and educator. He taught practically every winter and also attended summer schools. He took the regular four years' course at the Tri-State Normal College at Angola, Indiana, where he graduated with the A. B. degree in 1900. For three years he was assistant to the vice president of the college. In 1900 he became principal of the high school at Columbia City, and in February, 1901, came to Montana. Here he took charge as principal of the Normal and College Preparatory Department at the Butte Business College, owned by Rice and Fulton. He remained with that college until June 15, 1913.

Coming to Missoula, Mr. Koch bought the Garden City Commercial College from E. E. Reitz and changed its name to the Missoula Business and Normal College. He and his staff of instructors offer a complete curriculum in the commercial courses and also do advanced normal work. The school is housed in a substantial three-story brick building at 120-122 South Fourth Street, West. The school has accommodations for 120 students.

While living in Indiana Mr. Koch served a term as county superintendent of schools of Whitley County. He is a member of the National Commercial Teachers' Association, is a republican in politics, is a member of Laud Lodge, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, at Laud, Indiana; of Butte Camp of the Woodmen of the World, and the Missoula Chamber of Commerce.

September 5, 1901, at Fort Wayne, Indiana, he married Miss Della M. Hendrickson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Hendrickson of Cherubusco, Indiana. Her father is a farmer. Mrs. Koch is a graduate of the Indiana State Normal School and for three years before her marriage was a public school teacher in Indiana. Mr. and Mrs. Koch have five children: William, born September 17, 1903, is a senior in the Missoula County High School; Edwin, born September 8, 1905, is in the sophomore year of the County High School; Katherine, born October 14, 1907, is in grammar school; Harold, born January 5, 1915, and Robert, November 15, 1917.

CAPT. JOHN S. AXTELL is one of the honored survivors of the great war for the Union, and in recent years has lived in the Montana Soldiers' Home at Columbia Falls. He served the Home as adjutant and commandant for upwards of six years, and resigned the last named office on July 15, 1919, because of ill health.

He was born at Chester, New Jersey, a son of Jonathan R. and Mary (VanSchmitt) Axtell. His maternal grandfather was a native of Holland. Captain Axtell was eighteen years of age when in July, 1862, he enlisted in Company E of the Sixth Michigan Cavalry, under Col. George Gray. He enlisted for three years, or during the war, and was mustered in October 13, 1862, at Grand Rapids as a private in Company E, under Capt. James H. Kidd. The Sixth Michigan Cavalry took part in all the engagements in which the Michigan Cavalry Brigade was concerned, from Gettysburg in July, 1863, until the surrender of Lee's army at Appomattox. In all this service Captain Axtell had a part except at the battle of Trevillian Station, when he was on detached service. He was wounded in the right wrist at Gettysburg, but was not compelled to leave the field. He received his honorable discharge at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, July 25, 1865. Captain Axtell is a charter member of William English Post No. 10, Grand Army of the Republic, of Bozeman, Montana.

On November 17, 1873, at Rockford, Michigan, he was married to Lella Z. Corbus. She and their three children, Winifred Reeve, Earl Danielson and Rosa Beall, are all deceased. Captain Axtell is left alone so far as his family is concerned, but during a residence of forty-three years in Montana he has met many of the people of the state, and he counts them all as his friends.

GEORGE W. GILHAM, M. D. Not only professional eminence but practical knowledge, wide vision and broad business experience belong to Dr. George W. Gilham, president of the First National Bank of Townsend, Montana, whose vigorous personality permeates much that has brought progress and substantial development to this city within the last thirty years.

Doctor Gilham was born February 22, 1860, in Josephine County, Oregon, son of C. A. and Almeda (Howell) Gilham. The Gilham family traces its lineage back to Thomas Gilham, first of the family to come to America. A native of Ireland, he settled in Virginia about the year 1730 and afterward moved to North Carolina. He was the father of eleven children, seven sons and four daughters, Ezekiel, Charles, Thomas, William, James, John, Isaac, Nancy, Mary, Sally and Susannah.

The lineage of Doctor Gilham is carried through Ezekiel, oldest son of the founder of the family in America. Ezekiel married in Virginia and moved to what is now Oglethorpe County, Georgia. One of his sons and two of his daughters—Charles, Mary and Margaret—came to Illinois about 1803. Charles, the son, married Jane Finley in Georgia soon after the close of the Revolutionary war. In 1802 or 1803 he moved with several small children to Illinois, where other children were born. About 1838 he moved to Round Prairie Township, Jefferson County Iowa, apparently with his younger son, J. Newton, with whom he and his wife resided on a farm just south of Glasgow until his death about 1844 or 1845. His wife survived him many years and both are buried in the Gillmore graveyard about a mile east of Glasgow. Their children were named Lucretia, Lucinda, Clarinda, Clement, Sarah, Ezekiel Johnson, Thomas Cunningham and J. Newton.

The next generation of the family was represented by Thomas Cunningham Gilham, who moved from Illinois to Iowa and settled on a farm near his brother Newton's home. He married Eliza Kirkpatrick in Illinois and had several children when he moved to Iowa. The names of his children were Margaret, Calvet, Addison, Charles Albert, Campbell, John, William Madison, Thomas Henry, Marquis Leroy and Ursula Jane, twins, Alna Ann and Melissa.

Calvet A. Gilham, father of Doctor Gilham, was born at Greenville, Illinois, in 1826, and was twelve years old when his parents moved to Iowa. He went across the plains to California in 1849, and remained in the far West until 1851, achieving considerable success in the placer mines. He then returned to Iowa and in 1852 was married at Glasgow to Miss Almeda Howell. She was born in Virginia in 1830. He soon returned to California and later moved to Oregon. He established his home in the Grand Ronde Valley in Union County, Oregon, in 1863, and for several years operated a blacksmith shop and then bought a farm on which he resided until 1885, when he returned to his old home surroundings at Fairfield, Iowa, and lived practically retired until his death in 1911. He was a republican, a member of the Masonic fraternity, and he and his wife were both devoted members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. His wife died at Grand Ronde Valley, Oregon, in 1885. Their three sons are: Thomas H. Gilham, of Turlock, California; Dr. George W. Gilham, of Townsend, Montana; and Calvet Addison, Jr., of Vale, Oregon. The eldest son, Thomas H., was born in California and the two younger were born in Oregon.

George W. Gilham attended the country schools in boyhood, later the schools of Grand Ronde Valley, going from there to Blue Mountain University at LaGrande, Oregon, and finally entering the medical department of the State University of California, from which institution he was graduated with his medical degree in 1881. He entered into medical practice at LaGrande, where he remained four years, then moved to Harney, Oregon, and during his four more years in the state became somewhat active in the political field, and in 1888 was elected to the State Legislature on the republican ticket from Grant County.

In 1890 Doctor Gilham came to Townsend, one of the pioneer physicians and surgeons, of which body of medical men he is the only survivor. He owns his office building on Spruce Street, and has a widely established reputation in his profession. He is health officer of Townsend, also is county physician of Broadwater County, and since 1894 has been local surgeon for the Northern Pacific Railroad. His enterprise and public spirit have been notable factors in the development of Townsend, a ready example being found in his establishing in 1911 the First National Bank of Townsend, a sound, reliable institution working with a capital of $50,000, surplus and profits of $23,000, and deposits of $300,000. The officers of the bank are the following capitalists: George W. Gilham, president; W. S. Thompson, vice president; J. J. Davey, cashier. The bank building is a handsome structure situated on Broadway. Doctor Gilham has additional important business interests. He is a director of the Inter-Mountain Milling Company of Townsend, and is president of the Townsend Realty and Investment Company, capitalized at $50,000. He built and owns the Rex Theater at Townsend, which he has under rental, and his private residence on Pine Street is one of the handsomest and best appointed in the city. He is an extensive grower of grain and alfalfa, owning three valuable ranches, one of which, containing 390 acres, is situated one mile east of Townsend; the second, located four miles southeast of Townsend, at the crossing of Deep Creek, contains 107 acres; while the third, a tract of 1,280 acres, lies five miles southeast of Townsend, Montana.

In 1884 Doctor Gilham was united in marriage at LaGrande, Oregon, to Miss Josephine Romig, who was born in California and was educated in the Blue Mountain University. Her parents were S. P. and Rebecca Romig, farming people, who were living retired at LaGrande at time of death. Doctor and Mrs. Gilham have one son, Ralph E., who was born in 1885. He was well educated, is an A. B. graduate of the Montana State University at Missoula, and subsequently was graduated with the degree E. M. from the School of Mines, Butte, Montana. He is interested in ranching and sheep raising and resides at Townsend.

Doctor Gilham belongs to Valley Lodge No. 21, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, and is past master of the same; to Helena Consistory No. 3; has attained the thirty-second degree and is a Shriner, belonging to Algeria Temple at Helena. He is also an Odd Fellow, his membership being with the North Star Lodge No. 19, of which he is a past grand.

Basil Tinsley, mayor of Pony, Montana, and a man who is operating upon an extensive scale as ranchman and stockman, is one of the leading men of this region, and one who has been instrumental in developing. Not only is he now the chief executive of Pony, but he has served in the same office for two previous terms and had the honor of being the second incumbent. Mr. Tinsley was born at Willow Creek, Gallatin County, Montana, April 27, 1869, so he is a product of the state in which he takes such pride. His grandfather, also Basil Tinsley, was born in North Carolina in 1797, and he died at Jamesport, Missouri, in 1885. Moving from North Carolina to Kentucky, he spent some years in Hopkins County, and then became a pioneer of Grundy County, Missouri, engaging in farming and acting as county assessor. His wife bore the maiden name of Henry, and she belonged to the same family as the illustrious patriot, Patrick Henry.

Joseph H. Tinsley, son of the Basil Tinsley mentioned above, and father of the Basil Tinsley whose name heads this review, was born in Hopkins County, Kentucky, in 1834, and died at Willow Creek, Montana, in 1917. He was reared in his native county and accompanied his father to Missouri, where he was engaged in farming until 1864, at which time he came West to Alder Gulch, Montana, making the trip with an ox team and homesteading 160 acres of land, to which he added a pre-emption claim of 160 acres, and was successfully engaged in operating his 320 acre ranch and raising stock. He was one of the pioneers of that region and was spared long enough to see a wonderful development in the community in which his good judgment had led him to locate. His political views were well represented in the principles of the democratic party, and he never failed to vote its ticket. Very religious, he gave the Methodist Episcopal Church a faithful service, being regarded as one of the pillars of the local body in each community in which he resided. While still living in Missouri, he was married near Chillicothe to Martha E. Thompson, born in Hopkins County, Kentucky, in 1835. She died at Willow Creek, Montana, in 1912. Their children were as follows: F. M., who is a farmer and stockman of Willow Creek, Montana; Lena J., who married Ward C. Stone, a ranchman of Moore, Montana, is now living at Dillon, Montana, so as to give their one child the advantages of the schools of that place; Mary A., who married Charles W. Brooke, a ranchman, resides at Pony, Montana; L. D., who was a stockman and farmer, died at Bozeman, Montana, when he was forty-seven years of age; and Basil, who was the last born.

Like so many lads of his generation and section, Basil Tinsley grew up on his father's ranch, and while attending the local schools also learned to be a practical farmer, remaining with his father, and putting this knowledge to active use until he was twenty-seven years of age. He then came to Pony and went into the stock business and began farming. Mr. Tinsley owns a ranch one-half mile east of Pony, containing about 2,000 acres, and for some time was engaged in raising pure bred stock, but is now concentrating on cattle. His ranch is irrigated and he is allowed a head of 650 inches of water. In addition to his ranch Mr. Tinsley owns his residence on Main Street, a dwelling in the west end of Pony, and a half interest in a meat market building at Pony. At one time he was engaged in the meat business, but sold it in 1911. Like his father he is a stanch democrat, and was elected on his party's ticket mayor of Pony three times, the last time in the spring of 1919 for a term of two years. From 1904 to 1906 he was state central committeeman of his party, and has always been very active in politics. The cause of education has in him a warm friend, and in order to secure the best educational advantages for the children of Pony he has served on the school board for some years. The Presbyterian Church has in him a working member, and he is serving that denomination at Pony as secretary and treasurer. Fraternally he belongs to Mount Jefferson Lodge No. 56, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, of which he is a past master; and Echo Chapter No. 38, Order of Eastern Star, of which is a past patron.

On May 20, 1896, Mr. Tinsley was married near Pony, Montana, to Miss Maude E. Phillips, a daughter of Ira L. and Harriet (Wheeler) Phillips, both of whom are deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Tinsley have no children.

The grandfather of Mrs. Tinsley, George Phillips, died at Reading, Connecticut, before she was born. The Phillips family originated in England and was founded in the New England colonies prior to the American Revolution. The son of George Phillips, Ira Lindley Phillips, father of Mrs. Tinsley, was born at Danbury, Connecticut, in July, 1840, and died on his ranch three miles east of Pony in 1898. Growing up in his native town, Ira L. Phillips remained there until after his marriage, and then in 1865 came West to Sheridan, Montana, and until 1884 was there engaged in mining and blacksmithing. The trip to Montana was the result of a visit he had made to the state in 1864, during which he gained such a favorable impression of the opportunities here afforded that he felt that it would be good business to make this region his permanent home. In 1882 he moved to a ranch he had bought near Pony, which contained 480 acres of land, and on it he passed away, having been very successful in his undertakings. In politics he was a republican. His fraternal connections were with the Masons and the Ancient Order of United Workmen. Mr. Phillips was married to Harriet M. Wheeler, who was born in November, 1839, and died on the ranch near Pony in June, 1911. Their children were as follows: Harry S., who is a cotton farmer, lives near Glendale, Arizona; Mrs. Tinsley, who was the second in order of birth; George Lindley, who is a farmer, resides at Pony. Mrs. Tinsley attended the public schools of Pony and Harrison, Montana, and having fitted herself for the work was engaged in teaching school prior to her marriage, becoming one of the best beloved educators of Gallatin County, although only in the schoolroom for a year. She, too, belongs to the Presbyterian Church, and is a teacher in the Sunday School, president of the Christian Endeavor Society, and otherwise active in religious activities. Mrs. Tinsley belongs to Echo

Chapter No. 38, Order of Eastern Star, of which she is past matron, and she is a member of the Bayview Reading Club of Pony. A lady of innate culture, she has developed her faculties until she is easily the leader in all intellectual movements in her neighborhood.

Intensely patriotic, Mr. Tinsley took a very active part in war work, having charge of the Liberty Loan drives. Under his able management the district, which included Harrison and Pony, or school districts Nos. 11, 43 and 45, subscribed its full quoto in each drive. In the Fourth Liberty Loan drive, the district subscribed $37,500, although the allotment was only $27,500, owing to Mr. Tinsley's forceful direction. He is one of the best types of western citizens, alert, considerate and dependable, profoundly alive to the best interests of his section, and determined to give it every chance for advancement. Having spent his entire life in Montana, there are few men here who are better fitted to do it honor, and to reflect added prestige not only through the medium of industry but also as a public official.

LESTER H. LOBLE has been a factor in Helena's professional and industrial affairs from the time he left the school room to take up the active duties of life, and since his admission to the bar he has enjoyed prestige in the legal profession in Helena.

He was born in Helena April 9, 1893, a son of Henry Loble, whose birth occurred in Romania in 1859. He came to the United States in 1876, and after remaining for a short time in the City of New York went on to Minneapolis, Minnesota, where he embarked in a general mercantile business and became one of the successful business men of that city. But in 1890 Mr. Loble sold his business there to come to Helena, where he resumed mercantile interests, establishing a general merchandise store under the name of Loble and Company. This was subsequently changed to the New York Store, and he continued as the president of the corporation until his death, which occurred in the year 1913. From a modest beginning Mr. Loble gradually enlarged his interests until he stood at the head of one of the leading mercantile establishments in Helena. Since his death the business has been continued and is today the largest department store in Helena. Mr. Loble was a republican in his political affiliations, was a member of Temple Emanuel, and had fraternal affiliations with King Solomon Lodge No. 9, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, Algeria Temple, Ancient Arabic Order Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, at Helena, Helena Consistory No. 3, thirty-second degree, also with Montana Lodge No. 1 of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and he was a charter member of the Montana Club and a member of the Lambs Club, but the last named has since been discontinued.

Henry Loble married Hattie Marks, who survives him and resides in Helena. She was born in Diamond City, Montana, in 1871, a daughter of Leopold Marks, whose birth occurred in Germany in 1834. He was the founder of the Marks family in the United States, and his death occurred in Helena in 1906. During the Civil war he served throughout the struggle as a Confederate soldier, a member of a Mississippi regiment, and after peace was declared he started for the Northwest territory, traveling by boat up the Mississippi River to Fort Benton and thence across the plains to Diamond City, Montana, where he arrived in 1866. Mr. Marks became one of the pioneer merchants of that place, but after a number of years he removed to White Sulphur Springs, where he was also a merchant, and from there came to Helena in 1890 and afterward lived a retired life. In his early life he had married Clara Levey, who was of French descent and was born in Alsace-Lorraine. She is still a resident of Helena, and has attained the age of eighty-four years. Two children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Loble. The younger, Lenora, married Albert Aloe and resides in St. Louis, Missouri, where Mr. Aloe is a manufacturer of optical and surgical instruments.

Lester H. Loble attended the public schools of Helena and the high school through the sophomore year, and then entered Cascadilla School at Ithaca, New York, from which he graduated in 1911. He next entered the New York University, New York City, where he continued in the law department through the junior year, and during the time also studied in a law office in Wall Street, New York City. On the 24th of December, 1914, Mr. Loble was admitted to the bar before the Supreme Court of Montana, and has since been engaged in a general civil and criminal practice at Helena, with offices in the Court House. During the year of 1914 he served as a member of the Board of Aldermen of Helena, and in the fall of 1916 was elected the county attorney and was re-elected to the office in 1918.

Mr. Loble is a member of the Lewis and Clark County Bar Association, of which he is the present secretary, and is also a member of the State Bar Association. Fraternally he is a member of King Solomon Lodge No. 9, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, and Helena Consistory No. 3, fourteenth degree, and also of Montana Lodge No. 1, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, at Helena, and is also a member and for the past two years has been president of Helena Aerie No. 16, Fraternal Order of Eagles. He is also a member of the Delta Chi Epsilon Greek letter fraternity, Cascadilla Chapter.

Mr. Loble resides at 419 North Ewing Street, Helena. He was married in 1910, in Spokane, Washington, to Miss Charlotte Sillers, a daughter of Thomas and Anna (Keenan) Sillers, who reside in Helena. Mr. Sillers is one of the Montana pioneers, and he is engaged in the livery business in Helena. Two children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Loble: Clarice, who was born July 9, 1914, and Henry, who was born May 25, 1917.

E. D. BAKER, M. D. Since locating at Twin Bridges in 1910 Doctor Baker has developed a large private practice and in many ways has used his influence to promote the welfare of the community.

Dr. Baker was born at Bloomington, Illinois, October 12, 1880. His family were among the original settlers of that section of Illinois, the heart of the great corn belt, and one of the prosperous cities of the Prairie State. Doctor Baker's family was also identified with the pioneer settlement of the State of Kansas. The Baker ancestors came over at the very beginning of colonial settlement in New England. His great-grandfather was Dr. John Baker, a native of Ohio, a physician, and also a civil engineer. Dr. John Baker surveyed the original townsite of Bloomington, Illinois. He died at Leroy in that state. Sidney D. Baker, grandfather of Doctor Baker, was born in Ohio in 1824 and grew up in McLean County, Illinois, where for many years he followed merchandising. Later he retired and moved to Council Grove, Kansas, where he died in 1908. Sidney D. Baker married Eleanor Edwards, a direct descendant of Jonathan Edwards, one of the most distinguished divines in the early colonial period of New England.

F. W. Baker, father of Doctor Baker, was born at Bloomington, Illinois, in March, 1859, was reared and married in that city, became a merchant, but in 1882, on account of ill health, retired from business and moved to Council Grove, Kansas, where he lived on a farm. In 1919 he retired and is now a resident of Anaheim, California. He is a republican, has given life-long support to the Methodist Church and is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. F. W. Baker married Hester Sherfey, who was born at Des Moines, Iowa, in 1860. Doctor Baker is the oldest of their children; Fred S. is a farmer at Edna, Texas; Sidney W. is a watchmaker by trade now engaged in ranching at Twin Bridges; George F. is an optician living at San Francisco; George owns an orange grove at Anaheim, California; Solomon F. was instructor in aerial gunnery during the World war and held the rank of lieutenant in the Aviation Department of the army and is a resident of Mount Clemens, Michigan.

Dr. E. D. Baker was about two years old when his parents moved to Council Grove, Kansas. He graduated from the high school there in 1900, spent two years on his father's farm and then entered the Kansas City Hahnemann College, affiliated with Kansas University, graduating M. D. in 1910. Soon after receiving his diploma he came to Montana, settling at Twin Bridges, and has been busily engaged in general medical and surgical practice. From the time he came to Twin Bridges he has been physician for the State Orphans Home here. He is also health officer for Twin Bridges. He owns his office building on Main Street, also a modern home on the main thoroughfare, and has a ranch on the McHessor Bench, fifteen miles south of Twin Bridges. Doctor Baker has served as a member of the Twin Bridge City Council, is an independent democrat in politics, and is a stockholder in the First National Bank. He is a member of the Madison County and State Medical societies and the American Medical Association. Doctor Baker retains his affiliation with Council Grove Lodge of Masons in the same lodge of which his grandfather and an uncle were members. He is also affiliated with Council Grove Chapter No. 36, Royal Arch Masons, and at Twin Bridges he is a member of the Modern Woodmen and the Brotherhood of American Yeomen. He is a trustee and active member of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Doctor Baker married at Council Grove, Kansas, June 19, 1900, Miss Cora May Kinkel, daughter of Charles and Cora Kinkel, the latter now deceased. Her father is a retired farmer at Colby, Kansas. Mrs. Baker is well known in the Twin Bridges community for her skill as a musician, both vocal and instrumental. She finished her musical training with two years in the New England Conservatory of Music at Boston. Doctor and Mrs. Baker have two children: Catherine Elizabeth, born March 20, 1914; and Emory, Jr., born April 1, 1917.

JOHN C. SHANNON. The extensive ranching and landed interests developed and owned by John C. Shannon are located some forty miles northwest of White Sulphur Springs, in the locality known as Fort Logan. The postoffice of Shannon was established on his ranch many years ago and Mr. Shannon was personally delegated to take charge of the office and was postmaster there for sixteen years, until the office was re-established at Lewis.

Mr. Shannon came to Montana in territorial days, and had a great deal of the rough and rugged experience of the mining camps and the ranch and range of that period. He was born on his father's farm in Washington County, Wisconsin, July 8, 1854, son of John C. and Margaret (Riley) Shannon. His father, a native of Rhode Island, died at the age of sixty years, while his mother was born in Lancaster, England, and died aged sixty-seven. They were married in Wisconsin, and their family consists of seven children, four sons and three daughters, John C., Jr., being the second in age. John C. Shannon, Sr., went to Wisconsin with his parents when he was a small boy. He was old enough to give some spirited assistance to the family in clearing away the woods and developing a home on the banks of Lake Five in Washington County. After reaching manhood John C. Shannon was married, and then started farming for himself. He left his family early in the Civil war to join a Wisconsin regiment, and served his country well and faithfully until the close of the war. Upon his honorable discharge he returned home, resumed farming in Washington County, but after about a year moved to Chippewa Falls in Chippewa County. The great industry in the Chippewa Valley at that time was lumbering, and he spent several years in that business. After that he resumed farming, and farming was his occupation until his death. He was a democrat in his political affiliations.

John C. Shannon, Jr., acquired a public school education in Chippewa County, Wisconsin. He was about seven years old when his father entered the army, and he has an interesting recollection of life in war times, assisting his mother in plowing and planting and harvesting the wheat crop, which was the family's chief dependence for food. He continued to live at home until 1877, and in that year started West with Montana as his destination. A railroad train took him as far as Bismarck, then the terminus of the Northern Pacific. There he embarked on the steamer Benton, which carried him to Fort Benton, the head of navigation on the Missouri River. On leaving the steam boat he and others hired a freight outfit of six horses, which carried them and their equipment to Helena. Another outfit then took them to Pioneer, Montana, where Mr. Shannon found employment working in a mine for about two years. Altogether he was greatly pleased with Montana and the great life of the West. After returning home to visit his parents he married on June 16, 1880, Miss Angia Hoyt, and he and his bride soon afterward started West, traveling by the same route as he had taken on his previous trip. However, from Bismarck to Fort Benton they were passengers on the steamer Rosebud. For about nine years Mr. Shannon made his headquarters at Helena, and had varied experiences and employments. In 1889 he moved to the Smith River Valley in Meagher County, where he homesteaded and began the cattle business. This has been his chief interest throughout the period since Montana has been a state. His land holdings have grown until he now personally owns about 9,000 acres. On the whole he has had good fortune in the management of his cattle and livestock interests. In recent years his cattle herds have frequently ranged between 1,000 and 1,200, and in normal seasons he ships a number of carloads direct to the Chicago market.

Mr. Shannon has never been interested in political office and in politics votes for the best man. Seven children have been born to him and his wife. Effie, the oldest, is the wife of H. F. Bonesteele and the mother of four sons, and the Bonesteele home is in Oregon. Ethel is the wife of Murray J. Johnston, and they have five children. Grace is the wife of Jay East and the mother of one son. The fourth child is Theodore. Angelina is the wife of William Granger, Margaret is the wife of Chester Hixby, and Ruth, the youngest, was married to Roston Teets and has one daughter.

William Henry Fluhr is one of the fortunate young men of Montana. He had the good fortune to be born in that state. He also inherited a sound mind and a sound body, good capabilities, and was especially fortunate in that he discovered early useful objects and purposes for his talents and energies. Montana, like other states that owed their original wealth to mineral resources, is gradually building up its permanent program of agriculture, and no one phase of its agricultural life is being given more attention than dairying. For this reason Mr. Fluhr as state dairy commissioner has a work of tremendous possibilities, and he is in every way qualified by practical training and experience for the office he directs at the state capital.

Born at Helena, June 22, 1891, William Henry Fluhr is a son of John and Augusta (Sleiker) Fluhr. John Fluhr was born in Germany in 1849, was reared and educated in his native land and came to this country about 1869. He lived for several years in Allegheny, Pennsylvania, where he conducted a cooperage plant. He followed the same business in Northern Pennsylvania, and afterward moved to Jamestown, North Dakota, where he owned and operated a meat market. In 1882 he moved his business to Bismarck, North Dakota, and in 1884 came to Helena, where he was one of the pioneer meat market men. He continued this business actively until his death in 1898. He was a republican voter and a member of the Lutheran Church. His wife, Augusta Sleiker, was born in Germany in June, 1843, and is still living at Helena. Her father came to this country about 1854, and for a number of years was employed by a soda manufacturing works at Natrona, Pennsylvania, where his daughter Augusta was reared and educated, though spending part of her early life at Allegheny. John Fluhr and wife had a family of seven children: Lena, wife of M. M. Lyter, a prominent attorney of Seattle; Edith, wife of A. E. Schneider, who conducts at Seattle one of the leading art goods establishment in the Northwest, and is a commission broker in art goods, being an extensive importer from foreign countries; Lucy, unmarried and living with her mother, and a clerk in the business offices of the Helena Record Herald; Clara, wife of Seth Maxwell, of Helena; Albert, who died at the age of nine years; William Henry; and Charles Nicholas, whose home is at Grand Forks, North Dakota, and he is a traveling representative for the United States Rubber Company. Seth Maxwell, who married Clara Fluhr, has been a prominent leader in the democratic party of Montana, was commissioner of agriculture and publicity just before enlisting in the army, received a second lieutenant's commission at the Officers' Training Camp at Presidio, California, and was assigned to the Tank Corps.

William Henry Fluhr attended the public schools of Helena, graduating from high school in 1911. The following year he worked for the Merchants Delivery Company of Helena. He then entered the Montana State Agricultural College at Bozeman, and was graduated in 1915. At Bozeman he specialized in breeding and feeding of livestock and in the production and manufacture of dairy products. Mr. Fluhr gained many distinctions throughout his high school and college career, giving evidence of the versatile abilities that have made him so useful a citizen of his home state. He was president of his graduating class in the Helena High School, and during his last year in high school was captain of the football, baseball, track teams and basket ball teams, and earned an all star reputation in the high school athletic circles of the state. He has since been honored twice with the office of president of the Helena High School Alumni Association. While in the State Agricultural College he was president of his freshman class. He earned a place on the college baseball team. While now a very busy man with his official duties Mr. Fluhr gives his spare time to work as athletic coach for St. Charles College at Helena, and during the winter of 1919-20 gave that school a winning basket ball team.

After leaving the State College Mr. Fluhr was employed a month at Helena as a butter maker. He then went to Missoula for the purpose of becoming head butter maker for the Missoula Creamery Company. He was diverted from that work, however, by his appointment on May 10, 1915, as deputy dairy commissioner of the State of Montana. During the past five years he has had a busy program in connection with this office and the related activities of the State and Federal governments in behalf of Montana agriculture and livestock husbandry. April 1, 1917, Governor Stuart appointed him emergency demonstration agent for the Meagher County Council of Defense, with headquarters at White Sulphur Springs. This appointment had been urged upon the governor by the Montana State Agricultural College Extension Service, acting in conjunction with the United Sates Department of Agriculture. His jurisdiction the first month included Meagher and Wheatland counties, Wheatland County being carved from the original territory of Meagher County later. Mr. Fluhr gave his time to this special work until October 25, 1917. At that date Governor Stewart appointed him state dairy commissioner, and though only twenty-six years of age at the time his administration of the office has completely justified the confidence thus reposed in him. Mr. Fluhr and his staff have the responsibility of safeguarding and maintaining proper standards for the dairy products of Montana, and the service involves sanitary inspection of dairies, creameries and other plants handling dairy products. Mr. Fluhr also acts in conjunction with the State Agricultural College in holding Farm Institutes, and during the past three years has appeared personally before farmers and dairymen's organizations in most of the counties to discuss subjects within his technical sphere.

Throughout the period of the World war Mr. Fluhr held himself in readiness for any patriotic service. He had passed the physical examinations preparatory to joining the colors, but the armistice was signed before he was called. He is an independent democrat, is a member of the Presbyterian Church, the Helena Commercial Club, the United Commercial Travelers, the Helena Young Men's Christian Association, the Dairymen's Association, and the Montana Butter, Cheese and Ice Cream Makers' Association. Fraternally he is affiliated with Morning Star Lodge No. 5, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, Helena Consistory No. 3 of the Scottish Rite, and is a member of the Patrol Team of Algeria Temple of the Mystic Shrine.

Mr. Fluhr owns a modern home, at 621 Breckenridge Street. September 4, 1918, at Belt, Montana, he married Miss Mae Montana Rush, daughter of Frank and Sarah (Lindsay) Rush, residents of Belt. Her father is a Montana pioneer, and has developed extensive interests as a rancher and livestock grower. Mrs. Fluhr was born at Neihart, Montana, and received her high school education at Belt and at Seattle, Washington.

Joe Collier is one of the enterprising farmers of Hill County, who is making a success of his operations, and is rightly numbered among the representative agriculturists of this region. He was born in Weakley County, Tennessee, January 18, 1880, a son of James and Fountnella (Hughes) Collier, both of whom are deceased, he dying when seventy-four and she when sixty. They were natives of North Carolina and Eastern Tennessee,, respectively. They had twelve children, nine sons and three daughters, and there are still living seven sons and two daughters. Of them all Joe Collier was the seventh child in order of birth. James Collier was a farmer and dealer in tobacco in Tennessee, and for thirty-five years served as a justice of the peace. He was a Mason in his fraternal connections, a democrat in politics, and a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church in his religious affiliations.

Joe Collier grew up in his native county, helping his father with the farm work and attending school. At the age of eighteen years he began clerking in a grocery at Decherd, Tennessee, but after two years of that work he came west to Grand Junction, Colorado, and was in the machine shops of the Denver and Rio Grande Railroad for about one year. In the spring of 1902 he came to Montana and homesteaded in old Chouteau County, now Hill County, near the homesteads of his brothers Albert F. and Galitan H. Collier. The latter lost his life by being thrown from a horse on July 24, 1919. He was the sixth child in the family of his father. At his death Joe Collier took charge of his farm, and conducts it together with his own, having 640 acres of land under his control. Here he carries on farming and stock raising, and has about forty-five head of cattle and eighteen head of horses. Mrs. Collier has a homestead on the Big Sandy, known as Lonesome Prairie. Mr. Collier is a democrat, but his time has been too completely occupied with his private affairs for him to think about public honors.

On November 22, 1913, Mr. Collier was united in marriage with Leota Pearl McNabb, born at Princeton, Bureau County, Illinois, a daughter of John and Idella (Miller) McNabb. Mr. and Mrs. Collier have one daughter, Hallie. A hard worker, Mr. Collier has gradually increased his material possessions, all through his own efforts, and stands today an excellent example of the self-made, self-reliant western man, who is able and willing to hold his own with any one. Although his birth occurred in the South, he must be justly regarded as a product of the great West, for his mature years have been spent in it, and in it he has achieved his success.

STEPHEN J. ADAMS. One of the progressive and representative men of Montana is Stephen J. Adams, whose indomitable courage, persistent and aggressive efforts and his excellent management have brought to him the management which is today his. He has ever stood ready to do what he could in pushing forward the wheels of progress and advancing commercial prosperity in this vicinity, and his career, both public and private, has been one worthy of the high esteem which those knowing him best freely accord to him.

Stephen J. Adams was born in Jasper County, Missouri, on February 13, 1876, and is the son of John Henry and Christena (Winks) Adams, prosperous and respected farming folk of that locality. John H. Adams was a native of Kentucky and died in 1886, at the age of forty-two years, while his widow, who is still living, was born in 1847. They became the parents of three children, Elizabeth, Stephen J. and Elsworth. The father received his education in the public schools of Kentucky, but spent the major portion of his younger days in Illinois, engaged in farming, and in that state he was married. Subsequently he moved to Jasper County, Missouri, where he was engaged in farming and stock raising up to the time of his death. Politically he was a republican and fraternally he was a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

Stephen J. Adams was reared on the paternal farm and secured his education in the public schools of his native county. When a young lad he was brought by his widowed mother to Anaconda, Montana, settling there in the spring of 1888, and there he was able to attend school for two years more. In 1890 he and his mother removed to Milk River Valley, Chouteau County, now Blaine County, and there the mother entered a homestead and built a four-room frame house. She engaged in the cattle business on a small scale. In the meantime Stephen J., at the age of thirteen years, began freighting between Fort Assiniboine and the Bearpaw Mountain, and embracing other points. He continued this vocation with success up to the time he was twenty-two years of age, when he engaged in farming and stock raising on the maternal homestead. Here he has been uniformly successful, having given his undivided attention to the work to which he has applied himself and as a result today probably no man in Montana is more widely known in his line of work. While he has given some attention to cattle raising, it has been as a breeder and raiser of thoroughbred horses that he has achieved a notable success. For a number of years he raised and bought many cattle which he sent to the Chicago market, but in the fall of 1918 he sold the major portion of his herd and and is now giving comparatively little attention to that line.

Mr. Adams keeps an average of one hundred head of thoroughbred running and harness horses, many of which have records, and as an exhibitor of these horses and a winner of blue ribbons he is almost in a class by himself. He has about thirty head of horses in his racing stable, with which he attends the race meets at Calgary, Regina, Alberta, Spokane and Helena as well as other places in the northwest circuit. Among the specialty races in which he enters his horses are the Roman standing chariot race, four horses, for which he has a noted lady driver; the cow-boy relay race, the world's championship race, as well as a roping contest for the world's championship. His sales stables are located at Lohman, Montana, and are considered probably the finest stables in the northwest, being well known by horse lovers all through the western states. In 1919 Mr. Adams participated in stake races and over-night handicaps. It is worthy of note that he holds the world's record for relay riding, his record for the five miles, including five changes of horses and saddles, being 10:10½. He also holds the world's record for one and a half miles relay riding, three changes of horses and saddles, 3:10. Mr. Adams is an ardent lover of fine horses and has a justifiable pride in the splendid animals which have been produced on his farm. His ranch comprises 480 acres of land, in addition to which he rents 1,200 acres, so that he controls in all 1,680 acres.

On November 25, 1899, Mr. Adams was married to Euphemia Frame, who was a native of Glasgow, Scotland, and who, at seventeen years of age, was brought to this country by her brother Alexander. To Mr. and Mrs. Adams have been born three children, Elsworth, Stephen and Arthur. Elsworth received his education in the public schools of Lohman, Montana, being a graduate of the high school. He is raising cattle and horses on his own account, having inherited his father's love for horses. He is a fine rider and won the relay race at Havre and the Havre stampede in 1919, as well as the world's championship race at Calgary.

Mr. Adams, though a very busy man, takes time to serve his community as a wide-awake, public-spirited citizen should and keeps in touch with local public affairs. He is a republican in his political views, and has served seven years in a most acceptable manner as a member of the school board. His mother is an earnest member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, to which he is a liberal contributor. He is a man of absolute honesty, always on the advance, and has managed his extensive business affairs with prudence and discrimination, so that he is universally regarded as one of Montana's useful and enterprising men of affairs.

James Ray Leach. Improvement and progress may well be said to form the keynote of the character of James R. Leach, the well known farmer and cattle man of Hill County and one of northern Montana's representative citizens, and he has not only been interested in the work of advancement of individual affairs but his influence is felt in the upbuilding of the community which has so long been honored by his citizenship. The prosperity which he enjoys is the result of energy rightly applied and has been won by commendable qualities.

James Ray Leach is a Hoosier by birth, having been born in Boone County, Indiana, on February 21, 1880, and he is the son of Willis and Laura (Cranford) Leach. The father was born in the State of Illinois, and his death occurred in 1916, at the age of seventy-one years, while his widow, who is a native of North Carolina, is now in her seventieth year. They were married in Indiana, and the subject of this sketch is the second in order of birth of their seven children. Willis Leach spent his boyhood days under the parental roof and secured a good practical education in the public schools of that neighborhood. When twenty years of age he enlisted in the Union army during the Civil war and gave a good account of himself, receiving an honorable discharge at the close of that conflict. Afterward he located in Indiana, where he engaged in farming until 1887, and then came to Montana and settled as a poineer in Cascade County, where he became a farmer and stock raiser, in which he was successfully engaged up to the time of his death. Politically he was an earnest supporter of the republican party, was an active member of the Grand Army of the Republic and was an attendant and contributor to the Methodist Episcopal Church.

James R. Leach was a lad of about seven years when the family came to Montana, and here he received his public school education, supplementing this in 1903-4 by attendance at Valparaiso University at Valparaiso, Indiana. When but fourteen years of age he had started out to make his own way, going to Billings and engaging as a cowboy, riding the ranges around Billings, Miles City and other localities in that section. Later he went to Fort Benton and followed similar work there for about ten years. In 1898 Mr. Leach went to Canada, where he was employed as a cowboy up to 1901, when he engaged in the cattle business on his own account in Canada, remaining there up to 1909. Returning to Montana, he located in the Sweet Grass hills in Choteau County, now Hill County, where he has since been engaged in the cattle business. He has been very successful in his line, carrying from 150 to 700 cattle and giving preference to the Durham and Shorthorn breeds. In 1919 Mr. Leach sold off part of his cattle and engaged in the sheep business, which promises to be as successful and profitable a line as cattle. Possessing sound judgment and quick to act when a decision is made, he has been uniformly successful in his work and is numbered among the leading cattle men of his section of the state.

On the 30th of June, 1909, Mr. Leach was married to Myrtle Mary Ellis, a native of Kansas and the daughter of John M. and Effie D. (Colcolson) Ellis. Mr. Ellis was born in Kansas in 1863 and Mrs. Ellis was born in Iowa in 1870. They have two children living, Mrs. Leach and Edna, who is the wife of Bert Furnell. Mr. Ellis is now a successful farmer and stock raiser in Toole County, Montana, in which locality he located in 1895. Politically he supports the democratic party. To Mr. and Mrs. Leach has been born a son, James Ellis, who was born on January 30, 1912.

Politically a republican, Mr. Leach takes an intelligent interest in public affairs and has rendered effective and appreciated service as a member of the School Board for the past six years. Fraternally he is a member of the Ancient Order of United Workmen. He is public spirited and lends his support to any cause that has for its ultimate object the betterment of his locality in material, civic and moral affairs. Genial and companionable by nature, he easily makes friends and is extremely popular in his community.

William Booker Smith, Jr. The specific history of the great northwest was made by the pioneers; it was emblazoned on the forest trees by the strength of sturdy arms and a gleaming ax, and written on the surface of the earth by the track of the primitive plow. Those were strong men and true who came to found the empire of the Northwest —those hardy settlers who builded their first cabins and from the sylvan wilds evolved the fertile and productive fields which have these many years been furrowed and refurrowed by the plowshare. The trackless prairie was made to yield its tribute under the effective endeavors of the pioneer, and slowly but surely were laid the steadfast foundations upon which has been builded the magnificent superstructure of the present opulent and enlightened commonwealth. To establish a home amid such surroundings, and to cope with the many privations and hardships which were the inevitable concomitants, demanded an invincible courage and fortitude, strong hearts and willing hands. All those were characteristics of the pioneers, whose names and deeds should be held in perpetual reverence by those who enjoy the fruits of their toil, and among these there remains today among us one who nobly did his part and still retains a keen interest in the march of progress which characterizes the great Treasure state.

William Booker Smith, Jr., who is now living in quiet retirement at his comfortable home about three miles north of Big Sandy, was born near Nashville, Tennessee, on December 17, 1839. His parents, William Booker and Almyra Smith, were both natives of Virginia, and both are deceased, the father dying at the age of sixty-four years and the mother when forty-five years of age. Of their eight children the subject of this sketch is the seventh in order of birth. The father was a school teacher for many years, in connection with which he also farmed, but latterly he gave his entire attention to agricultural pursuits. He was a democrat in his political affiliation, but was a strong supporter of the Union. He was a leader in his community and held various public offices.

The subject of this sketch was deprived by death of a mother's care when he was but a mere child, and he went to live in the family of W. S. Richards, by whom he was reared. In 1859 he rejoined his father, who had gone to Wisconsin, and they made the overland trip to Denver, Colorado, with ox team. In Denver Mr. Smith engaged in the dairy and meat business in partnership with his brother John. Late in 1859 he returned to St. Louis, Missouri, thence back to his old home for a visit. In the spring of 1860 he went to Galena, Illinois, and thence to Mineral Point, Wisconsin, remaining there until April, 1862. He then started for Oregon with an ox team outfit, arriving at Portland, Oregon, on the 15th of the following October. His first employment there was in saw-mills, in which he worked until the spring of 1863, and then went to Idaho and engaged in placer mining until 1866, when he transferred his operations to Bear Gulch, Montana. The following year he engaged in freighting from Stevensville to the mines, but later again went to placer mining, at which he worked until the fall of 1869. In the latter year he located at Eagle Creek on the Missouri River, where he engaged in the wood business, supplying fuel for the boats which plied the Missouri River in those days. He carried on that business until 1875, when he engaged in trading with the Indians, traveling as far north as Red Deer River, meeting with the Indians in Canada, and thence to Doniphan Rapids on the Missouri River. In 1878-9 Mr. Smith owned and operated a farm on the Marais River, and in the fall of the latter year he engaged in prospecting in partnership with John Casnovier. The following spring he engaged in the saloon business, but in 1880 he had changed his business and was running a sale and feed stable in Fort Benton. In the summer of 1882 he went to the Cerro Coullee and pre-empted a tract of government land, on which he resided for three years. During the summer of 1885 he engaged in prospecting in the Little Range Mountains, but in 1886 he resumed his farming operations, which he carried on for three years. He then returned to Eagle Creek, Chouteau County, and took up a tract of government land, about three miles north of Big Sandy, and here he is now living. The ranch has during the intervening years been finely improved and well taken care of, and has been developed into one of the best farms in that section of the country.

Abraham Rogerland

In 1885 Mr. Smith was married to Margaret Cassaday, the ceremony being performed in Fort Benton by Judge John W. Tattan. Mrs. Smith passed away in 1906, leaving eight children who grew to manhood and womanhood, namely: Mary, who is the wife of John Hunsberger, of Browning, Montana, and they have five children; Minnie became the wife of Frederick Dunbar, of Big Sandy, and they have five children; Annie, who is the wife of Evert Cartwright, lives with and cares for her father and she is a member of the Sons and Daughters of the Pioneers; Franklin was married to Sibley Poulson, and they have two children; James was married to Gladys Raymond, and they are the parents of two children; Charles was married to Myrtle Clark and they have one child; William B. Jr., who is also a member of the Sons and Daughters of the Pioneers; and Eva. Mr. Smith is very proud of his fifteen grandchildren and his great-grandchildren, and nothing affords him more enjoyment than to have them about him listening to his stories of the early days in Montana.

Politically Mr. Smith has always given his support to the democratic ticket and has taken an intelligent interest in public affairs, especially as relating to the community with which he is identified. A strong advocate of education, he rendered effective service as a member of the School Board for about twelve years. He is a man of social and kindly nature, and of high moral character, so that he has merited the confidence and esteem which have so freely been accorded to him.

Abraham Hogeland, who came to Montana in the capacity of a civil engineer with the Northern Pacific Railway, has for many years been a successful rancher and a prominent man of affairs, and is at present receiver of the United States Land Office at Lewistown.

He was born at Southampton, Pennsylvania, October 10, 1855, a son of Elias and Elizabeth S. (Vanortsdale) Hogeland. His parents were both natives of Pennsylvania and of Quaker stock. The original American ancestors came from Holland and were pioneers at New Amsterdam, New York. Many of the earlier generations furnished sailors and seafaring men. Elias Hogeland was born in 1829 and died in 1918, and his wife was born in 1831 and died in 1896. The father was a Pennsylvania farmer and manufacturer, and for one term served as sheriff of his county. He was a democrat in politics. In his family were ten children, seven sons and three daughters, five of whom are still living, Abraham being the second in order of birth.

Abraham Hogeland received his literary education at Doylestown Seminary in Pennsylvania, and graduated in 1877 from Lafayette College with the Civil Engineer degree. For several years he was engaged in the produce commission business at Philadelphia, but in the spring of 1882 came west to Helena, Montana, and was employed as a civil engineer by the Northern Pacific Railway Company. He left the railroad in the spring of 1883 and located at the mouth of Big Spring Creek, where he homesteaded a claim. For over a quarter of a century he has given his time and energies to ranching and farming, and still owns a large and valuable ranch of 1,400 acres. He has used his old profession as a means of public service, having been elected county surveyor of Fergus County in 1896 and by re-election serving two terms. He was appointed receiver of the United States Land Office at Lewistown in October, 1913, and has since made that city his official headquarters. Mr. Hogeland is a democrat in politics.

February 21, 1881, he married Mary Walton. She was born at Horsham, Pennsylvania. They are the parents of eight children: Albert H., who died at the age of thirty-four, leaving a widow and one child; Caroline M., wife of Martin A. Johnson, a farmer; Elizabeth S., wife of Edgar G. R. Manwaring, a mining engineer; Theodore, who is a farmer, and by his marriage to Gertrude Yerks has one child; Frank W., who enlisted in the Hospital Corps of the United States Navy June 11, 1917; Ella Rebecca; Horace W. and Harold L., both students in the Lewistown High School.

William Louis Ford is one of the busy lawyers of White Sulphur Springs, has practiced twenty years, and has served three terms as county attorney of Meagher County.

Mr. Ford, who was born at Diamond City, Montana, May 31, 1878, is a son of a pioneer, the late William Taylor Ford. His father, who was born in Kentucky and died in 1917, at the age of eighty-five, had the spirit of adventure implanted in his nature. In 1849, when a boy, he journeyed by sailing vessel around the Horn to California, and saw much of the romantic life of the mining districts of that state. He went overland from California to Walla Walla, Washington, where he took up freighting, and carried goods a number of times over the trails to Virginia City, Montana. He was actively identified with the mining era around Helena and became practically identified with Montana during the decade of the sixties. He did freighting between various mining camps and at one time drove a stage coach between Diamond City and old Fort Logan. In 1880 he located six miles south of where White Sulphur Springs now stands and became one of the pioneer sheep ranchers in that locality. He continued this industry until a few years before his death, his son acquiring his herds on November 15, 1912. At one time he owned about 14,000 acres of land and ran his flocks in numbers between 3,000 and 12,000 head. He was a highly honored citizen of old Meagher County, served a time as county commissioner, and for one term was mayor of White Sulphur Springs. While at Walla Walla he became associated with the Masonic Fraternity and later demitted and became a charter member of Diamond City Lodge No. 7, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, and served that Lodge as master. Politically he was a democrat until 1893, after which he was a stanch republican. His wife, Helen Foley, was a native of Boston, Massachusetts, and died in 1916, at the age of seventy years. They were married at Walla Walla, and had three sons and three daughters, all still living, William L. being the fourth in age.

William Louis Ford was three years of age when his parents moved to White Sulphur Springs. While getting his public school education there he also spent much of his time on the range as a cowboy and sheep herder on his father's ranch. After the public schools he was a student in the Bishop Scott Academy at Portland, Oregon, and took his law course in the University of Michigan, graduating LL. B. with the class of 1900. He was admitted to the Michigan bar that year, and soon afterward returned to White Sulphur Springs, where he was admitted in the fall and at once began practice. He has handled much important litigation of a general nature, and his three successive terms as county attorney began with his first election in 1906. He is a republican in politics, is affiliated with Diamond City Lodge No. 7, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, Helena Consistory of the Scottish Rite, and Algeria Temple of the Mystic Shrine at Helena.

December 25, 1907, Mr. Ford married Margaret A. Young who was born at Monticello, Iowa, a daughter of James and Margaret A. Young. Her parents were both natives of Scotland, and her father is now a resident of White Sulphur Springs. Her mother is deceased. Mrs. Ford was the fourth among five children, four of whom are still living. To their marriage were born two children: Helen Margaret and Blanche Katherine.

George F. Heber came to Montana when a boy, grew up on a stock ranch, and has chiefly applied his efforts since reaching his majority to farming and stock raising. He now conducts a large and well ordered dairy farm, located sixteen miles east of White Sulphur Springs.

Mr. Heber was born at Mazeppa, Minnesota, June 28, 1883, son of John P. and Louise (Kintz) Heber. His father, who was born in Germany in 1847, was brought to this country at the age of five years, the family crossing the ocean on a sailing vessel to New York City. Soon afterward they located near Dubuque, Iowa, where John Heber was reared and educated. He grew up on his father's farm, but learned the trade of blacksmith, and subsequently went to Wabasha County, Minnesota, and established his business in the Town of Mazeppa. He remained there in active service as a blacksmith and stone mason until 1893, when he brought his family to Great Falls, Montana. Here he took up ranching twenty-five miles south of Great Falls in Cascade County, and did a successful business raising cattle and doing general farming until 1907, when he retired. He and his wife now live at Great Falls. He is a democrat and is affiliated with the Masons and Odd Fellows. His wife, Louise Kintz, was born in Iowa in 1846, her parents being early pioneers of that state. Of their nine children five are living, three sons and two daughters.

George F. Heber, the eighth child, was ten years of age when brought to Montana. He acquired his early education in the public schools of Minnesota and at Great Falls, and from early boyhood had a practical familiarity with ranching at his father's place in Cascade County. In 1906 he went into Western Canada and had the varied experiences of a farmer in that region until 1912, when he returned to Meagher County, Montana, and homesteaded sixteen miles east of White Sulphur Springs. He has developed a valuable place here, having 320 acres. His industry was cattle raising until 1917, since which year he has pursued a diversified scheme of dairying and farming. He keeps twenty head of milch cows, besides six head of horses, and ships his milk to Lewistown and Ryegate. In politics Mr. Heber is independent, voting for the man who gets his approval and judgment as the best candidate.

October 18, 1907, Mr. Heber married Miss Sadie Knight, who was born at Laramie, Wyoming, daughter of George F. and Sarah (Jones) Knight. She was the fourth among eight children, five of whom are still living. Both her parents were born at Baltimore, Maryland, and her mother is still living on the home ranch in Cascade County, Montana. Mr. and Mrs. Heber have two children: Gladys and Pearl.

Robert A. Craig, cashier of the Melstone State Bank, is one of the youngest bank officials in Montana, and in his brief career has shown an unusual ability at promoting himself on the basis of proved efficiency and merit.

He was born in Chicago, Illinois, December 25, 1894. His father, Andrew Craig, was born in 1862 at Edinburgh, Scotland, was reared there and as a young man came to the United States and located at Chicago. For a number of years he was associated with the office of the comptroller and land commissioner of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway, and was still doing duty there when he died at Chicago in January, 1908. He was a republican in politics, and a member of Myrtle Lodge of Masons in Chicago. At Milwaukee, Wisconsin, Andrew Craig married Miss Helen Thompson, who was born at Motherwell, Scotland, in 1862, and died at Chicago in September, 1907. They were the parents of four children: W. T., cashier of the First National Bank of Ingomar, Montana; Robert A.; Mary W., who graduated from the high school at Austin, Minnesota, at the age of sixteen, later graduated from the State Normal College at Winona, Minnesota, and is now living at Denver, Colorado; and Evalyn H., attending high school at Eagle, Wisconsin.

Robert A. Craig attended public school in his native city, finished the sophomore year of high school, and at the early age of fourteen, as an orphan boy, began applying himself to the serious business of life. His first work was as an office boy to the vice president of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway. He eagerly applied himself in all his leisure hours to the study of stenography, and after two years was given regular work as a stenographer and in that capacity earned his first promotions. Mr. Craig in 1911, at the age of seventeen, came to Miles City, Montana, and was ticket agent for the Milwaukee Railway there until June, 1914. At the latter date he became assistant cashier of the Melstone State Bank, being at that time under twenty. January 1, 1917, he became cashier and is now the active executive of the bank.

This institution is housed in a modern brick structure on Main Street, and was established as a private bank in 1908, being known as the Wiley, Clark and Felton Bank until it took out a state charter in May, 1914. The present officers are H. B. Wiley, president; C. W. Greening, vice president; R. A. Craig, cashier; F. H. Heimecke and M. J. Drange, assistant cashiers. This is one of the strong banks of the state, operating on a capital of $20,000, surplus and profits of $20,000 and average deposits of $250,000.

Mr. Craig takes an interest and part in local affairs, being president of the Commercial Club of Melstone, has served as local councilman, trustee of School District No. 64 of Musselshell County, and is a precinct committeeman of Precinct No. 1. He is a republican, a trustee of the Congregational Church, is a charter member of Crescent Lodge No. 117, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, at Melstone, is a charter member of Roundup Chapter No. 30, Royal Arch Masons, a member of Miles Commandery, Knights Templar, at Miles City, and is the first worthy patron of Garland Chapter, Order of Eastern Star, U. D., of Melstone. Besides his own home Mr. Craig owns other real estate in Melstone.

He married at Miles City February 1, 1916, Miss Myrtle Meader, who was born at Elm Springs, South Dakota. They have two children, Robert C., born January 29, 1917, and Maxine Elizabeth, born January 15, 1919.

William A. Brown is a Great Falls banker and has been a resident of that city for over twenty years.

Mr. Brown was born at St. Catherine's, Ontario, Canada, September 4, 1877, a son of William A. and Elizabeth (Mills) Brown. His father spent his active career as a flour miller and meat packer. He died in 1879, at the age of fifty-seven. The mother is still living, in her eighty-sixth year. Of her thirteen children five sons and five daughters survive, William A. being the youngest.

William A. Brown acquired a substantial education in the schools of his native Province and left home at the age of twenty, arriving in Great Falls in September, 1897. His first employment was with the First National Bank. He started as messenger, was promoted to bookkeeper, then to teller, and since 1912 has been cashier of one of the largest and strongest banks in the state. He is an independent voter and is affiliated with Great Falls Lodge No. 214 of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. October 10, 1907, Mr. Brown married Miss Winifred L. Downing. She was born at Fort Benton, Montana, a daughter of C. G. Downing. To their marriage were born three sons, Frederick T.; Robert A. and William A., Jr.

Roy S. Alley. A lawyer by profession, Mr. Alley, who has been a resident of Butte for a quarter of a century, has found his profession somewhat obscured by the preponderance of his interests in corporation management and business affairs. Mr. Alley for a number of years has been the personal representative at Butte of President John D. Ryan of the Amalgamated Copper Company.

Mr. Alley was born at Wilber, Nebraska, March 20, 1876. His parents, Shannon S. and Josephine (Berger) Alley, were Nebraska pioneers, and his father for many years was a prominent attorney in the state.

Roy S. Alley, who came to Butte in 1895, was liberally educated, and graduated in law from the University of Denver in 1898. During his early career as a practicing lawyer he took an active part in politics as a democrat. He served as deputy county attorney of Silver Bow County in 1899-1900, and also was a member of the Twelfth Legislative Assembly.

In 1905 he became associated with Mr. Ryan as his personal representative at Butte. He is director and president of the Blackfoot Land Development Company, a director in a number of subsidiary companies of the Amalgamated, and has extensive interests personally in lands, townsites and banks of Montana, Idaho and Utah.

Mr. Alley married Miss Jessie Lang. Their two children are John Campbell, born August 26, 1907; and Harry Charles, born July 4, 1913. Mr. Alley is affiliated with Mount Moriah Lodge No. 24, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, Montana Commandery of the Knights Templar, Butte Consistory of the Scottish Rite, Bagdad Temple of the Mystic Shrine and Silver Bow Lodge No. 240 of the Elks. He is a member of the Silver Bow Club of Butte, the Anaconda Club of Anaconda and the Rocky Mountain Rifle Club of Butte.

Edward Hickey. The active career of Edward Hickey was closely associated with those events and developments that made Butte "the greatest mining camp in the world." Mr. Hickey came to Montana during the sixties, has lived in the territory and state for over half a century, and in the various developments of the Butte district there has been little of importance with which he has not been actively identified.

Mr. Hickey was born in St. Lawrence County, New York, October 12, 1841, a son of Thomas and Kathryn (Curran) Hickey. After acquiring a common school education and graduating in 1855 he went to work, and just eleven years later arrived in Montana and began prospecting in the Butte district. He was one of the first to pin their faith to the future of Butte, and that faith was realized after years of vicissitudes in prospecting and mining. It was Edward Hickey who located the St. Lawrence, Rock Island and Diamond lode claims in the Butte district, and he also assisted in locating the Anaconda claim on New Year's eve, 1875.

Like other prospectors his attention was mainly fixed upon gold and silver, and he had been in Montana some fifteen years before the third epoch of Butte's mining history was introduced, ushering in the production of copper. Mr. Hickey placed his stakes on the claims which in later years became the wonder mines of the world.

Mr. Hickey spent several fortunes in developing the best promising sections of Montana's mineral resources. As a capitalist he has always befriended Butte, and for years has been recognized as one of the city's most generous and public spirited citizens.

In recent years his name has been closely associated with a number of mining and banking companies. He is president of the State Savings Bank of Butte, has served as an official of the American Savings Bank of Seattle and the Butte Crude Petroleum Company, the Tuolumne Copper Mining Company, the Pilot Butte and Butte Main Range Copper Company, and the Stewart Lead and Silver Mining Company. A number of years ago Mr. Hickey set aside a considerable fund, the proceeds of which were to be used in assisting deserving and industrious newsboys toward a real start in life. Mr. Hickey is one of the honored members of the Silver Bow Club, but has never participated in politics.

He married Miss Margaret Murphy. To their marriage were born Edward Hickey, Ella Hickey, Roscoe and William Hickey. Edward, Jr., is secretary of the Pilot Butte Company.

Robert J. Hamilton, Indian attorney at Browning for the Blackfoot Indian Reservation, has done more than any other man to protect the interests of the wards of the government in this region, and is not only held in reverent respect by them, but has the full confidence of all with whom he is brought into contact no matter what their station in life may be. He was born at Fort Benton, Montana, July 4, 1870, a son of A. B. Hamilton, and grandson of Joseph Benton Hamilton, nephew of United States Senator Benton. The mother of Robert J. Hamilton was a full blood Indian, who died when he was born, and he was reared and educated at Choteau, named for Pierre Choteau, a noted Frenchman who assisted General Washington in his Indian warfare. Later Mr. Hamilton went to the Carlisle, Pennsylvania, Indian School, and after being graduated therefrom he returned to Montana and studied law with Major Baldwin, an attorney of Kalispell, who was interested in the bright young man. For three years, under the Cleveland administration, Major Baldwin was Indian agent and had thus become acquainted with Robert J. Hamilton and encouraged him to improve himself, and Mr. Hamilton has never forgotten what he owes to this kindly disposed gentleman, his gratitude extending to all of the Baldwin family.

Mr. Hamilton began to practice law at Kalispell, and very soon his ability was recognized by his appointment as United States District Court commissioner, his duty being to hear all criminal cases or those pertaining to any offenses against the United States laws. He has heard some noted cases, including the enforcing of the Chinese exclusion laws, and the operations against counterfitters and violators of the custom house and revenue laws. For the last six years he has been president of the business convention of the Blackfoot tribes of Indiana, which organization is recognized by Congress in its dealings with the different tribes. He has been elected five different times as a delegate to go to Washington, District of Columbia, and present the grievances of the Indians before the Congressional committee and different departments which have charge of Indian affairs.

Prior to Mr. Hamilton's entry into the affairs of the reservation the Indians were terribly imposed upon by dishonest government officials. Having been born a member of the tribe, Mr. Hamilton understood his people and their rights, and determined to see that they were protected. He went to Washington, carrying with him fully 200 affidavits relative to instances of dishonest dealing on the part of the superintendent and his associates. Gaining the attention of Senator Lane of Oregon, Mr. Hamilton presented the case to him and so interested that statesman that a full investigation was ordered and made and these affidavits were published in the Congressional Record. As a result the dishonest Government employes were discharged, and the rights of the Indians properly safeguarded. According to the present regulations each new born child receives an allotment of 320 acres of land, the remainder to be held in reserve for pro-rata allotment. According to the law of 1907 an allotment was to be made and then the remainder of the reservation thrown open for settlement. This Mr. Hamilton attacked and finally had it repealed and the present law passed and enforced, which secures all of the reservation to the Indians.

Mr. Hamilton was married to Rosa Henault, pronounced "Eno," who was born at Choteau, Montana, a daughter of Stephen and Maggie (Guardipu) Henault. Mrs. Hamilton is a quarter breed Indian. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton, six in number, are as follows: Theo, who married Hugh Jackson, a veteran of the great war, who, returning from his service in France, brought with him in his body bullets of the enemy not yet extracted; and Rosalie, Robert, Clara, Joseph and Hildegarde, all of whom are at home. In national matters Mr. Hamilton is a democrat, but locally usually casts his vote for the man rather than for the party. In religious belief he is a Catholic.

Too much credit cannot be given Mr. Hamilton, not only for his fearless stand with references to the abuses endured by his mother's people, but also for the pluck, endurance and ambition of the lad, who, struggling against obstacles, managed to fight his way upward and develop into the highly educated, cultivated man who today stands without a peer in his special line. He is a fighter and an enemy to be reckoned with, as many a dishonest man has discovered to his sorrow. The evil-doer meets a foe who is relentless when he comes in contact with Mr. Hamilton, but the friendless one, impoverished through the dishonesty of others, appeals to him and another side of his nature is displayed. Tenderly and efficiently he renders an unselfish service, rights the wrong and follows the future of the one he befriends with solicitude. His principal interest now is centered upon the Blackfoot Indians, but no one in need ever comes to him without receiving assistance. Mr. Hamilton has been friendless, poor and alone, and knows just what is necessary to bring happiness back into a desolated life, and goes about doing it without any unnecessary delay. There are few men in the state who stand any higher in public esteem than he, and in his tribe he is recognized as the friend of his people and their defender against all aggressors.

W. H. C. Greene, who has become well known in Montana, particularly in the Flathead district, as a newspaper man and more recently as private secretary to Col. A. A. White, is not only a typical westerner, but a cosmopolitan in spirit and experience. He has probably seen as much of the world and the affairs of men as any other resident of Montana.

He was born in the famous Illinois corn belt at Champaign, a son of William D. and Margaret (Harris) Greene. He is a descendant of the Greene family which produced Gen. Nathaniel Greene, one of the noted leaders of the American forces of the Revolutionary war. For several generations the Greenes have been of Quaker stock.

When W. H. C. Greene was eight months old his parents moved to Kansas, and he grew up on the "Flying X Ranch" of 40,000 acres, a vast ranch property owned by the Greene family. He was educated in the public schools of Kansas, also attended Northwestern University at Chicago, and studied journalism. He also took an agricultural and engineering course in Manitoba University at Winnipeg, and was a student of poultry husbandry at Alberta University in Edmonton, Canada. For a time he was employed as an assistant in the advertising department of L. S. Ayres & Company, owners of the largest store in Indiana. There he laid the foundation of his life's work as a publicity man. His first regular newspaper assignment was with the old Rock Island Argus in Illinois. He was also advertising manager for the Rock Island Plow Company. Later he was given an assignment for special Sunday feature writing by the Associated Press. During this engagement he went around the world, traveling over Central and South America, the Hawaiian Islands, Philippines, Japan, Australia and in western Europe. While stricken with the yellow fever he was detained in the pesthouse at Panama.

After returning to the United States he served as a deputy sheriff in New Mexico one year. He and a fellow deputy raided a saloon and engaged in battle with its Mexican occupants. Five Mexicans were killed and sixteen taken prisoner, and Mr. Greene carries as a personal reminder of the battle a bullet in his body.

His adventurous disposition next led him to western Canada, and for a number of months he was engaged on a Government survey, outlining the courses of Alberta's waterways. Here he endured all kinds of hardships. One day he discovered a human skeleton with a rifle by its side and skeletons of five wolves nearby, mute reminders of a desperate wilderness encounter. While in Alberta he also engaged a half-breed guide and went on a prospecting tour up the Athabaca River. He discovered a promising gold lead, but one morning while returning he awakened to find his guide departed with his entire outfit, including $3,000 worth of gold dust. It was seventy-two miles back to the nearest outpost of civilization, and he walked the entire distance without lying down once.

From Canada Mr. Greene came to the Flathead Country of Montana and engaged in the newspaper business at Polson. He was an associate of the old Polson Chief, and also published the Weekly Interpreter. Mr. Greene is an independent in politics, believing in supporting the man rather than the party.

This is only a brief summary of his varied and adventurous career. As a young man in Kansas he served as captain of a cavalry company in the State Militia. His old friends and acquaintances know him popularly as "Wild Bill," a name bestowed upon him for his fearless and skillful riding, and as a horseman and cow puncher he has outdone some of the best exploits on record. He won the world championship as a rough rider and roper at Holly, Colorado, Fort Worth, Texas, Galveston, Oklahoma City, Alvarado, Texas, and Naxcero, Mexico. He has also written a scenario entitled "The Heart of a Cowboy," a five reel picture depicting life in Montana.

Armon C. Spooner, M. D. Ten years a resident of Montana, Doctor. Spooner has had a busy professional career at Bainville, and has performed a notable work not only in his private practice but as a leader in the local public health movement, and is also the present mayor of the town.

Doctor Spooner was born at Kingston, Ontario, September 16, 1875, son of Niram and Elizabeth (Walters) Spooner. The Spooner family is English and Irish in ancestry and was probably established in Ontario by an emigrant from New England, who remained stanch to the Crown in colonial politics. Doctor Spooner's parents grew up and spent their lives as farmers in Ontario. The parents of Elizabeth Walters came from England. Doctor Spooner is the oldest of three children, Lottie, his sister, being the wife of Harry Darling, living near Kingston, while Myrtle, the other sister, is the wife of Walter Clogg, a farmer in the same community.

Doctor Spooner attended the public schools of Ontario, the Kingston Collegiate Institute, and graduated A. B. from Queens University at Kingston. The following four years he was a teacher in the high school at Sydenham, and then returned to the University as a student of medicine, graduating in 1905.

His professional career has been spent altogether in the United States. He practiced at Elma, Iowa, four years, and on leaving there and just before coming to Montana he took a course in the Chicago Post-Graduate School of Medicine. For a few months he practiced at Fairview, Montana, and then located at Bainville. Doctor Spooner carried many of the heavy professional burdens of his community during the influenza epidemic of 1918 and 1919. During the first scourge perhaps 500 people were afflicted in and around Bainville, though only two deaths resulted. The 1919 epidemic was much milder in form, with not more than a tenth of the number of cases in the previous year. Besides these unusual duties of his professional work Doctor Spooner was also a member of the Volunteer Medical Service Corps during the war.

Soon after coming to Bainville he established the first drug store, and continued as its proprietor until January, 1920. He served one term as an alderman and was the first county health officer of Roosevelt County. He is now giving much of his time to his duties as mayor of Bainville. Doctor Spooner is a naturalized American citizen, and cast his first presidential vote in November, 1920. He became a Master Mason at Elma, Iowa.

June 2, 1914, at Monticello, Iowa, he married Miss Elizabeth McCarthy, of Elma, where they first met. Mrs. Spooner was born in Iowa, daughter of Eugene and Mary (Tobin) McCarthy. Her father was a railroad man at New Hampton, Iowa, when he died. Mrs. Spooner was educated in the Elma High School, in the Iowa State Teachers College and the Valley City Normal School of North Dakota, and had a successful experience as a primary teacher at Elma and Monticello for several years. She has done much valuable work outside her home since coming to Bainville, and is one of the Board of Directors of the Bainville schools and president of the Ladies Aid of the Congregational Church. Doctor and Mrs. Spooner have one daughter, Jean Elizabeth, born January 6, 1918, at Minneapolis, Minnesota.

Albert Fuller Collier. The Collier family is a well known one in Hill County, three brothers of that name having homesteaded in this region on the Little Boxelder Creek and developed valuable properties. Two still survive, Joe and Albert Fuller, but the third, Gallitan, lost his life in an accident, having been thrown from his horse with such force as to preclude any hope of recovery. Joe Collier's biography appears elsewhere in this work. Albert Fuller Collier, whose name heads this review, is one of the men who has attained to an enviable place among the farmers and stockmen of this region, and now owns 300 acres of land. He was born at Fulton, Kentucky, just opposite the state line of Tennessee, on June 21, 1858, a son of James H. and Fountnella (Hughes) Collier.

James H. Collier was born in North Carolina and died in Tennessee when seventy-four years of age, and his wife passed away when sixty years old. They became the parents of nine sons and three daughters, of whom Albert Fuller Collier was the eldest born. Seven sons and two daughters survive of this large family. James H. Collier engaged in farming and dealt in tobacco. A man of good judgment, his fellow citizens were glad to have him act for them as a justice of the peace, and he held that office for over thirty-five years. Aside from that office he did not care to enter public life, but he always voted the straight democratic ticket. Both as a Mason and Methodist he espoused and supported the highest ideals of upright living.

Albert Fuller Collier passed his boyhood as the average lad of his time and neighborhood, assisting his father and attending school, and he remained at home until he was twenty-five years old, at that time coming west to Idaho, and his first employment after his arrival in the state was putting in posts at Silver City. Leaving Idaho for Oregon, he rode the range on a sheep ranch for three years, working up to be foreman. In the fall of 1888 he went to Soda Springs, Idaho, and taking charge of a band of sheep drove it back overland to Helena, Montana, and during the subsequent winter worked by the day in that city. In March, 1889, he went to Sun River, Montana, and during that summer was on a sheep ranch, and also was engaged in making hay in old Chouteau County, now Teton County. That winter he was at Fort Benton, leaving it the following spring to work on a ranch, but returning to it in a short time. In the spring of 1890 he located on Little Boxelder Creek in old Chouteau County, now Hill County, and secured 300 acres of land. His first house was a log one, but he replaced it in 1902 with a substantial frame structure. His barn is of good grade, and his other buildings are suitable for the purposes to which they are put. Mr. Collier has had as many as 3,500 cattle, but now carries about 150 head of Hereford cattle and a number of Merino sheep. He belongs to the Woodmen of the World. A democrat, he supports his party ticket, but has not cared to enter public life.

On June 12, 1902, Mr. Collier was married to Catherine Schnendaman, born at Saint Joseph, Missouri, a daughter of Benedict and Anna (Edalbock) Schnendaman, the former of whom, born in Illinois, died in 1879, and the latter, born in Germany, survives and makes her home in Missouri, being now sixty-seven years of age. Mr. and Mrs. Schnendaman had seven children, all of whom are now deceased except Mrs. Collier, who was the third in order of birth. Mr. and Mrs. Collier have four children, namely: Cornelia, Joseph, Anna and Margaret.

Albert C. Gifford, whose home is at Fallon, is an old time Montanan. His advent to the territory nearly corresponded with the disappearance of the great buffalo herds from the prairies and valleys of the northwest, and he is one of the best living authorities on the last phases of an industry built up on the hunting of buffalo for meat and hides. Mr. Gifford adapted himself to changing circumstances, and for many years was a prominent horse and cattle rancher, but is now almost entirely concerned with agriculture.

Mr. Gifford was born nine miles east of the university town of Delaware, Delaware County, Ohio, October 17, 1852, son of James Clinton and Susan (Bockoven) Gifford. His maternal grandfather was Jacob Bockoven. James C. Gifford was born in Oswego County, New York, while his wife was a native of Delaware County, Ohio. In 1856, when Alfred C. was four years of age, the family moved to Iowa and settled in Marshall County, where the father established a blacksmith shop and bought farm land at $2.60 an acre. He and his wife spent their remaining years in that locality, where he died in 1906, at the age of seventy-five, and his wife in 1894, at the age of sixty-seven. They had two sons, Albert C. and Jacob K. The latter, who died at Miles City January 4, 1919, married Effie (Bassett) Eckman, and was survived by two children.

Albert C. Gifford grew up on his father's Iowa farm and early in his career started for the West. After a brief stay in the Black Hills country he journeyed on horseback and arrived at Miles City, Montana, October 1, 1881. At that time he was handling buffalo hides and buffalo meat, and his first headquarters were at O'Fallon.

O'Fallon was then the terminus of the Northern Pacific Railroad, though track laying was proceeding westward and reached Miles City about the holidays of that year. The Town of O'Fallon, in Mr. Gifford's description, contained a section house, H. A. Bruns & Company Bank, a saloon, a store of the construction company, with the section house as the hotel. A big sign over the door of the "tent saloon" bore the words "Rev. C. A. Duffy's Saloon," and that was not a joke, since the proprietor had really been a preacher.

Arriving in Montana, Mr. Gifford at once began looking up business for himself and covered the county for miles around, visiting hunters. Some of the hides and meat he bought came from the present site of Ekalaka, and one of his customers was the frontiersman David H. Russell. Other men of the early days were his customers, including a number who became permanent and aided in the civic development of the region, such as Red McDonald and Oscar Brackett. There was sufficient in his line to keep Mr. Gifford busy all the winter, and the following winter he established himself at Sully Springs, now in North Dakota. The buffalo disappeared, and with it the industry built on that denizen of the prairies and only a single carload of meat did Mr. Gifford ship in 1883.

In the spring of 1883 Mr. Gifford entered into a partnership with Marquis de Mores, a French soldier and son-in-law of Baron von Hoffman of New York. They were general merchants, and Mr. Gifford remained with the outfit until fall, and then drew his wages and profits and re-entered the buffalo meat and hide business in Dakota. The only band of those animals left in that region worth attention contained about 5,000, and the night before Mr. Gifford reached them old Sitting Bull and his warriors dropped in on the buffaloes and killed 2700. Mr. Gifford got only a carload of the meat, though he secured many hundreds of hides sold him by the Sioux.

The last phase of the great buffalo hunting industry was the gathering up of bones, in which thousands were engaged for a number of years. These bones were shipped in immense quantities to the East. Mr. Gifford tried that enterprise in the region of the Missouri River, above the mouth of Big Dry Creek, and accumulated about 600 tons of bones for shipment down the Missouri. However, that season water was so low that no boat could reach his cargo and he abandoned them.

Mr. Gifford located along the Great Northern Railroad in 1887 and engaged in the business of furnishing meat to the contractors and horses for the outfit during that summer. For a few years he marketed horses in Dakota among the farmers, and gave much of his time for several successive years in an effort to collect what was due him. With the closing up of that experience he returned to Fallon, and that town has been his headquarters ever since. Mr. Gifford erected his present home in 1889, then the best house in Custer County outside of Miles City. He also entered a pre-emption, his home being its first improvement. Here he established a horse ranch, breeding the heavy horses, and introducing some blooded stallions for the purpose. The market for his horses was found at home and in the states further east. When horses became so low in price that handling them was unprofitable Mr. Gifford became a "cow man," handling chiefly range stock, with a few Shorthorns mixed in his herd. Eventually he developed adjacent to Fallon a ranch of 2480 acres and another smaller ranch of 1120 acres north of Marsh in Dawson County. From these ranches he sent a few cattle to market, and old time cattle men readily identified his stock by such brands as Diamond G, the Circle Arrow and the Box 2.

Mr. Gifford sold his cattle in 1918, and since then hardly more than twenty-five head have borne his brands. For several years past he has been the representative of an English company loaning money on farms, and through his agency a half million dollars have been spread out over this region. On his own land he has experimented with farming, dry farming, and has tasted both the bitter and sweet of such experience. By a system of irrigation, pumping water from the Yellowstone River, he has achieved much more favorable and reliable results.

Mr. Gifford has never made himself a factor in politics in Montana, though he has generally voted at elections and on national issues is a republican. He is affiliated with Terry Lodge of Masons, having been raised in that order in recent years.

At Cromwell, Minnesota, February 22, 1894, he married Miss Angelina Pearce, daughter of Samuel Pearce and a sister of the late Robert R. Pearce of Baker, Montana. Mrs. Gifford was born at Dorchester, England, in the Town of Sherbourne, September 30, 1870. In 1874, almost before she can remember, she was brought to the United States by her father, who came over with the Yovel colony. Mrs. Gifford received her education in the Burlington school in Becker County, Minnesota.

Mrs. Janet Whitney. Wholly devoted to home and domestic duties through all the best years of her life, there is not much to record concerning the life of the average woman. A celebrated writer once said that the future destiny of a great nation depended upon its wives and mothers. In the settlement of the great Northwest woman bore her full share of hardship, sufferings and other vicissitudes, helping man in the rugged toil of wood and field, cheering him when cast down and discouraged, sharing his dangers and rejoicing in his success. In a compendium such as the one in hand woman should have definite representation, for in many respects they have had a large part in the development of the section of country included within the scope of this work. Among the noble, self-sacrificing and patient mothers of Montana, she whose name appears at the head of this sketch should receive specific mention, for she has earnestly and courageously done her part in the great drama of civilization enacted here.

Mrs. Janet Whitney was born near Paisley, Scotland, on November 10, 1858, the daughter of James and Christina Walker, of whose children four survive besides Mrs. Whitney, namely: John, of the Alzada locality in Montana; Mrs. Grace Howell, of Butte County, South Dakota; Henry Walker, who is located on the Little Missouri in Carter County, Montana; and Mrs. F. M. King, of Alzada. James Walker, the father of these children, came to the United States, locating in Montana, where he spent the remainder of his life as a stockman and farmer, and his death occurred at Alzada in 1912. His widow still survives, at the age of eighty-one years. Janet Walker was married on March 29, 1875, in Bradford County, Pennsylvania, to Robert Johnstone. The latter was born in Fifeshire, Scotland, in 1853, and was there reared, his education being somewhat limited, though sufficient to enable him to conduct his own business affairs. He became a coal miner, and at the age of seventeen years he immigrated to the United States, locating first in Bradford County, Pennsylvania. From there he went to Boone County, Iowa, where he spent three years, going from there to Mongona, South Dakota, where he continued to follow his trade of mining. He then accompanied his older brother, Thomas Johnstone, to the Black Hills, then the center of the mining world, and there he engaged in gold mining for about three years. Later a little band of pioneers, of whom Robert and Thomas Johnstone were the leaders, came to the valley of the Little Missouri River and there made settlement, being among the earliest to locate in that region. There he preempted land along the Little Missouri, but unfortunately his death occurred in March, 1890, at the comparatively early age of thirty-seven years, and his widow was left alone with six small children and the title to the ranch not completed. Mrs. Johnstone bravely set herself to the task of rearing and educating her children and operating the homestead, to which she had converted the ranch. In addition to proving up the Johnstone entry the Government permitted her to prove up another claim for herself some years afterward. During the trying years she bravely performed any work which would enable her to keep up the family exchequer, doing family washings, selling eggs from her barnyard fowls, and in many other ways known to the pioneers maintaining herself and rearing and educating her children.

To Mr. and Mrs. Johnstone were born the following children: Christina, the wife of Al Vannett, of Powder River County, Montana, and the mother of three children, Howard, Hazel and Freda; Thomas, who died in childhood; James, a ranchman on Willow Creek, Montana, married Losa Ingalls, and they have two children, Orville and Arthur; Caroline became the wife of Orville J. Brownfield, a ranchman near Pinicle, Montana, and they have seven children, Earl, Lloyd, Ethel, Edgar, Benjamin, Nora and Della Frances; Bert, a ranchman in Carter County, married Emily Butcher, and they have three children, Mildred, Stanley and Donald; John, who now occupies the old homestead, where he is ranching and farming, married Linnie Watts, and they have three children, Edith, Esther and Ella.

In 1893 Mrs. Johnstone became the wife of George Whitney, but the union was not entirely satisfactory and for a second time Mrs. Whitney was thrown upon her own resources. For a time she ran a road ranch near old Five Mile in addition to operating her home ranch, and thus was able to carry her burden alone. As a ranchwoman Mrs. Whitney has built up a splendid, though modest, herd of white face cattle. She managed and directed her affairs with discrimination and good judgment, and at the outbreak of the World war she invested her surplus in cattle, but after the close of the war she disposed of her stock and retired from the cattle business.

By her union with Mr. Whitney she had four children, namely: Clara, the wife of Roy McCulley, of Michigan; Austin, of Alzada; George, who at the age of eighteen years was slain by an irresponsible assassin; and Evelyn, the wife of Wilbur Davis, of Carter County, who served two years during the recent war on the French fighting line and went "over the top" several times, without injury. Roy McCulley, the other son-in-law, was also in the foreign service, as a truck driver. Howard Vannett, Mrs. Whitney's grandson, was in the ambulance service in France for more than a year.

Mrs. Whitney is in many respects a remarkable woman. Denied in her youth of a fair opportunity for an education, she determined to make up for that deficiency by her own efforts, and in this she succeeded so well that she became a well informed and intelligent woman. Because of her accomplishments in the face of discouraging handicaps and her splendid qualities of character she has earned and now enjoys the sincere respect and esteem of all who know her, and she is eminently deserving of record in a work of the character of the one in hand.

CHARLES L. WOOD. Among the successful ranchmen of Carter County and one who has been a prominent factor in the region about Alzada for a number of years is Charles L. Wood, who has for many years been identified with the life and interests of the Northwest. His time has been devoted to the stock industry in the main, and his efforts have resulted in good not only to himself but to the community as well.

Mr. Wood was born in Andrew County, Missouri, May 3, 1868, but he grew up in Nodaway County of that state. His father, Benjamin Wood, moved from Virginia to Missouri about the year 1840 and settled in Andrew County. He spent his life as a farmer, and died there about 1872. He married a Miss Cummings, who preceded him in death about one year, and they were the parents of the following children: Mattie D., who died as Mrs. Cressler; William W., of Belle Fourche, South Dakota; Harvey F., whose home is in Norfolk, Nebraska; Charles L., the Montana ranchman; and Arthur A., a contractor at Colorado Springs, Colorado.

Charles L. Wood was orphaned by the death of his parents when but four years of age, and was reared in the home of an aunt, Mrs. Alpheus Dearing, his father's sister. His early life was spent on a farm, and the educational training he received came from the rural schools. He remained with his relatives until the spring of 1886, and at that time started out in life for himself. He turned his face westward to join a brother, traveling by rail to Buffalo Gap, South Dakota, the then terminus of the railroad. He had money sufficient to cover the journey but no surplus capital, and it was necessary to find immediate employment, and in fact the money used for his traveling expenses had been borrowed from his brother, and it behooved him to find a means of sustaining himself and repay the loan.

On leaving the train at Buffalo Gap he took the stage to Deadwood, and began work on a valley ranch there, receiving $35.00 a month during the summer season, this having been about double the wage he could have obtained in his Missouri home. From the Deadwood ranch he went into Crook County, Wyoming, spent the winter with his brother there, and then began work on the range and had his first experience at "cow punching." The ranch was the "T+T," belonging to the Driskill Brothers of Texas, and was one of the oldest properties of the region. Mr. Wood remained with that company during the summers until 1898, having in the meantime, after accumulating some cattle of his own, devoted the winter months to their care. His first cattle brand was "H-W," which he owned in company with his brother. His affairs subsequently drifted into a partnership with H. C. Wier, and they developed a considerable herd of cattle ranging over Mr. Wier's holdings along the Little Missouri River, operating under the firm name of C. L. Wood & Company. But after six years the partnership was dissolved, Mr. Wood taking a stock of goods which the firm owned in Alzada in exchange for his interest in the stock. He thereafter remained in the mercantile business until the fall of 1916, when he disposed of those interests and returned to the stock business. His present cattle brand is the well known "3M," and until 1918 he confined his efforts to cattle exclusively, but in the fall of that year sheep entered into his stock raising, and judging from his experience sheep bring quicker returns and produce more satisfactory results than cattle and are the favored stock.

Mr. Wood secured his first Government land in Wyoming, proving up both a homestead and a preemption in Crook County. He still retains his homestead, and also other lands acquired by purchase, some of which are under irrigation and substantially improved, and portions of the tract are producing alfalfa. In Carter County, Montana, where he now resides, he acquired a considerable range for his stock by purchase. He lived first in Custer County, then in Fallon, and by a more recent political organization has become a resident of Carter County. During six years of his residence in Fallon County he served as a county commissioner, being for a year and a half of that time on the board with B. C. Baldwin and Thomas Fitzsimmons, but owing to the great distance he had to travel on official business and the frequency of these trips to the county seat he resigned the office. Since 1904 the Town of Alzada has been his home, and during the past two years he has occupied his present commodious residence. He is as extensively engaged in the cattle business as in former years, and is breeding an excellent strain of White Face animals. During several years he has been one of the prominent shippers of the region.

In Belle Fourche, South Dakota, on the 19th of September, 1906, Mr. Wood was married to Miss Leona Zimmerman, a daughter of John J. and Leah (Stover) Zimmerman. Her father came to Montana from Mechanicsville, Iowa, and settled on Five Mile, then in Custer County, in 1883. But he subsequently returned to Iowa and now resides at Marshalltown in that state. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Zimmerman are: Elmer D., who resides in Miles City, Montana; Ida, the wife of Charles Johnston, of Powder River County, this state; Ola, who is engaged in ranching on Five Mile; Ami, a stockman of Carter County; Mrs. Wood, who was born in Iowa March 7, 1881; and Gomer, of Alzada. Two children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Wood, Alvin L. and Genevieve.

Mr. Wood voted with the democratic party until 1904, when he gave his allegiance to Mr. Roosevelt, but has again returned to the democratic party. During the early days in Wyoming he frequently attended county conventions of his party. In his fraternal relations he has membership in the Masonic Order, belonging to the Blue Lodge at Sundance, Wyoming.

JOHN F. BUCK. Since he came to Southeastern Montana many years ago the gentleman of whom this sketch is penned has been a witness of many important changes in this vicinity, and his reminiscences of the early days here are most interesting and entertaining. But change is constant and general, generations rise and pass unmarked away, and it is the duty of posterity as well as a present gratification to place upon the printed page a true record of the lives of those who have preceded us on the stage of action and left to their descendants the record of their struggles and achievements. The years of the honored subject are part of an indissoluble chain which links the annals of the past to those of the latter-day progress and prosperity, and the history of this section would not be complete without due reference to the long, useful and successful life Mr. Buck has lived, having been adequately rewarded in one of the most important fields of labor—farming and stock raising. Generous and big-hearted, kindly in disposition, he has never lacked for friends, and many of them will peruse his life record, as here presented, with interest.

T. Casey Wilkerson

John F. Buck was born about fifty miles east of Montreal, in the province of Quebec, Canada, on June 24, 1856. He is the son of Martin Buck, also a native of the province of Quebec and a life-long farmer. The family originated in England, whence the progenitors came to America and settled in Vermont during the colonial period, later members of the family immigrating to Canada. John F. Buck was reared and educated in his native province, and in his youth he assisted his father in the labors of the farm. A strong desire to see more of the world induced him to come to the United States. Crossing the border at Detroit, he came direct to Nevada, where he went to work in the mines. Industrious and economical, he soon found himself with some capital, but he remained in the Eureka mines several years, gaining some valuable experience in connection with mining. From there he went to Terryville in the Black Hills, where he was employed in the gold mines for three years, being night foreman of the Caledonia mines.

In 1885 Mr. Buck made a prospecting trip into Southeastern Montana to locate a ranch, coming with a team and camping outfit. He selected his first location at the head of North Tie Creek, this now being the Allen ranch, but Mr. Buck occupied it about thirteen years, establishing himself in the horse and cattle business there. Their pioneer home, built of pine logs, was of three rooms, with a half story above, and barn and sheds were likewise constructed. Mr. Buck first handled grade Shorthorn cattle, which he ran for several years under the brand "cross V cross," and the first shipment of his cattle he drove to Rapid City, 150 miles away. Eventually disposing of his first ranch, Mr. Buck made a location near the head of Dry Creek, on which he filed, and this became the nucleus of the splendid ranch and fine estate which he now owns and occupies. His first residence here was of logs, containing five rooms, and this sheltered the family for ten years, when he erected his present substantial, commodious and well arranged home, which comprises ten rooms and was erected in 1908. Everything about the place is in keeping with the house, the general appearance of the ranch indicating the owner to be a man of taste and excellent judgment. When he came to his present ranch Mr. Buck changed his cattle, taking up the Hereford strain, and has been breeding the pure stock for almost a quarter of a century, his cattle, while not registered, being considered as good as any to be found in this section of the country. His ranch comprises 3,000 acres (4,000 acres including the son's holdings) and extends well toward the head of Dry Creek. It is all under fence and is stocked with about 300 head of cattle, which are running under the old brand. Mr. Buck farms for feed, although he has harvested some splendid crops of grain. Corn is his best feed grown for stock, utilizing the fodder when cut green. Oats have yielded him seventy-two bushels per acre and wheat, forty-two bushels per acre.

Soon after he came to Montana Mr. Buck did considerable hunting for big game. Buffalo were then scarce, but deer and antelope were plentiful, and among his hunting companions were two lawyers, Captain Cohn, of Des Moines, and Mortimer C. Tracy, the present dean of the Carter County bar. Mr. Buck has lived in three counties without changing his place of residence. He first lived in Custer County, out of which Fallon County was created, and then Carter County was organized. Mr. Buck encouraged the latter move, and at first election he was chosen a member of the Board of County Commissioners. The board of which he is now a member, and of which he is chairman, has now in hand the project of building a new courthouse, which with its furnishings will represent an outlay of about $28,000. In 1919 about $21,000 was spent on road building in the county, and in this and other ways Mr. Buck evidences his progressive and enterprising character.

Politically he has always given his support to the republican party, and has taken an active interest in local public affairs, attending the conventions of his party whenever possible.

Mr. Buck was married at Terryville, South Dakota, on February 21, 1883, to Azubah Scott, who was born within about six miles of her husband's birthplace in Quebec, on December 23, 1859, being the daughter of Thomas Scott. She accompanied an uncle to the United States in March, 1882, and met Mr. Buck at Terryville. To Mr. and Mrs. Buck have been born two sons, Frank, who is a ranchman near Ekalaka, and Jay, who is his father's helper and also operates a ranch of his own. He married Carrie Jennings and has two children, Henry and Mary.

A few years after coming to Montana an Indian scare resulted from the killing of Sitting Bull and caused a few settlers in this locality to prepare for defense against the expected attack. They gathered at the Buck ranch, guns and ammunition were collected, barrels of water placed in the cellar, and provisions provided for at least eight or ten days. A tunnel was also dug from the residence to an outside cellar for the protection of the women. But the Indians were headed in another direction and the scared settlers returned to their respective homes. That was the last Indian scare in this part of the state. During the subsequent years Mr. Buck has performed his full share in the great task of developing the country and has been an eye witness of the wonderful transformation which has taken place here. Because of his accomplishments and his high personal character he has long enjoyed the fullest measure of confidence and esteem on the part of all who know him.

Thomas Casey Witherspoon, M. D. Chief surgeon of the Murray Hospital at Butte since 1907, Doctor Witherspoon has earned a national reputation as a surgeon and his attainments have gained him recognition wherever the prominent men of his profession come together.

Doctor Witherspoon, who first came to Butte more than thirty years ago, though his residence in the state has not been continuous, was born at Natchez, Mississippi, and is of southern ancestry and more remotely of Scotch. Two Witherspoon brothers came from Scotland in colonial times, one locating at New Jersey and the other, the ancestor of Doctor Witherspoon, Andrew Witherspoon, located in South Carolina. A cousin of Andrew Witherspoon was John Witherspoon, whose name is affixed as a signer to the Declaration of Independence. The Witherspoons were prominent Scotch Presbyterians. A Doctor Witherspoon of that church married a daughter of John Knox.

Doctor Witherspoon's father was Thomas Casey Witherspoon, Sr., who was born at Greensboro, Alabama, in 1835. He spent his early life at Greensboro, Mobile and Montgomery, and as a young man became a planter in the vicinity of Natchez. He lost most of his property during the war, in which he served as a Confederate soldier under the command of General Lee, and was with Stonewall Jackson until that gallant leader was killed. He was in the battles of the first and second Bull Run and Gettysburg, was once taken prisoner but made his escape, and in one battle was severely wounded in the left arm. In 1878 he removed to St. Louis, where he followed the occupation of a cotton buyer and broker until 1898. In that year, associated with a Mr. Bush from Boston, he established the firm of Bush & Witherspoon Company, cotton brokers at Waco, Texas, and did a large and successful business there for a number of years. In 1914 he retired and removed to Los Angeles, where he died in 1916. He was a stanch democrat, an active Presbyterian, and manifested many of the stanch characteristics of his forefathers. He married Mary A. D. Conner, who was born at Natchez, Mississippi, in 1845, and died at St. Louis in 1897. Her father, William Conner, was of Irish lineage, was a Mississippi planter, and married a daughter of Dr. John Gustin, who was of French ancestry. Doctor Witherspoon is the oldest of four children. Leslie and Gustin, twins, died in infancy. His brother William Conner Witherspoon is a traveling salesman.

Doctor Witherspoon acquired his early education in the public schools of St. Louis, also studied under private tutors, acquiring the equivalent of a high school training, and graduated with the degree Ph. G. from the St. Louis College of Pharmacy. In 1889 he received his M. D. degree from the Missouri Medical College at St. Louis. In scholarship he ranked as one of the most proficient students in the history of that institution and was the fourth graduate to receive the gold medal representing the highest scholastic attainments. He is a member of the Phi Beta Pi college fraternity.

In December, 1889, after some months of experience as an interne in the St. Louis Hospital, Doctor Witherspoon came to Butte and carried on an individual and private hospital practice in the city until November, 1893. Then, on account of the death of his wife's mother, he returned to St. Louis, and was busy with professional duties in that city until November, 1906. He was instructor in anatomy in the Missouri Medical College during 1893-94, and from 1894 to 1906 was a member of the faculty of the Marion Sims Medical College. From 1897 he served as professor of operative and clinical surgery in the Marion Simms-Beaumont Medical College. That college since 1900 has been the medical department of the St. Louis University. Doctor Witherspoon went abroad in 1901, spending the months of March, April, May and June at Vienna and from July to September in Berlin, specializing in surgery and pathology. He again returned to Berlin in 1904, and pursued work along the same special lines from April to September. Doctor Witherspoon was the fifteenth American physician honored with a life membership in the Anglo-American Medical Association of Berlin.

Doctor Witherspoon again resumed his practice at Butte in 1906, and in April, 1907, became associated with the Murray Hospital as its chief surgeon. His work is now entirely confined to surgery and consultation. His abilities have lent a distinction to Murray Hospital, so that apart from its facilities as one of the best equipped private hospitals in the northwest, it enjoys the highest rank for its professional technique.

Doctor Witherspoon saw active service in the great war. He was appointed aid to Governor Stewart, with rank of lieutenant, in November, 1917. In January, 1918, he was made a major, and in the early part of February was sent to Camp Dodge, Iowa, as chief of the surgical section. In July, 1918, he was ordered to Wadsworth as chief of the surgical section of Base Hospital No. 56 to go to France. On August 12th he was made lieutenant-colonel. In the latter part of August he sailed for France and in the middle of September was sent on to the hospital center at Alleray, France. He remained there throughout his service in France, until the last of January, 1919, when he received orders to return home. He sailed from France in February and received his discharge from service on March 1, 1919. Doctor Witherspoon is a director of the State Tuberculosis Sanitarium, is a member of the American Medical Association, the American College of Surgeons, the Southern and Western Surgical and Gynecological Association, Montana State Medical Association, the Butte Medical Society, the American Association of Anatomists, and was president of the State Medical Society in 1912. Doctor Witherspoon has always taken a keen delight in outdoor sports, especially fishing and hunting, and is a member of the Silver Bow Club, the Country Club, the University Club, and other social organizations. He is independent in politics.

October 2, 1890, at St. Louis, he married Miss Nina Butler, daughter of W. C. and Evelyn (Henley) Butler. Her mother is deceased and her father is a retired fire insurance adjuster living at St. Louis. Mrs. Witherspoon is a graduate of the Mary Institute of St. Louis. They have one child, Evelyn, now a junior in the University of California.

JOHN OLIVER. The life sketch of the well-known gentleman whose name appears at the head of this paragraph is closely identified with the history of Montana, for he has spent the major part of his useful, industrious and honorable life here and has been closely allied with its interests and upbuilding. His life, being one of unfailing activity, has been crowned by well-earned success, and at the same time he has won and retained the confidence and good will of all who know him for his clean life, his ability and his fair dealings with his fellow men in all the relations of life.

John Oliver was born in Neosho, Missouri, on September 22, 1871, and is the son of James F. and Martha J. (Finley) Oliver. James F. Oliver was born at Albany, New York, on June 21, 1844, and is the son of an Englishman. His mother, whose maiden name was Mary Douse, was of Mohawk Dutch blood. James F. Oliver, who is a resident of McAllister, Montana, has been a farmer and stockman during his active career in Montana. He is a republican in politics and has been deeply interested in church work. His wife, who was a daughter of Henry Finley, was born in Sacramento, California, in 1849, and died in Montana in 1912. They became the parents of twelve children, including two pairs of twins, and the ten surviving children are: Charles F., of Joliet, Montana; John, of Ekalaka, Montana; Mrs. John Dunn, of Red Lodge, Montana; William F., of Syracuse, New York; Mrs. James Gordon, of McAllister, Montana; Clarence L., of McAllister; Mrs. Roy Campbell, of Glendive, Montana; Elvira, who is married and living at Sand Point, Idaho; Samuel, of Joliet, Montana, and Ethel, of Joliet.

John Oliver was taken from his native state to Sonoma County, California, in infancy, his father being engaged there in logging and wood contracting. He was brought by his parents to Montana on April 15, 1880, and here he secured his elementary education in the public schools, later entering the Montana

Wesleyan University near Helena. He finished the junior year and then secured a teacher's license. He used it but a day and a half, however, and was then ordained as a Methodist minister, his ordination occurring at Anaconda by Bishop Mallalieu in August, 1898. He was assigned as pastor to Inston, Ekalaka, Park City and Forsythe. Coming then to Ekalaka, he abandoned the ministry and engaged in business. He identified himself with the organization of the Ekalaka Commercial State Bank, of which he became cashier, serving as such until January 1, 1915, when he sold his interests in the institution. He had become interested in ranching and farming and is still giving his attention to that line of effort. When Mr. Oliver first came to Ekalaka, in September, 1898, he found here a blacksmith shop, four saloons, two stores and a hotel, it being then merely a trading point for the surrounding country. Its development since then has been of a substantial nature and now, as a county seat town, its future prosperity seems assured.

Among other things which Mr. Oliver has done, and which have been of direct public benefit, should be mentioned the work of transcribing the records of Carter County and that of Powder River County. In both cases he made complete and convenient indexes to the records, thus saving much time in their use.

Politically Mr. Oliver has always been a stanch and active supporter of the republican party with the exception of 1912, when he supported Colonel Roosevelt. He entered the political struggle in Fallon County as a candidate for state senator on the progressive ticket, and was elected over two competitors by seven votes. He sat in the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Legislatures and took an active and effective part in the deliberations and actions of that body. In the Fourteenth Legislature his chief committee assignments were those of towns and counties and new counties. He took an active part in the creation of new counties by amending the county division law so as to be able to create new counties. He was chairman of the committee on public lands, and he presented and had enacted a law known as the "Sunday Closing Law." In the Senate of the Fifteenth Legislature he was a member of the committee on new counties, among several others, and in that session Wheatland and Carter counties were organized. In the fourteenth session there were nineteen republicans, sixteen democrats and four progressives, and in the organization of that body Mr. Oliver voted with the republicans, giving them a majority. In 1918 Senator Oliver was prominently mentioned as a probable nominee of the republicans for Congress.

Mr. Oliver has been married twice, first at Cascade, Montana, on March 4, 1899, to Gertrude P. Austin, who was born at Rocky Gap, Montana, the daughter of Henry and Sarah (Hough) Austin. She became the mother of two children, Doris and Lowell. Sometime after her death Mr. Oliver married, at Miles City, in 1904, Marie Foster, who was born in Minnesota on November 12, 1875, the daughter of Samuel L. Foster, a native of Minnesota. He had been a Union soldier during the Civil war. He came to Montana in 1884, becoming one of the early residents of Ekalaka, where he engaged in the stock business. To Mr. and Mrs. Oliver have been born five children, namely: Gordon Ross, Jerome, Eugenia, Foster and Janis.

In every avenue of life's activities in which he has engaged Mr. Oliver has measured up to the full requirements of the situation. He has been successful in business, respected in social life, and as a neighbor he has discharged his duties in a manner becoming a liberal-minded, intelligent citizen of the state, where the essential qualities of manhood have ever been duly recognized and prized at their true value.

Oscar A. Dahl. Perhaps no one agency in all the world has done so much for public progress as the press, and an enterprising, well-edited journal is a most important factor in promoting the welfare and prosperity of any community. It adds to the intelligence of the people through its transmission of foreign and domestic news and through its discussion of the leading questions and issues of the day, and, more than that, it makes the town or city which it represents known outside of the immediate locality, as it is sent each day or week into other districts, carrying with it an account of the events transpiring in its home locality, the advancement and progress there being made, and the advantages which it offers to its residents along moral, educational, social and commercial lines. Carter County is certainly indebted to its wide-awake journals in no small degree, and one man who is doing a commanding work in the local newspaper field is Oscar A. Dahl, owner and editor of the "Ekalaka Eagle." He has long been connected with journalistic work, and his power as a writer and editor, as well as a business man, is widely acknowledged among contemporary newspaper men and the public in general.

Oscar A. Dahl is a native of Yankton, South Dakota, where he was born on September 14, 1889, and is a son of Ole L. and Anna (Olsen) Dahl, both of whom are natives of Norway. Ole L. Dahl came to the United States in 1885 and located at once at Yankton, where he obtained employment as a miller in the same flouring mill in which he works today, a period of over a third of a century. He was married at Yankton, and his wife died in 1899, leaving four children, namely: Lewis, of Yankton; Oscar A., of this review; Gus, of Yankton, and Sanford, of Vermilion, South Dakota.

When but ten years of age Oscar A. Dahl left his home in the company of a printer, who took him to the Black Hills. There he became a printer's "devil" in the office of the "Black Hills Union" at Rapid City, where he acquired a good knowledge of the art preservative, becoming an adept at his trade. He was afterwards employed on the "Rapid City Journal," the "Deadwood Pioneer Times," the "Lead City Tribune" and the "Lead City Call." In these various positions he was gaining valuable experience and an insight into newspaper methods, so that when in September, 1908, the business men of Ekalaka requested him to come here and establish a newspaper, for which they had raised the necessary funds which they proposed to loan to Mr. Dahl for the purpose, he was ready to accept their proposition. The "Ekalaka Eagle" was started the following January and has been issued continuously since that time, being now the oldest newspaper in Carter County. At first the Eagle was unbiased in its political utterances, but when Mr. Dahl had reached his majority he gave the support of the paper to the democratic party, but it is now on an independent basis. He is a pleasing and graceful writer, clothing his thoughts in easy language, and has the genuine journalistic instinct for news, the Eagle being an extremely readable and interesting paper. The typographical style of the Eagle is all that could be desired, and altogether it is a welcome visitor in hundreds of homes throughout Carter County.

Oscar A. Dahl was married in Helena, Montana, on September 22, 1913, to Idella C. Olsen, who is a native of the treasure state and a daughter of S. Olsen. Mrs. Dahl is a well educated and cultured woman, having supplemented her public school education with a course in the Mankato (Minn.) Normal School. She was then engaged in teaching in the schools of Carter County (then Custer County), and was afterward in the telephone service in Ekalaka. Fraternally Mr. Dahl's only connection is with the Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, while his political predilections are democratic. Keen perception, tireless energy and honesty of purpose, combined with mature judgment and every-day common sense, are the concomitants which have entered into the success which has crowned Mr. Dahl's efforts here, and because of these facts he enjoys to a marked degree the respect and esteem of the people of the community.

CAMPBELL G. RICKARD. The gentleman whose name heads this paragraph is widely known as one of the honored citizens of Carter County, and for a number of years has been prominently identified with the commercial interests of Ekalaka. His well-directed efforts in the practical affairs of life, his capable management of his business interests and his sound judgment have brought him prosperity, and his life demonstrates what may be accomplished by any man of energy and ambition who is not afraid to work and has the perseverance to continue his labors in the face of any discouragements which may seem to rise. In all the relations of life he has commanded the respect and confidence of those with whom he has been brought in contact, and he is eminently entitled to representation in a work of this character.

Campbell G. Rickard was born at Point Pleasant, Mason County, West Virginia, on March 15, 1875, and is the son of Lewis and Elizabeth (McMillan) Rickard. Lewis Rickard was born in West Virginia, the son of Joseph Rickard, also a native of West Virginia and a life-long farmer in that state. He married a Miss Roush, and to them were born four children, Lewis being the only son. The latter received a limited education and began life as a farmer in his native state. Subsequently he moved to Nebraska, where he became a farmer and stock raiser on a homestead which he proved up near Harrison, Sioux County, but in the evening of life he returned to West Virginia and died there. He married Elizabeth McMillan, who was born at Steubenville, Ohio, and who died in West Virginia. To them were born twelve children, seven sons and five daughters, nine of whom grew to maturity. Those now living are: William, of Billings, Montana; Mrs. Catherine Grim, of Harrison, Nebraska; James, of Mason County, West Virginia; Adam, also of Mason County; Campbell G., the subject of this sketch; and Robert, of West Virginia.

Campbell G. Rickard was a lad of thirteen years when he accompanied his father on the move from their native state to Nebraska, and in the latter state he received his education. At the age of twenty years he began work as a cowboy with Charles Coffey, a well-known stockman of that region, and later he worked for the Van Tassel ranch in Wyoming. In 1896 he came to Montana, going to Tongue River, where he went to work for the "SL" ranch at Garland. This ranch was then managed by Judge Loud of Miles City, and Fred Hitzfeldt was the ranch foreman. He remained with the "SL" people about four years and then transferred to the "LU" ranch, for whom he rode the range for a number of years. When he abandoned ranch work he went to Miles City, where he engaged in the retail liquor business, finally managing a saloon for Jones & Hostetter there. In 1910 Mr. Rickard came to Ekalaka and engaged in the retail liquor business, with which he was identified until January 1, 1919, when he abandoned the business and became a partner in the Lantis-Rickard Lumber Company at Ekalaka, one of the enterprising and prosperous concerns of that city. Having come to Ekalaka prior to its incorporation, he has thus been a witness of its modern development and today is one of the most active boosters of the town. The Lantis-Rickard Lumber Company besides handling a full line of lumber and building supplies has also bought a number of eligible building lots, on which they have erected neat, substantial and comfortable homes, which they have sold, thus contributing in a very effective way to the improvement and upbuilding of the town.

Campbell G. Rickard was married at Ekalaka in February, 1913, to Marie Denison, who, like her husband, was born in West Virginia. Mrs. Rickard died, without issue, in December, 1918.

Politically Mr. Rickard gives his support to the democratic party, while fraternally he is a member of the Fraternal Order of Eagles, holding his membership in the aerie at Miles City. Genial and companionable, he has a host of warm and loyal friends, and is numbered today among the progressive and enterprising business men of Ekalaka.

DE LOSS T. HALL. Among the well-known and influential citizens of Eastern Montana is the gentleman whose name appears at the head of this paragraph, and to whom belongs the distinction of having spent practically his entire life in this state. When he came here conditions were primitive in the extreme, and he has been an eye witness and a participant in the wonderful transformation which has taken place here. He has played well his part in the work of upbuilding the community, and has always tried to be fully abreast of the times, doing such good as he could in all the relations of life, consequently he is held in high esteem by those who know him, for he is a man of sterling character and commendable attributes.

Mr. Hall's advent into Montana was in the spring of 1890, when he accompanied his parents hither from Hennepin County, Minnesota. The head of the family was Hollis H. Hall, who left the train at Mingusville, now Wibaux, and came by wagon across the country to the Ekalaka locality. He took up land in the "HS" basin, but after spending a few years here he returned to Minnesota and was not again within the state for several years. Ultimately he returned and died in Ekalaka on March 5, 1915, at the age of seventy-nine years. He was a Civil war veteran entering the army in Minnesota as a member of Company F, Eleventh Regiment, Minnesota Volunteer Infantry. Eleven months of his service were spent in guarding the railroad tunnel through the Blue Ridge Mountains, where he was stationed when the war closed, and he received his discharge at Fort Snelling, Minnesota. It was the fortune of the Halls to be living in Custer County at the time of the great Sioux Indian outbreak, whose warpath seemed to lead across the settlement about Ekalaka. When the alarm was sounded the home of Mr. Hall became the rendezvous of the settlers, and it was hastily converted into a defensive stockade. Fortunately some circumstance led the Indians away from this locality, and the barricaded settlers breathed easier. That was the last Indian scare for this section of the state.

Hollis H. Hall was born in Sherbrook, Canada, and came to the United States at the age of twenty-one years. He went to St. Paul when it was the western railroad terminus and settled on a tract of timber land in Hennepin County, to which he acquired title and on which he farmed in summer, working in the timber woods during the winter months. Later he devoted himself solely to farming. He was a republican in politics, without ambition for office, and took a deep interest in all things elevating, having donated the site and assisted in building an Adventist Church on his farm. He was married in Hennepin County to Huldah Alger, who was born in Ohio in 1844, the daughter of Church Alger. She now resides in Ekalaka. She is descended from old colonial stock, tracing her ancestry back to Governor William Bradford, of the Massachusetts colony. Mr. and Mrs. Hall became the parents of the following children: Mrs. Luva Richards, of Vancouver, Washington; Oel, of Ekalaka; Newman R. and Carlos, also of Ekalaka; Lela, wife of Horace G. Harding, of Ekalaka; and De Loss T., of this sketch.

De Loss T. Hall was reared and educated in Hennepin County, Minnesota. He attended the State Normal School at St. Cloud and later was a student in Chadron Academy at Chadron, Nebraska. He made a special study of steam engineering and engaged in the saw-mill business at the beginning of his independent career. He located his first plant eight miles south of Ekalaka, in what is known as the Sioux National Forest, that being before the creation of the forest as a national preserve and its protection by the Government. After sawing out a block of timber there the mill was moved six miles east of Ekalaka, where it stands today, and is still in active operation. It has a daily capacity of about 1,200 feet and includes a planer, lath mill and shingle mill, the product of the mill being consumed by the local trade.

Mr. Hall was married in Lead, South Dakota, on December 23, 1908, to Laura Booth, who was born in New York City, the daughter of Edward C. and Amelia (Zingg) Booth, the former a native of New York and the latter of Canada. They now reside in Hibbing, Minnesota. Of their nine children Mrs. Hall is the eldest. She came to Superior, Wisconsin, at the age of eight years, and was reared there. She came West to visit her relatives, and met Mr. Hall at Garrison, North Dakota. She was educated in the public schools at Superior, and graduated from the Normal School there in 1908. She began teaching in Westfield, Wisconsin, where she remained two years. She then entered a homestead in North Dakota and taught while holding it and proving up on it. She took the civil service examination and entered the Indian School work at Pine Ridge, South Dakota. Mrs. Hall was crippled in childhood by the explosion of a kerosene lamp, which resulted in the loss of her left arm. She has done some teaching in Montana as a substitute. She is recognized as an exceedingly capable educator and was made county superintendent of schools of Carter County without being consulted, her name being placed in the legislative bill creating the county. She was elected to the position in November, 1918, thus succeeding herself in the office. She cast a republican ballot in 1916. As the first county superintendent it was her task to create order out of chaos, install the records, organize schools and set the educational machinery in motion. That she is a woman who really accomplishes results is evidenced by the statement that she has succeeded in getting fourteen new schoolhouses erected during her official tenure.

Fraternally Mr. Hall is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and Mrs. Hall, of the Daughters of Rebekah. She is a communicant of the Protestant Episcopal Church. In every phase of community life affecting the welfare of the people Mr. and Mrs. Hall are consistent supporters and advocates of the best things, and because of their activity in civic and moral affairs as well as because of their splendid personal qualities they occupy an exalted place in the esteem of the people generally.

JESSE WALTER GRANT. A man who boldly faces the responsibilities of life and by determined and untiring energy carves out for himself an honorable success exerts a strong influence upon the lives of his contemporaries and all who follow him. Such men form the foundation of our republican institutions and are the pride of our civilization. To them life is so real that they find little time to plot either mischief or vice. Their lives are bound up in their duties, they feel the weight of their citizenship and take pleasure in sowing the seeds of uprightness. Such has been the career of Jesse W. Grant, a successful ranchman, auctioneer and formerly deputy sheriff of Custer County, long one of the best known men in that section of the state, and, owing to his genial disposition and open-heartedness, one of the most popular.

Jesse Walter Grant was born in Cherokee County, Iowa, on August 15, 1874, and is the son of Orrin and Emma (Gano) Grant. The father was a son of David D. Grant, who was born in Scotland and was brought to this country in childhood. He was reared in Ohio and there married a Miss Wood, by whom he had seven sons and three daughters, of which family Orrin was the first born. Orrin Grant was a native of Ohio, devoted practically his entire life to farming and his death occurred in Knox County, Nebraska. He is survived by his widow, who now resides in Sioux Falls, South Dakota. Of their seven children Jesse Walter is the second in order of birth.

Jesse W. Grant was reared to the age of seventeen years in Iowa, and there secured a good practical education in the public schools. After going to Nebraska he devoted his time and energies to farming, in the meantime completing his school education. When he attained his majority he began farming on his own account, following that line of work for six years. He then engaged in the livestock business, buying and selling horses, which he shipped in large numbers from his stables at Bloomfield to various points in the East. In the spring of 1910 he came to Montana, settling at Ekalaka, which was then in Custer County, and there he engaged in the livery business. In the fall of that year he sold the stable, and soon afterward became deputy sheriff of the county under Sheriff Ben LaValle, serving as such during that year. He then engaged in buying and selling stock, handling war horses, and continued inspection of them at Ekalaka as long as the demand continued. Prior to this period he had shipped into this locality several train loads of cattle from Arizona, which added greatly to the supply of cattle in this locality. Though he has decreased his business along that line, he still handles many cattle on his ranch, where he has lived since 1910. He entered his homestead four miles northwest of Ekalaka, built himself a log cabin and then, after he had proved it up, he disposed of the place. During this period his farming operations were very satisfactory, his crops being larger than he had expected.

While deputy sheriff Mr. Grant obtained an insight into the usefulness he could attain as an auctioneer after his official term had expired, and in this his expectations have been more than realized, for there is probably no more capable or successful auctioneer in Southeastern Montana than he. His strongest asset as an auctioneer is his accurate knowledge of the value of stock. He cries sales over a district of eighty miles, and at least $75,000 annually passes through his hands in this line.

Mr. Grant has had an important part in the development and upbuilding of Ekalaka. He was first connected with the Ekalaka Milling Company, whose plant was destroyed by fire in 1916. In the spring of 1919 he and H. G. Albert, under the name of the Grant-Albert Milling Company, erected a fifteen-barrel mill, roller process, where a fine brand of flour is produced. Mr. Grant took an active part in the creation of Fallon County, and later when Carter County was proposed he acquiesced in that also. He was mainly instrumental in the organization of the Fallon County Fair and Racing Association, since changed to the Carter County Fair Association, of which is now president.

Politically Mr. Grant has always been an ardent supporter of the republican party, though in local elections he votes for the men he considers best qualified for office, regardless of party lines.

Throughout an interesting and active career duty has ever been his motive of action, and usefulness to his fellow men not by any means a secondary consideration. He has achieved much in an individual way, but at the same time has proved himself worthy as a factor in public affairs and as a citizen and business man of the utmost loyalty and progressiveness.

Albert Sherrill, M. D. The world owes more to the medical profession and its exponents than to any other calling or class of men. The adherents of the healing art from earliest times have borne an important part in the history of their times, not only because of their services in caring for the sick, but in the councils of the nations, and as time has progressed their importance has increased, and deservedly so. The life of a physician is never one of ease. Not only does he have to devote years to preliminary training, but his studies are not completed until he lays aside his duties, for medicine is one of the most progressive of the sciences, and each day brings forth new ideas and discoveries. To keep abreast of them requires study and ability, a broad mind and comprehensive reasoning. The sacrifices of a life devoted to the caring for the ills of humanity are many and varied, and never fully appreciated by the laity. Strength of character, determination of purpose, sterling uprightness and courage of the highest kind are some of the requisites demanded of a physician. One of the men of Montana who measures up to the highest standards of his profession as outlined above is Dr. Albert Sherrill, who is now in charge of the Camp Crook Hospital, and who has been engaged in the active practice of his calling in this region since 1904.

Doctor Sherrill was born at Charlotte, North Carolina, on February 9, 1880, and springs from a family of agriculturalists, early settlers of Virginia and North Carolina. His father was Ston J. Sherrill, born in the same district as his son and who became a farmer and very prominent in the work of the Farmers' Alliance. Although he would not accept political office, he was always active in civic affairs. During the war between the states he enlisted for service, although only fifteen years old, by claiming that he had passed his seventeenth birthday, and made a fine record for himself as a soldier at the fort on Cape Fear River, and later as a member of the Home Guards in the western part of North Carolina. The death of this estimable man occurred near Charlotte, North Carolina, in 1909, when he was fifty-nine years old. Mr. Sherrill was married to Adelia Coffey, a daughter of Lee I. Coffey, a nephew of the renowned Indian fighter, Daniel Boone, and who died at the advanced age of ninety-two years. Mrs. Sherrill died in 1898, having borne her husband two sons and two daughters, namely: Lee, who is a stockman of Carter County, Montana; Doctor Albert, whose name heads this review; Hessie, who owns and operates a drug store at Camp Creek; and Mrs. Edna Morgan, who is also a resident of Camp Creek.

After taking a literary course at Davidson College Doctor Sherrill went to Richmond, Virginia and there took a full medical course, from which he was graduated in the spring of 1901. From there he came to Camp Crook and entered upon a general practice, and was thus engaged until 1917, when with the founding of the Camp Crook Hospital he was placed in charge.

The Camp Crook Hospital is an institution built by the people of Montana and South Dakota to supply the need for hospital service to the inland country lying between the Black Hills and the Chicago, Milwaukee & Saint Paul Railroad on the north. It is located, as its name indicates, at Camp Crook, which community is on the state line between Montana and South Dakota.

The hospital building cost $13,500 in cash, and was paid for by the public, shares being sold in it by subscription. It is operated by a Board of Trustees, with Dr. Albert Sherrill as manager. The people who so liberally subscribed for this hospital did so, without any hope or promise of financial return, merely as a public-spirited measure. As this institution was largely subscribed for by the people of Montana, it is eminently proper to include it among the important ones of the state, although South Dakota lays claim to it as well. Its object is to provide proper treatment for emergency cases both surgical and medical. There are two wards for the accommodation of three patients to each and five private rooms. Only graduate and registered nurses are employed, no training of nurses being connected with the institution. Under Doctor Sherrill's capable management the hospital has made an enviable record and produced the results hoped for by the subscribers to its erection and maintenance.

Doctor Sherrill was married at Belle Forche, South Dakota, in 1903, to Miss Millie Todenhoft, a daughter of Frederick Todenhoft. Doctor and Mrs. Sherrill have a son, Ston, who is now ten years old. In politics Doctor Sherrill is a democrat, but, like his father, has not cared for public honors, although he was a member of the State Legislature for one session. He retains his membership in the South Dakota Medical Society and the Black Hills Medical Society.

Walter H. Peck. Everywhere in our land men have been found who have worked their way from humble beginnings to places of leadership and high esteem in the material, civic and social world, and it has ever been one of the proudest boasts of our fair country that such victors are accounted of thousandfold more worth and value to the commonwealth than the aristocrat, with his inherited wealth, position and distinguished name. "Through struggles to triumph" appears to have long been the maxim which has held sway over many of our citizens, who by their inherent force of character and strong mentality rise paramount to environment. Thus it has been with Walter H. Peck, one of the enterprising and progressive citizens of Carter County, who has exhibited great energy and rare judgment in all affairs in which he has been interested, so that the confidence and esteem which are accorded to him are but the just tribute to his worth.

Walter H. Peck was born in Cornwall, Connecticut, on March 5, 1870, the son of Edward C. and Elizabeth M. (Frink) Peck. Edward C. Peck also was born at Cornwall, where the Peck family had been established since 1633. The family originated in England, and since colonial days every male member of the family has served his country in some war in which it has been engaged during our history. Edward C. Peck was too young for Civil war service, but his father was killed while serving in defense of the Union in that struggle, while his grandfather was killed while serving in the Mexican war under General Taylor. Both of these ancestors bore the given name of Henry, which was also the baptismal name of Mr. Peck's father, who had it later changed to Edward, so as to be distinguished from the others of the same name. His wife was also a representative of an old colonial family, the Frinks having been conspicuously identified with the history of Litchfield, Connecticut, the old stronghold of Puritanism. In the main the Frinks were farmers, while the Pecks seem to have been mechanics. Edward C. Peck and his wife, who now live at New Haven, Connecticut, are the parents of three children, namely: Walter H., the immediate subject of this review; Mrs. Carrie M. Bradley, of New Haven, Connecticut; and Frank G., who is in the employ of the American Paper Box Company at New Haven.

Walter H. Peck was reared under the parental roof and secured his education in the public schools of Ansonia, graduating from the high school. In youth he learned the trade of a gunsmith, though he never followed it after leaving home. At the age of eighteen years, determined to plunge into the battle of life on his own account, he came to Montana, his first employment here being as a sheep herder for Reno Swift on the head of Alkali Creek, thirteen miles west of Ekalaka. He followed that calling for thirteen years, starting in at a wage of $20.00 a month and board, which was later increased to $45.00 and board. Mr. Peck came to this mountainous part of Montana chiefly on account of his health, which was completely restored by the outdoor life and exercise. When he entered business for himself in Carter County he and his partner, Lorin W. Gilman, started in with horses and cattle, but their experience was not satisfactory and they were compelled to return to work on the range, Mr. Peck being employed by the "Hogeye" and the "101" and for a few months by Mr. Newberry. Finally Mr. Peck became a squatter on Little Beaver Creek, and as a rancher again formed a partnership with Mr. Gilman, handling cattle, horses and sheep. In this venture they were successful and prospered, continuing together until 1901, when they divided their interests. Then, after a visit home, the first since he had come west, Mr. Peck was appointed deputy assessor of Custer County under Assessor Frank Crosby, with whom he served three years, followed by a year as deputy county treasurer under George Robbins, being field man in the east end of Custer County, having 8,000 square miles of territory. During one year of this period he held four offices, deputy county treasurer, deputy county assessor, deputy sheriff and justice of the peace. Traveling with another deputy sheriff, the two were enabled to collect taxes, assess property and hold court whenever it became necessary.

When he left his official positions Mr. Peck engaged in the mercantile business in Ekalaka as a clerk for B. C. Charters Company, but in 1904 he opened up a business on his own account, in which he continued until 1910, when he formed a partnership with William Nowbray. This copartnership existed until 1916, when C. K. Putnam, a silent partner, retired and the firm remained as the W. H. Peck Company until September 1, 1919, when the business was sold, since which time Mr. Peck has been devoting his attention to the Ekalaka Creamery and to his farm. He entered his homestead three miles north of Ekalaka, proved it up, and has improved it in a most substantial manner. The Ekalaka Creamery was established by Messrs. Mowbray and Peck, who still own and operate it. They have a capacity of 1,000 pounds of butter a day and turn out a superior product.

Mr. Peck is the oldest volunteer soldier in the World war in Carter County. He entered the Student Army Training Camp at The Presidio, San Francisco, and spent three months there. He resigned to return home on account of his private business affairs, but he was called back on June 1, 1918, and was commissioned as second lieutenant, being assigned to Company C, Twenty-fourth United States Guards. He was for a time stationed around San Francisco, and was then slated for Siberia, but the signing of the armistice altered their plans just as the company was packed up and ready to embark for Vladivostok. Mr. Peck was discharged on January 2, 1919, and returned home. On August 22, 1919, he was recommissioned in the United States Reserve, infantry section.

Mr. Peck has been married twice, first in what is now Carter County, on August 22, 1904, to Elizabeth M. Foster, who died just a month after her marriage. She was a daughter of Samuel L. Foster, who came into Eastern Montana in 1884, spending his life here as a ranchman, and died in January, 1919. On June 11, 1910, Mr. Peck was married to Marguerite Campbell Cunningham, who was born in New Haven, Connecticut, in July, 1881, the daughter of John Cunningham, of Ansonia, Connecticut, where Mrs. Peck was reared. She is the youngest of three daughters, the others being Mrs. Mary J. Davidson and Mrs. Jeannette C. Russell. To Mr. and Mrs. Peck was born a son, who died at the age of three months.

